Advent Christian Times.

“Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be incre[illegible].”

VOL. IX.---NO. 23. BUCHANAN, JANUARY 2, 1872. WHOLE NO. 403.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Contents.

The Lord Coming; From California; Science and the Resurrection, D. T. Taylor......177
A Discussion between Eld. Braden and Eld. Himes; More Laborers, P. W. Hough......178
Harmony of Scripture on Future Punishment......179
Questions; About the Debt, Mira Dana; Editor's Journal; Errata; San Francisco, A......180
Correspondence; Brief Extracts; Conference Minutes; The Advent Times......181
The Church has waited Long—poetry; Human Nature and Life, Delta; That “Machine,” J. D. Jones; Circular Letter, A. Farrow......182
Comfort of the Scriptures, P. A.; “Three Days and three Nights,” C. C. Marston; Behold, he Cometh with Clouds, H. Campbell; Our Book and Tract Column......183
Business Agent's Department; Marriages; Obituaries; Book Notices; Notices; The Story of Chicago; Gipsies in Religion; Blunt Preaching; Appointments; Our Book and Tract Column; Advertisements......184

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Jan. 2, 1872.

The Lord Coming.

The waiting time will have an end The absent Lord return by a grand personal “appearing,” to his weary, watching church.

“Behold the bridegroom cometh!” He is coming, the darkened air of earth flashes with the glory and echoes with the glad music of the heavenly procession!

This heralding of the coming Lord will be at midnight,—the time of the world's deepest slumber,— possibly also when the church may have grown drowsy with its long watching.

It will be sudden—“the voice of the archangle and the trump of God”(Thes. 4: 16)—and it will be accompanied with the authoritative summons, “Go ye out to meet him.” We must all meet the coming Christ.

We must not by generalizing interpretations refine away this great doctrine in which the early church found so much comfort, into some spiritualizing influence, some quickening of the church's life in the progress of the ages. Christ's second coming is not his church's victory over the world—the moral conquest of grace over sin,—but his own personal judgment of the world and glorification of his church in the regenerated earth. This is the teaching of Scripture in regard to the second coming of our Lord.

—The above is from a sunday-school lesson in a Baptist journal. We rejoice that so much truth was told, although an egregious error was mingled with it.

The scholors were told: The death of his saints is their going to him, not his coming to them. The disembodied spirit may see him and be with him long ages before he comes to judge the world. It is all in vain that Jesus said “whither I go ye cannot come!” His professed writers tell the people, you will go to heaven just the minute you expire, and the people believe it—believe the servant rather than the Master himself!

From California.

From a San Francisco letter, dated Dec. 11.

In the Dec. number of Scribner's Magazine is an article, Afloat and Ashore—a very interesting account of recent travels. On p. 182, speaking of Zeno and his Stoic disciples, the article reads: “The destruction of the world, said the Stoics, would be accomplished by a most terriffic conflagration, but after this wreck of matter a new and purer world would burst upon the delighted gaze of mankind.”

Eld. Fassett preached yesterday on the nature of man; and in the evening gave a comprehensive sermon on the Prophetic Chart. There was a large attendance in the morning. The evening was quite cold and foggy, and strangers were probably on this account deterred from coming out.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

The skeptic denies the dusty atoms of the dead will or can ever be re-formed into living organisms in a true resurrection. These unseen atoms he asserts are scattered to the four winds. They are blended with an infinite number of other atoms. The particles composing the dead bodies are resolved back into their primitive elements. They have passed into other forms and entered into new combinations. Where then is the dust of the myriads who have died? Where are the multitudes of those who lived before the flood? Where are the thousands who have been consumed by fires, or who have been swallowed up in the sea? Where are those millions who tenanted those endless catacombs under the city of Rome? Who died in cities, every trace of which have disappeared? Who once inhabited the countless and unknown graves now empty? Where? No eye can discover these dissolved forms. No hand can find these disintegrated bodies. No skill can re-arrange these unseen atoms. Gone to the devouring flame, to the decomposing winds, to the dissolving waters, to the mysterious air, or to the countless forms of vegetable life, in utter invisibility, and almost to nothingness itself in the mother earth, they can neither be found nor gathered. It is scientifically and philosophically impossible to re-assemble them. To do so, all of earth, ocean, and air would have to be ransacked, sifted, and torn in infinitismal pieces. To extricate these particles would require an age of time, a universal analysis of nature. It would be necessary to search and decompose the entire physical world. These particles are too fine for any eye to perceive. The thought of their re-living baffles human conception. It is past all belief. It must be a mistake to suppose that the dead can ever again live in their own bodies.

To all this reasoning of the natural mind it would be sufficient to reply: The Bible has God for its author, and on its page the Omnipotent has recorded our cherished doctrine. Hear ye him!

“Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise Awake and sing ye that dwell in the dust. (Is. 26: 19.)

“I will open your graves and cause you to come up out of your graves.” (Ezk. 37: 12.)

“Them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life.” (Dan. 12: 2.)

“O death I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction.” (Hos. 13: 14.)

“All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and come forth.” (John 5: 28.)

“It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption.” (1 Cor 15: 42.)

“For the trump shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible.” (1 Cor. 15: 52.)

“And the dead in Christ shall rise first.” (1 Thes. 4: 16.)

“And the sea gave up the dead that were in it, and Death and Hades gave up the dead that were in them.” (Rev. 20: 13.)

This appeal to the word of Jehovah, the Creator, the Al-Almighty, will satisfy some. To the believer such an appeal is final. But not so with some others. The cold atheistical, caviling scientist scorns and doubts. Let us then enter the broad realm of philosophic and scientific discovery, and glean from its ample facts the evidence to substantiate the teaching of the Bible. Let us reason together. What does man know and fully believe concerning nature? What marvels does nature unfold? What can man do in the realm of nature? What can the Almighty do in his own creation? And can God do as much as man? Our resources for evidence and argument are as vast as the universe, and when drawn upon for the proof of our Scripture doctrine, must confound the skeptic and put him to open shame and eternal silence. Let us begin with the earth itself, and discuss its capacity to sustain in separate particles the dust of all the dead.

The solid matter of the entire globe contains, says Dr. Dick, 263,858,139,120 cubical miles. Now its surface to a depth of one mile embracing ocean and land, would include nearly 200,000,000 of cubical miles. Suppose that the dead lie strewn and dispersed through every cubic foot of this mile-deep of the earth's surface, what proportion would their disintegrated bodies bear to the whole mass? We reply, on the supposition (an extreme one) that there have been 1,000,000,000 of persons on the globe each and every year for 6,000 years, and that 3,000,000,000 of the whole number die every century, then, the entire number of human beings living and dying on the earth since Adam would amount to but 180,000,000,000. It is impossible to make a higher estimate of the whole number of the human family for the period here given, and this estimate is too high doubtless by one half. Then, if we suppose each dead body large and small to compose three cubic feet (a large allowance again) we have 540,000,000,000 of cubic feet of dead dust, once animated with the breath of life, and as there are nearly 460,000,000 of cubic feet in one cubic mile, it is shown that the proportion of cubic feet in a depth of one mile of the entire surface of the globe, including the seas, is but as 1 to 144,000. If we diminish this surface-depth containing the dead to but one-tenth of a mile, the proportion will still be only as 1 to 1,440. If we reduce the number of the dead one-half, and their size in cubic feet one-third,—which no doubt we should do to get nearer the truth,—there would be a still greater disproportion and still more room for separation. But it is shown already that there would be vastly room enough in the—so to speak—mere surface of the earth, for a God to hide and preserve in separate atoms, distinct from all other atomic material, the dust of the dead.

But what a mere speck is the earth, where alone the dead lie, in the sight of God! Let us by comparison try to perceive its littleness. In the solar system, were the sun to be represented by a globe twenty-six feet in diameter, to preserve the proportion between them, the earth would have to be represented by a globe only three inches in diameter; a little ball no larger than one's fist. Imagine man's relative littleness in size on so small a globe, a mere tiny dot, invisible to the human eye. But large enough in his own estimate to doubt the power of that Being who created the sun! Now were this sun a hollow sphere, the moon would revolve around the earth within the vast concave, not much more than one third of the distance to the outer shell of this concave or hollow sun. This gigantic sun, fully outweighing 840 times the combined mass of all the planets that move about him, is after all but a tiny ball in the hand of Deity. And shall we question his power to resurrect the dead? He, the maker of 18,000,000 of suns?

But if we judge of God's power by his creative works, what is the sun compared with the entire solar system? If we constructed a model of this system on a scale of ten million of miles to an inch, with the sun in the center, this immense luminary becomes the size of a shot, eight one hundreths of an inch in diameter; the earth (the atom man's abode) 1,400 thousand times smaller, so small indeed that a magnifying glass would have to be used to enable one to see it; the earth's orbit about the sun would be nineteen inches in diameter; the orbit of Neptune fifty feet across; and the nearest fixed star would still be thirty miles distant! Observe, that a base line of nineteen inches represents twice the distance of the sun from the earth, but a parallax line of thirty miles would represent the distance from our system to the nearest world in the awful space beyond. The thought of such vastness crushes one. But all through this awful space is—GOD. Thus the solar system is seen to be but a mite, the sun but a monad, the earth but a diatome. And in this diatome lies hidden a few milliards of atomic dust which man imagines God cannot find! To further illustrate the vastness of this system, let us on a scale of 16-000 miles to the inch construct a ball between four and five feet in diameter; this will represent the sun. In an orbit about this sun-ball, let a smaller ball only half an inch in diameter at a distance of 500 feet represent the earth. But we find that Neptune, the most distant planet from the sun, must move in an orbit around this central ball at a distance of no less than three miles! So, these are parts of his way, but the thunder of his power who can understand? Into the care of the God of this Universe the dying believer loves to commit his little handful of dust, assured that he will gather it again in the last day.

But what is this system with all the space between it and the nearest fixed star, compared with the endless stellar systems that lie still farther beyond? Some astronomers assert the existence of 18 millions of suns like our own; others assert there are 75 million, while Dr. Dick computes that there are in the Universe at least 2,400 millions of starry worlds. And it is supposed that all these millions of fixed stars, or suns, with their distinct and separate systems of planets, and asteroids, are as far apart from each other as the nearest fixed star is from us. Science asserts that the milky way is a vast system of worlds; so vast indeed that its center is 34 millions of times as far from us as is the sun, and that our earth and all our solar system is but a part of this illimitable Milky Way. Science teaches that the sun is 91,800,000 miles away; that the most distant planet, Neptune, is 2062 millions of miles from the sun, and that a line stretching across the grand circle of his orbit would be 5724 millions of miles long; and that the circumference of this orbit, which is the distance Neptune has to travel to make one circuit around the sun, is 17,963,000,000 of miles. But we are told on the same scientific authority that between the orbit of Neptune and the nearest fixed star, there is still an immense gulf, of more than seventeen billions of miles breadth. This nearest fixed star, Alpha Centauri, is twenty billions of miles from the earth. At a still vaster distance is the 61 Cygni, which is sixty billions of miles from man's little earth. But beyond all this, science informs us that stars of the sixth magnitude are 800 billions of miles distant from our globe, and that their light moving swiftly at the rate of 194,000 miles a second, is one hundred and thirty years in passing to us. The all-searching eye of Deity spans these awful chasms in a second, but so distant are some of the stars that a telescope used by Herschel that magnified 6,000 times, did not sensibly increase their size. Now God fills these trackless regions of immensity. He is the God of these worlds, and of the fathomless voids that stretch cold and dark between them. Cannot this God find the scattered atoms of the dead, and finding, reorganize, and reorganizing, cause them to live? Bold indeed must be that unbelief which dares to doubt it. Rather let us ask how could such a God ever for one moment lose sight of, or for one moment forget, a single grain of the dust of those whose death is declared to be precious in his sight! These countless stars, these endless heavens, said a king of old, “are the work of God's fingers.” And yet we are called upon to believe that these fingers will lose their strength and skill when they come to search the earth and make inquisition for the chosen ones for whom Christ died! Can any candid thinking person believe it for one moment?

But it may be argued that if God could find and raise the dead to life, it would occupy him for an age, as it would be impossible to do it simultaneously, and in an instant. Now we are called upon by science to believe that the earth turns upon its axis at the rate of 1,000 miles an hour; that the gigantic sun revolves upon his axis at a rate of 4,000 miles an hour; that the entire solar system, sun, planets, and all, is projected through space around some mighty center at a velocity of 18,000 miles every hour. We pause to inquire who originated this fearful velocity? And then pass on to state what none doubt, that the velocity of Venus in her orbit is 76,000 miles every hour; the velocity of Mercury is one hundred and fifty thousand miles an hour, which is 1,750 miles a minute, or twenty-four miles each second. Even this speed is bewildering to human senses. But still it is exceeded. For science informs us that the velocity of the falling stars is full forty miles a second, and instructs us to believe that the streamers forming the tail of the comet of 1807, within a single second of time, shot out a distance of 4,000,000 miles! A strange and unknown force indeed; but who wielded that force? And now we are astounded by the intelligence that flame-clouds can be seen darting out from the fiery disk of the sun, and like auroral streamers vanishing into space at a velocity of 120,000 miles a second, which approximates to the speed of light itself. Beyond all these it was discovered only so late as 1869 by the astronomers of Great Britain that on the appearance of certain bright spots on the face of the sun, the earth instantly thrilled with electric and magnetic disturbance; indicating that some mysterious and unknown force passed over the space of ninety-one millions of miles between that luminary and our planet in a single second! Who causes this unapproachable velocity? Who displays this august and overwhelming power? Is it not the same Jehovah who said, “Let light be, and light was;” who projects enormous orbs, and flashes light itself with such amazing rapidity; who has also recorded his unalterable determination to bring to life again those who sleep in the dust of the earth? Surely the science of astronomy utterly demolishes that infidelity which denies the possibility of the resurrection of the millions of the righteous dead at the same moment, and in an instant of time. We are assured it will transpire at the last trumpet as in the twinkling of an eye.

And still farther in unfolding the wonders of nature are we told of inconceivable velocities. The mite, the keen eyed scientist tells us, makes 500 steps in one second, but the common fly in traversing the air a space of six feet, which he does in a single second, flops its wings in that second no less than 600 times. Such are the quick motions of God's creatures. But what is this compared with the extraordinary velocity and quick motions of the wavelets of light from a distant red-colored star, that in a single second while we gaze upon it, breaks upon the retina no less than four hundred and eighty thousand billions of time, or in so many distinct wavelets! We are also told that each etherial particle of solar light revolves six hundred and eighteen billion times in a second! Such motions are inconceivable as eternity itself, and yet these astounding statements are made by Prof. Doremus; believed by the masses; and disputed by none. The power of the figures but expresses a very mystery. Is the world sober; is science sane when it records for our belief such marvels as these; and does the church but dream when she teaches resurrection? Grant that science is correct and that these things are credible; why, then, should it be thought a thing incredible among men that God should raise the dead?

The unfolding and development of nature in her secret laboratories in the spring time, in putting forth myriads of forms of vegetable life in a wealth of beauty and symmetry, is a wonder. How marvellous the transformation in a single month! Men see and believe, but still limit the power and skill of nature's God to produce resurrection; marvels that perhaps are no more surprising or hard to accept than are the astounding changes witnessed every year in the realm of nature.

The Church Has Waited Long.

The church has waited long
Her absent Lord to see;
And still in loneliness she waits,
A friendless stranger she.
Age after age has gone,
Sun after sun has set,
And still in weeds of widowhood
She weeps a mourner yet:
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

Saint after saint on earth
Has lived, and loved, and died;
And as they left us one by one,
We laid them side by side.
We laid them down to sleep,
But not in hope forlorn;
We laid them but to ripen there,
Till the last glorious morn:
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

The serpent's broods increase;
The powers of hell grow bold;
The conflict thickens; faith is low;
And love is waxing cold.
How long, O Lord our God,
Holy and true and good,
Wilt thou not judge thy suffering church,
Her sighs, and tears, and blood?
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

We long to hear thy voice;
To see thee face to face;
To share thy crown and glory then,
As now we share thy grace.
Should not the loving Bride
Her absent Bridegroom mourn?
Should she not wear the signs of grief
Until her Son return?
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

The whole creation groans,
And waits to hear that voice
That will restore her comeliness,
And make her wastes rejoice.
Come, Lord, and wipe away
The curse, the sin, the stain,
And make this blighted world of ours
Thine own fair world again:
Come, then, Lord Jesus, come!

—H. Bonar.

Communications.

Human Nature and Life.

I take in my hand three grains of corn—one of them I carefully plant in the prepared earth, and in due time I gather its fulfillment in the one hundred-fold harvest of corn. One of them I cast to the ground, and it falls into some rift and germinates, and the blade of green appears; but some beast is treading and devouring, and lo! 'tis gone—and the place that once knew it, knows it no more forever! The third I grind to powder, and scatter to the four winds of heaven, and its particles dissolving, return to the earthy elements whence they came. Now all will admit that the Creator of the corn-nature, designed in that nature the corn-grain that was ground to powder, equally with the one that produced the perpetuated corn-life of the increase, for the "age lasting" corn-life; and yet no law of the Infinite life of the universe has been set aside. The fulfillment; the prophetic blade of green; and the destruction were all provided for in the infinite law of all the becomings of creation. Neither of the three has been "annihilated," yet only one has come to the fulfillment of its nature and received the crown of enduring life.

Human-nature is like the corn. In its creation it holds in itself the conditions of its own destruction; its germs of prophecy; and the capacity of fulfillment in the Divine right-way—(righteousness.)

I hold in my hand a grain of another kind;—I may grind it under my feet and there destroy it,—I may plant it, and therefrom comes the graceful, or the unsightly tree—I may cut down the tree, using it for mechanical purposes, or for the fire; or I may carefully cultivate that tree, and in due time notice the prophetic blossom of beauty; and at length the crowning fruit; each fruiting holding in like manner the germinal life of the regeneration; yet be that as it may, all the conditions are provided for in the original law of creative life; and no law of emergency is required, in order to carry on to completion of glory, the way of the infinite becomings.

Thus in this, too (as in the corn), may we see the analogy of human nature and life; its conditions of destruction; its germs of prophecy, and its law of glorious spiritual fulfillment of the infinite designs of Deity.

I am aware that men are not accustomed thus to compare "human-nature," and "corn-nature," or "tree-nature," nor, in common theology is it considered possible to draw any just conclusions by such comparison. Indeed, a leading Baptist minister once said to me "that it was sheer infidelity, and a denial of the authority of the Bible, to claim a unity of principle between the law of human nature, and the laws of the natural world"—and it may be that some of the readers of THE TIMES have held the same view. But now, in answer to this objection I reply that, in the things pertaining to the highest life of the human soul, Christ Jesus did use as illustrations apt, the most common things of every day existence, and if he did this, surely his disciple is justified in like course; and not only am I justified in the "parable," but also I firmly believe that if men were only in the habit of associating the idea of the laws of universal life with their own, there would be found more of good common sense, in their Bible readings, and ideas and practices of religious observance—and let me here say that the very idea of salvation in righteousness (or God's right-way), is enwrapped in these conditions of living and becoming.

But now to return to the parable of the corn—every farmer and gardener understands that there are certain conditions of preparation and of influence, upon which the law of "corn-increase" is, (I may say) dependent. The corn will not grow upon ice, or in dry sand; and, when the germinal conditions are so far complied with that a harvest is the result, the abundance of the harvest is found to be governed by the favorable, or unfavorable influences of the circumstantial life about it: yet no one thinks that he is by the acknowledgement of this fact, in any way limiting the power of the Creator in the production of continued corn-life. Indeed, we think that we most honor God, as we study the natural laws of corn nature; and the amount of corn is dependent upon the corn-righteousness of the producer. But now when we begin to speak in such way of the man's religion and salvation; and of Christ as the revealer of the right-wayness of God in human nature, and of the possibilites of destruction being enfolded in the human soul, immediately the common theology is alarmed for the safety of its "household gods;" its "inherent immortality;" its "immortal soul," and their relative traditional dogmas of churchly authority; and closes its eyes to proof, and its ears to argument, lest its heart shall faint at the loss of the foundations of its old beliefs, and so, hugging the phantom of "immaterial" mystery still closer to its bosom for the fright it has experienced, it goes on preaching as blind a superstition as that which marks the faith of the Hindoo in the incarnations of Chrishna. (Now, mark it! I did not say as evil a superstition, but as blind.)

The result of such theology, based upon traditions of men, and not upon the BIBLE, is that there is not made such intelligent progress in Christian righteousness as ought to be seen in the proportionate circumstances of life influences by which we are surrounded; and hoping that I might do some little good in the diffusion of light upon the divine ways, is my reason in thus taking up this subject of "human nature," proposing to trace it from its foundations of creative design, examining the various points of prophetic promise and progress that are set forth in the Scriptures of inspiration; and I shall endeavor in this series of articles to present in order the Scriptural points of design and life, so that the relations of divine law may be clearly seen even in the religion and salvation that are set forth in the gospel of grace and Sonship of Jesus Christ.

Now if the Scriptures be true, and there is but one God of all living, then we must believe that when we find "true" in one form of life-manifestation, we may expect to find, in modified conditions, in all life manifestations. If there are "conditional" relations of preparation in order to "corn-life," then there must be "conditional" relations in order to human life. If the ground must be prepared before the corn can be grown, then there must be preparatory creations in order to "human" existence and life.

Now then, having followed the thought thus far, the question at once presents itself to the Christian mind, "Is there any recognition of such preparation of creations in order to human nature and life of continuance in the Bible?" I am aware that it is generally supposed that the writings of Hebrew inspiration teach the separate (and I may say "arbitrary,") creation of "man," (and indeed this is generally supposed to be the characteristic of all the DIVINE manifestations). And I am also aware that the various "orthodox" theories of the plan of human redemption and salvation from sin, are for the most part based upon these views of creation; and by consequence of this, men look with suspicion upon any attempt to prove agreement of Religion and Science, and deem "science" in religious matters "heretical" and "dangerous." But let me assure you that all such fears are groundless, for the Scriptures themselves contain in a remarkable degree the prophetic vision which modern science demonstrates.

In my next article, therefore, I will just speak of the composition of the records of inspiration contained in the book of Genesis, and then proceed with the Scriptural argument upon human nature—and while I hold no one responsible for the views expressed but myself, yet I ask the readers of THE TIMES to give them careful attention.

DELTA.

That "Machine."

The following story has gone the rounds of the papers and has been warmly applauded by some persons, as expressing "just their sentiments."

"A certain church purchased an organ. After its purchase a deacon who had opposed buying it was requested by the minister to lead in prayer, to which request he replied, 'Call on the machine. If it can sing praises to God, it can do the praying as well.'"

Now, among the class of people who think the deacon was sound in his reply, I regret to say, can be found Adventists. Not all of them, nor the largest share of them, I trust—some of them. If their views are founded upon Bible objections or upon sound logic, we are bound not only to respect them, but to adopt them. If they are not, but are based upon whims and incorrect views, we as free thinkers and speakers are bound to condemn them.

We as a people make great professions of sound opinions. We challenge the world to pick a flaw with our doctrines or theories. If they succeed in doing so (which we by no means consider impossible), we profess to be willing to reconstruct our opinions wherever they are faulty. Especially do we deny superstitious clinging to whims or beliefs simply because our forefathers believed so, when we can give no better reason. Then if it can be shown that the organ is not unnecessary, not in opposition to the teachings of the Bible, by letter or spirit, all those who are true to the Advent faith must yield their opinions as to its being a sin to have an organ in connection with singing.

This objection, so formidable to some, seems so slight to me that I cannot better define the absurdity of it than by relating a little anecdote which seems to me to be on a parallel with "the good old deacon's" story.

In olden times, before the advent of stoves, churches were not supplied with artificial warmth. Afterwards, when stoves came into use, it was proposed to buy one for a church in Massachusetts. The hands of many church members were lifted in pious horror at the thought. Nevertheless a majority seeing fit to buy the stove it was bought and placed in the church. Sabbath came and found the church well filled with people. But soon the unaccustomed heat became intolerable to several of the anti-stove sisters and one after another they fainted away. Up rose the anti-stove brothers in great indignation to toss the stove out of doors, when lo, no fire was in it nor had been in it! The stove was left and afterwards endured.

Now the action of these good honest people, no doubt, seems foolish, but they were no more whimsical than those who think an organ desecrates the place of worship. Much better is the idea of the man who, being unwilling that the devil should rob God of all the good music, introduced into his choir a band of music.

Let us look at this organ question squarely in the face of Scripture, and logic. Is it of any use? Of a surety it is. It forms a nucleus around which all the voices can be collected. It steadies the voices of the weak and subdues and softens the voices of the mighty. It gives all the same key, thus avoiding the expense and discord of having twenty. This key is neither too high nor too low, but just right. The beauty of such an arrangement can only be appreciated when listened to by a large congregation of people—most of them singing the same tune, but some singing on one key, others on another. The discord, as it grates upon the nerves of one fond of harmony can only be felt,—it beggars description. Besides being an aid in this direction it forms a body to the singing, uniting all the voices into one harmonious whole. It enables us to render praise to God by harmony, rather than to desecrate his temple with wilder discord than can be called songs of praise.

I do not wish to overstate this; but truly I have heard such discord arising from people whose object was to sing praises unto their God,—and arising merely for the want of an organ that would have given them all a guide in shaping their voices—that it would have done more credit to an Indian pow wow than to a Christian meeting of civilized people.

But for all that it is useful we do not wish to have it in our meetings if it is contrary to the letter or the spirit of the Bible. Let us see about this. No objections certainly can be made to this organ that will not equally applied to other instruments when in the service of God. Now turning to Psalms 150: 1–3–5, we read—"Praise him (the Lord) with the sound of the trumpet! praise him with psaltery and harp! Praise him with the timbrel and dance! praise him with stringed instruments and ORGANS! Praise him upon the loud cymbals! praise him upon the high sounding cymbals!

Again, we find David saying—"Praise the Lord with harp; saying unto him with the psaltery and an instrument of ten strings!" (Ps. 33: 2.) In Ps. 81: 1–3, David says again: "Sing aloud unto God our strength. Make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob. Take a Psalm and bring hither the timbrel, the pleasant harp with the psaltery. Blow up the trumpet in the new moon, in the time appointed, as our solemn feast day." If more references are needed to establish the fact that instrumental music was not considered sinful by David when used in the praise of God, turn to Ps. 149: 3.

But says one, Did Christ make use of organs? Of such we would ask, Did Christ ride into Jerusalem in a buggy? Christ and Paul both adapted themselves to the times they lived in; its manners and customs. Thus we find Christ paying tribute to Cæsar, and Paul saying that he is "all things to all men." By this I do not mean to say that Christ or Paul indulged in our sinful practice. No person who follows out the teachings of Christ will feel it his duty to disregard every custom or improvement in manner. This would be turning our back upon all advancement and justly exposing the persons to condemnation. If Christ considered instrumental music sinful, what a fine opportunity he missed of telling his disciples of it in Mat. 11: 17, or in Lk. 7: 32. If Pa[illegible]aw it to be such a serious evil wh[illegible] he not say so in connection with 1 Cor. 14: 7. But says one, "If instruments are so useful in the service of God why will we not have them in heaven?" Let those that make this inquiry read Rev. 5: 8; 14: 2; 15: 2.

Now the object of this article is not to wound the feelings of any one. The only object is to remove, if possible, the objections to having something in our meetings that will enable us to have better and more worthy praise to a God who demands our best and sweetest notes.

JOHN D. JONES.

Circular Letter.

TO THE APPLE CREEK, ILL. ASSOCIATION OF UNITED BAPTISTS.

Brethren in the Lord: Having been appointed by you to write a Circular Letter for this year, after a prayerful consideration of my duty, in this respect would invite your attention to the comtemplation of the rapid and fearful inroads, the world, by the aid of nominal professors, is making upon true Christianity, as established by our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and will ask you to consider the same as ominous signs of the times in which we live.

We learn from the Bible that true Christianity is founded upon love to God. (Mark 12: 30, 31.) And subordinate love one to another. "See that you love one another with a pure heart, fervently." (1 Pet. 1: 22.) And we also learn that out of love to God grows obedience to his commandments. "If you love me, keep my commandments." (Jno. 14: 15.) Again: "The love of Christ constraineth us." (2 Cor. 5: 14.) It is thus by love that Christians are enabled to exemplify every Christian virtue, such as humility, self-denial, meekness, temperance, brotherly-kindness, together with many other virtues that distinguish them from the world. We learn also that the Lord separated his people from the world. (Jno. 15: 19.) He charges them not to be conformed to the ways of the world. (Rom. 12: 2.) And to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. (Eph. 5: 2.) But rather reproved them and that, denying themselves of all ungodliness and worldliness, they were to live soberly and righteously in this present evil world, seeking their highest personal joy in sweet fellowship with God, and the communion of his Holy Spirit; and like heaven-sent messengers, their mission was not to be that of pleasure-seeking in this world's sinful amusements, but ambassadors for Christ. They were to bear the glad tidings of salvation to the lost—not by fastidious sermonizing—but to pour out the sincere milk of the word to perishing souls—to prepare dying souls to lay hold of the hope of life and immortality set before them in the gospel.

The church of God was thus to be the light of the world—the salt of the earth. Such was at first, and is still, the exalted position, the high calling of the true Christian. But we are informed in the Scriptures that, in the latter times, some should depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, hold and teach doctrines of devils, yet claiming to be Christians; while others still would not endure sound doctrines, but would turn away their ears from the truth to fables, would heap to themselves teachers, and so reject not only the truth, but the true ministers of Christ. The same apostle

(2 Tim.) tells us that in the last days men of corrupt minds, reprobates concerring the faith, covetous, proud, boasters, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, who would yet have a form of godliness, but by their wicked works would deny the power thereof. And so they would imperil the church of God, extinguish in a measure her light, weaken her power, tarnish her glory, and by resisting the truth would drag down if possible, the whole system of Christianity into a low, man-pleasing, pleasure-serving, soul-destroying gratification of wicked lusts and sinful pleasures. But, saith the word, they shall proceed no further; for as Jannes and Jambres, two of Egypt's chief magicians withstood Moses, even when the arm of God's power was revealed to deliver his people from Egyptian bondage, even so these corrupters of the church of God, perverters of the truth, in the last days when our Lord is ready to be revealed from heaven, are to be found not only resisting the truth themselves, but opposing those who run not to the same excess of riot with them in immorality, by getting up church follies in the shape of fairs, festivals, levees, Christmas trees, etc., into which, to make those entertainments more complete and pleasing to the world, are introduced the lottery, ring-cakes, fish ponds, grab-matches, raffling, and in some instances dancing; and all this, and more than this, is done by professed Christians, headed by churches and ministers, ostensibly for the glory of God. May the Lord save us from such dishonor.

Do not these things declare that they who do them love pleasure more than they do God? And do they not also prove that the Bible is true? And also that we are living in the last days of the church's conflict, when iniquity was to abound and the love of many to wax cold?

And now in conclusion, may the Lord help all the churches and ministers in this Association to close their dwellings and churches against such worldly amusements and put their unqualified disapproval upon this entire system of religious frolicing and gambling, which in the light of the Bible, is no less dishonoring to God, ruinous to the young lambs of the fold and a stumbling block in the way of sinners, being contrary to every precept of Christ and the apostles. And so may all our hearts be filled so full of the love of Christ that there shall be no room for such sinful pleasures; that we may keep ourselves in the love of God and the work of the Lord until he shall come in the glory of his kingdom. For his is the kingdom, and power, and glory, forever and ever. Amen.

A. FARROW.

Comfort of the Scriptures.

For whatever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." (Rom. 15: 4.) I have read many books of the authenticity, validity, and divine origin of the Sacred Scriptures; but I think the Bible's strongest hold upon our faith and confidence is a kind of internal evidence. So many writers from Moses to John of the Apocalypse, of different language, some learned and some unlearned, yet all writing a part of Scripture, harmonious with all other parts. And it all comes to man as he is in his imperfections, speaks of its own Bible characters as imperfect, and says good words for man in every condition in which it is possible for him to be placed in a probationary state. The pious Cowper no doubt viewed it thus:

"Scripture is the cure for all our woes.
That field of promise, how it flings abroad
Its odors on the Christian's thorny road.
The soul reposing in assured relief,
Feels herself happy amid all her grief,
Forgets her labors as she toils along,
Weeps tears of joy and bursts into a song."

Then speaking of the evidences of its divine character he says:

"Truth divine forever stands secure;
Its head is guarded and its voice is sure.
Fixed in the rolling flood of endless years
The pillar of the eternal plan appears;
The raging storms and dashing waves defies
Built by that Architect who built the skies."

Let us see what the Scriptures say of themselves. (2 Tim. 3: 15–17): "The Holy Scriptures are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith that is in Christ Jesus. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work." (Jno. 5: 9): "Search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they that testify of me." (Ps. 119: 9): "Wherewithall shall a young man cleanse his way: by taking heed thereto according to thy word." (Ps. 119: 11): "Thy word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against thee." (Acts 17: 10–12): "The Bereans searched the Scripture daily to see if these things were so." Therefore many of them believed."

Now let us examine the same word to see what the Christian may expect in this life. Are we persecuted for our religious faith and practice? The word tells us (Jno. 15: 20), "If they have persecuted me they will persecute you also." (2 Tim. 3: 12): "They who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (Mat. 5: 10): "Blessed are they who are persecuted for righteousness' sake."

Are we afflicted, and would we learn the effect of afflictions on the righteous? (Job. 5: 7): "Man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward." (2 Cor. 4: 17): "For our light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." (Job 5: 17): "Happy is the man whom God correcteth; therefore despise not thou the chastenings of the Almighty. For he maketh sore and he bindeth up, he woundeth, and his hands make whole." (Ps. 119: 67): "Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now have I kept thy word." (Prov. 3: 12): "Whom the Lord loveth he correcteth, even as a father the son in whom he delighteth." (Is. 26: 9): "When thy judgments are abroad in the earth the inhabitants will learn righteousness." (Heb. 12: 11): "No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness."

Are we exposed to temptation? (Jas. 1: 2): "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience." (1 Cor. 10: 13): "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above what you are able, but will with the temptation make a way to escape that ye may be able to bear it." (2 Pet. 2: 9): "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation." (Heb. 2: 18): "For in that he suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them also that are tempted." (Heb. 4: 15): "For we have not a high priest that cannot be touched with the feelings of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." So we might go on, but time and space would fail us, unless we transcribe the whole Bible, and that is not necessary, as we all have it. If we feel our weakness; if we are bereaved of dearest friends; if though the foggy veil of error that hides the truth from nearly the whole Christian world, we would learn the nature and destiny of man, the reward of the righteous; in short, if in every situation we would learn our whole duty, and the blessings in store for those who do their duty, let us go to the sure word of prophecy and we shall assuredly find abundant comfort of the Scriptures.

P. A.

"Three Days and Three Nights."

If Christ was crucified on Friday and raised on Sunday, how could he have been in "the heart of the earth," "three days and three nights?" The world believes that he was crucified on Friday, i. e., the day before the Jewish Sabbath. Dr. Clarke says: "Our Lord rose from the grave on the day but one after his crucifixion." This of course places his crucifixion on Friday —the "preparation day." The same claim is made by Dr. William Smith in his New Testament history, as is also the case with nearly all standard theological writers. But is it true? Shall we be considered fanatical if we question the authority of such men as the above and of the whole world upon this subject? I am inclined to reject everything that does not harmonize with the word of God, even though it should come from great men—Clarke and Beecher not excepted.

Let it be distinctly remembered (1) that Christ was not buried on the same day he died—(2) that "Three days and three nights" were to elapse between his burial, and his resurrection. He was to be in the heart of the earth three days and three nights. (Mat. 12: 40.)

The day, according to Jewish reckoning, is "from sunset to sunset." The day commenced at the going down o the sun. "The evening and the morning were the first day," etc. The night was divided into four watches" (Mat. 14: 25; Mk. 6: 48.), and the day into twelve hours. Christ was crucified at the third hour (Mk. 15: 25), or about 9 a. m. From the sixth to the ninth hours, i. e., from 12 m. till about 3 p.m. "There was darkness over the whole land." (Mat. 27: 45; Mk. 15: 33; Lk. 23: 44.) At the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice. (Ps. 22:1; Mat. 27: 46; Mk. 15: 34.) Shortly after this, and before the "even was come" (Mk. 15: 42, see also Mk. 1: 32.) Jesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost. (Mk. 15: 37; Mat. 27: 50; Jno. 19: 30.) The "law" requires that he should die between the evenings" (Ex. 12: 6), that is, between the ninth and eleventh hours of the day.

Now let us turn to Mk. 15: 42. "Joseph of Arimathea," came and crave the body of Jesus, when the even was come of the "preparation day," that is the day before the Sabbath. The day before the Jewish Sabbath was certainly our Friday. This day, which was the "preparation day" commenced at sunset on Thursday, our time, and lasted till sunset on Friday when the Jewish Sadbath began. Now who will tell us when Christ was crucified? He was dead and ready for burial, according to the requirements of the "law," and according to the plain teaching of the record, before five o'clock Thursday afternoon. In Jno. 19: 31–37 will be found additional proof of this fact.

This harmonious record of the case constitutes an invulnerable evidence of Christ's Messiahship. If he died on Friday, he was not buried until the "even" of the Sabbath, and hence was in the earth only two days and two nights. But if he died on Thursday and was buried in the even of the "preparation day," that is after sundown Thursday, then he was in the grave "three days and three nights," and thus became a "sign" to the generation in which he lived. Let us believe the truth, whether the D. D's do or not.

C. C. MARSTON.

Behold, he Cometh With Clouds.

"And every eye shall see him; and they, also, which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen. (Rev. 1: 7.)

The text above quoted ought to be received as positive proof of the resurrection of all men when Christ comes. Nevertheless there are many who take the opposite [illegible]w, and positively declare the w[illegible] dead shall not be raised alive. [illegible] their doctrine be true, we think it [illegible] not be an easy matter to make it h[illegible]monize with the following Scriptures: Eccl. 12: 14—"God shall bri[illegible] work into Judgment, with eve[illegible]hing, whether it be good, or w[illegible]t be evil." Job 21: 30—"[illegible] is reserved to the [illegible] of [illegible]tion; they shall be b[illegible]oug[illegible] the day of wrath. This [illegible] wrath comes with the close of the sixth seal. (Rev. 6: 17.) "I said in mine heart, God shall judge the righteous and the wicked. (Eccl. 3: 17.) Again: "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad. (2 Cor. 5: 10.) "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." (John 5: 28, 29.) Hear the faithful and true witness again: "The men of Ninevah shall rise in judgment with this generation and shall condemn it; because they repented at the preaching of Jonah." (Mat. 12: 41.) In this text we are positively assured that the Ninevites and the Jews who lived at the time of the first advent will rise together in the Judgment. Again: "Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven. (Mat. 26: 64.) "And as it is appointed unto man once to die, but after this the judgment." (Heb. 9: 27.) Here we are told men are not judged before death, nor in death, but after death therefore at the resurrection. Again we learn that the dead will be judged at the sounding of the seventh trumpet. (Rev. 11: 18.) If we accept this testimony we cannot believe they are yet judged. Let us hear the great Apostle again: "I charge thee therefore before God, and our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." We therefore conclude they are not yet judged. Again, we hear the apostle to the Gentiles, saying: I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you." (Acts 20: 20.) I think if the non-resurrection of the wicked was true doctrine and profitable to the church Paul would have preached it. But we cannot find it in any of his writings.

I do not make these remarks for the sake of controversy with our brethren who hold these views. I have reason to believe many of them love the Lord and will be saved in his kingdom. Nevertheless I believe the doctrine is a source of evil, and that its tendency is to make the sinner who hears it more careless. When men can deny the plain declaration of Christ in John 5: 28, 29, they are prepared to deny all other Scriptures bearing on this subject. But Daniel says: Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." (ch. 12: 2.)

H. CAMPBELL.

Our Book and Tract Column

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 8c; postage, 2c.
The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 10 pp.; Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—54 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—30 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—32 pp. Restitution—36 pp.
Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,800 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,300 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. With testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid in reference to Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 475 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 25c.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 120 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 317 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH: or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic review and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 45 pp. 10c.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Notes, and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and [illegible]. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25. Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined. Scripturally and Historically. 25c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 40c. post-paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable. Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 15c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. J. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of the age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 50c. The three in one volume are now offered for 30c.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL: What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT: What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 10c. post-paid.
The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 40c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—24c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 35c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $2.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlinear word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlinear translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 18 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. [illegible]

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 16c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 35c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 40c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

Advent Christian Times.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - EDITOR

TU[illegible] Jan. 2, 1872.

[illegible]NS.

We [illegible] defe[illegible]d answers to several questio[illegible] because the subjects involved wil[illegible] oubtless be fully considered in the [illegible]ssion which commences in this week's paper. Friends will understand this, and please accept answers in that form.

About the Debt.

PAY IT UP.

I see by the last TIMES, you have paid two hundred dollars of the debt on the office. Why don't the church come up at once, send in the money, and relieve you of that burden and let you go free? Come, my dear brethren, let us wipe out this debt at once.

I have known Br. Himes twenty-five or thirty years, as a true man to his God, and to this great truth that we love so well. And now in his old age, he is one of the most zealous missionaries we have in the field. Down in the Southern wilds, preaching the speedy coming of our Lord; riding over mountains and through dales, on his old "mule;" out in storms, drenched with rain, lonely and weary, enduring many hardships, to warn the world of coming judgment.

Come, brethren, Let us stand by the good old man, and keep on the work of which we have given him the charge. Let us clear up the debt, and give the publishing cause a "happy new year."

Eat less rich and expensive food, that only gorges the stomach and stupefies the brain. Wear less costly and fashionable clothing, whe[illegible] by we are conformed to this world, [illegible]trary to the word of God. Live ch[illegible]er in every respect, take up the cross a[illegible] more for God and the spread of tru[illegible]

I am living as cheap as I can. In a little white-washed, board house, without plaster or paint. Some of you would be ashamed to live in such a place. I do it to save money for the cause of God, and to pay my expenses as I go on ahead into new places, to break up the ground, plant the seed, and then leave for others to enter in.

One year ago this fall I visited Vallejo, a stranger. Not a person in the town I knew. I stopped at a hotel, (after lugging our heavy baggage for three fourths of a mile), where we engaged a room and then went out to reconnoiter. I found two blessed Advent sisters who offered us board but could not lodge us. On returning to the hotel the landlord told us if we did not take board we could leave, and go at once. It was then dark and we took our baggage and started out, paying $1 for room rent for a few hours. Found another place where they charged us $6 for a room from Friday night to Monday morning. The hardest place for hotels we have found in the State.

But mark the change in one year. Now we have homes by the dozen here, and glad hearts to receive us, who have helped in a godly way.

Now, brethren, you who have good homes and all the comforts and even luxuries of life, and are not called to leave them to preach the gospel, remember responsibilities are also laid upon you, which if you fail to meet and discharge in the fear of God will cry against you. As to pledging to give a certain sum providing the whole amount is made up, I think but little of it. What you have to give, GIVE it NOW, at once, whether anybody else gives or not. "What is that to thee?" saith the Lord. "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily unto the Lord," and God will bless you, with good measure, pressed down, running over. David at a certain time said he would not offer a burnt-offering unto the Lord that cost him nothing. And I have learned by experience it pays well to give to the Lord that which costs me self-denial. I enclose my mite again, $2. towards the debt, which I feel is our debt.

The Lord wake up the church to duty. In hope, D. D. REED.

Santa Clara, Cal.

THAT PROPOSITION.

What was it? Don't you remember an article in THE TIMES, several weeks ago, in which the writer proposed that every subscriber should contribute one dollar towards paying that debt, which we have all heard, and read so much about during the few past months? "Oh, yes! I recollect now, and thought at the time, IF every one would send in their dollar how easily the debt could be paid, besides leaving a large surplus for the book and tract fund; but really I have been so busy of late, not only with my home duties, but with others trying to do what we could for the relief of the poor sufferers that lost their all during those terrible fires, that I have neglected my duty in that direction. Glad you have reminded me of it. And now lest I forget it again, I will send my dollar at once."

Perhaps there are some others that need to have their pure minds stirred up by way of remembrance. If so, don't fail to read that proposition, also the Editor's urgent call for you to respond now. MIRA DANA.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

MONDAY, Dec. 11. Spent the day at the office of THE TIMES. Our correspondence shows a good outlook for the cause.

TUESDAY, Dec. 12. Visited Union Mills, Ind., and dined with Br. D. Mathewson, and after concluding my business left for Memphis, Tenn., where I arrived Thursday morning.

I find Br. and Sr. Wadsworth here, having returned from St. Louis. They are not settled as to what they will do, but will work somewhere; they cannot well be idle. They are faithful and true to the Lord's cause.

FRIDAY, Dec. 15. After two days of laborious effort, I finally accomplished the work assigned me by the Mission Board, to close this entire work by the final transfer of the Mission property to the African M. E. church, to whom it had been sold some months ago. The African church is rising and flourishing generally in this city, and the South.

In closing this mission I can but feel sad. I look back over some six years of toil, on the part of Brn. Leslie, Wilkins, Eastman, Reed, Cole, Wadsworth, and others, with Srs. Butler, Northrup, Reed and Wadsworth, whose work is done. Br. Wilkins and Sr. Northrup sleep sweetly in Elm Wood Cemetery. Their graves are cared for and kept green; but soon the turf will be turned up, and the sleepers will come forth, to receive the reward of those who cared for the poor and them who have no helper.

We have a church here like the "flourishing bush," for mid the elements of fiery conflict within and without, they still maintain a healthy and vigorous existence. Their numbers are not large, but what remains are true and will continue in the faith. All attempts to shake them have failed. They stand on the word of God, and defy modern theology. They look for Christ soon to come, and their only hope of the future life is in the resurrection of the dead. They greatly rejoice in the fact that Br. Leslie is to be sent to their aid by the Board at Boston, to assist them in erecting a little chapel, which will give them a house of their own. They all rejoice in the idea of the return of Br. Leslie. They love and esteem him as a man, who under God by the gospel, and by education, has raised them from their low estate to positions of usefulness and happiness in a higher civilization. The young men and women who were educated by our missionaries, now take their places among the better classes, and the old plantation habits disappear. And when we visit them at their new households we find all so neat, clean, and tidy, that it richly repays us for all labor and sacrifice. What has been done here lives and will live. The light that our Mission Board set up here will never be extinguished till Jesus comes. Had there been entire union upon the question of the continued prosecution of this mission, it now looks as though there might have been very much greater results effected.

SATURDAY, Dec. 16. Leaving Memphis at an early hour I arrived in Cobden, Ill., in the afternoon, where I was greeted by Elds. Lawver and Childs' Br. Lawver is getting some victory, and meeting much opposition. I spent the evening with him, and some of my old friends who had moved into this place, among whom were Br. and Sr. Fowler. They are old Adventists, and still hold to the faith. Some of our readers will remember Sr. Fowler's sister, Mrs. Minor, who went to Palestine many years since upon a mistaken mission, died and was buried there. She was a woman of much talent, and regarded by her friends as honest, though misguided.

SABBATH, Dec. 17. I spoke to-day in Cobden, and organized a new church of eleven members, of which Eld. J. S. Lawver was elected elder. Having gathered the elements of this new interest, Br. L. will not fail to have a care for them, and under his faithful attentions they will prosper in the Lord. There is another church soon to be organized in this region, gathered lately by Br. Calkins, which will also be added to the Southern Illinois Conference. May the Lord give them continued success in his work.

MONDAY, Dec. 18. Took leave of Br. Lawver and household. This is a family of God. It is good to meet with such. They throw around one Christlike influences and help the pilgrim on his way to the kingdom. Arrived at Champaign, Ill., in the p. m., and spent a short time with my son Arthur, who has been sick, but is now better. Left in the midnight train for the North. Was detained several hours by an accident on the road. The freight train just before us was thrown from the track, and fourteen cars were broken up. One man was injured, and we escaped. Thank God for deliverance. The wonder is that so few accidents happen upon the frosty roads at such a rate of speed.

After five hours delay we arrived in Chicago, and I returned to Buchanan in the evening, having been absent just one week, and accomplished my business for the cause.

I live in a whirl most of the time, but not in confusion. I have plan and object in my work, and stick to it, by day and night, and see results that give me some hope of good, and the approval of the Master.

THURSDAY, Dec. 21. Receiving a telegram to meet my companion and grand-children at Chicago, I took the cars for that city, to help them on their way home. The heavy snow storms make bad work with the railroads. Cars all behind the times; it took us nine hours to reach the city. And freight trains are entirely out of time. We are delayed in our work for the lack of paper that is somewhere on the road to us.

On arrival at the old depot, where I had not been since the fire, I found all desolate. I hardly knew where I was. All the stately and magnificent buildings were in ruins. All this portion of the city near the great Union Depot is a desolation. It being the first time I had seen this portion of the burnt district, it filled me with sadness. Here is where I had done my business connected for the Western office. And it was hard to realize that in a few hours all these beautiful, compact and solid structures were turned to ashes.

The weather is intensely cold, but thousands are at work clearing away the debris, and preparing to rebuild as soon as the weather will allow. Many buildings are already up, while there are numerous temporary structures put up for present use. And most of them are doing a large business. Hope, courage, and even daring, characterize this people. Nothing can daunt, discourage, or break them down.

Among my old friends with whom I have done business heretofore in the "burnt district," was the firm of J. W. Butler & Co. Mr. Butler and his associates are real gentlemen, and all their business is done with strict regard for honor and uprightness. They have been burned out twice within a short time. And this last time over $200,000 worth of paper, one of the finest assortments in the city, was totally consumed: not a sheet saved. They have commenced business again at No. 22 and 24 Des Plaines St., and those who wish papers of any kind will do well to call on them.

Calling upon Br. Burr, I found Br. R. W. Wilson and wife, who were just on their way to California. He has closed up his secular affairs, and left a profitable business for Christ and the gospel. And the Lord has seemed to lead him to think of California. And so he leaves for that field in a short time. He will stop first in Napa City, and then go out as the Lord may direct. He will scatter tracts and books, and preach the word. As yet he has comparatively little experience in preaching. But he will soon work into the harness, and show himself a workman. God give him success, and the desire of his heart in the salvation of souls. May the Lord go with them to the "land of sunshine."

FRIDAY, Dec. 22. I had a long conversation with Eld. H. V. Reed on the prophetic word. He looks upon the signs connected with the fall of the papacy, and the prospective fall of the Ottoman Empire as the harbingers of the coming of the Lord. A few years, at most, is to settle this great question.

SATURDAY, Dec. 23. I came to Eaton Rapids, via Jackson. On the way I met Br. Daniels, just from the quarterly meeting in Rives. They had a stirring time. These brethren in Central Michigan work in earnest for God and souls, and are blessed. He also informed me that the church in Jackson was prospering. They now meet in the Brick School House on Lansing and Ganson Sts. Brethren calling will inquire for E. P. Daniels, 52 Park Avenue.

I put up with Job Ferris, six miles in the country, a well-to-do farmer, and an old citizen. He likes our faith and the family are interested in it.

SABBATH, Dec. 24. I spoke in Roger's S. H. Had a good audience of intelligent people. It might be called a Christmas sermon, for the subject was the first advent of Christ. I showed from the Scriptures that Jesus, is the Christ of God. Jesus said, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they that testify of me." And what can be clearer than that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners.

MONDAY, Dec. 25. Christmas—a holiday for the Christian world. A few worship and glorify God, while the multitudes engage in all sorts of recreation, innocent and otherwise. Feasting and intemperate eating and drinking is the order of the day.

At an early hour Brn. Preston and Wilson arrived. Br. Preston is doing a good work in Algansee, and "the region round about." He has a circuit, and faithfully attends to it, and prospers. Success attends diligent and faithful labor.

Br. A. H. P. Wilson, whom I came to visit, is a young man of English birth, with good education, and has an earnest soul for his work. He has formed a circuit, and visits each place regularly. He speaks German, and has a German interest in Grand Ledge, Eaton Co. He labors in the counties of Clinton, Ingham and Eaton. There are now one hundred believers, all gathered within the last year. This shows what industry and a little good sense will do. His sermons are of a length and character to make the people want to hear him again, so that he holds what he gathers, instead of scattering. He is an Adventist, out and out.

To-day he was married to the accomplished daughter of Mr. Job Ferris, of Eaton Rapids. She will no doubt make him a good "help-mate." Eld. Preston took part with me in the ceremony, at the residence of the bride's father. Many of the friends of Br. Wilson and the bride were present, and it was an occasion of much interest. Music and edifying conversation made the time pass pleasantly and profitably until the hour of marriage, after which came the feast, without wine. Temperance is the Christian rule, rather, abstinence. Dinner over, Br. Preston and I were taken by Br. Palmer, of Rives, to the depot. We came to Charlotte, where we visited friends. It was a joyful surprise, and a joyous one. The little church here still lives, and God is with them.

TUESDAY, Dec. 26. Br. Snook met us at the depot in Jackson about noon. Br. P. went on, and I visited with Br. S. a few hours until the next train East.

Br. Snook has for some time past been affected with a weak voice and a congestion of the brain, and has turned his attention to secular business until he should be able to preach again. He is at present building a home for his family, and will likely remove from Romeo to this city. This will be a central place for his field of labor, when he shall be able to resume preaching. And while he is not able to preach, he is by no means lost to the cause. He takes a deep interest, and is not only a help to the churches, but is much appreciated.

ERRATA.

In our reply to Mr. Braden, in part of our edition, the 89th Psalm is attributed to "Esther" instead of Ethan; and the words "that we" are left out of the quotation of 1 Cor. 2: 12.

San Francisco.

Yesterday morning Dec. 17, 1871, Mrs. Fassett preached at the Christian Chapel, on Mission St. Her discourse being on the unconscious state of the dead; a well arranged, keenly put sermon.

One great lacking at the chapel is hymn books. No strangers supplied. Copies of the books without the tunes should be distributed among the outsiders. Such supply would add much to the chance-comer's interest in the services.

Rev. Henry Constable under date of Nov. 25, writes me:

"My Dear Sir and Br: Accept my best thanks for your thoughtfulness in telling me of the circulation of my work on future punishment, in San Francisco, and the spread of the truth of Life in Christ in that city. I greatly hope that this grand truth of the gospel will prevail widely there and draw many souls to Christ for salvation, and help to overthrow much error that bases itself upon a false philosophy that has been introduced into the church.

I do not know whether Messrs. Bancroft & Co. of San Francisco are publishers as well as booksellers. I am desirous of publishing in the United Strtes a work on the intermediate state, the plan which I have drawn out, if I could meet with a publisher. The popular view of this question is part and parcel of the entire question; though it is not yet seen to be so by many who agree with us as to the future punishment.

San Francisco is a long way off, but there is a bond which unites men however widely separated—their living union with our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Very sincerely yours

HENRY CONSTABLE.

There is a lively expectation in Sacramento (where I have recently sojourned, and where I shall stay most of this winter's time) of Eld. Grant. Some with whom I have conversed there say that there is as much bigotry among the Advent people as among the orthodox; and that the former are only one or two steps in advance on right interpretation of the Scriptures. I think that it will be found that in Sacramento there is a more general acquaintance with the Advent views than existed in San Francisco last year; partly owing no doubt, to the light that came from the mission at the metropolis, but in greater part due to other causes of enlightening

I wish all might seek after the truth and none be ready to cry "infidel" on account of differences that do not touch the almost universally acknowledged truths among Protestants. Let us have the truth at the capital of California this winter. A.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Br. Job Brown, Brownsville, Minn.

The few lovers of Jesus and his cause in this region though not organized into a church love the cause abroad as well as at home, and have determined to make a monthly payment to help the Association until that debt is paid. Our old brother who has been turned out of doors by his son since he embraced the faith, though eighty-five years old, and compelled to earn his bread by daily labor, is determined to pay ten cents a month until the debt is paid. He says his last days are his best days, in spite of his trials. Another says he must have the paper, if we have been burned out. We cannot do without it. We all hope that every church will go to work and do something in earnest for this good cause. If we will, the debt can be paid and our office nobly sustained. The office is in good hands and the responsibility rests upon us to see that it is kept supplied with all needed means.

From Alice E. Rathbun, Broughton, Ill.

I came to this place for the first time Oct. 7. Spoke four times to large congregations. The spirit of God was with us. A feeling of solemnity rested over the people. Conviction deep and abiding fastened on heart and conscience. In four weeks I returned and commenced a protracted effort, trusting alone in our great Helper. By Monday evening backsliders were returning to the good Shepherd, and sinners seeking peace. The work steadily progressed for two weeks. Twenty-two were hopefully converted to God. We enjoyed many a glorious meetings; and on Friday afternoon, near the close of a prayer meeting during which we had a foretaste of the joy to come, our hearts were yet more gladdened, by the coming of my uncle, Eld. Geo. W. Hurd, whose face I had not been permitted to look upon for five long years. He remaind with us over one week, preaching the truth with boldness and to good acceptances. Sixteen were immersed. Eleven others have professed Christ. There is much opposition, yet these glorious truths of the Bible are steadily gaining favor in the hearts, as well as in the ears of the people. A little band of twenty-two brothers and sisters, staunch and true, is here formed. Many urgent calls are before me for labor. I trust I shall be able to fill them, and that scores of souls may be brought from the dark bondage of sin into the glorious light of eternal truth; and the sweet sunshine of God's love. Remember me at the throne of grace. Pray for me, that I may be able to do the will of God perfectly, and be faithful to the end. Let us keep our hands clean, our hearts pure, and ourselves unspotted from the world. Let us watch, toil and pray. There is a stern conflict before us. The black tossing clouds of the last fearful storm are gathering in mighty power. The shadows stretch long and dark. The end is just upon us. Are we ready? Is our work all finished? Do we present our bodies a living sacrifice? Have we "this hope?" Do we purify ourselves even as Christ is pure? God help us to be faithful.

Brief Extracts.

Br. Edward Orr, Jackson, Minn: I wish to say to you that I love the truth and I fully believe you have it, as it is published in The Times, and tracts of your Association. Since I began to read them (over a year ago) I see a harmony in the Holy Scriptures which before I was a stranger to. And now from a full heart I bid you God speed, and that you may be the means in God's hands of saving many souls from "death," and hide a multitude of sins, and thus help prepare a people for the coming of the just One is my prayer.——————Thos. Horebury, Lockport, N. Y. I have thought we would not want The Times much longer, for it looks to me some of the time that faith is about swallowed up in sight. And it looks to me to-night that I can almost see land ahead. I can see the lights are burning around the shore, and it does not seem possible to me that I will read your paper very much longer. My prayer is, God speed the day! Even if I should not get into the kingdom, let sin and death come to an end.——————A minister of another denomination in Penn. says The Times is silently but surely introducing the truth among us. Not only among the lay members, but our ministers. In my visiting, and occasional lecturing and preaching, at our meetings I have noticed that those preachers who have frequent opportunities to read The Times and other Advent works, have ceased using the phrases "immortal soul," "deathless spirit" "never-dying soul," and "the death that never dies." Indeed I know several who have stopped preaching dead men, women and children into glory. They appear perfectly willing to let them sleep until Jesus comes, even at the risk of being classed among the hateful and hated soul-sleepers. A young preacher of this description wishes you to send him The Times for six months. ——————A brother, withholds his name but says: Br. Crandell preaches with us once in four weeks. I am trying to do what I can in my feeble way. I have scattered tracts and papers. They may do some good. Some four miles from my place a man and his wife live who joined another church. My wife happened over there something over a year ago, and advanced a few ideas in conversation. He then wanted to talk with me. I went over, and also sent him some tracts and papers. Since that he has been to our meetings, and acknowledges that he has learned more Bible since then than he knew before, and he thinks more than he ever would have known had he not seen me. He and his wife are spoiled for anything but Adventists. I enclose two dollars to send him The Times as a New Years present.—— ——————Br. C. E. Barnes, I wish the oft repeated truth that many littles make one much might be impressed upon the mind of every reader of The Times. If it were, they might then begin to lay aside the pennies, or larger amounts as they were able, and when a dollar or more was collected, it could readily be forwarded. One grain of sand is but a very small part of our earth, yet it is a part as truly as the highest mountain. A drop of water makes but a very small portion of the bulk of old ocean. Yet it is a part as really as any of the gulfs and bays which are tributary to it. So, too, ten cents or a dollar is but a small portion of the money needed to sustain the missionary enterprise, yet it is a part as truly as the gift of ten or even one hundred dollars. I wish Christians all had humility like the widow who cast her mite into the treasury, so that they would not feel above giving a little, if a little is all they can do.—— ——————Br. C. S. Shaw, Montgomery Co. Iowa. I have for some time been weekly reader of The Times which is about the only Advent preaching I get. And how cheering it is to read the letters from those of like precious faith who are scattered abroad. I have been for several years a believer in the Advent faith, but have not, until a short time since, made a public profession of it. Our late camp meeting was a precious time to me. It seemed as though the Lord was with his people there, and that to bless. I feel that I am one of the weak ones of the flock, yet I feel determined to go forward in the service of my Master, and be ready to meet him when he shall come to set up his kingdom under the whole heavens.——————Br. S. Campbell, Tuscola Co. Mich. The people are waked up to the truth quite generally. Error and traditionary doctrines of men are giving place to the word of God, and our numbers increase. Our little church is growing in grace. That which was sown in weakness is growing in strength. Br. Durand is with us at present. Financially our means are limited at present. But you have our prayers, hoping that the Lord will soon come and relieve us from our earthly cares.——————Sr. A. W. Shafer, Sparta, Wis. I believe the good shepherd will direct what will be for the best to those who trust in his holy name. I will trust in him all the days that are appointed for me, whether many or few. I am looking for the glorious appearing of the Rock of my hope and defence. My prayer is that I may keep on the whole armor, that I may meet all the loved ones in that Eden home. Oh! happy day! When the saints will see the Lord coming in the clouds of glory, with the heavenly host singing, "Hallelujah to him that sits on the throne forever and ever." ——————A brother in Connecticut says: I am comparatively alone here. I have talked with a great many on this subject, and almost every person tells me they can find "never-dying spirit," etc., in the Bible. But they have not yet. One excuses himself that his eyes are poor; another that his memory is not good; and still another that he has lost his concordance; and lastly that his or her glasses are too young or too old! The glasses are not nor ever will be made that can see these things in the Bible, or that will make man immortal out of Christ. I would like to see you. It seems as though you were a relative. I have not been long of this belief. I have as it were just come up out of the slough, all mud and mire.——————Sr. S. W. Sage, Lewiston N. Y. We think Br. Whitmore's work on Immortality is incontrovertible. Oh! that the church could see it. We rejoice in the prosperity of the cause in the West, and that faithful laborers are embracing the truth and earnestly proclaiming it. We praise the Lord for his great mercy to our guilty world, which has refused to yield to the kind invitations of the gospel, but is now being warned by his judgments.

"Signs there's no mistaking, Proclaim Messiah near."

——————Br. C. W. Pitcher, Cascade, Iowa. I attended to-day the union meeting to give thanks to God for his mercies for the last year. We had a discourse upon the good time coming, the world's conversion, etc. I knew it was Bishop Simpson-ism; but I could praise God that in his mercies for the past year the gospel was being preached for a witness (not to convert) all the nations. And soon the blessed Jesus will come. Wicked men wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. But come what will, we here are determined to hold on to the glorious truths of the Advent, looking for that blessed hope.—— ——Sr. Ella Liddell, Laingsburg, Mich. God help the cause is my fervent prayer, and give each one of us a spirit of self-sacrifice and prayer. Oh! that we may not be found sleeping, but working when the midnight cry is given. Sometimes I am afraid that I may succumb to the many temptations which surround me. Pray for me that I may grow in grace and be strong in the Lord. There is no Advent church in Laingsburg, and we could get no place for Br. Snook to preach when he was here. Still we hope for better things.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

N. Penn. and S. N. Y.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

The first Q. M. of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Penn. and Southern New York was held at Westfield, Tioga Co. Pa., Dec. 15–17.

Met in business session, Dec. 16. President, J. W. Taylor, in the chair. After singing, prayer by A. H. Briggs. Minutes of last session read and approved. Benj. Butler, E. H. Eggleston, J. C. Morehouse, Business Committee. Sylvanus Gardner, A. Mallory, N. Rice, Committee on Devotional Exercises. D. B. Hunt, N. Rice, delegates from the Troup's Creek church. E. H. Eggleston, delegate from the Harrison church. A Johnson, delegate from the Turner Creek church. The churches at Fremont, and Hornellsville, N. Y. were received into the Conference. Elds. Benj. Butler, E. H. Eggleston, J. W. Taylor, A. H. Briggs, present, and report that they are all preaching. Elds. Ira Stocum, D. B. Hunt, W. Marlatt, absent.

Report of churches: Troups Creek, gaining and doing well. Harrison, rather discouraged. Turner Creek, firm and hopeful. Eld. D. B. Hunt, arrived first here, and reported his labors.

Voted, That we elect a Missionary Board of three to raise and control funds for missionary work within the bounds of this Conference. E. H. Eggleston, J. W. Taylor, S. Gardener, elected Mission Board.

After some other business adjourned until after religious services in the afternoon.

Called to order at three p. m. The church at Westfield Pa. was received. Resolution, No. 1, was called up and adopted. E. A. Eggleston appointed Committee on Roll. Resolution, No. 2, offered and adopted. Committee on Roll reported Elder W. E. White, of Watkins, N. Y.

Religious exercises of the Conference. Preaching Friday eve. by A. H. Briggs. Text: Mk. 16: 15. Saturday, 16, 1 p. m. by E. H. Eggleston. Text: Rom. 8: 28. Eve. by J. W. Taylor. Text: Jas. 1: 27. Conference meeting Sunday at 9 a. m. Preaching at 11 by W. Marlatt. Text: 2 Cor. 5: 10. At two p. m. by W. E. White. Text: 1 Cor. 6: 19, 20. In eve. by J. W. Taylor. Text: Mat. 24: 14. Adjourned, sine die.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

Illinois.

DE KALB DISTRICT.

The fourth Q. M. of the DeKalb District commenced with the church in Afton, Sat. Dec. 16. Called to order by the Pres. E. H. Burington. A vote of the Conference resulted in the re-election of the old officers: E. H. Burington, Pres't.; H. G. McCullock, Vice-Presient and Sec'y.

The following resolutions were presented by the Secretary, and unaimously adopted.

Resolved, That we as ministers and churches feel deeply the necessity of united and continued effort in saving and rescuing our fellow men from the perils of these last days.

Resolved, That we will give our aid, our sympathy and our prayers for those who are faithfully engaged in the great work of our coming King in the great fields of the West, whether in preaching, or publishing papers books or tracts to be scattered like autumnal leaves over the prairies of the West: and so long as they follow Christ they shall receive our sympathy and support, and we will take for our motto, Union with Christ; union with each other in the great work of preparing a people for the kingdom of God.

After the adoption of the above resolutions the case of A. Cairns was brought up. He being suspended a few years ago by the State Conference, asken a read-mission as a recommendation to the State Conference for that purpose. Difficulties between him and Eld. H. G. McCullock being settled to the satisfaction of all, he was accordingly recommended.

Adjourned to the call of the Board. Preaching brethren present were: A. Kingsley, A. A. Crocker, N. W. Spencer, E. H. Burington, M. Mc Cullock, H. G. McCullock. It was one of the best meetings we ever enjoyed Preaching good; Prayer and Conference meetings excellent. The interest increased to the close. Best of all the good Master with his heavenly presence was there to cheer and comfort his people.

H. G. McCullock, Sec'y.

THE ADVENT TIMES.

1872.

The Times, the only periodical published by Advent Christians West of Rochester, N. Y., will enter upon its eighth year in 1872. Its success in the past has been flattering, and its managers intend that in the future it shall deserve even greater prosperity and more rapid growth.

A leading feature of the paper for at least six months, will be a discussion between the Editor, and Eld. Clark Braden, a noted debater of the Disciple church. Each paper will contain an article from each of the debaters—an affirmative and reply.

The discussion will be based upon the Scriptures, and involve (1) the nature of man; and (2) the future reward and punishment—questions of vital moment and intense interest, as every person who has felt the popular pulse well knows.

In the first proposition Eld. Braden affirms the endless conscious existence of the spirit of man.

In the second the editor of The Times will affirm the unconscious state of the dead, and the resurrection their only hope.

In the third he will affirm that literal destruction is the doom of the finally impenitent, while eternal life is the gift of God through Christ.

In the fourth and last proposition Eld. Braden affirms that the final punishment will consist in banishment from God and the society of all pure beings, in a state of endless conscious existence.

The person who wishes to read both sides of this question in condensed, pithy form, will hardly have a better opportunity.

Besides the above, the Editor will furnish his "Journal," or narrative of the progress of Adventism in the parts he may visit, with incidents of travel, experience, the past history of the cause, and its present prospects.

The editorial department will be kept up, and filled with articles upon live questions, and "the present truth" in all its features. The signs of the times, fulfillment of prophecy, and everything indicative of "the last times" will receive due attention.

We have many able correspondents, whose contributions have greatly strengthened The Times in the past, and we anticipate even better things from them in the future.

The pages devoted to letters and extracts, and accounts of travel and missionary work must necessarily grow in interest as the field widens, and we have more workers, more writers, and more to narrate.

The Times is not a "NEWS" paper; yet it will continue to give a weekly digest of the more important events of the day, at home and abroad—a terse record of the signs of the times, and indications of the approaching crisis of the world.

We shall give the news concerning Adventism all over the world, in brief, so far as we can obtain it.

We shall occasionally give pieces of music and illustrations that will interest all.

Finally, The Times will, we think, deserve, and we know it needs, five hundred paying subscribers at once! Shall we have them?

Reader: Do you take The Times? If not, subscribe for it at once. Try it a year, or for six months, at least. $2 a year; $1 for six months

Address: Joshua V. Himes, Buchanan, Mich.

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

UPON FOUR PROPOSITIONS,

Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

PROPOSITION I. Man is by the constitution which God gave him in creation, and which he still retains, a being that possesses a spirit that will endlessly exist in a state of consciousness.

Clark Braden affirms.

ELD. BRADEN'S FIRST ARTICLE.

Kind Readers: It is not necessary nor would it be profitable for me to enter into a lengthy explanation of the circumstances that gave rise to this discussion. Suffice it to say that a correspondence has been in progress between myself and Br. Himes for over six months. Our employment in other directions has prevented our commencing the publication of our articles sooner. The propositions and other matters pertaining to it have been amicably settled, and with the most friendly and fraternal feelings toward each other, and I trust animated only by a love of the truth and chastened by a sense of the awful import of the themes we discuss, we enter upon the examination of the questions before us. Let me here pay to Br. Himes a tribute due to his frankness and kind Christian spirit in our preliminary correspondence: I have had frequently to inquire of him what would be his positions regarding certain questions that would arise in the discussion, and he has invariably frankly and fully satisfied me on each question. We have endeavored to learn each other's true position, and thus be able to make our discussion concise, honest, and thorough. I anticipate from him none of the trickster's jugglery of words so graphically described by the term pettifogging. We have one commonly accepted standard, the sacred Scriptures. It will be the work of each to endeavor to show that his position agrees with this standard, and that the position of his opponent honestly and fairly stated does not agree with it.

We have [illegible]eed upon four propositions as containi[illegible] and expressing clearly the subject matter o[illegible] debate. The first reads—"Man is by the constitution which God gave him in creation, and which he still retains, a being possessing a spirit that will endlessly exist in a state of consciousness." In discussing this proposition we can examine the nature of spirit; inquire what kind of being the Creator made when he made man in his own image; inquire also what were the effects of the transgression on the nature of man as far as existence is concerned; and, finally, what is man now in his nature, and what is the nature of the life or duration of the existence of the human spirit.

The second proposition is—"Mankind are subjected to an utter extinction of conscious being in death, and without a resurrection will never have any conscious existence after death." In discussing this, the nature of that solemn change—death—that awaits all of us will be examined. Also, the state of the dead between death and resurrection, and the state of the dead in general. There will be a discussion, doubtless, of the nature of the penalty inflicted for the transgression. This question will arise in the discussion of several of the propositions.

The third proposition is, "The reward of the righteous will be endless conscious existence as well as endless happiness, and the punishment of the wicked will be an utter and endless extinction of conscious being." In the discussion of this proposition the rewards promised to the righteous, and the punishments threatened against the wicked will be considered. Much that is involved in it will be settled, we hope, in the discussion of the first two propositions. The special inquiry in this will be what is the nature of the promised rewards of the righteous, and the threatened punishments of the finally impenitent and rebellious.

The fourth proposition is—"Those who are finally impenitent and rebellious against God will be punished by banishment from the society of God, and all pure intelligences in a state of endless conscious existence." In discussing this question I hope to place before our readers the true teachings of the Scriptures concerning the punishment of the perseveringly wicked.

I hope that we have in this arrangement made ample provision for a logical, thorough and exhaustive examination of these vital questions. I have no apology to offer for entering upon this discussion. Any one who has traveled in our Middle and Western States knows that the minds of thousands are agitated and intensely excited by these questions. Old stereotyped dogmas are being abandoned, and there is need of careful examination and caution lest we cast away vital Scriptural truth. The bigoted dogmatist, satisfied with his own pet hobbies, may sneer at or condemn investigation: but the earnest seeker after truth will rejoice in any thing that will enlarge his horizon and add to his knowledge of the truth.

Certainly no questions of equal moment can be proposed for our consideration. From the death of Abel until now, man has gazed upon the awful phenomena of death with dread and anxious thought. In the early twilight of revelation the wise man of Uz inquired—"If a man die, shall he live again?" The wise, the thoughtful, the meditative of all ages and lands have gazed on the fleeting phenomena of life ending in the mystery of death, and have with varied emotions asked the same awful question. Human speculation has with alternating hopes and fears conflicting doubts and expectations for ages laid before men its results.

With the increased light and the solemn certainty of revelation has come increased importance and awful moment in the solution of the problem. Let us, then, with reverent and serious hearts inquire with the thoughtful of all ages and lands what light can we obtain to aid us in solving the great problems of life and destiny. The question is too solemn for trifling, too awful for dogmatizing, too broad and mysterious for bigotry, and too vast for human wisdom. The utterances of divine wisdom alone can give rest to the perturbed human soul as it faces the great mystery.

Let us first settle certain matters that are necessary to be well understood before we can proceed with our investigation. In our proposition we use several terms that must be clearly defined and always used with those meanings. In speaking of man we shall always regard him as a being possessing a body, soul, and a spirit. Such is the clear and unequivocal statement of revelation. 1 Thes. 5: 23. "And may the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and may your whole spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless until the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Heb. 4: 12. "The word of God is living and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword, and pierces to dividing in sunder of soul and spirit."

By the body we mean the material organization in which the soul and spirit reside. By the soul, when used in distinction from the spirit, we mean the principle of animal life—that which exercises the passions and affections we possess in common with the brute creation. Such is its meaning in the second chapter of First Corinthians, where soul-like man, is spoken of, and in several kindred Scriptures. By the spirit we mean an intelligent, reasoning, conscious entity, distinct from the body in which it resides. It is that rational, intelligent, moral entity that man possesses in common with other intelligences of a higher order, or in common with spiritual beings.

Concerning the materiality or immateriality of the spirit we shall affirm nothing. We merely know that our Savior has said that it has not flesh and bones (Lk. 24: 39), and that he has declared that man cannot destroy it or destroy its conscious existence. (Mat. 10: 28; Lk. 12: 4.) The term soul is often, when used alone, used as synonymous with spirit. It is so used here. Our Savior declares man cannot kill it—cannot extinguish its conscious existence. Then, that the spirit has not material organization that can be apprehended by the senses, and that man cannot extinguish its being, we can confidently affirm on the evidence of revelation.

There are the following theories concerning the nature of the human spirit: 1. It is essentially and necessarily immortal. In the sense that God gave it such a nature that he alone can destroy or extinguish its existence, this is true. 2. It is essentially and necessarily immortal, but the wicked will be punished with an utter extinction of conscious being. 3. It was thus immortal, but lost such immortality in the fall. 4. It was not necessarily immortal, but capable of immortality—could attain to immortality by eternal obedience, and would lose this capability and privilege by disobedience. Man lost this capability by disobedience, and can now attain to it only by obedience to the gospel. Such I understand to be Br. Himes' position. 5. It was necessarily mortal, but would have been endowed with immortality by a direct act of God had man never disobeyed. Those who now obey the gospel will be made immortal in this manner. 6. It is and ever must be mortal from its very nature. So says the materialist.

Our position is this. The Scriptures speak of the following orders of spirits. 1. God is spirit—not a spirit, but he is spirit. The Logos or Word was spirit before his incarnation as the Christ, as Jesus of Nazareth. 3, The Holy Spirit is a Divine person or being or intelligence. 4. There are angels who are spirits. 5. There are fallen angels, or wicked, rebellious beings who have only existed as spirits. 6. There is in man a spirit like God—the Logos—the Holy Spirit and angels in kind or nature, but differing in degree or rank.

As God is spirit, as the Logos was spirit before his incarnation, as the Holy Spirit is spirit, as angels both good and evil are spirits, so man has a spirit. As they exist independent of material organization, so can his spirit exist independent of the body. As they are distinct from bodily organization, so can man's spirit exist distinct from bodily organization. Hence when we are asked to tell what sort of a thing this spirit is of which we are talking we reply, As God—the Logos—the Holy Spirit and angels are intelligent, rational, conscious moral entities independent of and distinct from bodily organization, so is man's spirit a rational, intelligent, conscious moral entity, capable of existence independent of and distinct from bodily organization. Spirit is applied equally to all these.

As this distinction of the spirit from the body and its capability of independent action, are matters of vital importance, we will establish them by an appeal to the following Scriptures. Daniel's spirit was grieved in his body. (Dan. 7: 15.) Paul's spirit was stirred in him. (Acts 17:16.) The spirit is the inward man. (Rom. 7: 22; 2 Cor. 4: 16.) The body is the outward man, the spirit's house, tabernacle, tent. (2 Cor. 5: 1-8; Phil. 1: 21-25; 2 Pet. 1: 13, 14, 15.)

The spirit and body exist separate. The body returns to earth, the spirit to God. (Eccl. 12: 7.) The spirits of Christ and Stephen were commended to God, and he was asked to receive them. (Acts 7: 59; Lk. 23: 46.) Christ's soul or spirit was in hades while his flesh was in the grave. (Acts. 2.) Paul and Peter speak of the departure of their spirits from their bodies. (2 Cor. 5; Phil. 1: 21-25; 2 Tim. 4: 6; 2 Pet. 1: 13-15.)

Then as man has spirit just as God—the Logos, the Holy Spirit and angels are spirits, and they have existence, intelligent, rational, conscious existence, so must his spirit. As his spirit departs and exists independent and distinct from his body, it has intelligent, rational, conscious existence when thus separate from the body, for it can exist in no other way. As Christ's spirit was a conscious, rational, moral, entity when he commended it to his Father, and when it was in hades, so is man's spirit when it departs, returns to God, is received by him.

CLARK BRADEN.

ELD. HIMES' RESPONSE TO ELD. BRADEN'S FIRST ARTICLE.

My brother has opened this discussion in so admirable a spirit, and has stated our positions, our aims, our responsibilities and the outlines of the work before us so clearly, so comprehensively, yet concisely, that I find nothing to add in way of preface, except to fully reciprocate the feelings he has expressed, and heartily endorse every sentiment he utters until he reaches the main question—the nature of man: here we are compelled to join issue. But before entering the field of friendly controversy, let us linger a moment at the point upon which we are both agreed; for as my brother has done elsewhere, so I here endorse the following sentiment: "The Holy Scriptures contain all things necessary to salvation, so that whatever is read therein, or may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man that it should be believed as an article of faith." We each acknowledge the Bible to be the source of all true knowledge and the ultimate standard of appeal upon the questions at issue.

Yet it appears to me that my brother has in the very outset violated this principle by assuming as true that which, as he has elsewhere admitted, the Bible does not teach: for he says of spiritual beings, including the Almighty, that they exist "distinct from bodily organization." But in his great debate with Mr. Hughey he said that "the declaration that God was without body or parts was a plain violation of the apostolic injunction, 'Avoid untaught questions;' for the Bible declares, 'No man hath seen God at any time;' and as the Spirit, which searches the deep things of God, had never uttered a syllable on this point, it was plainly 'an untaught question.'" (p. 569.) Of the unauthorized assertion that God is without body and parts, he said: "It is blasphemous presumption. It is treading upon holy ground with sandaled feet.... a plain violation of apostolic precept and example." (p. 518.) I would not flout in any man's face a change in his opinions. It is proverbial that wise men change, while only the foolish decline to revise their views. But I submit that the change in this case cannot properly be called progress in the right direction. I entreat my brother to examine the reasons that have led him to adopt substantially the position of his former opponent; for I am sure he was much nearer right than he is now, when he stood against Hughey, saying: "The Bible declares, 'God is a spirit!' Why not rest satisfied with that? 'But a spirit must be without body or parts.' How do you know? I do not affirm that it has, but I leave the matter unexplained, undescribed, as the word of God leaves it." (p. 536.) Now if he can "read" from his Bible, or "prove thereby" that spiritual beings exist "independent of bodily organization," I will believe it; albeit it is a subject irrelevant to the proposition before us. Unless he can do this, all must see that his main argument rests entirely upon an unwarranted assumption, and is therefore worthless. The Scriptures nowhere teach that either God or angels are "without body or parts," although "human creeds" do so.

Furthermore, his argument from the nature of spiritual beings is clearly a non sequitur. It is an argument from analogy—a method of reasoning, the conclusions from which should always be accepted with caution—and the analogy is imperfect. It compares a spiritual being with the spirit of a being, assuming that they are analogous, differing in degree only, and not in kind. The Scriptures add another to my brother's catalogue of spirits: they speak of "the spirit of the beast," as well as of the spirit of man. Does it resemble the others in "kind or nature, but differing in degree or rank?" If not, why not? Of the two lowest orders, at least, the Bible affirms that they have the same or one spirit. (Eccl 3: 19; Gen. 6: 17; 7: 15.) And if the analogical argument were sound, I see not how to avoid the conclusion that "the spirit of the beast" is a "rational moral entity," capable of existence independent of and distinct from bodily organization. But I know only one writer who maintains this absurd though just conclusion from the premises advanced; I mean Martin Farquhar Tupper. And does the Almighty include within his being seven distinct "intelligent entities?" If not, why not? We read of "the seven spirits of God." (Rev. 3: 1.) "Spirit is applied equally to all these." I am not trifling, nor irreverent. I only wish to show the results of my brother's logic. His assumption that a spirit of a being and a spiritual being are analogous, has no better support than the assertion that spiritual beings are without a body.

The "distinction of the spirit from the body, and its capability of independent action are questions of vital importance," says my brother. I agree that they are so to him. But if he thinks to establish the point by the passages cited, I must demur. As we may both frequently give only references to Scripture, our space being limited, let me entreat every reader to look up and read not only the text, but the relevant context, also. And those who have done this will have already perceived that Br. Braden's first four citations are quite impertinent to the question. In them, as in many places, spirit means the mind. Yet for the argument's sake I will admit that the spirit that was grieved in Daniel and stirred in Paul was a distinct entity. But Paul and Daniel were both alive; and the agitation of their spirit was not "independent" of the body, and by no means proves that death may not involve it in the very depths of unconsciousness. The point to be proven is the consciousness of a dead man's spirit, not that of a living being. Rom. 7: 22 and 2 Cor. 4: 16 allude to "the inward man;" but that is not the creature we are discussing. I know it is assumed that this "inward man" is the immortal spirit of man; but I deny the assumption. Paul says it is "renewed day by day;" which is not a characteristic of immortality at all, but, rather of the opposite quality. If an entity at all it appears to be peculiar to the people of God, and not common to the race. But pending proof that it is a "rational entity," I refer the reader to Rom. 7: 22; 1 Cor. 4: 16; Eph. 3: 16; Col. 3: 10; 1 Pet. 3: 4.

On the strength of Phil. 1: 21-25; 2 Cor. 5: 1-10; 2 Pet. 1: 13-15, it is affirmed that the body is the spirit's house or tent. I would not be captious, but certainly my brother must see that in citing these texts without argument, he assumes the very point he should prove. Our discussion should not consist in an array of opinions, but of reasons for our differing views. It may be perfectly clear in his mind that Paul and Peter allude to the separation of a rational entity from the body. Yet, although the popular impression in favor of his interpretation is so strong as to give their bare citation the air of irrefutable argument, my brother's candor will compel him to admit that his view is not a self-evident truth, but a point to be proved. It is inferred that the apostles meant the spirit, though neither of them mentioned it in text or context at all. Yet these Scriptures have a perfectly natural sense, harmonizing with the general tenor of the Bible, without involving for one moment the idea of the spirit as a separate entity, which I will display whenever my brother shall have given his reasons for the view he suggests. He cannot be ignorant of the fact that one of the most important of the passages is by straitly orthodox immaterialists, even, referred to the resurrection.

Eccl. 12: 7 is a simple affirmation that in death "the dust shall return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." The statement is plain and unequivocal, and I believe it firmly. Concerning the fact that "there is a spirit in man" there can be no controversy between us: we both receive the inspired statement. Hence the citation of texts that merely mention "the dividing asunder of soul and spirit," separation of a being and its life, does not forward the discussion. Passages that demonstrate or indicate conscious existence for the spirit, separate from the body, are in order. There is nothing in Eccl. 12: 7 to show that the "spirit" referred to is anything more than "the spirit of life," common to man and beast. (3: 19; Gen. 6: 17; 7: 15, 22.) And when we consider the evident allusion of the text to the creation of man, it becomes a moral certainty that this is meant. "God formed man of the dust of the ground," says Moses. "The dust shall return to earth as it was," says Koheleth. God "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life," says Moses. And the preacher responds, "The spirit shall return to God who gave it." And Lk. 23: 46; Acts 7: 59 have the same sense. And Peter said to those in danger of their lives for their faith's sake, "Let them that suffer commit the keeping of their souls to him, as unto a faithful Creator." (Pet. 4: 19.) And Paul alleges that God "is able to keep that which I have committed to him against that day" (2 Tim. 1: 12), an evident allusion to his faith in his own revival, to immortality, in the resurrection. (1 Cor. ch. 15; 2 Tim. 4: 8.)

I confess my surprise at the citation of Acts 2: 27 in proof of the consciousness of disembodied spirits. He cannot be ignorant of the fact that this is one of those parallelisms that abound in the Psalms and Prophets—the Hebrew poetry. These parallelisms are of several kinds; but the more simple form, of which Peter's quotation from Ps. 16: 10 is a fair sample, consists in the repetition of an idea in differing language, giving a rhythm of thought instead of sound. We have an example of this in Ps. 6: 5.

> "In death there is no remembrance of thee;
> In sheol [hades] who shall give thee thanks."

The second line is but the echo of the first, in sense, not in words. Ps. 16: 10 is just such a parallelism.

> "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hades;
> Neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption."

Instead of two distinct assertions, there is here only a single reiterated statement. Peter understood it so, for he says, David thus foretold a simple fact, the resurrection of Christ (Acts 2: 31), and makes no allusion to a conscious intermediate state, but implies just the opposite. The parallelism here is so evident that many of the most learned immaterialists do not controvert the point at all. But there is another point which strengthens my position. The terms "my soul," "thy soul," etc., are a common Hebrew idiom to denote the person speaking, or spoken to or of, a form of speech known as Hebraisms. In Is. 1: 14 God says, "Your appointed feasts my soul hateth?"—that is, I hate; for we cannot conceive that soul here means a distinct rational entity in the Deity, but it is God himself that is thus moved. In Ps. 89: 48 Ethan says:

> "What man is he that liveth and shall not see death?
> Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave [sheol]?"

Here we have both the parallelism and the the Hebraism, as in Ps. 16: 10. The second line echoes the first, and "his soul" stands for himself. So Acts 2: 27 literally paraphrased would read:

> Thou wilt not leave ME in hades;
> Thou wilt not suffer ME to see corruption.

To this agree Stuart, Eadie, Kitto, and other ripe scholars, all staunch immaterialists. And we can the more readily believe them right from the fact that always when used literally, and generally when used figuratively, sheol or hades is represented as a condition of confinement, darkness, dissolution, corruption, unconsciousness.

My brother has remarked that certain terms could be "clearly defined and always used with those meanings." I conclude, then, that he has taken especial pains to be understood in the definitions he has given. Yet he defines man as "a being possessing a body, and a spirit." What is the sense here of "possessing?" Does it mean "composed?" Does he mean that these are the essential qualities of man? Can either of the three be dispensed with and "man" survive? Some say "the real man" is the spirit; others, the soul. Will he please tell us clearly, not what man possesses, but what man is? The Bible man is composed of soul, body, and spirit; and living human personality is never affirmed of anything less than all three combined.

As to "soul" I readily admit that it is frequently used synonymously with "spirit," and sometimes means "the principle of animal life;" but must object when this principle is described as an entity, possessing a degree of intelligence. Nor could a citation be more inapt than that he has selected to confirm his definition; for in it he confounds "a soul-like man" with the soul of man. Paul does not say, much less mean, the soul, "receiveth not the things of the spirit;" he speaks of the man, and soul is introduced as adjective to show the kind of man. So he says (v. 12), "We have received the Spirit of God might know the things that are freely given to us of God." Jude makes it plain. Some men, he says, are "soul-like, not having the Spirit." A soul-like man, then, is one without the Holy Spirit. I find but four "kindred passages." James says this world's wisdom is "earthly, soul like, devilish." Paul says, "It is sown a soul-like body.... there is a soul-like body." (1 Cor. 15: 44.) And that "soul-like" body precedes the spiritual or resurrection body. (v. 46.) What kind of a body is it that is soul-like? One thing is certain—it is material.

My brother says "spirit" is "that rational, intelligent, moral entity that man possesses in common with other intelligences of a higher order, or in common with spiritual beings." If I understand him, my brother here overturns one of his own arguments, founded on his distinction that spiritual beings are spirit. He reasons: "As God, the Logos, the Holy Spirit, angels, are spirit, so man has a spirit," etc., but from his definition I may much more reasonably argue: "As spiritual beings 'in common' with man possess a spirit which is a distinct 'rational entity,' therefore their being is not simple and unorganized, as is asserted, but it is clearly compound: for if spiritual beings possess a spirit as a distinct entity, the inference that they "possess" a body of one kind or another is irresistible.

More Laborers.

There is a great call (and need of) more laborers in the gospel field, (for "how shall they hear without a preacher?") yet the greater portion of the ministers now in the field do not receive a full support from their congregations. Some have a small income of their own; others have to labor with their hands. Now these things ought not so to be. God has said, by Paul, that they that preach the gospel should live of the gospel; yet not by stooping to the theological schemes of the fish-pond, grab-bag, lottery cakes, sociables, mite societies, donations, oyster suppers, and I might say time would fail me to mention all the means resorted to for the purpose of raising money. These all tend to lower the standard of Christian excellence, and I hope none of our ministers will be led astray by these methods to live, and call it living by the gospel. Better work with our hands six days out of seven to provide for our wants.

Nevertheless I think that the methods alluded to have much to do with the carelessness manifested in our own membership; for so far as my experience goes I must say that but few out of each church may be termed burden-bearers in any direction where aid or labor is wanting. Let me specify: (1) lighting and warming the house falls upon a few, (2) preparation for the Lord's supper, (3) supporting the prayer-meeting, (4) raising means for the support of the minister and his family, (5) raising funds for tracts and papers for free circulation, etc.

We ministers are somewhat to blame for this state of thing by the methods we adopt to let the church know their duty in such matters. There is a right and a wrong way in every thing, and he that commences right and continues so must succeed; but he that commences wrong and continues so must fail. I have long since come to the conclusion that we do not offend so much in what we say as in how we say it. The truth should be preached by the minister on the gospel plan of supporting each branch of Christian benevolence and effort. Let me notice some methods that we deem wrong, and (1) also what we deem right. When one is complaining from house to house of our wants and the small amount one receives for labor. This would be right if asked about by your brethren; but not otherwise. (2) Never tell how you long to be in the field all your time, but you can not for want of funds. These two methods are a barefaced scandal to the church and cause of God, for the following reasons: If God calls the minister, (and he does, see Rom. 10: 14, 15.) then his business is to go and obey the call, trusting in his employer for support, through heaven's appointed channel, the weekly offerings of the church. If that fails, go to work as Paul did, and God will bless you in it; but will frown upon the members that thus neglect their duty.

But I fail to see so much delinquency in duty in the membership as I do with us ministers. Some of us get on boots and spurs the first thing, and then look around to see who has got saddles on to give them an easy chair and a good salary. But instead of this, we are the first ones called upon to make a great sacrifice, trusting alone in the promise of the employer. "Jesus answered and said, verily I say unto you there is no man that hath left houses, or brethren, or sisters, or fathers, or mothers, or wife, or children, or lands for my sake and the gospel's." This is the sacrifice demanded. What is the encouragement, or promise given? Hear it. "But he shall receive an hundred fold now this in time; houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions, and in the world to come eternal life." (Mk. 10: 28–30.) Can we expect the promise fulfilled before we make the required sacrifice? I think not. David says "they that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and weepeth bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." (Ps. 126: 5, 6.)

Let us remembed that if we expect to have any promise fulfilled we must first meet the conditions. Then if the promise is good we can not fail. Let us remember that Jesus said "Whosoever of you will be the chiefest shall be servant of all." (Mk. 10: 44.) This was Paul's case.

We should not be looking and talking about pay the first, for it is evident by the promise that if we labor with a single eye to the glory of God and the good of our fellow-man, the people will broach the subject of our support first, and be ready to help us after a godly manner.

It is my firm conviction that if we ministers were at all times wholly consecrated to the work of the ministry, preaching Christ, (and not self) we should lack no good thing. Why not? The promise is sure. (Ps. 84: 11.) At least this has been my experience.

But an objection will be made that Paul had to work with his hands. Very true. But why? Not because the people were not willing, but because he would not recieve it, lest it would hinder the progress of the gospel. Have we at any time imitated this example?

It is said we must encourage young men in the ministry. Very true! But by what method? By us old ministers pioneering, cutting down the timber and gathering the flock, and then giving it up to the management of some young convert? This is not according to the adage, "Old men for council and young men for war." Neither is it true that the young (in this life) who start out in the world well provided for prosper the best. I stopped once at a farm-house forty-one years ago when I was moving to the western wilds of Canada to seek a home, and this gentleman treated me with a hearty welcome, and when I offered to pay for my team and those with me, he refused, and gave this encouragement: Go on, (said he) and make your mark in the woods! When I came here, said he, it was all woods. I cut my own road, five miles, to get here, and all I had was fifty acres of woodland, a pair of steers three years old, my axe, and wife and one child. Now I represent over one hundred thousand. At that he filled my pockets with apples, and wished me good luck and farewell. This was encouragement to me, and I never forgot it.

So I would say to our young men: Go into the hedges and highways and preach the gospel the Lord has called you to proclaim, and raise up a people for his name that sent you. They will love you better than any others, and will gladly divide with you their home. You need not stoop to any low device to procure bread, and we that are older will give you all the encouragement that a kind father would to his child when trying to learn him to walk, viz., hold his arm around him to prevent his fall. So will we by our counsel and association and prayers. We long for your enlargement in the knowledge of Christ and the ministry of his word. Let thy profiting appear to all. Let me use the words of the beloved disciple:

"I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you."

P. W. HOUGH.

The Harmony of Scripture on Future Pnnishment.

(continued.)

DESTRUCTION.

Next to death, nothing is so frequently threatened to the impenitent as destruction. And the evidence at this point is so overwhelming, that I cannot but marvel how, when fairly presented, it can ever be resisted. I know of no demonstration, depending upon the use of human language, that exceeds it in clearness or force.

The Greek word, which is so constantly used to express it, (apollumi) means to dissolve or loose asunder. When dissolution begins in any compound thing, its destruction begins; when dissolution is completed, its destruction is completed—and it no longer exists. The the thing itself has passed away as completely as if all its component parts had been annihilated.

It is also used to denote the extinction of immaterial things, such as love, fear, hope; because the practical result is the same in their case as in the destruction or dissolution of material things—they cease to exist. This justifies its application to the destruction of the soul; although we can no more understand the process by which it is put out of existence, than we can understand the process by which it is brought into existence.

Again, it is applied to something which continues to exist but has undergone a change for the worse, so great as to be rhetorically compared to destruction. Euripides makes Hecuba exclaim, "I am destroyed, wretched one; no longer, in truth, do I exist!" According to the Greek poet, to be destroyed was to be put out of existence; which Hecuba in the frenzy of her grief is made to speak of as if it had happened to herself. Just as we speak of a person being lost, ruined, or undone, when in fact it is not himself that is destroyed, but something belonging to him, such as health, reputation, or fortune, which is regarded by a well understood exaggeration as his "all." It is in this rhetorical sense that Augustinians interpret the destruction threatened to the wicked, which position we consider utterly untenable; and for the following reasons:

1. It is in the last degree improbable that a word which is employed more frequently than any other, except one, to express the righteous judgment of God against sin, should be used in any but its strict and proper sense. If there is one subject on which we may feel confident that the crucial language of Scripture will not have to be understood in a secondary or rhetorical sense, it must surely be "the wages of sin." To suppose that God would threaten to destroy his enemies, when he really meant to keep them alive forever, for the sole purpose of torturing them, is to suppose that, on the most tremendous of all subjects to us, he would say literally more, virtually far less, than what he meant. To inflict pain is less than to destroy; but to keep any creature alive in unceasing pain to all eternity, is a more horrible punishment than destruction itself.

2. It is equally improbable that the inspired writer would apply the words apollumi, apoleia, (destroy, destruction) to the doom of the unrighteous in a sense entirely different from that in which they use them on all other occasions. In The Way Everlasting, I have quoted every such undisputed use of the word apollumi, or any of its cognates, in the New Testament; and have shown that, except in four cases where it has the idiomatic sense of lose, it invariably means either the deprivation of physical life, or termination of existence. When, therefore, the same Scriptures threaten an impenitent sinner with the everlasting destruction of his whole being, body and soul, what can they mean but utter and final extinction?

3. The improbability that they can mean anything else reaches its height when we remember that the meaning of the words die, destroy, destruction, as applicable to the human soul, was already fixed in the current literature of the day beyond any possibility of mistake. The mortality or immortality of the soul was the great question which then agitated men's minds. Followers of Plato maintained that it was necessarily immortal, and could never die, perish, or be destroyed. Their opponents maintained that it was as mortal and perishable as the body. There was no dispute as to the meaning of the terms employed. When the Platonists argued that the soul could not die, or be destroyed, no one understood them to mean that it could not be made supremely miserable. For in some cases they held that it would. They believed in eternal torment; but they never expressed it by death or destruction. On the contrary, those were the very words they used to express that which they believed could not happen to any human soul. On both sides the meaning of the words was fixed and precise.* Such a question our Lord and his apostles could not fail to decide. And what did they say? They said that the truth lay between the two opposite opinions. They declared that the souls of some men would die beyond power of recovery, and perish with an everlasting destruction; while others would obtain the inestimable prize of immortality, and live forever in renovated bodies. What could the men of that day understand by all this, but that which was understood by it universally during the first century and a half of the Christian era? Who could imagine that all this language was used in a non-natural sense, and one so entirely from that in which every one else used it in the same connection? What should we think of a person who, when the question of parliamentary franchise was being generally agitated, avowed himself in favor of universal suffrage, and, on being charged with inconsistency in voting against it, replied that the word suffrage was susceptible of different meanings, and that he had not used it in the sense that persons engaged in the discussions commonly attached to it? What should we say, if within the compass of a single sentence, he had put the words enfranchise and disfranchise in direct contrast to each other, and afterwards pleaded that the second word was not to be understood as meaning the opposite of the first, but something of an entirely different kind? Or suppose that some one had said, "A. possesses the borough franchise, but not the county franchise; while B. has a vote for both borough and county." What should we think if it were seriously contended that, by having a vote for borough and county, he meant something entirely different from possessing the borough and county franchise, and had purposely marked the difference by changing the form of expression?

.4 This brings me to the fourth reason for denying the figurative rhetorical sense of the word destroy in this connection: namely, that our Lord has used it, once at least, in a way which can admit of only one meaning. "Fear not them which kill the body, and are not able to kill the soul; but fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." (Mat. 10: 28) Here our Lord defines precisely and dogmatically what it is that men will lose in hell. By the "second death" they will be "punished with the everlasting destruction," not merely of their happiness, their moral character, their reputation, their communion with God, their enjoyment of God's favor, their affections and hopes, their health and wealth, their possessions and their prospects, or any number of such things as may be piled one upon another, in order to appear to satisfy the tremendous word "destroy," but—the component parts of their being, their "soul and body." These will be put an end to. Just as a man can kill the body, and, if he pleases, destroy its very framework, as completely as if every particle of matter that entered into its composition had been literally annihilated, so can—and, as the injunction to "fear him" on that account plainly shows—so will God kill, nay, utterly destroy, and that irrecoverably, with an everlasting destruction, the whole being, "soul and body," of those who finally reject Christ's salvation. Is there any saying on record, of any writer, upon any subject, in any language that is less capable of admitting a second interpretation than this? How can it be misunderstood? How was it ever misunderstood?

5. Lastly we must add that all the images and metaphors, employed in Scripture to represent this threatened destruction, pointedly suggest the termination of existence, and not its perpetuation in endless misery.

By far the most important of these is fire. In fact that emblem predominates in the figurative language of Scripture on this subject, as unquestionably as death and destruction do to its plain literal language. Nor would it be possible to find within the whole realm of matter anything at all approaching to it as an emblem of destruction. It is the one element in which nothing can live, the one dissolving agent which nothing can resist.

To say fire that annihilates nothing is merely to evade the question. A thing may be destroyed, that is put out of existence, by the dissolution of its component parts as completely as if every particle of it were annihilated. And there is not a single known substance that can resist the dissolving effect of fire, if only it be applied with sufficient intensity.

To say that the human soul being immaterial, cannot thus be put an end to by fire, is also to evade the question. Fire is used as an emblem of future destruction. "Our God is a consuming fire;" and he will, by whatever means, put an end to the whole being, body and soul, of impenitent sinners, as completely as fire puts an end to whatever it is capable of consuming.

It is true that the action of fire may, in any particular case, be so limited as to make it produce pain or injury without allowing it to produce entire destruction. Its tendency is always to destroy; but its power may be held in check. And the only question that can fairly be raised is, whether in the description of the impenitent sinner's final doom under the image of fire, any such limitation is or is not supposed to be put upon its aggressive action. To that question Scripture itself replies, as distinctly and in every way in which it could possibly reply—namly, by the adjectives which it applies to the fire spoken of, by the verbs which are used to define its action, and by the kind of things which are represented as being exposed to that action.

a. The fire is repeatedly said to be unquenchable; a word which has been unnaturally strained to mean, not only that it continues burning to all eternity, but that those who are exposed to it will be sustained in eternal existence, so that they may be forever undergoing a process of destruction, without ever being actually destroyed. The word implies nothing of the kind, either in usage or in reason. In Jer. 17: 27 we read, "If ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the sabbath day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath day, then will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched;" which can hardly mean that Jesalem will continue in flames to all eternity. Homer, as you know, speaks of "an unquenchable fire" breaking out amongst the Trojan ships,—which certainly is not burning now.* And Eusebius tells us that "Cronion and Julian were scourged, and afterwards consumed with unquenchable fire;" also that "Epimachus and Alexander who had continued for a time in prison, enduring innumerable sufferings from the scrapers and scourges, were afterwards destroyed with unquenchable fire," which has unquestionably long since died out. The natural meaning of unquenchable fire is: fire that cannot be extinguished until it has done its work; that is, until it has consumed the object of its attack. If there be nothing but that object to feed the fire, it will then die out of itself; if it be fed from some other source, as a jet of gas, for instance, it may continue to burn long after it has consumed everything combustible within its reach. As the fire of God's wrath against sin arises out of his own unchangeable nature, it may be conceived of as still continuing to burn, after it has entirely consumed all his enemies. But this is not necessarily required by the word unquenchable. It only bars any check or limitation being put upon the action of the fire, with reference to that on which it is supposed to be preying.—S. Minton in Rainbow.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Jan. 2, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a year. One Dollar for six months.

☞ The TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saints' inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The W. A. C. P. Association is composed of ministers in good standing in the various Conferences, and delegates from churches composing the same, meeting at least once each year for the choice of officers and the transaction of other business. The officers are a Board of Trustees as follows:

Joshua V. Himes, PRESIDENT; Wm. Sheldon, VICE PRESIDENT; D. R. Mansfield, TREASURER; O. S. Knapp, AUDITOR; Wm. L. Himes, SECRETARY; F. Burr, O. R. Fassett, and A. S. Calkins, PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

Joshua V. Himes, Business Agent,

To whom all communications should be addressed.

Detroit.

Traveling Adventists stopping in Detroit will find Br. Lindsay at the corner of Tenth and Labrosse Sts., who can give information concerning Adventism in that city.

"Good Tidings."

The long-looked for "Conference Book" has now appeared with the above title. Send for a copy. $1 in cloth, 35c. in paper, post-paid.

That Reaper.

Will not the ministry call the attention of farmers to the fine chance we offer them to obtain a good Reaper at a low price? Help us sell this machine, and you will help the cause in so doing.

The Minstrel.

A new edition of the Minstrel is now ready, and orders for copies in paper or cloth covers will be promptly filled. In paper covers, $1.50 a dozen. In flexible cloth, $2.20 a dozen, post-paid. Single copies in paper, 15c. In cloth, 25c.

Association Notice.

A few persons have made no response to our request for the return of their shares for transfer. Will they please write us soon what they will do? Direct W. L. Himes, Buchanan, Mich.

Wanted

We will be be obliged to any one who will give us the following P. O. Addresses.

W. R. Howe, Kansas; Eliza Collins, formerly of Troy, N. Y.; E. P. Burdett, formerly of Hancock Co, Ill.; J. S. Wheeler and C. M. Folley of Wisconsin. tf

Advent Almanac and Year Book.

We propose to issue about the first of January a work with the above title. The astronomical department will contain the usual tables and other information—full and reliable. Besides this, it will contain a record of the Advent-Christian Conferences of North America, with the names and addresses of the ministry, and other statistics, so far as they can be obtained; with historical sketches of the Advent movement, in this and other lands, and much desirable information for every family of Adventists; and we trust no such family will do without it. The price will probably be 20 or 12c.

A few pages of select advertisements will be admitted. For terms, apply at this office.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall his projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawver, M. B. Gear, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Hink, I. C. Wellcome, J. F. Huber, Grand st. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. E. Brown, M F Wistrom, R. W. Wilson.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand-raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $130. See advertisement.

Pledges.

The undersigned agree to pay the sums affixed to their names, toward paying the debt of the Western Association (about $1,000) whenever the full amount of the debt shall have been pledged.

H Hubbard, $1.00; S Pike (pd), 10.00; B P Betts, $5; Thos Davidson, 5.00; G E Merrill, 5.00; H W Norville, 5.00; F A Childs, 25.00 (pd); Jas P Morse, 1.00; A C Hueston, 4.00; A Brother, 5.00; A Brother, 150.00; A Friend of THE TIMES, 25.00; G Shartleff, 5.00; R Holder, 2.50; J F Huber, 5.00; R Mann, 5.00; Mary L Hunt (pd), 5.00; L S Conner, 1; E Cheney, 25.00; O N, $2; S Nye, $25; Cascade (Iowa) church, $10.00; L. H. Ferrell (pd.) $10.00; R. Visser, 1.00; H. M. Jones, 5.00; J. Lowry, 5.00; R. H Evans, 2.50; R. W. Wilson (pd), 25.00; L. S. Palmer, 5.00; D. D. Reed (pd), 2.00; H. Zader (pd), 2.00; R. H. Evans (pd), 2.00; L. Tuttle (pd), 50c; D. C. Corwin (pd), 1.00; D. A. Dickinson (pd), 1.00; C. S. Hall, 10.00; A Friend (pd), 1.00.

It does seem to us that this list of pledges does not grow as fast as it should. We are doing something toward extinguishing our debt, but not enough. Seven more "hundreds" would wipe it out. Many are doing nobly. Will not others respond soon.

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged........................$426.44

E. Hall	$1 00	E. Nordlind	$2 50
C. Morse	1 00	H. G. Smiley	3 00
Mrs. H. G. Smiley	7 00	A Friend	25
C. G. Willey	5 00	O Ives	1 00
L. R. Kenney	1 00	Mrs. H. F. Schroder	1 00
A. S. Dresser	25	J. Thompson	1 00
J. S. Hughes	50	S. Abbey	1 00
J. V. Poor	3 00

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, DEC. 30.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

E Kellser
N O Moore
E Hayes
B F Mikesell
M Hammond
D D Reed
J McKinley
E K Sturgeon
C Lee
D Y Burroughs
P G Bowman
J Smith
H Crippin
H Brayford
I E Miller
P W House
E F Nettleton
D Young
W Winter
P M Landon
I Baldy
J D Jones
S A Younglove
E T Himes
E S Loomis
D S Clark
G W Green
C C Marston
A W Sibley
C A Sumner
G W Place
E N Bliss (2)
H C McCulloch
C C Marston
H Smith
R Russell
J N Berry
J S Alexander
A Foven
O A Kline
W Hobbs
D Bates
H B Davis
C M Keach
L Ackerman
J Roberts
J E Boynton
C B Chapman
Weaver & Kelley
P Holies
S B Robinson
M Gatin
J V Poore
A Brigham
L P Hoxie
S Abbey
J P Russell
J S Hughes
J Thompson
F Griffith
A C Greene
A Emery
A T Taylor
A F Dagget
W Young
Penwill & Johnson
C S Hall
E S Penwell
D A Dickenson
J T Giddings
R P Hollister
H B Chapman
D P Langley
G L Smith
J C Laughlin
W B Taylor
W H Black
L Rescott
W M Rankin
D C Corwin
J Roush
W W Wease
W C Hicks
L Tuttle
H G Smiley
G Sowerwine
J H Mills
M R Mills
J M Snook
H Ziegenfuss
P W Higgins
B F Corduay
S Ayres
R H Evans
A H Briggs
E H Durand
J Clark
H Albertson
S Thayer
H Sturdevant
C C Stanbro
G Squier
E L Sloan
M E Seely
L M Daniels
P A Smith
J Hummel
C Morse
J McClellan
A L Dresser
J J Davis
J C Shaw
E Tuttle
J Hobbs
F H Holmes
A J Fosdick
J S Heath
S Gardiner
T W Raymond
A McCowan
L R Kenney
J S Lawver
E S Levi
J A Newton
S Pike
E Nordlind
P F Willoughby
C Fitzsimmons
W Hodgman
J D Rogers
W McCulloch
S J Rasbrook
C Pike
E S Live
N Field
J M Snook
G E Lee
J Hogue
J A Starkey
J W Taylor
C White
J S Lawver
D A Bradley
N Field (2)
A Armour
P H Wait
P Fox
A M B Graham
J G Junk
L Narmore
M A Cleaver
D Wean
J E Scott
E Hamilton
J D Whitham
J L McLean
H Zader
I E Andrus
A J Smith
H L Salle
E S Willard
E H Durand
S Tarver
T Davidson (2)
C R Stauffer
E Haff
F Burr
A G Lombard
S W Thurber
H F DeWolf
T Rossbury
W I Lewis
C S Hall
D D Chaffee
M Pierandice
G W Stetson
C W Wyllie
L L Ames
O Ives
J Y Bryant
M Martin
M E Wright
E B Gulce abe
C S Wylie

Books and Tracts by Mail.

C F Cook
C C Brand
J M Stouffer
E S Rathbun
J Griffith
W Carter
J J Morgan
J W Farrow
W McCulloch (2)
D Poore
S H Little
C L Jones
E Kelsey
J W Willett
I E Andrus (2)
R H Evans
G Y Bryant
J W Rogers
J McKinley
C C Marston (2)
J McLane
M Tibbetts
C M Gifford
S Sturgeon
W Young
D Young
J Young
E Thompson
S Page
S Ward
E Kelsey
F A Chase
G Squier
S Jay
A C Green
J L Stick
J S Lawver
E O W
E E Sturgeon
S Overman
G H Smith
W Hobbs
C Duncan
P Clark
M Alford
N O Moore (2)
W Young
L Ackerman
S Abby
G L Smith
J Griffith
D Wean

Iowa Tent.

N. J. Sade, $5.00; H. Dodd, 1.00.

New Press.

N. Ireser, $1.25; S. Ayers, 1.00.

Communications.

G E Lee W J Bursell E S Willard N Field (2) T Davidson S Tarver.

Marriages.

BACON—WINEGAR. In Ottawa, Minn., Dec. 26, by Eld. A. G. Lombard, Eld. Ezra Bacon and Miss Sophronia J. Winegar, both of Ottawa.

Book Notices, Etc.

THE Christmas number of the Illustrated Christian Weekly is very handsomely illustrated with fourteen pictures—one of them, entitled "I wish you a merry Christmas," being a full-page design, beautifully printed. "John Roger" the sculptor, is the subject of an interesting sketch, with a portrait and illustrations from his well known works. "A cathedral door in Spain," and "A Protestant church in America," are scenes drawn from actual life. The Christmas poem is well illustrated, and cannot fail to interest both young and old. This number is increased in size by the addition of a four-page supplement, and it is announced that, beginning with the next number, the paper will be enlarged to twelve pages, without increase of price.

It is the best illustrated paper published, and we can commend it to every family. Price only $2 a year. Address, American Tract Society, New York city.

CHURCH GAMBLING.—Winter, with its long nights, gives ample opportunities to those church members and ministers who have wandered from the path of holiness, to get up, and participate in church levees, and parties under other names, in which to sport, play, gamble, dance, and otherwise disgrace the Christian religion, retard the work of reform, and prevent sinners coming to Christ. "Church Spectacles" is well calculated to reprove such ones, and to show halting ones the evils of such practices. It has done noble work in some churches. Now is the time to scatter them. Price $2 per 100; $1 for forty; 30c. per dozen, by mail. For sale at this office.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

Churches, or individuals, desiring my services as an Instructor in vocal music, or as a Minister, are hereby informed that I am now at liberty to travel, and give lessons in music, or preach, as may be desired.

Please address, G. W. GREEN, Box 16, Memphis, Clark Co., Indiana.

Discussion.

I expect, the Lord willing, to hold a discussion in Farmer City, Dewitt Co. Ill., Jan. 2, 3 and 4, with Rev. S. K. Hallam, pastor of the Christian church in said place. The questions are:

1. Resolved, That man in death is subject to an utter extinction of conscious existence. Marston affirms.
2. Resolved, That God has a kingdom on the earth at the present time. Hallam affirms.
3. Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will consist in the extinction of their conscious existence: Marston affirms.

There are to be three two hour sessions on each proposition. C. C. MARSTON.

Notice.

I will sell at a low figure, to any Advent preacher, who comes properly recommended, three lots of land —40, 80, or 12 acres. The land is 1¼ miles from the Railway station, and has buildings, orchards, and sufficient water. My object is to procure in our midst a man of God, who will preach the word, regardless of popularity, to the Advent church in this region.

Further information can be obtained of

WM. H. BULS, Rockbridge, Ohio.

Obituary.

TEAGUE. In Sparta, Wis., Sept. 20, 1871, Martha E., wife of J. F. Teague.

A discourse was preached by the writer for the comfort of the friends, upon the resurrection.

S. W. THURBER.

THOMPSON. In Burns, Wis., Nov. 15, 1871, Eva, daughter of Robert and Deborah Thompson; aged 15 years and 7 months.

The friends were comforted by the writer on the funeral occasion, that those that sleep in Jesus, God will bring with him. S. W. THURBER.

The Story Of Chicago.

There are many books published on the Chicago fire, but of all that I have seen I prefer the January number of the Lakeside Monthly as being the cheapest, and best all things considered. It gives a concise, and reliable account of things as connected with Chicago and the fire, and contains much historical and scientific information; and the articles are all well written and interesting, covering a hundred pages, at a price of only thirty cents. It can be purchased at the bookstores, generally but if any one wishes a copy and cannot get it near by, I will send them one on receipt of price and four cents extra for postage.

I would also recommend the Lakeside Monthly, as a magazine, to all who wish for a monthly periodical of high standing and merit. Its tone is above that of the story monthlies, while its articles are better adapted to the majority of minds than monthlies of heavy calibre, like Littell's Living Age, etc. Eld. H. V. Reed who is known by repute to many readers of the TIMES, is connected with its publication. Its price is $3,00 a year in advance, and if any who read this wish to subscribe, I will give their names in to the publishers if they will send to me. Sample copies furnished for thirty cents and four cents postage. Direct to F. BURR, 230 W. Randolph St. Chicago, Ill.

Gipsies in Religion.

William Jay, in one of his sermons, makes a passing allusion to a class of persons whom he thus happily characterizes. These are professed followers of Christ who never become members of any religious society, or if, after having had one such connection, they change their residence, carefully avoid forming another. They have no spiritual home. They wander from place to place. They elude all ecclesiastical duties. They decline all the king's taxes. Never contributing to the support of any advantage which they enjoy, they may be justly said to "steal their preaching." They receive little good, and do less. Instead of being fellow citizens with the saints, they are spiritual outlaws. Instead of entering some company, regiment, or corps in Christ's army, they are mere stagglers, of no use to any one, and very liable to be cut off. They own no responsibility, they acknowledge no oversight. They have no growth, no enlargment, and it is owing to the singular mercy of God that they do not at once lose all Christian character and hope. If all were like them there would soon be no Church, no ordinances, no believers, no religion on earth. Alas for the religious gipsies! May God give them grace of repentance, and bring them to a better mind and a better life!—Chris. Int.

Blunt Preaching.

I have tried to drive certain long brass-headed nails into a wall, but had never succeeded except in turning up their points, and rendering them useless. When a tradesman came, who understood his work, I noticed that he filed off all the points of the nails, the very points upon whose sharpness I had relied; and when he had quite blunted them, he drove them in as far as he pleased. With some consciences our fine points in preaching are worse than useless. Our keen distinctions and nice discriminations are thrown away on many; they need to be encountered with sheer force and blunt honesty. The truth must be hammered into them my main strength, and we know from whom to seek the needed power.—Sel.

Appointments.

CONFERENCE REGISTER.

Minnesota, Winona District, Q. M. at Winona, Jan. 10.
Minnesota, Annual Jan. 10-14, 1872.
Western District, Wis. Q. M. Brunswick, Eau Claire Co. Feb. 1-4.
Illinois, Annual Meeting, Rochelle, Ogle Co., Jan. 18.

ILLINOIS.

Rochelle, Ogle Co., Sabbath, Jan. 7, and part of the next week, if desired.

Amboy, Lee Co., Sabbath, Jan. 14.

Foreston, Ogle Co., Jan. 15, 16, eve., as Br. Geer may arrange.

Elida, Winnebago Co., Jan. 17-26, as Br. Spotswood may arrange. C. C. MARSTON.

The Northern Ill. A. C. Conference will hold their next annual session at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Thursday, Jan. 18, 1872. The ministers and delegates of the several churches are earnestly requested to be present.

S. B. MABEY, Sec'y. N. W. SPENCER, Pres't.

WISCONSIN

Black River Falls, Eve. Jan. 29.
Wrightsville, as Br. Chase may arrange, Jan. 30.
Augusta, Shaven's S. H. Jan. 31.
P. W. HOUGH.

The Second Q. M., in the Western district of Wisconsin will be held with the church in Brunswick, Eau Claire Co. Feb. 1, and over Lord's day. Let us have a grand rally of warm hearts, with sweet words for each other, and noble testimonies for Jesus. Come the first day.

P. W. HOUGH.

IOWA.

Elk Creek, Dec. 23, and remain several weeks, as the interest may demand. F. H. KENNY.

MINNESOTA.

The tenth Annual Meeting of the A. C. Conference of Minnesota will be held at Winona, Wednesday to Sunday, Jan 10-14, 1872, in the chapel, corner of Broadway and Winona St.

The new chapel will be dedicated on Saturday, Jan. 13, at ten o'clock, a. m.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Arrangements have been made for the sale of excursion tickets on the Winona and St. Peter R. R. from Owotonna and Winona Junction. Tickets will be sold ONLY on Wednesday, Jan. 10, but will be good to use during the week, and to return Monday, Jan. 15. If there are any friends at other stations that desire excursion tickets, let them notify me at once.

EDWIN T. HIMES, Sec'y.

The Fourth Q. M. of the Winona District will be held in the Advent Chapel in Winona in connection with the Annual Conference, commencing Jan. 10. It is hoped that there will be a general attendance. Let there be delegates from every church and all others that can attend. The Lord is at hand. S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.
Crisis please copy.

Hough S. H., Eyota, 10 a. m. Jan. 7.
Bliss S. H., 2½ and 6½ p. m. same day.
S. C. WELLCOME.

NEW YORK.

Regular meetings are held by church at 138 West 24th St., New York city; three times on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings.

T. J. COX.

Our Book and Tract Column

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 15c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons; an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c. post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 30c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—35c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 35c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.

Prospectus,

WEEKLY

CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR,
IN LARGE CLUBS.

Prospectus for 1872.

The Weekly Chicago Tribune, for the year 1872, will consist of first-class original and selected matter, embracing the latest news by telegraph and mail, down to the hour of going to press, editorials, correspondence, reports of the proceedings of Congress and the legislatures of the Western States, and of important public meetings and political speeches, financial and commercial intelligence, reports of the grain, provision, lumber, dry goods, cattle and general markets, notices of new publications, and other literary and miscellaneous intelligence. It will also contain weekly summaries of information concerning the work of

REBUILDING CHICAGO,

And restoring its former greatness after its late devastation by fire.

The year 1872, it will be remembered is a

PRESIDENTIAL YEAR,

And the campaign will, in all probability, be as exciting as any that has transpired since the outbreak of the late war. The Chicago TRIBUNE will uphold and defend the principles of the Republican party with its accustomed vigor and earnestness. Our platform consists of:

Equal and exact justice, at the ballot-box and before the law, to all men, without distinction of race or color.
Amnesty for all political offences connected with the rebellion.
A tariff for public revenues only.
Preservation of the public lands for actual settlers under the homestead and pre-emption laws.
Opposition to monopolies of every description, and to corruption in every form.
Such reform of the civil service as shall make men and fitness, instead of partizan zeal or personal favoritism the test of preferment to Federal offices.

Our readers, and the public generally, are so well acquainted with the tone and quality of the Chicago TRIBUNE, that we need not enlarge upon that subject. Near the close of the 25th year of our existence as a public journal, we had the misfortune, in common with a large majority of the business community of Chicago, to be burned out losing thereby the most commodious newspaper building in the United States, and be deprived, temporarily, of the use of our extensive printing machinery. We have commenced rebuilding in our ruined edifice on a more enduring plan than before, and we have effected arrangements for the use of machinery which practically gives us the same facilities that we possessed before the fire. Upon occupation of our new building and machinery THE TRIBUNE will be issued as an octavo and contain eight pages of reading matter.

THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE will be published regularly as heretofore each Wednesday evening upon the following

Terms—Payable in Advance.

WEEKLY:
Single copy, one year	$ 2.00
Five copies, one year	7.50
Ten copies, one year	12.00
Twenty copies, one year, and an extra copy to getter-up of club	20.00
Fifty copies, one year, and a copy of daily one year to getter-up of club	50.00
TRI WEEKLY:
Single copy, one year	$ 6.00
Five copies, one year	27.00
Ten copies, one year	50.00
DAILY:
Single copy, per annum	$12.00
SUNDAY EDITION:
Single copy, per annum	$2.50

Send for poster and sample copies.

TRIBUNE CO., Chicago, Ill.

No publication of above Prospectus will be acknowledged unless ordered direct from our office.

Advertisements.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.
N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

FREE. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee-keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage. H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.
N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.
This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

THRESHING MACHINE.
FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $600. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $550. Warranted as represented. N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure.
(tf) Address, A. J. STONE, Hesperia, Mich.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS. Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new 7 strand White Wire Clothes Lines? They last forever; sample free, so there is no risk. Address at once Hudson River Wire Works, cor. Water St. and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. [n14-tjan23

THE CLOW REAPER.
This celebrated piece of farm machinery, by Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., was tested with sixteen other Reapers at Ripon, Wis., in July, 1870, and received the highest encomiums of them all. The standard of perfection for quality of work was forty. The Clow Reaper was marked forty, or perfect, by the committee. The other machines ranged from 29¾ down to 31¾. This machine is specially admirable for its light draught—which saves horseflesh: it can be drawn all day by a pair of light horses. For its simplicity—which decreases liability to breakage or derangement. It has only one hundred pieces, where other machines have three times that number. For the arrangement for lowering and raising the cutters. For the facilities for turning and backing. It can be used as a mower as well as a reaper. No cog-wheels are used to drive the sickle. It has had fewer accidents from breakage than any other machine.
USUAL PRICE, $160.00;
but the machine presented to THE TIMES office will be
SOLD FOR ONE HUNDRED & TWENTY DOLLARS!
If taken soon.
For any further information, address;
J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—N[illegible] 24. BUCHANAN, JANUARY 9, 1872. WHOLE NO. 404.

Contents.

A Gem from the middle ages; Science and the Resurrection, D. T. Taylor; The News; California Letters 185
The End of all Things—poetry; Sabbath Dialogues, O. D. Gibson; The Main Question at Issue, N. Field; Mind and Matter, R. H. Graham; Charity, Emma Drew 186
Editor's Journal; Whitmore's Immortality; Ho! fo Rochelle, F. Burr; 1872; From Arkansas 187
Brief Editorials; Not Reliable; A Serious Loss; Not Exactly; Must be a mistake; Seeking a Creed; Was Adam a Simpleton? A Reminiscence; What they would do; The Difference and the Reason for it; A Discussion between Elds. Braden and Himes 188
The New Restorationism; The Pope and Temporal Power 189
Discussion 190
Letters and Extracts; Our Book and Tract Column 191
Business Agent's Department; Book Notices; Obituary; Marriages; Notices; Markets; Appointments; Advertisements 192

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Jan. 9, 1872.

A Gem From The Middle Ages.

BY DR. JOHN TAULER. A. D. 1340.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." (Mat. 5: 8.)

A pure heart is more precious in the sight of God than aught else on earth. A pure heart is a fair, fitly adorned chamber, the dwelling of the Holy Ghost, a golden temple of the Godhead; a sanctuary of the only begotten Son, in which he worships the heavenly Father; an altar of the grand, divine sacrifice, on which the Son is daily offered to the heavenly Father. A pure heart is the throne of the supreme Judge; the seat and secret chamber of divinity; a lamp bearing the eternal Spirit; a secret council—chamber of the divine persons; a treasury of divine riches; a storehouse of divine sweetness, a panoply of eternal wisdom; a cell of divine solitude; the reward of all the life and sufferings of Christ.

A pure heart is a tabernacle of the Holy Father; a bride of Christ; a friend of the Holy Ghost; a delight to the eyes of all saints; a sister of the angels; a cause of joy to the heavenly hosts; a brother of all good men; a terror to the devil; a victory and conquest over all temptation; a weapon against all assaults; a reservoir of Divine benefits; a treasury of all virtue; an example to all men; a restoration of all that has ever been lost.

Now what is a pure heart? It is, as we have said before, a heart which finds its whole and only satisfaction in God, which relishes and desires nothing but God, whose thoughts and intents are ever occupied with God, to which all that is not of God is strange and jarring; which keeps itself as far as possible apart from all unworthy images, and joys and griefs, and all outward cares and anxieties, and makes all these work together for good; for to the pure all things are pure, and to to the gentle there is nothing better Amen.

This pure heart is the purchase of a Savior's blood to every child of his; and every one who has known the forgiveness of sins through faith, has had a foretaste of this sweetness; but the cares of this life and the love of other things entering in, may have made it but a foretaste; but its continual enjoyment is as much the purchase of a Savior's blood, through the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost, as the forgiveness of sins.

Great as this gift is, it does seem to me that by sovereign grace, it is mine. How my heart melts in gratitude to God through our Lord Jesus Christ, for this unspeakable gift; a pure heart This tells the whole story; this is to be one with God again; this is to walk with God by faith as did Enoch.

E. S. WILLARD.

SCIENCE

AND THE

RESURRECTION.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

And this same man scarcely finds limit to his own power in producing and controling atoms. Indeed the stage of indivisibility of an atom has never been reached. Take an example in Faraday, who did actually produce films of gold so thin that it would require three hundred and fifty millions of them to form a single inch in thickness. Were these broken into cubic atoms of this attenuated and well nigh invisible thickness, it would require that this three hundred and fifty millions be multiplied by itself twice to obtain the sum of the tremendous product. Can the skill of the creature man reduce matter to such impalpability, and still perceive, feel, and control these atoms, to act upon them at his pleasure, and yet the power of the Creator of this same man ever be baffled in attempting to locate, watch over, control, and reorganize the scattered dust of his people? Who among the candid can for a moment allow such a conclusion? Can man challenge his Maker to a combat of skill and power, and hope for success?

Let us come to the discoveries of the microscope made by the skill of man in the domain of the insect world. First, of the common fly we are assured that its eye has 8,000 eyes. How marvelous! But further, we are told that the two eyes of the dragon fly are each composed of 12,000 lenses, so that in reality, the wonderful insect possesses no less than 24,000 eyes, each a perfect organ by itself. No one is found to dispute these facts. But to believe in them, and then to doubt the ability of the Almighty Architect, whose skill originated and constructed these wonderful eyes, to select out from the earthy atoms the chosen jewels of his care, and cause them to shine in immortal life, is inconsistent indeed.

But our wonder is hightened as we proceed still further to penetrate the mysteries of the insect world. Leuwenhoeck informs us of animated insects seen with the microscope, of which twenty-seven millions would only be equal in bulk to the mite! Can it be proved that the atoms of the dead are any smaller? But President Barnard says of the monad, a very active and lively creature, that two thousand millions of them could be placed in a small drop of water, or packed into a hollow cube of but one-tenth of an inch in size! The statement, gravely attested, is inconceivable to the mind of man. Only think of it, a number of living things, exceeding twice over the total number of human beings in the globe, and all these contained perchance in a single drop of dew! Now the dust of the dead, buried and lost sight of for centuries, is no more invisible to the common eye than are these: but the glass of man finds and cousnt one,—can God detect and collect the others? The same authority just quoted says that the state of Bilin in Bohemia, is composed of myriads of fossil shells of the diatons, of which forty billions of them could be put into a single cubic inch. He adds yet further that there are forms of life more minute: Of the Navicula radiosa one hundred and fifty-three thousand millions; of the Navicula mediterranean three hundred and fifty thousand millions; and of the Navicula viridis, the smallest form of life known, no less than a million of millions could easily be got into a cubic box, of only one inch in size! We can set no bounds to human astonishment at such discoveries. Surely, chemically and atomically speaking, these must be as fine as is the dust of Wicklif and Huss, burned to ashes, gas and smoke, and hidden in the waters and in the unseen air. And under the watchful eye of the Omnipotent and All-seeing One, nothing is unseen; nothing is lost. We are yet further called upon to believe that these insects have perfectly organized parts, for Pouchet writes of microcoza or protoza, of which 10,000 could be ranged in a row on an inch line, and a million million put into a cubic inch; that they are discovered to have stomachs, teeth, eyes, &c.; and that the very process of chewing and digesting their food is made plainly visible by the marvelously magnifying glass! And it will either silence or increase our wonder when we come to know that the modern microscope invented by man, is capable of enlarging a surface 56,000,000 of times! Now all these marvels of the telescope and microscope, and a thousand more scarcely less astonishing, are discovered, recorded, and believed by the insignificant creature, called man. What then cannot be done by the everlasting and mighty God? Most certainly he who accepts the astounding facts revealed by the telescope and microscope in regard to the boundless immensity and strange minuteness of creation, is the last one to doubt for one moment the possibility of the resurrection of the dead. He, of all others, who takes hold of the tremendous conclusions of science, should also as readily grasp the equally tremendous truths of revelation.

Science discloses the fact that the wood and substance of countless trees, shrubs, flowers, plants, grasses, etc., and the innumerable forms of vegetation with which the whole earth is covered, comes not from the earth itself, but mainly, from the moisture and gasses of the invisible air,—that atmosphere whose very luminosity, according to Dr. Tyndal, is owing to its countless motes, and atoms, and dust. Who shall count these invisible particles that seem to know their places in nature so well, and come together so mysteriously at her call? He alone can count them who telleth the number of the stars (Ps. 147:4), and counts the hairs upon the heads of his people as well (Mat. 10:30); who gives life to the monad and the microcoza; and whose voice will one day be heard calling to all those for whom his Son shed his rich blood, and who are lost to human sight in the earth, and in the air, and in the sea "Come forth beloved: awake and sing!" To supply these rising forms will be as easy a task to him as it is on each recurring spring to supply the laboratories of nature with atoms with which to create her endless varieties of size, form, and color. We are all acquainted with the story of the seed found in the hand of a mummy that died 2,000 years ago, which, when planted, bloomed into a beautiful flower. And if the life of a single seed can be preserved so long in the hand of the dead, cannot he who watched that seed, and preserved its existence, watch the dust of the righteous dead as well, and when the spring time of resurrection comes, cause it to live and bloom, though like that seed they may have slept 2,000 years? Simple faith loves to believe that he can and will do it.

And the sea, the mighty, the deep, the wide sea "gave up the dead which were in it." (Rev. 20:13.) How sublime is this announcement! How many of the dead are dissolved in the waters of the great ocean! Now science asserts that four-fifths of the human body is only water. And it also has dem[illegible]d that many rich substances exist in invisibility; [illegible] millions of particles of silver exist in the sea unseen [illegible] human eyes; that silver itself can be dissolved to invisibi[illegible] in nitric acid; and that when so dissolved it exists as a colorless fluid, clear as water, unseen, yet present in its hidden retreat. And so ten pounds of oqague, solid silver, can, thus dissolved, be made to disappear in a pail of clear water so thoroughly that the eye of man cannot discover it, and then by a simple process, caused to reappear in its original silver form and substance at the bidding of the chemist. Exactly in the same way the countless dead in myriad atomic particles exist in absolute invisibility, dissolved by the aqua fortis of death and corruption, and lost to all sight, save that of the All-seeing One. So perfect is this dissolution that not even the cunning magnifying glass of man's invention, with its 56,000,000 power can perceive the atoms, nor all the yearnings of human love call them forth. But God sees all, knows all, watches all, and will find and gather all at the last day. There is no room left to doubt it.

These are moreover, faint types of this resurrection witnessed in the handiwork of man. We know that the skillful chemist can take any elementary substance, submit it to his analytical texts, resolve that substance into its pristine elements, and if he so dissolve a silver cup to invisibility in corroding acids, he can recover it again and restore the cup. And if he be in pursuit of any substance, such as arsenic, mercury, prussic acid, or other poison, he can by analysis hunt it out of all its hidden retreats and combinations, even after it has entered into the deeply buried tissues of man's animal nature into unseen places, and can bring the element out in all its integrity just as it was before. But this very man who thus asserts his power over the hidden things of nature, strangely doubts the loftier power of the great Architect who made him, the divine Chemist of nature in all its minute or grand proportions, to unravel its mysterious tissues, search out the dead, and bring forth man in his integrity, giving "every seed his own body" again at the restoring and transforming epoch of the great day! Man's skill is truly wonderful, but he is too puny to cope with God.

God could crush man to atoms easier than man could crush the mite with his nail; yea, God could forget man into nothingnes in a moment of time. For all mankind in the sight of the monarch of the universe are not so great as in a drop full of microcoza in the sight of man. Nevertheless the capabilities and powers of man appear very great. He can tunnel the mountains and conquer the ocean. He can harness the lightning to convey his thoughts, and catch the beams of the sun to perpetuate the features of his face. He can pierce the great gulf of the boundless heavens, and look in upon the invisible realm of countless insect life. He can sharpen his vision to behold an object of but seventy feet in size in the moon 240,000 miles away, and can perceive the forked tongues of flame in the face of the sun 91,000,000 of miles distant from his abode. He can ride over the earth at a terrible rapidity in chariots of fire, and sail on the blue of the sky in vehicles lighter than air. He can count and weigh the far off stars, measure their distances and velocities, and calculate their coming and going to the minute and second. All this and more man can do. But this same man dares assert that God is unable to raise the dead!

Finally, it is claimed that it is inconceivable that the dead, corrupted to rottenness, scattered to invisible atoms, in millions of unknown places, can be raised, take on their old forms of organized life, and live in glory and immortality; and that no one can believe in that which the mind is unable to grasp or conceive of. But is not the inconceivable in science perpetually asserted and believed in by the most sober and intelligent scientist? Take for example the system of comets whose number is by some astronomers supposed to be five hundred millions. Who can conceive that one of these strange bodies with a diameter of over 60,000 miles, and a tail a hundred millions of miles long is composed of matter so attenuated as to be capable of being compressed into one's hat or carpet bag, and to weigh but few ounces or pounds? And that this same astonishing body can travel as did the comet of 1680, 1,200,000 miles in an hour, and shoot out a visible tail 60,000,000 of miles long in two days? And yet all this is taught by Sir John Herschel, Prof. Roscoe, Dr. John Tyndall, and others, who believe it, and call upon the world to believe it, too. It is utterly inconceivable that such a vast mass of star-dust, gas, smoke, or nothingness should be propelled at such a fearful rate of speed. "It is," as Dr. Herschal says, "in definance of gravitation, and even of the laws of motion itself," that so small a mass of unknown matter can spread itself over and traverse so quickly such enormous spaces. And then to think of one of these comets like that of 1844 for example, having a period of 100,000 years! It is inconceivable that the tail of the comet of 1807 should in a single second shoot out 4,600,000 miles into space. It is inconceivable that some stars are so remote that light flashing from them at the rate of 11,300,000 miles a minute has been thirty millions of years passing the mighty interval by which they are removed from us One cannot grasp the thought that our whole solar system is unceasingly whirling around Alcyone, the central star of the Pleiades, at the rate of thirty-three millions of miles a year, and will require twenty millions of years to complete one revolution, thus taking the awful circle of six hundred and sixty thousand billions of miles of space. It is inconceivable that the light of a star should break in four hundred and eighty thousand billions of wavelets on the human eye in one second of time. All these things coolly asserted and seemingly sustained by facts, are simply astounding, incredible, past all belief, incomprehensible. But science puts them forth, although to believe them is apparently to take a long step towards high fiction. Human judgment is held in suspense before such facts. We must either reject them or allow that these are things in nature out of the range of all our pre-conceptions, forms of matter, laws of force, distances in space, and mysterious velocities of which men on earth have no conception. Coming near to these infinities we approach the realm of—Deity.

Allowing then that the resurrection of a thousand million of dead bodies out of the sea and land is a thing promised of God, why should man limit God's power to do it, or claim it is impossible because inconceivable, or doubt God at all, although the creature may not be able to conceive how it can be accomplished? Science does not hesitate to believe in its own inconceivable discoveries and facts; why not then believe in the inconceivable things of revelation as well, and frankly concede that the miracles and stupendous events which it records for faith to grasp may be brought to pass by the putting forth of almighty powers totally unfathomable to mortals, and beyond the pale of human knowledge, or even the comprehension of science? For who dares to assert that God has unfolded to the men of this little world, either in the book of nature or revelation, all the infinite resources at his command, or all the power of his omnipotent arm?

How grand, how glorious then is the ancient creed of all Christians in all ages, "I believe in the resurrection of the body, and the life everlasting!" a creed sustained by that royal and commanding promise, "Thy dead men shall live!" What a startling assertion of authority and power there is in these brief words. How full of victorious hope to the dying believer. All things are possible with God, except to lie. But there is no lie here, no deception. Let the church of Jesus rest then in full and perfect assurance that the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed to immortality, at his coming.

California Letters.

Our California correspondence, delayed several days by the great snow storm in the Rocky Mountains, reaches us just as we go to press, and is therefore laid over till next week.

Look out for it.

The News.

Our news department has been neglected of late, to pressure of duties in various departments. We are doing all we can for our readers. The news is of the usual sort—some good, and a great deal bad; and more rumors than reliable facts.

The End of all Things.

The end of all things is at hand;
The end of life, the end of time.
Lord, even now our footsteps stand
On the eternal brink sublime.
A moment more, our eyes may see
The splendors of eternity.

The end of all things is at hand;
The end of each relation here;—
Nor kindred tie, nor frienship's band,
However strong, however dear,
But must at one fell stroke be riven,
Unless their roots be fixed in heaven.

The end of all things is at hand;
The end of our probation's space.
None then can linger on the strand,
Nor for repentance find a place.
Hark, how it sounds along the shore!
Then time shall be no more, no more.

The end of all things is at hand;
The end of pain, the end of sin;—
Of exile in this foreign land;—
Assaults without, and strife within.
The end of Satan's short-lived power;
The end of death's terrific power.

The end of all things is at hand;—
Yes, of our faith the end draws nigh.
Now watching, waiting, Lord, we stand.—
Soon will thy glory meet our eye.
Amidst creation's funeral wail
Thy longed-for advent we shall hail.

—Charlotte Elliott.

Communications.

Sabbath Dialogues.

[Continued.]

W. I can show you that Paul speaks of two laws, or he contradicts himself, which of course neither of us will admit. In Gal. 5: 4 we read, "Christ is become of no effect to you, whosoever of you are justified by the law! Ye are fallen from grace." And then in Rom. 2: 13 we read, "For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified." From these texts it is plain that he refers to two distinct laws. In Galatians he is speaking of Moses' law; but in Romans he is speaking of God's law of commandments in the decalogue, the doers of which shall be justified.

C. I do not see as you have proved the point, or shown any contradiction. The context of your texts will show this. In Gal. 5 Paul is showing the uselessness of the law under the gospel—showing Christ is of no use to them if they follow the law. In Rom. 2 he is telling how God is going to judge the two classes of men who lived under different dispensations, and says, "For there is no respect of persons with God: for as many as have sinned without law shall perish without law; and and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law: for not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified." When? Under the gospel dispensation? Nay, but "In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, by my gospel." Those living in or under the law will be judged by it, and be condemned or justified, according to whether they are 'doers' or 'hearers' only. Those living before and since the law shall be judged according to the light of their day, irrespective of the law.

W. But it must be that there was a law in force in Paul's day, for he says in Rom. 7: 12, "Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy, just and good," which could not be the case if the law was done away.

C. Wait a little, and let us examine a few verses before your text. He says, "For when we were [in the past] in the flesh, the motions of sin which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death; but now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held, that we should serve in newness of spirit and not in oldness of the letter." So you see it is dead now that Christ has come and introduced the new covenant.

W. But the marginal reading shows that it was not the law that was dead, but he was dead to it; for it reads, "Or became dead to that." So it was Paul who was dead, and not the law.

C. Ah! that is a singular idea. What, the law alive and in full force, and the apostle dead to it? How then could he keep it, as you say he did? But this is a mistake; for it says, "That being dead wherein we were held, and not we dead that were held! The expression before this confirms it, which says, "Now we are delivered from the law, that being dead." And to make it still plainer, begin back at v. 3, "For the woman which hath an husband, is bound to her husband so long as he liveth. So then, if while her husband liveth she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress. But if her husband be dead, she is free from that law, so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another. Here the church is compared to a woman, and the law to her husband, and she is bound to the law as long as it is alive. But when it is dead, the church is free from these bonds and has a right to contract with another husband, and yet is no adulteress, as she must be if she has two husbands (law and Christ) at once. Paul here announces positively the death of her first husband, the law, and her marriage to another, "even him who was raised from the dead."

W. Well, you make it clear the law there spoken of is dead, which proves to me it is the law of Moses, and not God's law of commandments, for they must be alive.

C. What! have you forgotten v. 12, you quoted but a minute ago? "The law is holy, just and good." There is no change, for the law of v. 6 is the law of v. 12; and there is no such distinction as Law of Moses, separate from the Law of God; for Moses gave no law but the law he received from God: hence, 'law of Moses,' and 'law of God,' or 'the law,' mean all one and the same thing. But as you seem to cling to the ten commandments as something separate from the law, and still in force, what will you do with Paul's words in 2 Cor. ch. 3.

W. Well, that can easily be explained. You understand that what was engraven on stone is done away, when it is only the ministration that is done away.

C. What, are you going to have the commandments left, and no ministration?

W. No, they are now to be administered by the Spirit's writing them in the heart, which is the "ministration of the Spirit, which is more glorious."

C. Nay, brother, you mistake again. That would simply be a change of the place of record, from "tables of stone" to the "heart." That is not its "ministration," nor in fact any part of it. To administer a law is to see it enforced and carried out; for a law is of no use if there is no one to administer it or enforce it, no officers to execute its penalties. Now the execution of the law was death in every instance; hence Paul calls it "ministration of death." But Paul, where is this law? Ans. "Written and engraven in stones." And he says, (Gal. 3: 21) "If there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." S[illegible] you see the law was death, and [illegible]ng else. It was a corrector of transgressors. It could give no life, or pardon, but in its shadowings it pointed to one that could.

W. But if you have the law of commandments done away, what is the "Spirit" to administer in its "ministrations?"

C. Well, Paul says, (Heb. 7: 12) "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." "For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof. For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did." This "better hope" is what is now administered.

W. But Paul says, (Rom. 3: 8) "Do we make void the law through faith? God forbid, yea, we establish the law." So you see there is some law that is not done away, but established.

C. I think you must misapprehend the apostle. He is not showing that the law is now in force, but that its former teachings were correct, when it foreshadowed the coming of Christ, and the bringing in of faith, or the "better hope," as he says, (Gal. 3: 23) "Before faith came we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterward be revealed, wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith." Well, Paul, has the faith come, or been revealed? "Yes!" Then we are "shut up" no longer? "No!" No more need of the schoolmaster? "No!" He taught rightly, and brought us to Christ; did he? "Yes!" Then you confirm, or establish him; he did his work; the Law school is dismissed—Christ the, greater teacher, having come. (To be continued. O. D. Gibson.

The Main Question at Issue.

My old friend Geo. Storrs has written to me, expressing a willingness to discuss in the Bible Examiner the main questions at issue between us. I prefer however to publish my articles reviewing his pamphlet in the Advent Christian Times, which he can copy or not as he chooses. After defining his position in regard to the promise and oath of God to Abraham, that "in his seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed," he asks the following questions:

"Did God mean what the words express in the promise and oath?"

"Has the promise and oath a fulfillment in the past?"

The first question, I answer affirmatively. God meant just what he said. The second question will be answered in due time, not however, until the first is fully disposed of.

In order to arrive at correct conclusions in the discussion of a proposition, the rules of logic require a clear definition of its terms. The entire premises should be well understood. It herefore would learn exactly what he understands the word "all," in the promise and oath to mean? Does it mean every human being that has lived since the creation of the world, and that will live hereafter? Is that the invariable sense of the word all in the Bible? I would also like to hear from him on the word "every," as it may come up in the discussion. Does the word "every" in the Bible embrace every human being in all time or at any particular epoch in the world's history?

Then again I want an explicit statement what he understands the blessing in the promise and oath to be. And when he defines its meaning, I want him to give some Scripture authority for his definition. It is certain that his new theory of the gospel rests on these two legs, all and blessed. If they are knocked from under it the whole thing vanishes like the "baseless fabric of vision."

As I intend by the grace of God to fully dissect his pamphlet, and fully show that its premises, arguments, and conclusions are false, and ought at once to be rejected, I want him to explain well and satisfactoriliy the terms of this promise and oath of God to Abraham.

I would add, that I have always regarded my brother as a sincere man, but for many years a very unreliable teacher of Christianity. When he gets a new idea, he makes a hobby of it; and insists on it to the exclusion or neglect of almost everything else.

In 1844, he set the precise day, hour, and minute for the Savior to come, and sent a printed notification of his discovery broadcast over the United States, by which he did the Advent cause an irreparable injury. He was against the restoration of fleshly Israel and the "age-to-come" theory. The next thing we hear of him, he is with the Judaizers and strongly in favor of their views of the kingdom and the age-to-come. The next revolution brings him to a denial of the resurrection of any but Christians. No life out of Christ, not even a temporary lite for the purpose of punishment! He once professed to believe in water baptism as a part of the gospel system, but had no preference for modes. The next thing we hear of him he denies it altogether and contends that the only baptism we need is the baptism of the Holy Spirit!! He published a pamphlet on this point, and sent it out to the world, thereby nullifying God's ordinance and teaching men to disobey God!!! Now, he has abandoned his "no resurrection out of Christ" and is strenuously advocating the resurrection of the whole human family to future probation, except a few persons who have wilfully sinned against the Holy Spirit!!! N. Field.

Mind and Matter.

Dear Mr. Editor: With reference to the present controversy about the meaning of "Hades," involving the presumed individuality and consciousness of the spirit after the death of the body, I think it would be as well to avoid all reference to lexicographers and heathen writers, all of whom, more or less, must have been impressed with the prevailing opinion of their day, and have stamped their bias on their works,—hence are no authorities at all. The arguments would have greater weight if divine revelation and acknowledged philosophical facts were the base assumed.

For instance: it is an axiom that when conditions exist certain results follow. When certain material combinations exist in the human frame, such as the organs in the region of the heart, and the particles of matter in the brain requisite for the development of mind, conscious intelligence must ensue when such combination is acted on by the life-spirit. And why should there be any astonishment that such effects can only be produced from such combination, more than that sound should be the inevitable result from the action of wind on the material combination of the parts on an organ, or that electricity should be the certain result from the action of substances composing a galvanic battery?

Solomon under inspiration was wiser than Liddell, Scott, Æschylus, or Homer, and he asserts that, apart from the body, including the combination of the organs of mind, there is no conscious intelligence after death. "The dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward; for their remembrance" (not "memory of them") "is forgotten. Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now perished. . . . . There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest." (Ecc. 9: 5, 6–10.)

Again, as to individuality, it is not of the spirit. In the Rainbow for September I endeavored to show from Scripture that there is a difference between soul and spirit, the former being material organization. The soul, with the tabernacle encasing it, is the Ego, the individual.

There is an emphatic statement by Solomon (Ecc. 12: 7.) that "the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." The spirit of David, therefore, his life-breath, returned to God; but David personally did not go to God,—his spirit did not represent his identity—for an apostle states that "David is not ascended into the heavens." He was in his sepulchre. (Acts 2: 29–34.) Compare Mat. 16: 26 with Luke 9: 25, where "himself" is identical with "his soul," in allusion to "a man." The Lord Jesus at his death commended his spirit to his father (Luke 23: 46.); but we have the testimony of his own lips that, until he rose from the dead, He, personally, had not ascended to heaven. (John 20: 17.)

The man, Adam, was a personal entirety before the breath of life was breathed into him; he simply became a living soul when the vital action took place.

It is scarcely possible fully to appreciate the importance or glory of the resurrection as taught in the word of God, under the theory of independent consciousness. It is, moreover, dangerous, as tending to the rejection of the resurrection altogether.—H. Goodyn in Rainbow.

more soothsayers." Nahum 3: 1–7. Condemnation of witchcraft. Mal. 3: 5. A swift witness against sorcerers, etc. Acts 8: 9–18. Read carefully of a sorcerer converted by Philip. Acts 16: 16–25. Paul stopped a young woman from soothsaying, and the rabble caused him to be cast into prison; and by the power of God he was released from his chains. Gal. 5: 20. Witchcraft one of the works of the flesh. Rev. 7: 21. Of Sorceries. Rev. 21: 8. Sorcerers to suffer the second death. Rev. 22: 15. Sorcerers classed with murderers, idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

Let the inspired writers be believed by all means, even if thereby every wizard, witch, sorcerer, necromancer, or so-called Spiritualist, be proven to be an abominable deceiver. All persons who teach that man in this life has within him an immortal, never-dying soul, or any thinking part that retains its thinking functions after the body is dead, is, if not in fact a Spiritualist and sorcerer, at least an aider and abettor of that abominable evil known as Spiritualism, or sorcery, or witchcraft. They (those who so teach) are making the word of God of none effect by assisting to promulgate that false theory which we find in the false pleading the evil One to eat of the forbidden fruit. He (that evil One in the form of a serpent) said to Eve: "Thou shalt not die," after the great God had said of to them, "Thou shalt die." The preachers in these days tell us when a man has died that he is in reality not dead, but that his immortal soul has gone to heaven, or to a place of constant pain and torture. They ignorantly contradict the Scriptures of truth.

R. H. Graham.

Charity.

I find by the concordance that the word charity is made use of in the New Testament twenty-one times, and I know of no other word in the inspired writings, used to express a Christian grace, that is so magnified or enlarged upon by the sacred writers as this. But I am often made to feel that in this age of the world this virtue is looked upon in a very different light than what it then was, or perhaps scarcely considered at all. It is not very surprising that the world should have and practice such sayings as—"Two of a trade cannot agree," or, "We'll build ourselves up by pulling others down, for such are the fruits of human nature. But when we see such things in the fold of Christ, where the divine nature ought to have the supremacy, how we are to make to mourn that the religion of Christ should be so misrepresented by his short-sighted followers. No wonder the one who contemplated this subject wrote:

"Alas! the rarity of Christian charity!"

Of all members given to uncharitableness, it seems to me the tongue is most unruly. It is so easy to deal out an uncharitable dose for some one, especially in their absence, with the tongue. But I must, in order to be charitable myself, admit that such thoughts are oftenest given expression to without forethought, and so the sin may not always be a wilful one. Although this may be an excuse at the commencement of the Christian career, it must fail to be such before the term of growth in grace expires. One can scarcely fail to observe even when in an assembly of Christians that the element of charity does not pervade all hearts as it ought. Perhaps something will be slightingly said of some absent brother or sister. There may be plenty present who have it in their power to correct any false impression; but with a species of dumb uncharitableness, they hold their peace. I am fully persuaded that this is not the best course to take. There are of course cases where it would not be proper to attempt to restore an unworthy one into church fellowship. But the instances are very rare where we would not be justified in improving these opportunities for building each other up. If we take the trouble to put our thinking cap on, we can doubtless recollect something to relate concerning the absent one that will offset or more than offset what has been said in their disfavor. It is an unpretending way to rebuke a slanderer, and a sure way to bring light and gladness in our own hearts.

EMMA DREW.

EDITORS' JOURNAL.

TUESDAY, Dec. 26. Came to Toledo, Ohio, from Jackson, Mich. Rode out to Sylvania, seven miles, and called upon C. F. Hasty, who was for a time one of our teachers in the Memphis school. A noble brother is he. The death of his father called him home, where he now remains with his widowed mother. I took supper with Br. and Sr. Dawes, and called upon Br. Warne, a brother who has done much for the truth in this region. They have preaching once a month by Eld. A. N. Seymour. Their numbers are small, but they are hoping for better things. Br. S. had a great opening here some years ago, and his meeting was followed up by tent meetings here and in Toledo. But things run down afterwards for want of laborers to build up. But I trust the cause will be revived again.

I returned to the city at ten p. m., and left for the East by the Lake Shore Road at three a. m.

THURSDAY, Dec. 28. Arrived at Boston, and attended to business at the Crisis office connected with the Mission cause South. In the evening went out to Newton Upper Falls, and called upon Eld. L. T. Cunningham, who took me over to the Lower Falls to see Dr. Leslie, and I then returned and spent the rest of the evening with him. We had a long talk on the prophetic word, and on the times and seasons. He is well posted in these matters, and rather thinks we are all slumbering on the subject of the Lord's near coming. I cannot say but there is some truth in the charge. Some of the believers in definite time begin to talk about another paper which shall be devoted wholly to "the time question."

We have kept back nothing that was at all profitable, and do not mean to do so. We ought not to give anything that is fanciful or unreliable to gratify an individual theorist. It is a great and grand theme, and should not be trifled with.

FRIDAY, Dec. 29. This morning, after reading the Holy Word, we came to the "sweet hour of prayer." I led in the family devotions, when Br. C. and his wife followed, and their seven children, all poured out their hearts in prayer and praise. It was a sweet hour! It was family prayer.

Came to Boston and met the Missionary Board. Among whom were Brn. Adams, Boutell, Couch, and Cunningham. I made my report of labors in Memphis, and the sale of the chapel there, which was accepted. I also stated to them the fact that the South was missionary ground, and none could go there with idea of support from the people. And whoever should go, would have to be sustained from some quarter. That the Missionary Society was originally designed for the Advent body as a whole, and all parts of the field should be looked after with an impartial care. The Western Association could open a Missionary Department if it was advised by our brethren East, and we could act in harmony in our great work. But we would continue to act and work under the Board of the general society if they chose. That we we were in sympathy and union with it, and would pledge our support, if their missionaries could be helped in their work.

After consultation it was unanimously agreed by the Board to carry on the work East, West, North and South, as the door might open, and their means allow. They wish us to prosecute the work of missions to the greatest extent possible, with the assurance of their sympathy and aid. The cause is one, and we wish all may so consider it, and give and work in harmony. The cause is one. What one plants, the other should water, and so go on and prosper.

Both papers should be circulated as far as possible in all the fields of labor, and they will prove a mutual blessing, as they do not clash, but teach the same great truths in the spirit of love and candor.

The Board, I may here remark, are sound in the Advent faith, and feel that it would be a great mistake to give up the Advent name, as it represents the great truth which first brought us out from the church and world, and is soon to lead us into the kingdom of God.

A brother told me a remarkable fact to-day. He said a brother who had had the benefit of his neighbor's paper for eight years, that is, had borrowed and read it for nothing for that length of time, waked up one day not long since to think of the injustice of his course. On reflection he concluded it was best to confess, and pay up. He sent eighteen dollars as his past dues on his neighbor's Crisis, and then subscribed for himself. Let those who depend on borrowed papers take notice of this noble repentance.

Whitmore's "Immortality."

Dear Sir: When my attention, through your means, was lately drawn to the American work, "The Doctrine of Immortality," by James H. Whitmore, I felt at first like some other old stagers, half unwilling to traverse again an oft-trodden road. But a very few minutes' examination sufficed to show that the essay was so comprehensive, was illustrated from so many unsuspected sources, and moreover that the writer himself was one of those welcome logicians who first clear their ground and then go right ad rem with the honesty of a bullet seeking its target, that I was not long in eating up his book; and I can assure you that in so doing the operation was one of tumultuous delight.

I increasingly see that the Rainbow is an invaluable arena for adventurers in the stupendous conflict of religious thought. The editor may well say he "is not responsible for the sentiments of his correspondents;" for if his correspondents all thought alike his occupation were gone. They are all, we are happy to know, testing their Berean armor, both offensive and defensive; but they are not yet in uniform. It takes some of us a long while to get out of the wood before we can tilt with our adversary on a plain champaign country. The adversary also has to be coaxed out of his own wood, to be invited out into the sunshine; and then when we have mutually abandoned the shelter of "the trees of the garden," and every other refuge of lies, the challenge may be given and accepted with some chance of fair play: — and God help the right!

The value of Mr. Whitmore's book lies in the evidence adduced to show how the entire scheme of the Christian message holds together. Once admit with him that the first Adam was wholly "of the earth and earthy," (which, indeed, happens to be found in all our Bibles, though it is virtually and constantly denied) and he will carry you along with him to his conclusions, struggle though you may. Is it not notorious that the master-key to the dark chambers of imagery in which our modern spiritualists are seeking to fascinate, or ought we not rather to say suffocate, their disciples, is fetched from the popular doctrine of the separate condition of souls?—telling the gaping multitude that their departed friends are taking just as lively an interest in mundane affairs as when they sojourned in clay; and thus nursing that desire so dear to human nature, of looking upon our possessions and pursuits as things in the control of which we shall continue to exercise some shadowy share, even though the reins shall have fallen from our bony fingers. May not this subtile lurking element be discovered running through our personal loves and hatreds, our money-hoarding, our will-making, our building up a family-name, our autobiographies? And yet a single flash from the apostle Paul's pen would, if we could but believe it, obliterate the the entire fallacy, and wither it up like a scorched roll. Could we but stand by and witness the apostle in his last moments spanning in triumphant vision the brief interval of death's reign,— to us, the survivors, a weary interval indeed; to himself, a moment, and the twinkling of an eye;—could we watch him saluting, as an object near at hand and not afar off, the pearly gates, in the full assurance that the next moment of consciousness would be to him but the echo of the resurrection trumpet,—then we should understand, and without much effort, how entirely and heartily he was bidding farewell to earthly scenes, yes, even to his labors for his beloved Philippians,—until,—and here the vision culminates,—until he should meet them and others like them in "that day," emancipated from the body, clothed in immortality, present with the Lord. Truly a sublime picture! "Truly the rapture of repose" is here! Truly this is the gospel!

But change the picture for a moment and imagine this faithful servant in the unclothed state from which he so instinctively recoiled; imagine him holding colloquies with surviving apostles, as the spiritualists teach; or, if such a supposition be insufferably profane, imagine him witnessing from his bed of helplessness, and that, too, only a very few years after his departure, the feeble efforts of the Roman Clement, endeavoring to establish the doctrine of the resurrection by a discourse on the periodical return of the Phœnix to the Egyptian Sun-Temple: — imagine him watching the gradual corruption of every church which he had founded,— the faithful at Rome becoming the most faithless of all; — and Christians even of the nineteenth century hardly caring whether the resurrection of their Lord was capable of historic proof, or not,— shifting the argument for their own immortality, from alliance with the second Adam to alliance with the first Adam, and reading the fifteenth chapter of the first epistle to the Corinthians backwards!

"But it were impious," some will urge, "to imagine any thing of the sort, or to suppose that the apostle takes cognizance of aught but his future reward. He rests in hope; already, it is true, in the enjoyment of bliss; but looking forward to greatly enhanced bliss in the day of judgment. Where that present resting-place is, none may declare: perhaps in Heaven, perhaps in Hades."

We prefer the apostle's own statement. "His life is hid with Christ in God;" veiled, concealed, resting in abeyance; but in perfectly safe keeping. What more need we wish for, either in Paul's or in our own behalf?
—James Waylen in Rainbow.

Ho, For Rochelle!

Are you going to Rochelle, Ill., to the annual Conference? I expect to do so. Let there be a general rally. Remember its time of commencing is Jan. 18th, 1872, not 1873 as the printers said in last week's paper. Don't wait till 1873. It may be too late. Come up to this meeting one and all. Let us awake in Illinois. God wants us to work. We are too nearly asleep. Arouse, and come to this meeting. Come filled with the Spirit of God and give us your counsel and aid. Come early in the meeting. Amen.

F. BURR.

1872.

The year just before us is not the centenary of any great event in modern history. A hundred years ago, our fathers were still somewhat angrily resisting the arrogant claim of the British Crown and Parliament of unlimited, unbalanced power to tax them without even the formality of asking their leave; but only the discerning few as yet foresaw the bloody struggle that was then imminent. One hundred years ago peace was very general in both hemispheres, except that the partition of Poland among her three powerful neighbors had been decreed and initiated. And now it looks as though the next great war in Europe would be between the powers which perpetrated that gigantic crime and upon the plains so often reddened with the life-blood of its victims.

France seems a smothered but not sleeping volcano, just ready to vomit flame and ashes, yet not likely very soon to trouble the repose of her neighbors. That her present government cannot outlast the coming year, is a prediction; but who can tell what fashion of monarchy shall supplant the doomed Republic? The priests and ruder peasantry would have Henry V if they could; the army officers prefer Napoleon III; the manufacturers and shopkeepers lean toward the house of Orleans; the workers for wages constitute the main strength of the Republic. That Theirs will soon cease to be President, few doubt; beyond that, all is blind conjecture.

Great Britain seems to be gravitating toward a republic, in fact, if not in name; but the obstacles to be encountered are gigantic. Among Christian countries, there remains no other whose social structure is so essentially aristocratic as hers. A hundred families own half her immense wealth; the greater portion of her soil belongs to a much smaller number. A social revolution in the British Isles may be the bloodiest and most destructive that the world has yet seen. It can hardly be initiated while the National Finances remain as sound and hopeful as they now are, and a majority of the rural tenantry continue attached to the feudal lords by a tie of common interest; yet the day of strenuous effort for a radical upturning in Britain cannot be far distant. The union of Church and state is probably the next bulwark of aristocracy to be assailed and subverted.

Spain has made more progress toward daylight within the last ten years than any other country. Till lately a thrall of bigotry and imbecile despotism, she has to-day a liberal constitution and a parliamentary regime, and is rapidly gaining in popular intelligence and popular power. Her fearfully disordered finances and her enormously over-generaled army are the chief remaining obstacles to her complete renovation.

Italy is no longer a chaos of nominally independent but inpotent states and of foreign provinces, but a liberal kingdom of twenty-five millions, rapidly growing in intelligence, cohesion, and strength. More newspapers are issued weekly in any quarter of her area than in the entire peninsular twenty years ago. She needs but peace and a policy which shall serve to develop her material resources, to render her, by the close of this century, one of the great powers of Europe.

Germany is to-day the strongest and most influential among those pow but her Emperor and his prime Min ter Bismarck are both old men; so his military brain, von Moltke. Whe these pass away, as in the order of nature they soon must, the prestige of the monarch will fade, and the Empire enter upon that work of social melioration which has already been delayed too long, allowing Austria, and even Russia, to take the lead of her. These two great military monarchies are likely to be involved in deadly strife at no distant day; but Germany will stand aloof if the voice of her people shall be heard.

Mexico and all Spanish America seem to us a continual anarchy, when in fact they are in most respects what Europe and Christendom were ten to twelve centuries ago. A far wider expanse and a sparser population are the most essential points of difference.

On the whole, we hope to be obliged to chronicle little or no carnage in 1872; yet the bloodiest years of the past have been ushered in as peacefully as this now promises to be. Let us reverently trust that whatever of agony and wo the New Year may bear in its bosom may be overruled for good, and that the human race may visibly, palpably profit by all its sufferings and sorrows.—N. Y. Tribune.

From Arkansas.

Br. Himes: Having been busily engaged professionally, and sick part of the time since you were here, I have not written as soon as I should have done. THE TIMES has arrived; and a welcome visitor it was to me, and, indeed, to all, as far as I have been able to learn. Your visit to our country has been productive of more excitement than we have had since the late war. "Many are running to and fro," and I think knowledge will be increased. I have not seen Br. Lenox since your visit, but I have heard that there is quite a sensation over there, also. As to my own case, I have had a hard time. I have been suspended between tradition and the Bible until recently, when the peg of tradition drew and I fell to the side of Bible truth, which tells me that "the wages of sin is DEATH, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." And I humbly and adoringly bless his name who has enabled me to see the riches of his grace in the light of truth. I now believe that I can preach the gospel in "Spirit and in truth!"

I have obtained several new subscribers, some of whom were greatly incensed against the Advent doctrine when you were here, but have been very much softened, by hearing and reading the doctrine; and now are willing to acknowledge themselves "awfully bothered." I must not fail to notice one case more closely, which will encourage us to be sowing the good seed, even when adverse winds blow, and trust our heavenly Father for the increase. The person alluded to has been a member of the Baptist church for twenty years, and a faithful vindicator and defender of its tenets. (You know Baptists, generally, are proud of their traditions.) I loaned a book to him, which he read with great interest, and soon became a convert to its teachings. He is above sixty years of age, but feels inexpressibly rejoiced that God has visited and comforted him by the "truth as it is in Jesus," even in his last days. And I say, Amen! May the glorious doctrine gladden the hearts and homes of thousands more. Oh! send out the precious ships, laden with their sacred cargo of eternal truth. May they find a place in the home circle of every family in our great republic. May they be wafted by the winds to other shores, until all the families of the earth are blessed by their fructifying presence.

G. W. CROSBY.

Advent Christian Times.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Jan. 9, 1873.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, ... EDITOR

ZION'S Herald thinks this generation may see the end of idolatry. So do we—by the process described in Ps. 2: 9, however, and not by conversion.

IT is worth while to note in passing that in the Egyptian ideographs, or hieroglyphics, the separate soul was indicated by "a dog-headed animal." We would be glad to point out the analogy, but must leave the difficult task for some immaterialist friend.

How men differ in opinions! Dr. Conant, the eminent translator, says "My Glory," in Ps. 108: 2, means man's spiritual nature. Very likely this may be so. But the difference of opinion is here: The doctor says this "glory" is immortal; and Peter says, "All the glory of man is as the flower of the grass: the grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away!" The difference between the two is very great. The question is, which is right. The Doctor is eminent authority. Let each reader decide for himself whether his assertion shall outweigh that of Peter. (1 Pet. 1: 24.)

A CHRISTIAN daily newspaper was commenced in New York last July, by Mr. John Dougall, who had for ten years previously conducted a Christian Daily in Montreal, Canada, with great success. This paper was called the Montreal Witness, and it still continues, under his son's management, to be the most extensively circulated journal in Eastern Canada. Mr. Dougall brought the highest testimonials from leading ministers and others in Canada, and the New York Daily Witness soon obtained very favorable notices from a great number of religious and secular journals, of the highest character, in New York, and throughout the Union; a column of which appears in this specimen number of the Weekly Edition.

OUR MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

We have a Missionary Society for special efforts in fields not likely to be otherwise reached. In general, nearly all our preachers are self-supporting missionaries. But there are some things that can only be effectually accomplished by the co-operation of the entire body. There are many claims upon our resources, constant demands upon our charity or benevolence. All should be fairly considered, and each receive help according to our convictions.

Not least among the claims is that of our Missionary Society. Its work is a great one. They purpose sending the gospel South to the Gulf, and to follow up the efforts that have already extended it to the Pacific. They need earnest and effective labors, self-sacrificing men, and means to keep them continually at work. Shall they not have both? We have faith to believe they will. Send your contributions to GEO. T. ADAMS, 167 Hanover st., Boston, Mass.

NOT RELIABLE.

Some sensible man has said: "I am a pastor; and I find that just those persons whose desire seems to be to occupy conspicuous places in the church, if they are to work at all, are the very ones whose example is not always the best, or who cannot be relied upon for steady activity. They are the ones who must be coaxed and urged, unless there is a good prospect of their shining."

A plain truth, plainly told. To lean upon such is to lean on a broken staff—they will fail you where wanted most. They must be fed continually upon publicity and special attention, and their appetite increases with that it feeds upon. A little work in obscurity will damp all their ardor they fall out of the current, and soon they are high and dry on Backslider's bank. And it is as true of preachers as others. They can work as long as they are the center of attraction; but if the "I" is eclipsed they are soon lost to sight and hearing.

Let us have a reform in the class all round.

A SERIOUS LOSS.

We refer to Br. Preble's loss of the plates of the "200 Stories for Children" in the Chicago fire. Just before the conflagration they were removed from the safe to a temporary place of deposit, with thousands of pages of other valuable plates and other material, from which they were to be transferred in a few days to a new, larger and more perfect safe. But they were caught by the flames and consumed. This is a great loss to Br. Preble, and, also, to our children, with whom the book was a great favorite. Br. Preble is not able alone to republish the work; but if he could have help, the republication would be a success and the book would soon pay for itself. We trust his friends, and the friends of the little folks will loan or donate to him a sufficient amount to enable him to carry out his plans in this respect. Let all who have enjoyed this compilation remember Br. Preble in his time of trial.

NOT EXACTLY.

A recent writer, prominent among "Age-to-come" teachers in a recently published communication, says: "Second Adventists have repudiated us for the belief that the world to come must be controlled by Christ and his immortalized believers; and nations, Israel at their head, restored to Canaan, must be the subjects." This is not exactly so. The fact in the case is that Adventists are repudiated by him and most of his brethren, and by them classed with other Protestant sects, Romanists, Mohammedans, etc. Some of them do believe that we shall have another chance for salvation in the coming age; but they strenuously deny that we are Christians at all. Think of those taking such a position, whining that they are "repudiated" by Adventists! We do repudiate their false doctrine, and above all repudiate their sectarianism which can not see God or good or religion outside their own contracted circle.

MUST BE A MISTAKE.

The (Mo.) Christian says—"Another preacher gone to his reward." It says he "fell in battle with his armor on." Is that his reward? Now we had another idea of the matter. We looked upon falling in battle as the enemies' triumph and our misfortune, and for reward in a rising again, not in the fall. Rev. 11: 18 is on our side—it speaks of a time yet future when "the prophets and saints, small and great," will be rewarded. Now if there is a more favored class who are rewarded before Daniel, and Isaiah, and David, and Moses and the rest, we want to understand it. Still it does not seem exactly right that the old prophets and apostles should wait till the judgment for their reward, and the preachers of these days get theirs at death! There must be a mistake in the popular theology.

SEEKING A CREED.

The Winebrennarians want a creed. At least some of them do. (By the way we mean no disrespect in calling them by that name—not many of our readers would not know who we refered to if we called them "Church of God"). The subject was agitated in one of them principle elderships in a late session, and in the Advocate, by a prominent minister. He gives nine reasons why the plea of "submitting the Scriptures to every one's unassisted judgment" is, or is like to be, a failure. We refer to the subject to call attention to the growth of Advent idiers in another denomination. The sixth to the ninth points inclusive relate directly to Advent views, covering the "immortality of the soul," the state of the dead, the resurrection, future rewards and punishments, and the saints inheritance. The writer says the contradictions on these points in their public teachings is "shockingly disgusting." If we remember right, it was in this same paper that we were twitted of the differences of opinion among Adventists, with which the unity of its supporters was contrasted. "Comparisons are odious," and we will not enlarge. We wish our neighbors no harm, but we trust the smouldering fires of materialism in their midst may yet break into a flame that shall light up all their bodies.

WAS ADAM A SIMPLETON?

There seems to be quite a current in theological ideas setting toward the point that Adam was a simpleton. Of course those who press the notion do not use this term; they say his state was one of "childish ignorance and simplicity." I went to a Methodist Preacher's meeting in Boston. Rev. Mr. Scot said he "thought too much holiness and wisdom is attributed to Adam and Eve. He doubted if they knew more than our children to day—they were not archangels, and fell at the first assault. Some of the beasts probably know more than they."

Now it cannot be doubted that too much wisdom and holiness have been by some attributed to the first pair, but that is no reason why we should run into an opposite extreme, and almost deny them the commonest common-sense.

God made man to have dominion over the earth; and as he was among the things that were very good, it is altogether probable that he was fit for the position God designed for him. It also appears that he had sufficient perception and discretion to apprehend the nature of the creatures God had made and give appropriate names to each. Child-like he may have been in those respects in which we must all become as little children if we would enter the kingdom of God; but there is no reason whatever to doubt that his powers of mind were fully matured. One thing is certain, if he was incapable of comprehending his condition, his nature and the penalty of transgression, it is hard to see how divine goodness can be justified, especially in the orthodox view, that his sin precipitated him into eternal wo!

A REMINISCENCE.

Our readers will enjoy the following reminiscence of old Father Miller, furnished us in a private letter from one of his daughters-in-law—Sr. I. E. Miller—of Minnesota. She says:

"On receiving the last number of THE TIMES I began with the first article upon the first page and read through taking every article by course; and a feast indeed it has been. This reminds me of a little story George tells about his father's asking him to read to him when he lay upon his bed, with those dreadful sores, in his last sickness. George took the paper and sat down by the bed and began to look for something to read. The old gentleman waited very patiently for a moment when he burst out with, "Well, George what's the matter? Why don't you read?" Looking for something to read, he replied. "Read, read, begin at the beginning and read." So George began with the title, the volume, number, etc., etc., and read every word printed upon the sheet. When he had finished, "There," said Father Miller, "that is the way to read. I can see that paper now.

I never really thought of the idea before; but with many it is much like sitting down to the table and picking out one or two favorite dishes to make one's meal out of. They sit down to our paper and choose one or two articles, because they are written by some one known or liked especially, and let the rest of the paper go unread.

"Preacher's experience" is splendid. I think it's good for some of us that are not preachers. The idea about "side-blows" and "back-thrusts" and "pretended friends," etc., I can appreciate. Then there is, "What time is it?" It did seem as though every word of it came right home to me. "An appeal to Christians;" "The world on Fire;" "Report of the W. A. C. P. Association;" "Editor's Journal;" "Letters and Extracts"—which tell us we are not the only isolated ones who have no preaching but their Bibles and THE TIMES. Thank the Lord we have these. They are all good, and may the good Lord keep us all till he comes to end this weary lonely night of waiting, watching and praying.

WHAT THEY WOULD DO.

The innocence of those people who think the spirit of Romanism is changed, and that had it politicl power, even as formerly, it would no longer reduce the masses to ignorance, nor persecute with fagot, flame and sword, is truly refreshing. Testimony like the following may serve to open some eyes. It is an extract from an official letter from the Pope's Prime Minister to the Bishop of Nicaragua.

"We have lately been informed here that an attempt has been made to change the order of things hitherto existing in that Republic, by publishing a programme in which are enunciated 'freedom of education' and of worship. Both these principles are not only contrary to the laws of God and of the church, but are in contradiction with the concordat established between the Holy See and that Republic. Although we doubt not that your most illustrious and reverend lordship will do all in your power against maxims so destructive to the church and to society, still we deem it by no means superfluous to stimulate your well known zeal to see that the clergy, and, above all, the curates do their duty.

G. CARDINAL ANTONELLI."

—It will be seen that freedom of education and worship are denounced as rank heresies. It will be well to perserve the above "scrap of history" for the examination of those who think Rome is becoming either more liberal or less jealous than formerly.

THE DIFFERENCE AND THE REASON FOR IT.

In a discourse not long since upon the text, Not this man but Barrabas, Dr. Annable said—"A question arises, Why is not Christ and his church persecuted now, as in the days of his flesh, and soon after his ascension? The answer is plain: the world sees so little difference that they are at ease. Only let the church exert herself, and make aggression on the world, and she will soon be met by that determined opposition which nothing but blood can satisfy." The Doctor tells the truth.

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

UPON FOUR PROPOSITIONS,

Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

ELD. CLARK BRADEN'S SECOND LETTER.

Br. Himes: Your first reply is now before me. I see that there are certain preliminary thoughts that I had hoped to reserve until the discussion of the next proposition, that will have to be advanced now, in order to reply to your rejoinder. I will address myself immediately to that work. Mankind, in Adam and Eve and their descendants, began in a state of childish innocence and simplicity. Their ideas and knowledge began and grew like those of a child Their language, at each and any period, expressed only the ideas and knowledge man had at that period. Their language, and the ideas expressed by it, and the meanings of their words, grew with the growth of their ideas and knowledge. The growth was very similar to that of the language and ideas of a child. The child's first ideas and knowledge are confined to material things, and their actions and properties that he can apprehend through the senses. He makes persons of all things, and all things are material to him. He has no idea of immaterial, moral, or spiritual things. We have to accommodate our commands, communications, and instructions to his capacity, and to a great extent, when speaking of things to him, talk of them as they appear to him. The child has no correct idea of his own nature, of spirit, death, grave, or state of the dead, cannot have such knowledge, nor can we communicate such knowledge to him, for he cannot comprehend such ideas.

This was the case with man at first. In acquired ideas and knowledge, he began in childish ignorance and simplicity. His language was monosyllabic and contained but few words, and these represented only material things and their properties and acts that could be apprehended through the senses. As the the child has and can have no correct ideas of his nature, of spirit, of death, of grave, of the state of the dead; so man had and could have no such ideas at first. Man could not conceive of and understand such things at first, and his words expressed no such ideas. His language contained no words representing such ideas. Man, the brutes, and plants were alike material and alike persons. This is seen in the gender given in old languages to all objects. Man and brutes had the same nature. Death was the same to each. The whole person or man lay in the grave. Then the soul, as a ghost or phantom, flitted around the grave, and made the grave its home by day. Then the soul descended into the underworld. Then man had something the brute had not. Then more intelligence and life was given to shades in the underworld. Then there was a division according to character there. Then a reservation until judgment; and then a final state of happiness or misery. All men began in this childish ignorance. Some rude tribes have not progressed out of it. As man grew into higher ideas and knowledge, he had either to coin new words or to gradually elevate old words and give them new meaning. As he grew gradually, he pursued the latter course. So the same word has different meanings. Higher meanings in later ages, and different meanings in different departments.

Soul at first meant breath, then life, then life principle, then intelligent life principle—at last the rational, intelligent, moral part of man. In like manner spirit meant at first wind—wind in motion by breathing—breath, life, life principle, intelligent life principle, then the rational, intelligent, conscious, moral part of man. It was almost synonymous with soul for a time, and then distinct from body and soul. God used human language to convey the knowledge he intended to communicate to man. He revealed his truths from time to time, and but a part at a time. He began with the alphabet of revelation, and with the rudiments or germ of each great idea of revelation. He accommodated his revelation to man's condition and capacity from age to age, and to his state of growth and development, and to his wants. He tolerated his weakness and imperfect ideas, and often his errors. He gradually educated man out of these imperfections up to higher knowledge, and elevated his words to express higher ideas. His commands were of the same rude, elementary character, and concerning earthly and temporal things and duties. We deal in the same way with our children. In giving his religion to man, God often used human words and ideas without correcting erroneous ideas. He uses in this way the old Hebrew ideas concerning the heart as the seat of volition, passion, and intelligence. Inspiration was not omniscience, nor even correct knowledge always in anything except what was to be revealed. Often it was not complete knowledge of that. Then we are to take into account man's advancement, and the age in which the language was uttered.

We are to avoid concluding that the imperfect or erroneous ideas of early ages are sanctioned or taught by inspiration, because used by inspired men. They may be used because they are not vitally connected with what was to be revealed, or because man was not ready to understand correct teaching, or because it was not yet necessary that he should be taught correct ideas. We are to avoid concluding that the imperfect materialistic ideas of the first ages are the complete teachings of revelation. Also to avoid lugging over into the domain of pneumatology, the materialistic ideas of physical science. We are to go to the perfect ideas of the New Testament for our ideas of what revelation teaches of man's nature—of spirit and of its nature and destiny. Let us now apply these principles to the development of these ideas in revelation. Before the flood we do not find any distinction between the life principle or soul of man and that of the brute. This holds true all through the books of Moses, except that Jacob and the patriarchs began to have ideas of the soul as a phantom, wandering in sheol or the underworld. Then the spirit of the beast went downward, and that of man upward. Then man's spirit went to God who gave it. The book of Job cannot be appealed to at all for teaching concerning man's nature and the spirit's destiny, because it was written before man had or had imparted to him such knowledge. The book of Proverbs and Ecclesiastes cannot be relied on for the same reasons, and because their philosophizings have no reference to the future world at all.

In like manner the Psalms are not to be relied on, because man had no knowledge scarcely of the future world, and such knowledge was not the subject of its revelations The same holds true of all that was written before the Babylonish Captivity. At first sheol meant grave, then it was deepened into a vast, dreary underworld. Jacob says "I will go to the underworld to my son." David says his son cannot come back, but he will go to him. Isaiah represents the shades in sheol as addressing the Prince of Babylon. They were in a dreamy, phantom state. These were the ideas of the writer of Job, of Ecclesiastes, of Proverbs, of Psalms, of the Pentateuch, of the Kings and Chronicles, and of the prophets. Such were Hezekiah's ideas. Hence, to these, sheol was not a desirable place—was not a place of much activity or knowledge. Daniel had higher ideas, and when our Savior came, the Pharisees made distinction between body and soul and spirit. Made the spirit actively conscious after death. Divided the underworld or intermediate state into Paradise, or Abraham's bosom, for the righteous, and Tartarus for the wicked. They had a knowledge of general judgment, of resurrection of the body, and the final state of the good in heaven, and of the wicked in Gehenna. I know that these ideas came from the Persian and Eastern religions, but I care not if our Savior and his inspired apostles sanctioned them by use and a recognition of their truth. We are to go to the perfected New Testament teachings for our ideas of these things.

The words in Greek and Hebrew which are rendered spirit have the following meanings: Wind, air in motion, breath, life, life principle, disposition and influence, a person inspired, the import of a law, a moral conscious being or entity, and intelligent rational being or entity. So has our word spirit all these meanings. In English, we have body, soul and spirit. In Greek, soma, psyche and pneuma. In Hebrew, we have neuf, nephesh and ruach. In Latin, corpus, animus and anima. Soul, nephesh, psyche and animus sometimes mean breath, then life, then life principle, then creature, then person, then the man. Sometimes they are interchangeable with spirit ruach, pneuma or anima, and mean a rational, intelligent, moral being or entity. Spirit, pneuma, ruach and anima mean also wind, breath, life, life principle. Also person, creature, or man. In this highest meaning as distinguished from soul, nephesh, psyche and ani- mus, they mean the rational, intelligent, moral entity man possesses in common with higher orders of intelligences, as distinguished from the principle of animal life, the seat of the affections and passions man has in common with the brutes. Soul, nephesh, psyche and animus are sometimes by synecdoche called the man. So are body, corpus, neuf and soma. So also are spirit, ruach, pneuma and anima. When body or soul are contrasted with the spirit, the spirit is regarded as the real man. The New Testament teaches man has a body, soul, and spirit; makes a distinction between soul and spirit in many places.

It also contrasts the animal or soul-like man with the spirit man or spiritual man. The body is represented as the spirit's house or tabernacle. The spirit is represented as departing from this tabernacle. The same term, spirit, is applied also to God, angels, the Holy Spirit, and the Logos, or Word. One more explanatory thought will suffice. Spiritual things are illustrated by material things; they have to be. The terms representing all spiritual or future things, are represented by present and temporal things. Heaven is called a city, a garden; has golden streets, a river of life, tree of life, harps of gold, altar, throne, etc. No one now understands these things as literal. Each nation has its heaven and hell based on its life and surroundings. The Hebrew heaven and hell was, at first, gross and material, and our Savior and his apostles used these terms, but elevated and purified them, but had to use illustration and figures of speech. Sheol meant grave, then underworld, then abode of departed shades or spirits. Paradise meant garden, then the abode of the blessed. Hades meant the unseen, then the abode of the departed. Heaven meant the expanse, then the abode of God, in English, Greek and Hebrew. Tartarus meant that which is gloomy, dark, or smoky. So did hell mean what was covered in English. Gehenna meant the vale of Hinnom, then the place of final torment of the wicked. So also of Tophet and other terms

From this we draw the following conclusions: 1. We must not in our reasonings on spirit go back to root or materialistic ideas or meanings. 2. We must not drag into pneumatology, the materialistic meanings or ideas of physical science or zoology. 3. I hope my opponent will not drag man down to a level with the brutes, rather than have his system overturned. 4. We cannot confine sheol, hades, gehenna, paradise, to their root meanings, any more than we can the words représenting heaven, or our English hell. 5. We must not confine ourselves to the alphabet of revelation, but take the perfected teachings of the New Testament. 6. We must not use the imperfect ideas of the writers of Job, Psalms, Ecclesiastes, Proverbs, or the early prophets, or of Hezekiah, to destroy the clear teachings of Jesus and his apostles. 7. We must, in our reasonings, inquire in what age the language we quote was spoken, also in what department it was used, and what is the meaning of the word as determined by the context. Much of the supposed contradiction of my positions that my opponent brought forward in his quotations, can be easily set aside by the above rules of interpretation. I have not space now to notice his article in full, and shall conclude by offering my first argument for my position as affirmed in the proposition: "Man is, by the constitution God gave him in creation and which he still retains, a being possessing a spirit that will endlessly exist in a state of consciousness."

In Mat. 10: 28 our Savior says, "Fear not those who kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him who is able to destroy both body and soul in hell" (gehenna). Also Lk. 12: 4, "Be not afraid of those that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. But I will forewarn you whom you shall fear. Fear him who, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into gehenna." From this language we draw these conclusions: 1. Soul here means the spirit. 2. The death these persons inflicted was the same as all men die. 3. No one but God can affect the existence of the spirit. 4. After God kills, he punishes by casting into gehenna. 5. Death, then, does not extinguish that conscious being that the spirit possesses before death. 6. Casting into gehenna is the destruction inflicted on the wicked. 7. Gehenna cannot mean the Vale of Hinnom. It means the abode of the wicked after judgment. 8. This casting body and soul into gehenna is inflicted after the general judgment so often described by our Savior and his apostles. Then man possesses a spirit of such a nature that death does not and cannot extinguish its conscious being. Only God can extinguish its conscious being. He does not even when he kills. He afterwards casts into gehenna.

In our next we shall attend to both of Br. Himes' rejoinders. We have in the two articles written so far, been developing fundamental ideas, and learning the position of our opponent in his replies. CLARK BRADEN.

ELD. HIMES' RESPONSE TO ELD. BRADEN'S SECOND ARTICLE.

My brother has given us at considerable length a theory of the development of human intellect and language to which I shall pay little attention. It can be disposed of in a few words and by a few facts. His theory is in brief, simply this. Man, created by God to hold the dominion of the earth and all contained in it, had bestowed upon him an intellect inferior in breadth and power to that of a very young child in this day; and mankind required several thousands of years of preparation before they could receive correct ideas of their own nature, condition in death, the final rewards and punishment, and the future life. And an attempt is made to rule more than one-half the Scriptures out of this discussion because the idea of these subjects contained or expressed in them are intrinsically false. We are assured that Moses, and Job, and David, and Hezekiah and the rest held essentially erroneous opinions of their own nature, of soul, spirit, sheol, etc., and, moreover, this was necessarily the case, because their mental nature had not yet become sufficiently elevated or refined to receive the truth, even had God been disposed to reveal it in their day.

My brother tells us what men knew of these things "before the flood." Has he had access to Antediluvian literature? All that we know about the years before the deluge was written years after the immaterialistic ideas had blossomed into the full flower in Egypt, by a man who was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. The Egyptians, the Persians, the Hindoos found no difficulty in expressing and teaching the ideas of "a distinct rational entity in man," surviving the death of the body, and capable of conscious existence separate from it. They could comprehend and express these and related ideas, quite as well as they have been expressed in any age since (so far as abstract notions are concerned): and to say that these heathens enjoyed for long ages the light of a truth of God of which his own chosen people remained ignorant because they were intellectually incapable of receiving it, is insulting to their memory and to his goodness. The truth of the case is, that Moses and the other sacred writers so unceremoniously set aside, use the words 'soul and spirit' in every sense in which they occur anywhere in the Holy Scriptures (not every technical, but every general sense). In the second verse in the Bible the Divine Paraclete is called the Spirit. And the earlier inspired writers use it in the sense of "mind, air in motion, breath, life, life-principle. disposition or influence, a person, a moral conscious being or entity," "an intelligent rational entity." In short these writers omit only one use of the term—that invented by heathen errorists and appropriated by the great heresies of the Jewish and Christian churches.

They also employ the term 'soul' in all its varied senses—except that of a "rational entity in man capable of conscious existence separate from the body." It is used in the sense of 'life' in Gen. 1: 20; Lev. 17: 11. Creature or person, Gen. 1: 21, 24; 2: 7; Num. 6: 6, where is it rendered dead 'body.' The mind or disposition, Gen. 23: 8; 27: 4; Ex. 15: 9. So spirit: wind, Gen 8: 1. Breath, Gen. 7: 22. Mind. Gen. 26: 35; Num. 5: 30. References might be multiplied: but one is as good as a thousand. Moses understood the varied meanings of the terms in dispute, even the heathen sense of a distinct rational entity in man; and the fact that he nor his successors ever employ it in that sense is not to be attributed to their intellectual incapacity, but to the fact that they were better informed than their heathen neighbors, and knew that the notion was essentially false.

I could fill my second paper with remarks upon the errors of the theory broached above; but I do not intend to be drawn into the discussion of any side issue. The proposition before us is definite. If Jesus and his apostles plainly taught that the spirit in man will endlessly exist in a conscious condition let us have the "plain teachings exhibited." Until this is done, the reader will be very much of my mind if he looks upon all this preliminary talk as simply the preparation of a basis for inferences to made hereafter from certain disputed texts; and to forestall appeal on the other side to certain "plain teachings," which, if their natural sense is admitted, must settle this question. I shall not occupy my space is refuting every bare assertion of fact or principle my brother may employ, unless he shall give them a practical application in argument. Then I hope to give them such attention as they deserve. I purpose not to be drawn into a discussion of side issues, nor be forced into assuming the affirmative of this proposition.

In concluding his second paper my brother offers what he calls his "first argument," citing Mat. 10: 28, and Lk. 12: 4, 5. I will dispose of the latter passage first by showing how completely he has misapprehended it. "Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do; but I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him who after he hath killed hath power to cast into gehenna." Now, says my brother, "after God kills, he punishes by casting into gehenna," which is true. But he adds: "Death, then, does not extinguish that conscious being that the spirit possessed before death." And again: "Only God can extinguish its conscious being. He does not, even when he kills. He afterwards casts into gehenna." This conclusion is unwarrantable. My brother falls into confusion of thought by not observing that the word 'kill' here refers to the same action, whether performed by God or man. Man can take away this present life, but can do no more. God can take away this present life, and, in addition, cast the sinner into gehenna, or the second death, after the judgment. My brother's misapprehension lies in supposing that God's power to "kill" the man is exercised after the judgment; whereas what the Savior really affirmed was that God is able to deprive man of both this life and life in the future. We have a case in point in the story of Ananias. He fell dead after lying to the Holy Spirit; and will be cast into gehenna with "all liars" at the judgment.

Besides does my brother seriously mean to teach that the Almighty will kill the bodies of the wicked at the judgment, and then cast their disembodied souls into gehenna?

I will now examine Mat. 10: 28: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in gehenna." "Fear not them which kill the body"—this, all agree, refers to violent death, in the literal sense of the latter word. "But are not able to kill the soul"—it is claimed that "kill" has the same sense here as in the previous clause; and that 'soul' means an entity capable of conscious existence separate from the body. This I admit for the sake of the argument. Now we have a proposition before us, as follows: 'Man can literally put the body to death; but he cannot literally kill the soul: it will survive his utmost efforts to destroy it.' We have now granted all that can be claimed. This is the thesis. Now let us examine the antithesis: "But rather fear him who is able to destroy BOTH soul and body." Read it over, and read it over again, and avoid if you can the conclusion that the very pith of this assertion is that God can not only do all that man can do but can besides do the very thing which man cannot do—literally "kill the soul!" "He can destroy both soul and body in gehenna "Kill" and "destroy" are used interchangeably, the latter being the stronger word; and the substitution is made in order to increase the force of the contrast between the inability of man, and the power of God to do the very thing which man cannot do—"kill the the soul."

Lest the sense of the word 'destroy' (apolumi) should be questioned, I will appeal to the lexicon and to a well known rule of interpretation, sanctioned by Blackstone, Hedge, Whately, Webster, and "all great canons of interpretation." "A word must be taken in its primary and most common meaning, unless the context compels us to change it. And then it must conform as far as possible to its common meaning." Liddell and Scott give us as the primary sense, of apollumi, to destroy utterly, kill, slay murder, demolish; and an examination of the concordance shows that these are its common significations in the N. T. There are secondary meanings; but I will try the primary first, because all the authorities declare that if it makes good sense, and harmonizes with the context, it is surely the sense intended. Let us try the definition by substituting it for the original term: God "is able to 'utterly destroy,' or 'kill,' or 'slay' both soul and body in gehenna." Is not the sense in either case perfect? Does it not agree with the general tenor of Scripture? Did not God say the sinning soul should 'die?' (Ezk. 18.) "The wicked shall perish: into smoke shall they consume away." (Ps. 37.) "All the wicked will be destroy." (Ps. 145: 20.) "With everlasting destruction." (2 Thes. 1: 9.) They "shall utterly perish." (2 Pet. 2: 12.) Can we doubt then that Mat. 10: 28 teaches that God will in the end utterly destroy, literally kill, soul and body, all who do not fear him?

It may be urged that there is good reason for accepting a secondary sense of the word 'destroy' in this passage; that as the soul is immortal (or indestructible, or unceasing, undying, or what not—I care not what term is used to express the common idea, and cannot be literally killed or destroyed, we must therefore, accept a secondary sense of 'destroy' in this text. Right here the text breaks down as a support to my brother's proposition, for every one must see that it makes only two affirmations concerning the soul: (1) man cannot kill it; (2) God can do that very thing There is not the most distant allusion to its immortality or unceasing existence.

I have already freely granted, for the sake of the argument, a sense to the word 'soul,' that I do not believe it once bears anywhere in Holy Writ. For the argument's sake, I grant that the soul is here a distinct rational entity in the man, surviving the death of the body. But survival of the body is one thing, and unending existence is quite another. The Hindoo and some other theologins teach the survival of the soul in death; but the surviving entity is or may be lost, extinguished at last. A surviving soul, and a "never-dying soul," are two very different things. The question now before us is not whether man has an entity that in a conscious state survives the death of his body, but whether he "possesses a spirit that will endlessly exist in a state of consciousness." How a text which says that God can, and by implication affirms, as my brother admits, will, destroy the soul in the same sense that man can kill the body, can prove the endless existence of said soul is not easily seen. If the soul is immortal this text does not prove it; the most that can be claimed for it is that it shows a survival of the soul in death. If it can be shown elsewhere that the soul is immortal, then the literal sense of apollumi must here be set aside; but until this is done, by every law of language and exposition we are bound to read Mat. 10: 28, God "is able to utterly destroy, or kill, or slay, soul and body in gehenna"

The word psuche or soul occurs in various forms one hundred and five times in the New Testament Its most common sense is 'life.' Indeed, in the Scriptures to be the primary sense of both nephesh and psuche. Usually psuche means simply the natural life; but sometimes it means our future life. We discover where this is the case, not by any thing in the form of the word, but by the context and sense of the passage in which it occurs. In Mat. 10: 39 we read: "He that findeth his life (psuche, soul) shall lose it; and he that loseth his life (psuche, soul) for my sake, shall find it." This is a paradoxical expression, i. e., it contains an apparent contradiction arising from the same word (by its pronoun) bearing two distinct senses. The meaning is evident enough. He that saves this present life by apostasy shall lose eternal life; but he that is faithful even unto death, shall be rewarded with life eternal. So in Mat. 16: 25 we read: "Whosoever will save his life (Gr. soul) will lose it; and whosoever will lose his life (soul) for my sake, shall find it." (See Mk. 8: 35; Lk. 9: 24.) And that my paraphrase of these passages is correct is evident from Jno. 12: 25. "He that loveth his life shall lose it; but he that hateth his life (Gr. soul) in this world shall keep it unto life eternal."

Now the reader will observe that not only does psuche sometimes mean the future life, but it is employed by the Savior in that sense in the very discourse from which Mat. 10: 28 is quoted, and, more than that, in connection with a similar train of thought. I cannot quote at large, but the reader who will turn to the chapter will perceive that Christ is giving his disciples a commission, the faithful performance of which would imperil their lives. He warns them of persecution, but in v. 28 shows that persecution even unto death is not the worst event that can happen to one. He then shows them that there is no danger that they will fall unnoticed, or lie unforgotten; they will all be remembered and confessed before his Father, at his coming and the resurrection. (Mat. ch. 25.) Having thus encouraged his disciples he again warns them of persecution, and his discourse culminates in v. 39. Its allusion to v. 28 is unmistakable, and the conclusion that in each verse psuche refers to the future life is to my mind irresistible.

It is indisputable that in one sense or another every believer has two lives. He has natural life; and "he that believeth on me [Jesus] hath everlasting life." (Jno. 6: 47.) The first he holds in possession; the second is his by promise. For "this is the record, that God hath given us eternal life, and this LIFE IS IN HIS SON. He that hath the Son hath [the] life." (1 John 5: 9, 10.) i. e. we have not the eternal life absolutely, but by faith in the Being who contains and holds it for us. It will be given in actual possession at the resurrection; for "whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life; and I will RAISE HIM UP at the last day. (Jno. 6: 54), for "when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." (Col. 3: 4.)

Hence Jesus says: Fear not them that can kill your body, but cannot destroy your future life ["hid with Christ in God," Col. 3: 3]; but fear him who is able to utterly destroy both life and being in gehenna. That this view of Mat. 10: 28 is tenable, and that no other position is so, will I think appear more fully in the course of the debate.

As I have a little space I will inquire if my brother seriously believes that Adam was placed under a law with the death penalty attached, without understanding his own being, or the nature of the penalty, or what was involved in it? Also if the Digger Indians and Australian Aborigines are actually samples of the original masterpiece in the handiwork of God in the creation. I am familiar with the argument for the ignorance and simplicity of Adam and Eve, but supposed its use was confined to Rationalists, Darwinians, Spiritists, Restorationists and Universalists. Christians usually believe that man was made a little lower than the angels, a being fit to rule the sphere over which he was placed If it is true that God placed a child at the head of creation we need not wonder at what has ensued, and can easily imagine the origin of the proverb in Eccl. 10: 16, "Wo unto the, O land when thy king is a child." I feel no disposition to charge God with such foolishness.

Again, if all Scripture given by inspiration is profitable; and if the the things written aforetime were written for our learning, on what ground should we throw away the natural sense of one-half the Bible, as related to the subject under consideration, and take our ideas of man's nature and destiny from the Pharisees and from heathen philosophy, when we are everywhere exhorted to "search the Scriptures" and "beware" of the doctrines of men and demons? It is a sad thing for immaterialism that its peculiar phrases and characteristic terms and descriptions are only found in the works of uninspired men. They cannot be found in the Bible, and one must either give up the theory of "Bible names for Bible things," or cease to promulgate the unceasing conscious existence of the soul.

The New Restorationism.

In his new pamphlet on p. 15, Eld. Storr's says:—

"The present age or dispensation has been, and still is, the age in which God is gathering the seed of Abraham, of whom Christ is the 'first-fruits,' and preparing them for their work of blessing all nations and kindreds of the earth. This dispensation or age is not designed to witness the fulfillment of the promise and oath of God, but to prepare a people, freed from carnal and selfish designs, earnestly desiring, not only [illegible] God's promise and oath of G[illegible] Abraham carried out, but a lik[illegible] Moses 'that the earth shall be [illegible] with the glory of God.' This a[illegible] far from being the final one, [illegible] a preparatory one to prepare men and women for the great work of 'blessing all the families of the earth' in the ages to come."

If this doctrine be true, then, this dispensation is only designed to make preachers for the ages to come, in which they are to be employed in a great work—preaching to the world of mankind raised from the dead, ignorant and debased! Instead of there being a rest for the people of God, in the world to come, they are still to have an abundance of work to do!! They are to go forth to every part of the earth with a new gospel for the conversion and reformation of multitudes of the heathen, to be despised and rejected by thousands of them, and the message treated with contempt!!! The cares and responsibilites of a laborious mission, for ages to come, await those who shall come up out of great tribulation!!! It is said there is no peace to the wicked. But according to this view there will be none for the righteous for ages to come after their resurrection.

It is very positively stated that the promise and oath of God to Abraham cannot be fulfilled in this age, or dispensation. Let us see what Paul says, about it: "And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers—Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—God hath fulfilled the same unto their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second Psalm: Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." Acts. 13: 32–33.)

It is very evident from the showing that the new view and the apostle Paul are at issue right here: and, of course, all prudent and conservative Christians will take sides with Paul.

N. FIELD.

The Pope and Temporal Power.

Why does the Pope mingle in matters of State? He is at present the Demagogue of Christendom. If he had shown a tithe of the zeal for the liberties of mankind which he does for what he calls his own liberties, which, however, is in fact an iron spiritual tyranny, he would be a demagogue to whom history might pay the highest honour.

He is in a most unnatural position. A correspondent of the Standard from Rome, states that a Papal Encyclical directed against the installation of the Italian Parliament in Rome will shortly appear. This document is reported to be printed abroad, to make it appear that the Pope is deprived of the necessary liberty in Rome. 1 Peter 2. 17 seems directed against him, and all anti-magistrate calcongeners honor the king. The Bishop of Rome is taught to give honor to princes and potentates, Romans 13. 1, "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers." It was a sad omen that Peter's sword should cut off the ear of Malchus (St. John, 18. 10). Malchus signifies a king, or kingly authority. How the Scripture is fulfilled! 2 Thess. 2. 4, he hath lifted up himself above all that is called Agustus, i. e., above princes and potentates. Robert Grosthead, Bishop of Lincoln, called the Pope in a letter, "Heretic, Anti-Christ, sitting in the chair of Pestilence, and next to Lucifer himself." (Gul. Paris, Speed 630.) The ancient Romans painted pride with three crowns on her head. On the first was inscribed Transcendo, on the second Non obedio, on the third Perturbo. The modern Romans see all this this day acted by their Bishop. 1. He exalteth himself. 2. He does not obey law. 3. He throws all into confusion, being thus lawless, yokeless, masterless. The king of Italy has only to favor the gospel and the ministers of Christ's gospel, then the Pope's power will more and more decrase and decay.

Discussion.

Minutes of a discussion held at the Baptist Church, Money Creek, Minn., Oct. 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th, between Eld. E. F. Dickenson, F. W. Baptist, and Eld. E. T. Himes, Adventist.

"Resolved, That when man dies he remains in a state of unconsciousness until the resurrection.

ELD. HIMES' FIRST SPEECH.

His first argument was on the nature of man. Claimed him to be a material and mortal being, and quoted Gen. 2: 7; 3: 19; 1 Cor. 15: 45–49; Job. 14: 1,2; Ps. 39: 45; 103: 14-16; 144: 3, 4; 1 Pet. 1: 2–4. The Scripture testimony is that man is a mortal, perishing being. His days are said to be few,—as the grass, the flower blooming, while alive; and when dead, as the flower cut down, the withered grass, he returns to his dust. "Death is the total and permanent cessation of all the vital functions." (Web.) Man is mortal and must be unconscious in death.

ELD. DICKINSON'S FIRST SPEECH.

He objects to Eld. Himes' argument. The most of the Scripture quoted referred to the body, and not to the immaterial part of man. He presented the rational argument, believed it could be more easily comprehended, and of greater influence than the Scriptural. It teaches that man is a compound being, part of the earth, and part of the Spirit of God. Power of thought, consciousness of my existence is an evidence of the immaterial soul. Body continually changing, but the soul changes not. Thus, I know I am the same man I was years ago. Must be two natures in man; deny this and you make him a machine with no future life or hereafter.

ELD. HIMES' SECOND SPEECH.

He began by asking the question if "breath of life" in Gen. 2: 7, and Gen. 7; 21,did not mean the same thing. Did the beast that perished with man in the flood all possess immortal souls? We believe in a hereafter for man, and a glorious future may be obtained through Christ. Living men when they die know not anything. Eccl. 9: 5–10. They are in a state of unconsciousness when dead in sheol where there is no knowledge. Job, 3: 11–22, said if he had died in infancy he would have lain still, been quiet, slept at rest. In ch. 14 he says man remains in the sleep of death till he is awaked, when the heavens shall be no more. While asleep, his sons come to honor or are brought low but he being dead is unconscious of it.

ELD. DICKINSON'S SECOND SPEECH.

Job does not mean that he should be unconscious in death, or cease to exist, but intimates the outward shell or husk was to be shaken off when he would have no more concern for the things of this life. He did not endorse the absurdity that man was a beast, neither that the beast possessed an immaterial nature. However the latter position preferable of the two, he would welcome his faithful horse and dog in the spirit world. Memory, imagination, perception, and conception were of the immaterial nature. He asked, are these material, or the part breathed into man by God? Have these powers been given to be destroyed? He claimed materialism inconsistent with the doctrine of a future life. If it was true, a new soul must be responsible for the acts of one that had ceased to exist.

ELD. HIMES' THIRD SPEECH.

He said Br. D. had not met the point concerning the "breath of life" and immaterial beasts, and asked him to define his position. He objected to the interpretion that made Job intimate he was to shake off the shell or husk that enclosed the germ of life. Job did not ask, if a man put off this shell shall he keep on living, but shall he, the dead man, live again. Ps. 146: 3, 4. Claimed this as another testimony that the dead are unconscious, his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish. Claimed the the term soul or spirit to be generic terms, having specific meanings, but never meant an immortal soul in man.

ELD. DICKINSON'S THIRD SPEECH.

He said his opponent denied that the term soul and spirit ever referred to the immortal soul of man. The Hebrew nephesh was sometimes applied in an inferior sense to the animal, but was also applied to God as "my soul," and to the soul of man. Prov. 19: 2. It meant the thinking part. Another term, ruach, was used in the Bible to show existence separate from the body, also applied to God and angels. Gen. 6: 3; Ps. 104: 4. This was the use of the term as taught by the Jews who believed in God as an immaterial being, and in angels, and spirits. The soul of man is immaterial. When God created man he breathed into him the breath of life and then, poured his spirit into him. It is a gloomy thought that we must lie in the grave and sleep millions of years.

ELD. HIMES' FOURTH SPEECH.

He said that man was like the beast in the article of death, Eccl. 3: 18, and not while living, and said this was not his own assertion but the testimony of the Scriptures. Man has the hope of a resurrection from the grave. The length of time which the dead sleep is a blank to them. They take no note of time, and it is the same whether it be a moment or a million years. They are unconscious. Sleep was a symbol of death. Jesus said, Lazarus sleepeth; Lazarus is dead. (John 11: 14. Referred to the patriarchs and kings of Judah and Israel, who slept with their fathers; also 1 Kings 2: 10—David slept with his fathers and was buried. What was his hope? To awake in the likeness of his Lord. Ps. 17: 15. A thousand years afterwards Peter testified he was yet dead and in his sepulchre and had not ascended to heaven. Acts 2: 29–34. Did Jesus call Lazarus from the tomb, or from heaven?

ELD. DICKINSON'S FOURTH SPEECH.

He asserted though sleep was a state of unconsciousness, it did not follow that the dead were unconscious; there was a certain analogy between them; when dreaming man is conscious; therefore he would imply that the dead are conscious. The patriarchs were gathered to their fathers and it must have been in heaven as their graves were remote from each other. Eccl. 3: 21 teaches that the spirit of man goeth upward, and that of the beast downward. Job, 33: 4 says, the Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me understanding; and saith Paul, "in him we live and move and have our being. The soul of man is a part of God,—will God destroy any portion of himself? Man was made in the image of God; the beast was not. God breathed into man the breath of lives, animal life and spiritual life. Eccl. 12: 7. On this he would risk his eternal salvation. It teaches that while the body returns to the dust the spirit still survives and returns to God who gave it. He was free to admit that the terms immortal and undying soul were not found in the Scriptures, but Jesus favored the doctrine.

ELD. HIMES' FIFTH SPEECH.

He said in Eccl. 3: 21 the wise man asked a question which remains unanswered: Who knoweth? He admitted man has a spirit, but denied that it was immortal. Eccl. 12: 7 did not teach that the spirit was immortal; the whole chapter is a brief history of man from youth to old age, when he goes to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets. He claimed the same term here rendered spirit was rendered breath in Ps. 146: 4. His Br. had said that the soul was a part of God, who had said, all the wicked he will destroy. In so doing would he not necessarily destroy a portion of himself? What kind of a resurrection was he looking for,—of the spirit, or dead men? Is. 26: 19. Thy dead men shall live, with my dead body. Job ch. 14 said, All my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Paul said. I Cor. 15 This mortal shall put on immortality. He then read Ezk. ch. 37 as a picture of the resurrection. It was by the power of God man was raised and identity restored.

ELD. DICKINSON'S FIFTH SPEECH.

Death and resurrection did not mean annihilation. Could God annihilate man? Paul says the Ephesians were dead in trespasses and sins; did he mean they were annihilated? Hosea says, O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself. Was it common sense to say they were annihilated? Elijah prayed and the soul came into the child again. He then referred to Enoch and Elijah and asked if they were annihilated. Elijah afterward appeared with Moses who had died, on the mount of tranfiguration. Abraham was gathered to his fathers, and the same is said of all the patriarchs. My brother says this means sleep. Referred to 2 Cor. 12, where Paul was caught up to Paradise, and stated man could be in the body or out of the body. Phil. ch. 1. Paul's desire. Did he wish to become unconscious? I leave this without comment. The thief on the cross;—the Savior promised they should be together in paradise that day. Did Christ teach a lie,—that millions of years should first intervene? They both died the same day. Acts 2: 55. Why did Stephen utter that prayer if the function of body and soul both ceased. If Br. H's doctrine is true it is a gloomy one to a Christian.

ELD. HIMES' SIXTH SPEECH.

Death was a cessation of life; and when the Ephesians were dead in trespasses and sins all spiritual life or religion was extinct in them. When literally dead all natural life ceases. Definition is good in every sense in which the term may be used. I admit the soul came into the widow's child again, but it was not an immortal one. It was the nephesh, or life. In regard to Enoch and Elijah I see no point to reply to. We are discussing about the dead and not the living. Moses, for his disobedience, died on the mount, and God buried him. But my brother says he went to glory. Surely this was better than to have gone to Caanan. Christ says the scene on the mount of transfiguration was a vision. It has a significance. Christ represents the King of glory, Moses the resurrected saints, and Elias those who will be translated at the last day. Abraham could not be gathered to his fathers in heaven as they were idolaters, and, according to my brother's theology, went to the torment of hell at death. We teach Abraham was gathered to his fathers in sheol the universal grave. Cor. 1: 12 is another vision, so says Paul. The expression, In the body or out of the body, does not teach the existence of an immaterial spirit any more than 1 Cor. 5, when Paul was absent in body and present in spirit. Let us hold to the Scriptural use of these terms. Phil. 1. Paul makes three distinct statements. 1. To live is Christ. 2. To die is gain: that is, Christ will gain if he died a martyr at Rome, for he is to be magnified in Paul's body whether by life or by death. Between these he will make no choice but does choose a third thing —to depart and be with Christ, which is far better than to live a life of toil and die a martyr.

ELD. DICKINSON'S SIXTH SPEECH.

The transfiguration: there was no vision about it; they talked; it was a real vision. How did the disciples know it was Moses and Elias? There is no Scriptural sense of the terms, in the body and out of the body, we all know. According to my brother's theory Stephen's prayer was all in vain. Jesus says a spirit has not flesh and bones as he had, showing they were not material. John was overwhelmed when he saw the angel who claimed to be his fellow-servant. The parables of the Rich Man and Lazarus teaches the conscious state of the dead in happiness or misery. Heb. 12: 23 teaches that there are spirits of just men made perfect, and Rev. 14: 13 tells of the blessed dead that have died in the Lord, they rest from their labors and their works follow them. Rev. 6: 9. John sees the souls under the altar. Was it simply their breath he saw? Can you say man was a mere machine? This soul-sleeping and dirt philosophy as it is styled has earned its reputation. Their actions correspond, and it tends to corruption and sensuality. There are many good and moral men among them who have come from other sects bringing their piety with them, which they have retained in spite of their corrupting doctrine.

ELD. HIMES' FIVE MINUTES SPEECH.

Christ and the thief did not die the same day and consequently could not have gone to paradise together as has been claimed. The souls under the altar is another vision, representing the martyrs who have died for Jesus. These souls had blood, and were killed; therefore could not be immaterial Heb. 12: 23 must harmonize with Rev. 11: 40. None will be made perfect till the resurrection. The parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus sets forth the doctrine of the Pharisees, and was used by Christ when they had derided every other argument by which he sought to convince them of their sinfulness. He then showed them that their own traditions were against them.

We claim to have proved that the dead are unconscious, and that this has no tendency to corrupt or lessen our faith.

Resolved, that the future retribution of the finally impenitent will consist in banishment from God to suffer the eternal torment of remorse.

ELD. DICKINSON'S FIRST SPEECH.

He said evil leads to misery, and virtue to happiness: and the consciousness of the righteous and wicked in the future was taught by the Rich Man and Lazarus; both died, one carried to Abraham's bosom, and the other to torment. They are conscious or they carried on conversation. The flame was a symbol of the torment of remorse; no promise that it would ever end. 2 Pet. 2: 9 he said teaches the wicked are reserved to be punished; they will suffer in proportion to their works, some more than others. Luke 12: 4. The body may be killed but we cannot reach the soul. God will cast soul and body into hell. Mat. 16: 26. What profit is it if a man gain the world, and lose his own soul? Christ will deny those who are ashamed of him. They reap the reward they have earned—treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath. 2 Cor. 5: 10. All appear at the judgment seat of Christ. In the resurrection there will be an entire different body. Fire and brimstone are always used in a figurative sense. Conscience tells a man when he is right or wrong. It is this which survives in death,—eternal remorse for sin.

ELD. HIMES' FIRST SPEECH.

He said hades, where the scene of the Rich Man and Lazarus was laid, was not a place of punishment. In Is. 14: 9, Ezk. 32: 27, the dead are represented as acting and speaking; but the object is not to prove that they are conscious, or in a hell of torment. Jesus used the parable to illustrate the corrupt theology of the Pharisees; and at the same time condemned them by it, placing them in the very place they had prepared for the poor beggar. He asked why his brother made the parable part literal and part figurative. If men are punished at death, why are they reserved to the day of judgment to be punished? Are they called from their places in heaven and hell and after being judged sent back again? He claims that the soul is a part of God;—is God in punishing sinners, to eternally torment a part of himself? Soul in Luke 12 means life, and it is the future life or soul that man cannot destroy. The punishment of the sinner will take place in gehenna, when they will be destroyed.

ELD. DICKINSON'S SECOND SPEECH.

My opponent has much to say about hades and gehenna. Is he talking to a company of Greek scholars? I ask his authority that the original term for hell is hades in the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus? (Eld. H. I make the assertion without fear of successful contradiction.) I would like to know how the rich man could lift up his eyes in the grave? It was a literal transaction. Man is not brought to judgment to be judged, but for a public demonstration. If the sinner is destroyed, this does not annihilate him. Pride goeth before destruction;—does this mean pride goeth before annihilation? The wages of sin is death; the term death does not mean to annihilate. We speak of a dead body; but still it is in existence.

ELD. HIMES' SECOND SPEECH.

It seems to me Br. D. underrates the intelligence of the congregation in trying to prove to them that matter cannot be annihilated,—we make no such claim. Job. 21: 30 teaches that the wicked are reserved to the day of destruction and shall be brought forth to the day of wrath. Jesus says they shall come forth to a resurrection of damnation. They will then meet their end in unquenchable fire and be burned up like the chaff and tares. Life and death are opposite in their signification. Ps. 21: 4, we have a definition of life: length of days forever and ever. As death is the opposite, life will be forfeited when the wages of sin are inflicted.

ELD. DICKINSON'S THIRD SPEECH.

If the reward to Christians mean a continued existence then there is not much encouragement. If death means an unconscious state then Paul would say: "Ye are unconscious, but your life is hid with Christ in God. The Ephesians were dead in trespasses and sins but they were not annihilated. 1 Thes. Punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of God;—does everlasting mean the twinkling of an eye? Why does he not define his position and tell us what is to be the punishment of the sinner. Will he give us the meaning of Gehenna, hades, and sheol There are to be degrees in punishment; some beaten with few stripes and others with many; but the punishment would be alike if the penalty is annihilation, and there can be no suffering. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of a living God.

ELD. HIMES' THIRD SPEECH.

Hades or sheol is a term representing the state of the dead in which they are unconscious, Eccl. 9: 10. The dead are in hades, whether on the mountain top, the depths of the valley, or on the cross between sky and earth. Gehenna, a term applied to a valley near Jerusalem where was deposited the filth of the city, together with the carcasses of beasts and bodies of criminals which were destroyed by the fire and worms. Our Savior uses this term to describe the final and complete destruction of the ungodly. We think we have defined our position; but much that B.. D. says about annihilation does not touch our position. We do not claim that matter is annihilated. The penalty of sin is death. No trouble in harmonizing degrees with this position as the suffering may be more or less intense while dying. The things done in the body are recognized at the judgment as being either good or evil,—no variety or grades. Will it not be just to return the sinner to that condition he was in before he came into this life? This he receives in the second death.

ELD. DICKINSON'S FOURTH SPEECH.

Gehenna as used by Jesus represented a place of torment and everlasting punishment. We do not teach a literal burning hell of fire and brimstone. My brother claims to believe in it. There are a variety of figurative expressions used to denote torment: cut asunder, weeping, wailing, gnashing of teeth, outer darkness. My opponent says the punishment is death or annihilation; but that some may suffer more than others. Then we conclude some will burn easier than others; and they must be sinning all the time they are punished. Literal fire may consume but not annihilate.

ELD. HIMES' FOURTH SPEECH.

I believe in a literal lake of fire, but not in the old orthordox view of endless torment which was once preached. The church of to-day have drifted away from their former theological moorings, and say little on the subject, only as they spiritualize it. In 2 Pet 3 we read of literal fire, unless we interpret the flood to have been spiritual water. The heavens are to pass away, the earth melt, and the works therein to be burned up, all in connection with the day of judgment, and perdition or destruction of the ungodly. Will this not be literal, fire, and is not gehenna a fit symbol to represent such a scene? My brother thinks it denotes torment, but I find it to be a place of destruction. Life becomes extinct in gehenna. In Ps. 7 we read that snares, fire and brimstone and an horrible tempest will be the portion of the wicked; and in Mal. 4 it is said they shall be burned up root and branch.

ELD. DICKINSON'S FIFTH SPEECH.

If man is a material being he cannot be annihilated; but my opponent has many ways for the sinner to come to this end. Now a fire goes before God to make way before him, next the sinner is burned to ashes, then we have a rain storm of fire and brimstone, then he is placed in a fiery oven, next cast into unquenchable fire, and finally into a lake of fire;—why does he not have sense to interpret these scriptures. I believe in the literal flood, and a literal fire at the end of the world. In regard to torment we read of the man that was delivered to the tormentors till he should pay all that was due; if the debt is not paid; he is tormented still. Rev. 14: 10 teaches the wine of God's wrath and torment in figurative language—but a literal punishment. The fate of the sinner is the same as that of the fallen angels, Rev. 20: 10 they are cast into the lake of fire and tormented day and night forever and ever. These terms indicate that the punishment will be eternal in duration.

ELD. HIMES' FIFTH SPEECH.

Terms, forever and ever, everlasting, etc., are sometimes used in a limited senses; the length of time they indicate being determined by the connection. Rev. 14: 10 refers to the Papal power and those associated with it that worship the beast: no reference to the punishment of the sinner at the judgment day. Rev. 20: 10, the term forever and ever is literally, ages of ages. The second death is the result of being cast into the lake of fire. An unquenchable fire is one that cannot be quenched. The fire, that destroyed Sodom was unquenchable, but it is not now burning. The fire at the last day will be unquenchable, and its work will be to consume and destroy—not to preserve. My brother admits this will be literal fire, but does not clear up the point as to what becomes of the wicked who are exposed to it. We can annihilate the form of matter. If a man is burned to ashes he is annihilated though the material that composed him exists in other forms.

ELD. DICKINSON'S SIXTH SPEECH.

I prove by Mat. 25: 41 that the fate of fallen angels and the impenitent is the same: "Depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels." Br. H. says unquenchable fire is one that can not be put out, but will burn up the sinner like chaff. Mat. 4: 25-26 teaches there is no release from the prison till the uttermost farthing is paid. Mat. 25: 46. Eternal as applied to the righteous, and everlasting to the wicked signify the same duration. The punishment is unending. I will risk my cause on this single verse. The tendency of the doctrine of annihilation is bad. According to it the ungodly are brought from their graves to be launched into eternal nonexistence. It involves God as a material being and the service rendered him by man low and groveling. Those who believe this doctrine seek to disseminate it by giving away their books and tracts, and by every other means in their power, where ever they go. We claim it to be an error.

ELD. HIMES' SIXTH SPEECH.

Eld. D. claims it has been his policy to reserve his strongest arguments till the last;—does he consider the impeachment of the Christian character of those who believe the doctrine I am defending as his strongest argument? He claims our doctrine is degrading in its tendency, yet he argues the soul is a part of God, and consequently God will torment a part of himself eternally. Does he endorse this? He has not yet explained why men are sent to hell when they die and then afterwards brought to judgment. He cannot prove from the Bible that man or the devil are immortal, or that sin is eternal. Evil has but one right and that is, not to exist. I close with the same passage my brother used. Mat. 25: 46. The punishment I admit and claim is eternal, but what is its nature? Is it torment or misery? No, it is death! Sin benumbs the conscience, so that the greatest sinner would suffer the least while the man of few sins would endure the most, his conscience being more tender: this is the conclusion from my brother's position. A God of love has provided a way by which the sinner will come to his end, and evil cease; after which, he that sits upon the throne will hear every voice in heaven and earth saying. Blessing, glory and honor, without one discordant sound in all the universe.

ELD. DICKINSON'S FIVE-MINUTE SPEECH.

I impeach the doctrine, not those who believe it. It is degenerating, lowering, and contrary to virtue. The soul proceeded from God, but is then separate from him; therefore no part of him. The conscience will not be affected by sin in the future world as it is in this. Everlasting punishment means suffering. How did evil ever come into existence if it has no right to be?

Correspondence.

From D. S. Clark, Arbor Hill, Iowa.

I left home the first day of December to meet my appointment in Iowa. Went to Rutland and stopped with the church and preached for them on Sunday. Left that night for Springfield. When I arrived there I found that I could not do much for the cause in the short time I could stop with the friends, so with a promise to come back as soon as I could to hold a protracted meeting, I left for Br. Scott's in Hancock Co., where I preached for them seven times with good results. Br. Hurd is preaching one half of the time to this church. They like him much. He and the church have invited me to come and help them hold a meeting of days to commence sometime about the middle of January. The field is all ripe, ready for a harvest. May the Lord give them one is my prayer. The time came for us to leave for Iowa. On Thursday morning Br. Scott took me to the cars, and I reached my appointment Saturday evening and found a house full. We have had very full houses thus far. On Monday evening two requested prayers, and last evening five more. We are having a blessed time. Pray for us.

From J. W. Elliot, Miller Co. Mo.

I need quite a number of tracts to distribute in this country. They never heard an Adventist until I came. I have given away a good many, and still want more. They are doing good work. One family, thirteen in number, have read the truth. The father was a Baptist deacon. Some of the wickedest people in this country have been converted. I intend to hold a protracted meeting next May in the grove. Sr. Prescott has promised to help me. I wish you would come when you go to Arkansas again. I have faith to believe a church could be organized of a goodly number.

I have preached most of the time since I came here, and I trust have sown some seed that will bring forth fruit to the glory of God. I feel weak and alone; but nevertheless I have consecrated myself to God, and by his grace will press on in the path of duty until he comes and calls me to give an account of my stewardship. Pray for me that I may hold out faithful to the end.

Once more I knock at the mission door for tracts. Shall I get them?

[Yes, we have sent them. Ed.]

From E. H. Burington, Genoa, Ill.

Several months ago I was invited by the church at Geneva to become their their pastor. After due prayer and deliberation I felt it was the will of my heavenly Father that I should move to this place. Four weeks have elapsed since I became a partner with them in all their joys and sorrows, and during this time we have been permitted to enjoy some precious seasons. Our preaching meetings are well attended, and a spirit of liberty and activity seems constant. Our weekly prayer meeting is a source of great joy. The church during the last few months has been passing through a deep trial. We hope she will keep a firm hold on Christ the great Captain of her salvation, who is able to still the worst of tempests, and bring them out fairer than ever before. Pray for us.

I shall have some time to spend in new fields and with churches that have expressed a desire for me to assist in protracted efforts with them during the winter. My Post Office address is, GENOA. DeKalb Co. Ill.

A BROTHER in another church in a neighboring city has the following remarks in a private letter, which we cannot withhold from our readers, though we will give no names. He says:

I think I see in our church lately what has never been exhibited before, a growing respect, if not belief by some, in the Advent faith. In our Bible class there seems no disposition to prevent my introducing the subject of the coming of the Master, or the future of the lost, if the lesson we are studying seems to warrant its introduction. We had the passage under consideration a short time ago—"These shall go away into everlasting punishment." Our superintendent asked our teacher how his "Advent brethren" could possibly answer that statement of Jesus. The response from the one inquired of, was that he thought "it would not hurt them to answer it, as they were not afraid of anything in the Bible." I then took occasion to say that they would answer it by accepting it literally. And then I gave, briefly, yet comprehensively, a review of what Adventists believed. Every ear was open and the most careful attention was given as I warmed up with the opportunity that must be improved. It seemed as if there was an inspiration given me for the occasion, as I attended to Paul's interpretation of everlasting punishment, the wages of sin, the similes used to describe the death of the sinner, the justice of God displayed in his destruction,—not in his eternal misery and continued sinfulness—and the claim this doctrine has upon any one who studies the Bible to know what it teaches, and who are willing to lay aside prejudice and previous conceptions of truth when they find the word of God against them. The doctrine as laid down could not be contradicted; and although our pastor was present yet he could only say that while there are many passages evidently that would seem to the casual observer to indicate such an end to the sinners, yet that doctrine "would evidently lead to some form of materialism, and so away from God," etc., etc.

From E. B. Scott, Hesperia, Mich.

At half past ten last Sunday Eld. T. C. Grundy preached in the hall at Hesperia to an interested congregation, from Rom. 1: 16. He gave a straightforward gospel sermon; after which we went a few rods from the hall to White River, where I led Br. Grundy and his wife down into the water and buried them in the likeness of Christ's death. It was a precious season. In the evening Br. G. preached to us again from 1 Pet. 5: 8-10. At the close twenty-four sat down together to the Lord's table. Praise God.

From H. B. Sevey, Maine.

It may be of interest to your readers to hear of the cause in this State. I can report prosperity. For a few months we have held meetings nearly every week, and have been very much blessed of our heavenly Father. We have found his promise to be true—"Where two are agreed as touching any thing they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father who is in heaven." Bless his name! In Kingfield, Vienna, West Gardiner, Litchfield, Wayne and other places wanderers have returned and sinners have been converted to God. All praise to him who has called us to virtue and glory.

The church is waking up to newness of life, making a full consecration to God and his cause. I am satisfied as a body we are not where we ought to be to glorify God, not believing his promises; especially these promises of asking of our Father the things he has promised. Jesus says, "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." Yes; "herein is my Father glorified; that ye bear much fruit." Our God is not as other gods. He is the living God, a present help in time of trouble; beareth our infirmities, pardons our sins, bears our sickness, and is soon coming to give us immortality. We will praise him forever!

From Saml. F. Anderson, Arkansas.

This is the first time I have raised my pen to write to you. I am a missionary Baptist, but a subscriber to your valuable paper. It is the paper for me. I have been a regular subscriber to The Baptist at Memphis; but like your paper best. It comes regularly every week, and I never stop until I read it through, and then I loan it to my friends. It is gaining the day here, Many are receiving light. I think I shall be able soon to send you some new subscribers.

I have gained more knowledge since I have been reading THE TIMES than ever before.

From S. A. Chaplin, Kosciusko, Co. Ind.

I am endeavoring to work in the vineyard while the day lasts. The signs of the times, and movements among the nations, point ominously to the Lord's soon coming. The times demand earnest spiritual preaching; and the solemn duty of every minister of Christ is, to "hold forth the word of life" to a perishing world. When this course is taken our labor is not in vain. Churches are built up, brethren and sisters are edified, and sinners converted to God. Though Millennarian in some of my views, I have always felt like acting with my Advent brethren who dissent from me and others in these opinions. It seems to me that, as we are living in a dispensation designed to "take out a people from the gentiles," to bear the "Divine name," and "partake of the Divine nature," it is a matter of more importance to preach to the gentiles "what they must do to be saved," than to distract and divide churches about what God proposes to do with "Judah," "Israel," and "remnants of the nations," in the "coming age." I have been trying to present "the coming of the Lord,"—"life and immortality through God's dear Son,"—and the need of a preparation for the "everlasting kingdom," to my congregations of late. The result has been good. Last Lord's-day evening four young men came forward, and owned Jesus for their Lord and Savior; and on the next day were buried by baptism for the remission of sins, and, as I trust, were "raised up to walk in newness of life."

I am led to estimate preaching by its fruits. Doctrines, that build up, unite, and comfort the church, while at the same time impressing the minds of those out of Christ, and bringing them to repent of sin, believe on Jesus Christ, and obey the gospel, are certainly the doctrines most needed in these "perlious times." True, with Millennarians in this country, and in Europe, I look for a "coming age," intervening between their gospel times and the ages to come after it; when God shall make all things new. I look for a very literal fulfillment of the prophetic word. And with the devoted, spiritual literalists I believe that we must be comformed to the Divine image of the Son of God, and enjoy the earnest of the Spirit, in order to wear the crown of glory. When we anticipate sharing in the honors of the "church of the first born," who are the children of God, the "sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty," and as such a "heavenly family," and many brethren, Christ being the first born, it becomes us to carefully inquire whether we have the Spirit of Christ; for otherwise "we are none of his." To become "equal to the angels" in nature, will demand a like holiness of disposition. What a "blessed hope" is ours. To be afraid that the day is coming when all on earth shall be holy; when sickness and sorrow, pain and death shall no more be known; when the "glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth;" and to be assured that we may live forever in the enjoyment of the blessedness, honor, and ceaseless pleasures of the world to come;—is enough to enlist us in all our powers and faculties, in his service. Let us follow the things that make for peace, consecrate ourselves wholly to God, and prepare to meet him. And may we at last be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless. Love to all the brethren scattered abroad. May God bless them alone, in church, and in Conference.

[Br. Chaplin has ever been a true yoke fellow. We hope he will be called into large fields of usefulness. We wish he would use his pen more freely. Ed.]

Our Book and Tract Column

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 60c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PA[illegible] THEOLOGY; or, The [illegible] Future Punishment, as taught [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

IN[illegible]MONY to The Truth [illegible] work, containing one hundred and [illegible] prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1; postage, 16c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin, Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—64 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—30 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—46 pp. Restitution—86 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,500 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single, $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on most important subjects in the Bible, to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1, leather $1 5.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Resurrection, Reign of Christ, Millennium, Final Restit. etc. By Wellcome and Good. 400 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL: What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is It? 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c, post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 40c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—35c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 35c

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor Cloth $1.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 120 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 217 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wandell. 48 pp. 10c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 18 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 60 a dozen.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By F. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.

The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.

A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.

The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.

The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.

Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.

[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]

Revelation 20 5c.

The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.

Evangels of the Coming One. 8c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 25.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $20 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $6 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable. Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Jan. 9, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a year. One Dollar for six months.

☞ The TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" the personal reign and the saints' inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The W. A. C. P. Association is composed of ministers in good standing in the various Conferences, and delegates from churches composing the same, meeting at least once each year for the choice of officers and the transaction of other business. The officers are a Board of Trustees as follows:

Joshua V. Himes, PRESIDENT; Wm. Sheldon, VICE PRESIDENT; D. R. Mansfield, TREASURER; O. S. Knapp, AUDITOR; Wm. L. Himes, SECRETARY; F. Burr, O. R. Fassett, and A. S. Calkins, PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

Joshua V. Himes, Business Agent,

To whom all communications should be addressed.

That Reaper.

Will not the ministry call the attention of farmers to the fine chance we offer them to obtain a good Reaper at a low price? Help us sell this machine, and you will help the cause in so doing.

Wanted.

We will be obliged to any one who will give us the following P. O. Addresses.

W. R. Howe, Kansas; E. P. Burdett, formerly of Hancock Co. Ill. tf

Send for Circular.

The Stafford Manufacturing Co., of 66 Fulton St., New York, manufacture a variety of sundry articles. We have seen a specimen of their key rings. Very neat and ingenious. They also supply stencil tools, etc., etc. Send for a circular. 1t

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

Our Debt—Pledges.

Some months since we made a proposition for pledges to the amount of the interest-bearing debt of the Association. There have been some responses, and not a few have paid in money for the special purpose of lightening that load. The amount of the debt is now reduced to about $600. There are pledges to the amount of $135, to be paid whenever this amount is subscribed. Only $465 more will rid us of this load. Shall we have it? Some urge that the pledges are not the best way. Perhaps not. Yet those who loaned their money prefer to receive it back in as large sums as possible. Hence if the amount is pledged, and then all paid in about the same time, it will be more convenient. But our friends can please themselves, and give outright, as they choose. The amount needed is a little more than we had hoped, owing to there being more interest due than we had reckoned. The case stands thus:

Amount of debt, Jan. 1, '72	$600
Pledges due	135

Shall we close the account the present month? Why not?

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawver, M. B. Geer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Hink, I. C. Wellcome, J. F. Huber, Grand St. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. H. Brown, M F Wistrom, R. W. Wilson.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand-raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $135. See advertisement.

Pledges.

The undersigned agree to pay the sums affixed to their names, toward paying the debt of the Western Association (about $1,000) whenever the full amount of the debt shall have been pledged.

H Hubbard, $5,00; S Pike (pd), 10,00; B P Betts, $5; Thos Davidson, 5,00; O E Merrill, 5,00; H W Norville, 5,00; F A Childs, 25,00 (pd); Jas P Morse, 1,00; A C Huston, 1,00; A Brother, 5,00; A Brother, 100,00; A Friend of THE TIMES, 25,00; G Shurtleff, 5,00; R Holder, 2 50; J F Huber, 5,00; R Mann, 5,00; Mary L Hunt (pd), 5,00; L S Conner, 1; E Cheney, 5,00; O N. $3; S Nye, $25; Cascade (Iowa) church, $10 00; L. H. Ferrell (pd.) $10,00; R. Visser, 1,00; H. M. Jones, 5 00; J. Lowry, 5,00; R. H Evans, 2,00; R. W. Wilson (pd), 25,00; L. S. Palmer, 5,00; D. D. Reed (pd), 2,00; H Zader (pd), 2,00; R. H. Evans (pd), 2,00; L. Tuttle, (pd), 50c; D. C. Corwin (pd), 1,00; D. A. Dickinson, (pd), 1 00; C. S. Hall, 10,00; A Friend (pd), 1,00; A Edwards (pd), 1 00; E Kennedy (pd), "Amicus" 10 00

It does seem to us that this list of pledges does not grow as fast as it should. We are doing something toward extinguishing our debt, but not enough. Seven more "hundreds" would wipe it out. Many are doing nobly. Will not others respond soon.

Fifty Cents Extra.

F S Ainsworth

To Correspondents.

W. K. BATES. You are correct. See change.

New Press.

L A Gilpin $2 25; J. Lowrie, 5 00.

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged......$449.94

John Wescott	$ 50	Mrs G Stephenson	$ 50
Mrs J Keys	2 00	Mary Lathrop	1 00
E Hays	1 00	M Smith	10 00
Z D Drake	1 00	J Shaw	1 00
A Sister	40	M N Kent	5 00
L Lake	15

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, JAN. 6.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

W H McDonald J H Frost J S St John N W Wait J Lowrie M N Kent D S Barson A D Hindman J G Massey A Wilber S M Holcomb L Kimball J K Hawkins J C Shaw H M Butters J P Esleman W C Harwell N McCue C P Wheeler W Davis W A Miller R B Williams A F Digger H Pepple W E Storms E B Goff K W Macomber L C McKinstry J P Russell J Mitchell W Quigley W Gorges J Harrington J Powell T B Boyce L A Gilpin J C Weltner A E Rathbun H F Hill J W Burroughs H Seller N O Moore S Morrett M R Miles L P Philbrook W W Spann H Spotswood M Smith L H Collins X Y Z I C Wellcome T B Applegate J Shaw V Bissel J C Maloy W S Fuller I Adrian G E Okerlind W K Bates M E Osterhout J Bower S P Hindley 4 K Gibson J Stinson S Grosjean E B Holmes M Stevens J H Stannard J W Weltner W H Safford D F Scamman J Keys M Lathrop H A Plank S V Haycraft F McWilliams J Buss K Marsh E S Pennell M A Allen E Hays R Bolles L Hiscox T E Corliss P A Thomas V Huckins N M Connor M Darling S Rynet A C Newell J Warren J W Cowles O D Eastman C A Stewart L B Robinson P H Wait A M Hodgdon S Marsh H Hall I Carpenter L A Gilpin L Smith W M Wells L Munger M B Geer E J Harden D T Trask S Overturf L Nichols F A DeWolf J Hewett L C McKinstry J G Rogers H J Manson E Kennedy W Nichols F Burr C N Marcellus M B Hubble E H Burlington B J Fillmore R B Clark W A Allen J Oliver H G McCulloch G W Miller J Massey W H Mosely T W Richards G C Stephenson G W Lawson J M Dettra S C Wellcome L A Junk J Dresser A McCowan J Meehan J H Long E J Hayden A Edwards C L Douglass F Burr S Doolittle J Smith S West S Thayer I E Andrus H Noyes R G Barnum F H Burbank R L Paul T J Williams T Bradley T Allen M A Tibbetts R M Lampard J Pine S M Wellings J G Bush H Cone G W Green A B Johnson L Lake L Z Lotspeich A Northrup J Loocks E C Deming E Chase F S Ainsworth D W Bonk G A Streeter J B Giddings J A Hooker F C Walrod S E Pearl W Morphy J Day.

Books and Tracts by Mail.

E Tuttle
J H Whitmore
P W Hough
J Wescott
L C Conner
C F Anderson
E S Levi
C L Blackman
F W Haskell
H McDonald
R Libby
D A Bradley
H Zader
A M B Graham
J Rouch
E W Huson (6)
S Balger (3)
L C Palmer (3)
J W Elliott (3)
D D Lind
A Armour
C H Ramer
H Aelty
E B Romes
S Baldwin
F S Ainsworth
A Wilber
L A Gilpin
P S Boice
G W Green
J H Whitmore
J K Hawkins
W C Harwell
D S Barson
N O Moore
A Davis
V Peppell
L A Gilpin
J W Burroughs
J Mitchell
A W Wait
D T Trask
J Massey
L Smith
J Ober
J Bower
E Pillsbury
A McMiller
W Nichols
M B Hubbell
H Seller
E Kennedy
C A Stewart

Book Notices, Etc.

The Standard was undoubtedly one of the heaviest losers by the Chicago fire. We are glad to learn that the Baptists are rallying to put it upon its feet again. They cannot spare it, and we should be sorry to miss it from our table. Church & Goodman are the Publishers, and their office is now at 12 Harmen Court, Chicago.

That Prince of Braggarts and Blasphemers has sent us a little sheet published by himself called the Train Ligue. It would be better called the Train Lie. It amounts to nothing. Train's party consists of one person, himself. Numbers go to hear his lectures, in some places, just as they would go to see a five legged calf, or a clown, to be amused. He is of no consequence.

Obituary.

WOOD. At our prairie home, in Clark, Merrick Co. Neb., Dec. 22, Susan Jane, daughter of Zenas and Amelia Wood: aged 5 years, and 3 months.

We have been visited with a very sore bereavement But a kind loving Father doeth all things right. Pray for us that we may have grace, and that our sorrow be sanctified to our good. Z. W.

HINTON. Fell asleep in Jesus, on Thursday, Dec. 21, Sr. Matilda Hinton: aged 30 years.

Sr. Hinton and her husband were both converted ten years ago this winter, and "planted," through the ice, in Tamarac Lake, "in the likeness of Christ's death," so as to be "in the likeness of his resurrection." She now rests in this hope, and her companion is comforted, looking for Jesus soon to come and wake his sleeping ones. I spoke words of cheer on the occasion from Rev. 14: 13. JOHN BOWEN.

CORLISS. In Clitherall, Otter Tail Co. Minn., Nov. 16, 1871, Wm. M. Corliss: aged 25 years.

He leaves a beloved wife and one child, with numerous relatives and friends to mourn the sad event; but they are comforted with the hope that he will arise in the likeness of Christ at his coming. He was a devoted Christian the last five years of his life.

T. E. CORLISS.

HAMILTON. In Barns, Wis., Nov. 28, 1871, Aggie J., only child of C. C. & J. E. Hamilton: aged 1 year, and 20 days.

The friends were instructed from Holy Writ that all die in Adam, and that all will be made alive by Christ; and children not having sinned against him, will be saved. S. W. THURBER.

Rest, darling Aggie! Rest!
Sleep thy long, silent sleep!
Bright angels guard thee, cherub,
Oh! then why do we weep?

No grief hath ever marked
Thy pure and lovely brow,
Gone, in thy angel innocence,
It ne'er can touch thee now.

Then, mourners, dry your tears!
Look to that God above!
Who doth not willingly afflict
The creatures of his love.

J. N. W.

WINANS. Another veteran soldier in the active service of the Master has fallen. Br. Winans, familiarly known as Father Winans, died at his residence near New Rutland, Ill. Dec. 26, 1871. He embraced the Advent faith in the State of New York (if I mistake not), under the labors of Br. Geo. Barnham, some eighteen years ago, and became identified with those that were looking for the Lord of life and glory, to return to earth and establish his glorious reign.

Some fifteen years ago he removed to this State, not to hide his light, but to let it shine. When Br. Br. A. S. Calkins commenced to labor in this neighborhood he found a pilgrim's home at Br. Winan's house, and a ready worker and warm sympathiser.

He falls asleep in Jesus at the age of about seventy-three years; but not to slumber long in the dust. He leaves a widow infirm in health, to mourn his loss, but has hope in the coming of Jesus and the resurrection. He also leaves a large family of children (all adults) to miss a father's counsel and prayers. May the Lord sustain the widow and bless the children.

The funeral services were attended by the writer at the Advent chapel in New Rutland, where a large and sympathizing congregation showed their respect for the deceased. WM. MCCULLOCH.

Crisis please copy.

Marriages.

IRELAND—GOODHUE. In Grant, Iowa, Nov. 28, 1871, by Eld. C. C. Ramsey, Mr. Sylvanus P. Ireland, of Charles City, and Miss Maria C. Goodhue, of Grant.

MILLER—BUSS. In Millersburg, Minn., Dec. 27, by Eld. Geo W. Miller, his son, Geo. A. Miller, and Mrs. A. M. Buss, both of Millersburg.

"The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her so that he shall have no need of spoil. She will do him good, and not evil, all the days of her life."

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

Having closed my labors at my trade for the season, I am ready to attend to calls to hold meetings abroad. Brethren wishing my labors, who feel that the interest is such as will sustain a meeting, can address me at Leslie, Ingham Co. Mich. C. FOX.

Notice.

Churches, or individuals, desiring my services as an instructor in vocal music, or as a Minister, are hereby informed that I am now at liberty to travel, and give lessons in music, or preach, as may be desired.

Please address, G. W. GREEN, Box 16, Memphis, Clark Co., Indiana.

Who Are They?

Do any of the brethren, East or West, know anything about "Rev. David Wyatt and wife." Since my return from Pittsburgh, they presented themselves (Dec. 19) to Br. and Sr. Cooley, 61 Webster St. Allegheny, Pa. as "Home Missionaries," alledging that they "engaged in a revival with me at Rutland, Vt." Now, my memory is not apt to be treacherous, but I have no recollection of them; do not know, and doubt if I ever saw them. If anybody does know, and they are all right, let them be commended, and if they are all wrong, let them be exposed. G. W. STETSON.

Notice.

The 1st anniversary of the organization of the Advent Christian church at Arena. We propose (the Lord willing) to hold a general meeting of days on the above occasion, Jan. 26. We cordially invite our brethren to meet with us and work for the Lord. Eld. Adrian and other preaching brethren will be present to assist. Come with a zeal to labor for the perishing.

GEO. THOMSON.

Notice.

The Semi-Annual Meeting of the Woman's Christian Association will, by invitation, be held at Charlestown, Mass., commencing on the evening of Jan. 17th, 1872, to continue over the following Sabbath. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of Christ and his cause. We hope to see a goodly number from abroad. E. S. JENNINGS, Pres.

R. E. CHILDS, Sec'y.

The Markets.

CHICAGO, Sat. eve., Jan'y 6th, 1872.

Gold—1.08¾ to 1.09¼.

Flour—Dull; no call for high grades. Only small demand for low: White Winters, $8.00 to $8.25.. Spring Extras, $6.00 to $6.50. Superfines, $4.00 to 4.50.

Wheat—No. 1, Spring, 1.26. New No. 2, 1.22 to 1.23.

Rye—No. 2, 67½@68.

Barley—Good inquiry for No. 2, at 63½@63¾. No. 3, in small request at 50 cts.

Oats—In light demand on speculative acct. No. 2, 32½@32¾, cash.

Potatoes—Dull: choice peach blow, at 90 to 95. V. T., in small lots from store, 1.10 to 1.20.

Butter—in choice roll, 20@22, with good demand; low grades of packed, no call for.

Eggs—Scarce. Great demand. Fresh, 32@35: pickled 25@27.

Cheese—Fine Western, 14@16 cts.

Live Hogs—4.25 to 4.75.

Dressed Hogs—5.00@5 10.

Fruits—Apples, scarce: 4.00 to 5.00 for choice.

Vegetables—Onions, 70 cents.

General Remarks—The market for the past week has been rather dull on account of the Holidays, but we look forward to better trade during the ensuing week.

Appointments.

CONFERENCE REGISTER.

Hoosick Valley Conference, Q. M. Hebron, N. Y. Jan. 17-21.

Women's Christian Association, Semi-annual meeting, Charlestown, Mass. Jan. 17-24.

New Hampshire Q. M. and dedication, Hampton, Jan. 10-14.

Minnesota, Winona District, Q. M. at Winona, Jan. 10.

Minnesota, Annual. Jan. 10-14, 1872.

Western District, Wis. Q. M. Brunswick, Eau Claire Co. Feb. 1-4.

Illinois, Annual Meeting, Rochelle, Ogle Co., Jan. 18.

Iowa A. C. C. Q. M., Manchester, Feb. 22-25

Indiana, Northern District, Big Indian, Jan. 18-21.

INDIANA.

Holton, and vicinity, as Br. Cass may arrange, Jan. 18-20, G. W. GREEN.

The third Q. M. of the Northern District of Indiana A. C. C. will be held at Big Indian, six miles N. E. of Royal Center, on the Chicago and Cincinnati R. R., commencing Jan. 18, and holding over Sunday.

A cordial invitation is extended to all.

E. C. ANDRUS, Sec'y.

ILLINOIS.

Hadley Station, Pike Co. Friday Eve. Jan. 26, and over Sunday. Subject: Man as he was, is, and shall be. J. G. BUSH.

Rochelle, Ogle Co., Sabbath, Jan. 7, and part of the next week, if desired.

Amboy, Lee Co., Sabbath, Jan. 14.

Foreston, Ogle Co., Jan. 15, 16, eve., as Br. Geer may arrange.

Elida, Winnebago Co., Jan. 17-20, as Br. Spotswood may arrange. C. C. MARSTON.

The Northern Ill. A. C. Conference will hold their next annual session at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Thursday, Jan. 18, 1872. The ministers and delegates of the several churches are earnestly requested to be present.

S. B. MABEY, Sec'y. N. W. SPENCER, Pres't.

IOWA.

The second Q. M. of the A. C. C. of Manchester District commences Thursday, Feb 22, with the Elk Valley church, at the Otisville S. H. continuing over the Sabbath.

This is comparatively a new field. Let every lover of Jesus and his cause be there. Come, brethren, laden with the Spirit of Jesus, praying in the Holy Ghost. Come, to work for God and his cause. M. J. JANES, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

Black River Falls, Eve. Jan. 29.
Wrightsville, as Br. Chase may arrange, Jan. 30.
Augusta, Shaven's S. H. Jan. 31.
P. W. HOUGH.

The Second Q. M., in the Western district of Wisconsin will be held with the church in Brunswick, Eau Clare Co. Feb. 1, and over Lord's day. Let us have a grand rally of warm hearts, with sweet words for each other, and noble testimonies for Jesus. Come the first day.

P. W. HOUGH.

MINNESOTA.

The tenth Annual Meeting of the A. C. Conference of Minnesota will be held at Winona, Wednesday to Sunday, Jan 10-14, 1872, in the chapel, corner of Broadway and Winona St.

The new chapel will be dedicated on Saturday, Jan. 13, at ten o'clock, a.m.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Arrangements have been made for the sale of excursion tickets on the Winona and St. Peter R. R. from Owotonna and Winona Junction. Tickets will be sold ONLY on Wednesday, Jan. 10, but will be good to use during the week, and to return Monday, Jan. 15. If there are any friends at other stations that desire excursion tickets, let them notify me at once.

EDWIN T. HIMES, Sec'y.

The Fourth Q. M. of the Winona District will be held in the Advent Chapel in Winona in connection with the Annual Conference, commencing Jan. 10. It is hoped that there will be a general attendance. Let there be delegates from every church and all others that can attend. The Lord is at hand. S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.

Crisis please copy.

NEW YORK.

Regular meetings are held by church at 126 West 24th St., New York city: three times on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings.

T. J. COX.

Albany, Sunday, Jan. 14. E. S. JENNINGS.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Charlestown Jan. 17, and onward.

The remainder of my time on this trip East is engaged. E. S. JENNINGS.

Advertisements.

VICK'S
FLORAL GUIDE
For 1872.

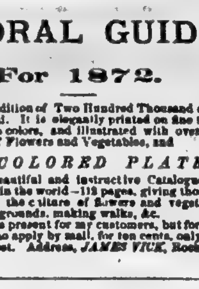
The First Edition of Two Hundred Thousand copies just published. It is elegantly printed on fine tinted paper, in two colors, and illustrated with over 300 engravings of Flowers and Vegetables, and

TWO COLORED PLATES.

The most beautiful and instructive Catalogue and Floral Guide in the world—112 pages, giving thorough directions for the culture of flowers and vegetables, ornamenting grounds, making walks, &c.

A Christmas present for my customers, but forwarded to any who apply by mail, for ten cents, only one-quarter the cost. Address, JAMES VICK, Rochester, New York.

WAIT'S



TURBINE WATER WHEEL
HUDSON RIVER CHAMPION

A WORD TO MILL MEN.

I have been building the Jonval Turbine for the past eight years. Have built some seven or eight different kinds of wheels. Am acquainted with nearly all the first class wheels in the country, and am fully persuaded that the Champion stands alone without a rival. Early I discovered that the tangential and centrifugal forces of the water, exerted a tremendous power which is expended against the outer rims of those wheels, which discharge vertically and against the scrolls and curbs of most other kinds, which is lost to all useful effect.

For a long time I studied and experimented carefully, to bring this wasted power into use without injuring the other high qualities of the Wheels.

My efforts have been crowned with success, and I can now offer you a Turbine which can compete successfully with all others in the economical use of the water, while for simplicity of construction, strength and durability, it is the champion of the world.

It has no complication of gates, with their multitude of Levers: no cranks, pin, segments no pinions to get out of order. No series of leaky joints: no rubbing surface to wear away, to waste the water: nothing touches the wheel but water; hence it will never wear out. There is no latteral motion, nor do their steps wear out like other wheels.

The Jonval Turbine has given the highest percentage of power ever attained in any public test. Several of these Jonvals have been taken out which were in perfect order (having run but a short time), and the Champion placed in the same curbs, venting the same amount of water, and have obtained from six to eight per cent. more power in every instance than the Jonvals gave.

These wheels are perfectly proof against injury from flood-wood. Should any pieces get into the curb which could not pass through the wheel, you have simply to open a door (like a safe or cupboard), enter the curb, and remove the obstruction, and it is all ready for work again. This can be done in five minutes.

They are now in operation in every section of the country, giving unbounded satisfaction and taking the places of all other wheels. The extreme low price for which they are sold astonishes everybody.

Circulars sent free. Address

P. H. WAIT, Sandy Hill, N. Y.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

FREE. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee Keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage. H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.

This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

THRESHING MACHINE.

FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $600. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $350. Warranted as represented. N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure. (tf) Address, A. J. STONE, Hesperia, Mich.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS.

Do you want an agency, local or travelling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new 7 strand White Wire Clothes Lines? They last forever: sample free, so there is no risk. Address at once Hudson River Wire Works cor. Water St. and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. [814-tjan23

THE CLOW REAPER.

This celebrated piece of farm machinery, by Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., was tested with sixteen other Reapers at Ripon, Wis., in July, 1870, and received the highest encomiums of them all. The standard of perfection for quality of work was forty. The Clow Reaper was marked forty, or perfect by the committee. The other machines ranged from 38½ down to 21½. This machine is specially admirable for its light draught—which saves horseflesh; it can be drawn all day by a pair of light horses. For its simplicity—which decreases liability to breakage or derangement. It has only one hundred pieces, where other machines have three times that number. For the arrangement for lowering and raising the cutters. For the facilities for turning and backing. It can be used as a mower as well as a reaper. No cog-wheels are used to drive the sickle. It has had fewer accidents from breakage than any other machine.

USUAL PRICE, $160.00;

but the machine presented to THE TIMES office will be

SOLD FOR ONE HUNDRED & TWENTY DOLLARS!

If taken soon.

For any further information, address:

J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich.

Our Book and Tract Column

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 16c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 40c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $5, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 3. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 2 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sold to one address, post-paid, for $1 25.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $15 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.---NO. 25. BUCHANAN, JANUARY 16, 1872. WHOLE NO. 405.

LIBRARY
COPY

Contents.

Sectarianism; "Sore!" An Incident; Personal; Poetry; The Discussion; Registered Letters; Please do Not; Conversion; Notice—Illinois, S. B Mabey; Capture of Babylon; Spiritualism, R. A. Gresham....193
Advent—poetry; The Cry of Materialism, Thos Davidson; Review of Jacob Blain's Pamphlet, No. 1, N. Field; Faith, J. D. Jones; Stand by the Old Book, G. Thomson.194
Much in Little, Wm. E. Orr; Immaterialism and Progression, S S. Brewer; Christian Baptism; The Flaw Hunters....195
Brief Editorials; Only One Article; Editor's Journal....196
A Discussion between Elds. Braden and Himes....197
Letters from California, A.; California Paradise, O. R. Fassett....198
Historical Extracts, John Brown; Letters and Extracts....199
Business Agent's Department; Book Notices; Obituaries; Marriages; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements; Book and Tract Column....200

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - MICHIGAN

Tuesday Afternoon, Jan. 16, 1872.

SECTARIANISM.

This word has shades of meaning. It may mean simply a disciple of any school of thought, or it may mean an obstinate bigot. It is the religous demagogue's catch word, with which he manufactures cheap capital and attracts equally cheap sympathy to himself for his failure to crowd his pet notions upon the public. Those who deal most in the term are apt to be best exponents of its meaning. One need not sign the Nicene or any other other creed to be a sectarian. He can carry his creed in his head, and not a soul comprehend or be able to comprehend it but himself, and be as great a bigot or sectary as the most dogmatic adherent of a popular creed. It is not one's denominational relations that make him sectarian or otherwise, but his spirit, or the temper of his mind. Dogmatism is dogmatism whether directed against party names or for them; whether manifested in behalf of the decrees of a council, or the chimeras of an individual brain. Indeed the most offensive sectarianism in the world is that of personal conceit.

"SORE!"

The California Christian Advocate had a difficulty that is proverbial for making one "cross." Hear it:

Rev. "Elder" Grant is to be here during the present month. It will be remembered that he was a model minister, abounding in fraternal regards for all Christians. He stated again and again that he did not wish to organize any "Advent Church." He only desired to labor with other Christians for the conversion of sinners. Such policy secured a fraternal recognition on the part of many ministers who utterly repudiated his peculiar doctrines. He gained access to Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian pulpits; and to the co-operation of such pastors was he indebted for whatever degree of success attended his labors. And yet, before leaving the city, he had laid his plans for gathering his proselytes into a separate fold. He promised them a pastor of his own kind, and the continual oversight of himself. But this did not at all surprise us; we predicted as much when he first arrived. Such strategic movements are neither new nor novel. When the "Elder" arrives again, orthodox ministers will know how to regard his promises. Those who discard the doctrine of the soul's immortality, who believe in the annihilation of the wicked, in a material heaven, in which Christ shall rule as king, and who anticipate the final end of the world before the year 1875, will extend to him a cordial welcome. Such preachers, no doubt, will receive the Elder into their pulpits.

—Now this is not all just; for Eld. Grant publicly advised his converts to join the Methodist or other churches, and made no movement, whatever, for an Advent society. Fortunately, however, others did so. And there are more to be organized. The Advocate's spirit is simply an appeal to prejudice, to hinder in that way a cause it cannot put down by fair arguments.

AN INCIDENT.

I attended a week-day noon prayer-meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association of this city, a short time since. The conductor of the meeting had for the burden of his interjections—"Think of the necessity we are under to work for the salvation of our immortal souls;"—perhaps the least offensive way of stating the heathen dogma; the urging to piety being commendable in a proper and impressive line. But from these repeated text-words the people assembled took their cue, and the assumed immortality of man by nature, and the eternal torment of the unbelieving, were dwelt upon with a vengeance of warning that was fully Calvinistic. A young man of the party who inadvertently prayed, after the Scripture pattern, that all present might sincerely seek for honor, glory, and immortality, was followed by an aged deacon who made the atmosphere fairly blue with "the flames of a hell that should never cease to burn the souls of the impenitent," and who three times in his not lengthy prayer spoke of "the worm that should never die, but feed forever and ever upon the sinner, who could never, never forget his crimes or receive the pardon of an angry God." The Young Men's Christian Association of San Francisco is orthodox.—Crisis.

PERSONAL.

It is known to many of our readers that the responsibility of the care of the office, and supervision of the work there falls upon me. For more than two months past I have labored under disadvantages and trials such as I hope never to pass through again. I was just working out into daylight again, when (Jan. 12), I received a request from Edwin, at Winona, Minn., to come to him. His case is critical, and I must leave.

This will necessarily involve a delay in some of our work, especially the Almanac. I deeply regret this. The circumstances attending this delay have been beyond our control, and duty seems to demand a still further delay at this time. Some of the work must be neglected until my return. Father is away, but I cannot wait for his return. Pray for us.

W. L. H.

POETRY.

We are about to touch a tender point. We trust none will be offended. We are always glad to receive really choice lines, either original or selected. Some we have never found room to publish have done us good personally. Some have felt slighted that their poetic effusions have not appeared. Very few have the talent to write really good poetry, and we have a great deal on hand, more than we can use, unless we devote an undue portion of our space to such matter. Hence somebodies' lines must be left out. Let none be offended. Try something in plain prose. A good heartfelt letter is worth a dozen average poems.

THE DISCUSSION.

We shall not have time to elaborate every train of thought that may be suggested in our discussion with Eld. Braden—perhaps not even to refer to all that may be suggested. We hope our brethren ready with the pen will not be slow to use it in putting down ideas that may be suggested. We do not mean that they shall review our own or Eld. Braden's article, but write independently upon topics suggested by either of us. Let us have more light, and all the light.

REGISTERED LETTERS.

We wish to say again to our patrons that "Registered Letters" are no safer than any other kind, and the postage is fitteeen ents additional. If you cannot get a postal order, send in an ordinary letter. It is just as safe. The government does not make good the amount lost! And many of them are lost.

There has been a great deal of "bosh" uttered upon this subject.

PLFASE DO NOT.

Please do not write with a lead pencil, on business, nor for publicatio... It is an imposition on the editor, his clerks and compositors. After passing through the mails, letters written in pencil are sometimes almost illegible.

CONVERSION.

A brother writes from Syracuse, N. Y., as follows:

I was born and nurtured in the Roman Catholic church, and it was ingrafted into my mind to pray to the saints as mediators; and as it is forbidden to read the Bible without permission, I had never read the Holy Scriptures. But through the reading of an article my eyes were opened upon that point, and I was led to investigate. I clung to the Romanists for many years, but did not lose the ground I had gained. By the grace of God my eyes were at last opened and I became free from the unbelief and superstition of that church. I have not joined any denomination. I could not agree with their doctrine, and hence could not subscribe to them. I did not believe in universal salvation; nor could I go with those who deny the divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, and his atonement. But I have joined the church built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, of whom Jesus Christ is the chief corner stone. And not long ago through the kindness of a sister, I read your paper, and I agree with the doctrine contained therein, and am delighted to see those doctrines advocated. I was born in Holland, and have never taken lessons in English, but I try to make my meaning plain, and hope you will understand me.

M. Pierranda.

Notice—Illinois.

Brethren of the Northern Illinois Conference of Advent Christians: take notice of the time and place of the next Annual Session to be held this week. It is an important meeting, especially to the ministry and delegates of the various churches—the only one of the kind for the year. All the ministry of the entire State are invited to attend. Let every member be present if possible. Let not anything hinder you from coming, and be at the first of the meeting, as, doubtless, important topics will be presented, and that which is vital to the interest of the cause.

Come with hearts filled with the love of God ready to work for the perishing. No time now for reposing and rest of the body, and we hope it may by the blessing God continue to until Jesus comes.

The Secretaries of the quarterly conference are requested to prepare all business to come before the meeting.

S. B. Mabey, Sec'y.

Capture of Babylon.

Withdrawing the most part of his army from the vacinity of the city, and and leaving behind him only certain corps of observation, Cyrus marched away up the course of the Euphrates for a certain distance, and then proceeded to make vigorous use of the spade. His soldiers could now appreciate the value of the experience which they had gained by dispersing the Gyndes, and perceive that the summer and autumn of the preceding year had not been wasted. They dug a channel or channels from the, by Euphrates means of which a great portion of its water could be drawn off; and hoped in this way to render the natural course of the river fordable. When all was prepared, Cyrus determined to wait for the arrival of a certain festival, during which the whole population were wont to engage in drinking and revelling, and then silently in the dead of night to turn the water of the river and make his attack. All fell out as he hoped and wished. The festival was held with even greater pomp and splendor than usual; for Belshazzar with the natural insolence of youth, to mark his contempt of the besieging army, abandoned himself wholly to the delights of the season, and himself entertained a thousand lords in his palace. Elsewhere the rest of the population was occupied in feasting and dancing. Drunken riot and loud excitement held possession of the town; the siege was forgotten; ordinary precautions were neglected. Following the example of their king, the Babylonians gave themselves up for the night to orgies in which religious frenzy and drunken excess formed a strange and revolting medley. Meanwhile, outside the city, in silence and darkness, the Persians watched at the two points where the Euphrates entered and left the walls. Anxiously they noted the gradual sinking of the water in the river-bed; still more anxiously they watched to see if those within the wallswould observe the suspicious circumstance andsound an alarm through the town. Should such an alarm be given all their labours would be lost. If, when they entered the river-bed, they found the river-walls manned, and the river-gates fast locked, they would be indeed "caught in a trap." Enfiladed on both sides by an enemy whom they could neither seenor reach they would be overwhelmed and destroyed by his missiles before they could succeed in making their escape. But, as they watched, no sound of alarm reached them—only a confused noise of revel and riot, which showed that the unhappy townsmen were quite unconscious of the approach of danger.

At last shadowy forms began toemerge from the obscurity of the deep river-bed, and on the landing-places opposite the river-gates scattered clusters of men grew into solid columns—the undefended gate-ways were seized—a war shout was raised—the alarm was taken and spread —and swift runners started off to "show the King of Babylon that his city was taken at one end." In the darkness and confusion of the night, a terrible massacre ensued. The drunken revellers could make no resistance. The king, paralysed with fear at the awful hand-writing upon the wall which too late had warned him of his peril, could do nothing even to check the progress of the assailants, who carried all before them everywhere. Bursting into the palace, a band of Persians made their way to the presence of the monarch, and slew him on the scene of his impious revelry. Other bands carried fire and sword through the town. When morning came, Cyrus found himself undisputed master of the city, which, if it had not despised his efforts, might with the greatest ease have baffled them."

Spiritualism.

The so-called Spiritualism of the 19th century is one and the same thing as that spoken of in the Scriptures of truth as sorcery, witchcraft, soothsaying, necromancy; and, in other words, to signify the adversary of truth in that form. As proof, we refer to a few o the many passages in the inspired word relating to that abominable form of evil by evil-doers. Ex. 22: 18. "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." Ex. 7: 11–14; Deut. 18: 9–15; Josh. 13: 22; 1 Sam. 28: 3. "And Saul had put away those that had familiar spirits, and the wizards out of the land." 1 Sam 15: 23. "For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft." 2 Kings 21: 1–8. "He wrought much wickedness in the sight of the Lord." Lev. 19: 31. "Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards to be defiled by them." Lev. 20: 6. A curse is pronounced against those that associate with those who have familiar spirits, and with wizards. Lev. 20: 27. "A man or woman that hath a familiar spirit, or that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death; they shall be stoned with stones: their blood shall be upon them." 2 Kings 23: 24. Wizards and those of familiar spirits put away by Josiah. 2 Kings 9: 22, we read of Jezebel and her witchcrafts. 2 Chron. 33: 1–14. Manasseh did evil in the sight of the Lord. He observed times, and used enchantments; and used witchcraft; and dealt with familiar spirits, and with wizards." Is. 2: 2; 8: 19–20. Familiar spirits and wizards "peep and mutter," etc. Is. 19: 32; 47: 9–12; 57: 1–6; Jer. 27: 9–12; Dan. 2: 1–8. The sorcerers and pretended wise men could not tell the dream of Nebuchadnezzar. Dan. 2: 27, 28; 5: 5–13; Micah 5: 12. "And I will cut off witchcraft out of thine hand; and thou shalt have no more sooth-sayers. Nahum 3: 1–7—Condemnation of witchcraft. Mat. 3: 5—a swift witness against sorcerers, etc. Acts, 8: 9–18—read carefully of a sorcerer converted by Philip. Acts, 16: 16–25—Paul stopped a young woman from sooth-saying, and the rabble caused him to be cast into prison, and by the power of God he was released from his chains. Gal. 5: 20—Witchcraft one of the works of the flesh. Rev. 9: 21—of sorceries; Rev. 21: 8—sorcerers to suffer the second death. Rev. 22: 15—Sorcerers classed with murderers, idolaters, and whomsoever loveth and maketh a lie.

Let the inspired writers be believed by all means, even if thereby every wizard, witch, sorcerer, necromancer, or so called spiritualist, be proven to be an abominable deceiver. All persons who teach that man in this life has within him an immortal, never-dying soul, or any thinking part that retains its thinking functions after the body is dead is, if not in fact a spiritualist and sorceror, at least an aider and abetter of that abominable evil known as spiritualism, or sorcery, or witchcraft. They (those who so teach) are making the record of God of no effect by assisting to promulgate the false theory which we find in the false pleading of the evil one when he tempted Eve to eat of the forbidden fruit. He (that evil one in the form of a serpent) said to Eve—"Thou shalt not die," after the great God had said "Thou shalt die." The preachers in these days tell us when a man has died that he is in reality not dead, but that his immortal soul has gone to heaven or to a place of constant pain and torture. They, the preachers, ignorantly contradict the scriptures of truth.

R. A. Gresham.

Advent.

O quickly come, dread Judge of all;
For, awful though thine advent be,
All shadows from the truth will fall,
And falsehood die, in sight of thee:
O quickly come; for doubt and fear,
Like clouds, dissolve when thou art near.

O quickly come, true Life of all;
For death is mighty all around;
On every home its shadows fall,
On every heart his mark is found:
O quickly come: for grief and pain
Can never cloud thy glorious reign.

O quickly come, sure Light of all,
For gloomy night broods o'er our way;
And weakly souls begin to fall
With weary watching for the day:
O quickly come; for round thy throne
No eye is blind, no night is known.

—Pacific (Episcopal) Churchman.

Communications.

The Cry of Materialism.

Can any satisfactory reason be assigned why our orthodox friends who differ from us on a strictly Bible subject, should so frequently leave the strictly Bible testimony, and carry their appeal to other and less satisfactory tribunals?

Surely from no quarter whatever can evidence on any Bible subject be produced so forcible and convincing as from the Bible itself, and if it fails squarely to sustain any theory, that theory, though venerable with age, and hoary with antiquity, should without a moment's hesitation be abandoned, however heavy the sacrifice, or severe the trial which the abandonment involves.

We who believe that sin and misery are as certain to come to an end in God's own time and way, as that the morning's dawn chases away night's darkness, should have been much more successful in making this glorious truth apparent to our fellows, if any friends who differ from us had consented to fight the battle upon a strictly Scriptural arend; not that we would undervalue whatever is true in philosophy or science, but remembering how much of both past generations believed to be true which subsequent investigation proved to be false, our supreme confidence of course rests upon the Bible alone; and what the Bible reveals concerning the nature and destiny of man all true science and all true philosophy confirm.

There is however an almost universal desire among men to push any undertaking in which they may embark to a successful issue; and this feeling had doubtless its influence among the leaders of orthodox religious opinion who are assail in no measured terms the constantly and rapidly increasing numbers of thoughtful men who contend that unending torment and eternal evil though almost universally believed, are nevertheless unknown to the Scriptures, and instead of being a part of God's revelation are wholly man's invention; and what more natural than that the opponents of this new and dangerous heresy, as it is frequently called, finding their appeal to Scripture far less satisfactory than they had anticipated should seek to prevent the heresy from spreading, by using popular prejudice against it, although the thoughtful onlooker might shrewdly suspect that this was a virtual acknowledgement that reason and Scripture had no decided testimony to offer in support of the fondly cherished orthodox dogma. Hence the cry of materialism which has been raised in perhaps every community where Satan's falsehood in Eden ("Thou shalt not surely die") has been detected; and what if like some other epithets hurled at random against us by our orthodox friends, though somewhat formidable at a distance, it should become not only harmless, but of positive advantage to the cause it was intended to injure? What if materialism though intended as a bug-bear to frighten the unthinking, should become when surveyed by an unprejudiced eye a real substantial Scriptural inheritance, even that prepared by God for those who love him, as much superior to the thin misty ethereal fancies of orthodoxy as substance is to shadow, or as something is to nothing?

Certain it is that materialism is the result of God's creative power; for the wisest of purposes he called it into being, and himself pronounced it "very good;" and although Gnostics of old having drunk deeply at the foundation of Platonic philosophy associated with it all that was low and gross and sensual, and Gnostics of to-day entertain the same opinion as their ancient brethren, it is we may rest assured very good still, and seeing that it is the handy work of our heavenly Father we cannot help, even at the risk of offending our Gnostic brethren, heartily admiring it; and certainly not the least admirable element in it is its substantial materiality;

But why do honorable opponents in the face of those facts continue to employ this silly cry of materialism in dealing with men whose errors (if errors they are) could be far more effectually exposed by an appeal to the law and testimony? Is it simply that ignorant prejudice may be aroused, and the minds of the unthinking prevented from calmly weighing the Scriptural reasons to which we appeal in support of our faith? The cry falling upon the ears of thinking men would amount to little, for then thoughtfulness itself would induce them to seek a better reason than this for condemnation; but then the majority of men do not think, and even the most unthinking know that the infidel who committed such atrocities in the French revolution at the close of the eighteen century were materialists, and therefore conclude that the men who bear that name now, must agree in character with those who bore it then, without stopping to inquire whether there may not be a radical difference between a Scriptural and an infidel materialist.

The French materialist taught that death was an eternal sleep, that for neither saint nor sinner was there any future life whatever, that all men went down to death as hopelessly as "the beasts that perish," and laughed to scorn as a priestly delusion, the hope "of a resurrection from the dead." The Christian materialist on the contrary believes most firmly in an after life, to be brought about by a resurrection from the dead in the case of those "who are asleep," and in the case of those who "are alive and remain," by a change from mortal to immortal, from corruptible to incorruptible; and of all thus raised and changed, the Savior's words to the Sadducees will be then applicable: "Neither can they die any more." He further believes that our planet, redeemed from the effects of the curse and renewed by the creative energy of God's Spirit, will form the eternal home of a deathless race who shall be alike free from hunger and thirst, from sorrow and sickness, from disease and death, forever and ever; and over whose joyous heads no old age shall ever gather, but who when centuries of millenniums shall have passed over them shall be young and vigorous as when the first dawn of eternal day burst in glory upon them. Is there no difference between such a destiny and the gloomy and cheerless prospect which French infidelity presented? Assuredly the difference between light and darkness, summer and winter, life and death, is not more marked and distinct.

May we not then fairly request our orthodox friends, when dealing in future with what they consider error in us, to make their appeal more exclusively to the Scriptures of truth and less frequently to the prejudices of the ignorant, feeling assured that whatever is true or false in them or us will be best revealed in the light of truth? If saints are to live for centuries, or forever, as shadowy unsubstantial spirits or ghosts, in some indefinable region "beyond the bounds of time and space;" or if sinners are to suffer the indescribable tortures of gehenna fire forever; if Satan, the arch-rebel against God's authority, and myriads whom he has deceived are to live in blasphemous rebellion and hate unceasingly, and possess an immortality as lasting as Jehovah; if evil, the foul thing which God loathes and hates, is not only to exist as a hideous deformity in the universe of a God who is almighty and is at the same time pure and holy, but daily to increase in horrible loathsomeness and wickedness as the days of eternity march on; if the universe is never to be cleansed from the foul impurity of sin; if Satan and his rebellious host who have defied the Almighty are to be permitted to live and defy him forever; if sin and sinners are to possess an equal immortality with God and his saints;—if these are truths of revelation, revelation will undoubtly sustain them, and we stand prepared reverently to accept its dictum. But in the event of revelation refusing its assent to doctrines so terrible, no less authority, much less silly charges of materialism, or any other ism, can be expected to establish them.

I am the more anxious for their own sakes to confine our friends in this controversy to the Bible, for I am convinced that its testimony is very plain and emphatic in pronouncing the doom of sinners and the destiny of evil, whether connected with lost men or fallen angels; and the prospect which it spreads out before me of the utter extermination from all God's dominions of every vestige of evil, Satanic, angelic, or human, enables me to look forward with boundless satisfaction to the good time coming when every enemy being destroyed God shall be all in all; and then may we expect earth's redemption to be celebrated by a song at least as glorious as that which greeted its creation when "the angels sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy."

THOS. DAVIDSON.

Review of Jacob Blain's Pamphlet. No 1.

The venerable Jacob Blain, has published a new pamphlet, for the avowed purpose of vindicating God's government. The title of the pamphlet is, Hope for our Race, which being interpreted means that ninety-nine of every hundred of the human family will be saved! This is a very liberal estimate; and will doubtless be very satisfactory to the race. Just convince the world that a man has ninety-nine chances to be saved and only one to be lost, and they will, in all probability conclude, that Eld. Blain might as well have thrown in that other chance for good count!

The pamphlet in question, is a very remarkable production, and indicates the fact, that its author is in a transition state, unsettled, and unreliable as a teacher of the Christian religion. It is but a few years since he was most decidedly opposed to what is called the "Age-to-come" doctrine. He regarded it as demoralizing and destructive in its tendencies. It has been but a short time since he could find no authority whatever for the restoration of fleshly Israel. Now he can see it as clear as a sunbeam! The Bible is full of it. He has even discoursed that the ten tribes are still alive and in captivity!!! But in what corner of the globe they are stored away this deponent saith not.

He is evidently a latitudinarian. He wants plenty of sea-room; hence, he never would identify himself with the Adventists, prefering to have his membership in a nominal Baptist church three thousand miles from home! Still, however, he has claimed all the rights and privileges of regular ministerial co-operants at Conference meetings and elsewhere. He has traveled among them, lodged with them, enjoyed their hospitality, sold books to them, received pecuniary aid from them, and to all intents and purposes, depended on them for aid and comfort, and not on his Baptist brethren. His membership in H. H. Dobney's irregular Baptist church, on the other side of the Atlantic, could be of no benefit to him, except so far as it enabled him to sail under false colors.

His principles of exegesis are Universalism. He takes the ground that the words death, destruction, everlasting destruction, perish, consume, cut off, burned up, etc., mean temporal judgments. He says "the threatening in Ps. 37, may be explained in the same way." Again, he says: "When Christ comes he will slay the living wicked in some way, and they are, at some period, to have a resurrection and an offer of mercy; and that 2 Thes. 1: 7–10, cannot be quoted as proof of final destruction, as everlasting may only mean "lasting!"

If these words and phrases are to be thus construed, it is difficult to see how he can prove that one in a hundred will be lost; for the words expressive of their punishment, are no stronger than those which he says mean only temporal judgments.

He is very much concerned about the heathen,—feels very sorry for them, and for the large majority in Christendom, who "come into the world with minds so weak and passions so strong that the gospel has little or no effect on them." And in view of the fact that God could have ordered things otherwise he therefore concludes "that there must be hope in some way for those to whom God, though able, has not sent the gospel." If, then, God could have ordered things otherwise, and could, if he had been disposed, have sent the gospel to the heathen and kept it among them for the last eighteen centuries, and for some reason has not done it, what right has he to affirm that he will raise them from the dead and then send it to them? Is there any positive evidence that God will do any more for the heathen, and the majority of Christendon in the future, than he has done for them in the past? Not a particle. The assumption that he will, rests entirely in mere inference.

N. FIELD.

Faith.

Faith seems to me to be the corner stone in a Christians belief. Beyond the present life we know nothing. All is dark, vague and uncertain unless we permit the light of faith in the Bible and its teachings to illumine it. By the eye of faith we can look beyond the narrow confines of the grave to another world, void of pain, sorrow and death.

By the eye of faith we can read what God's will is concerning us, and by the aid of faith we can attempt to do that will. Without faith we know nothing of God and are in no respect better off than the atheist. I know there are some who, knowing [?] that they are posessed of an immortal entity can see beyond this life to a spirit life, without calling to their aid the light of faith. But not belonging to that far-seeing class I am obliged to accept faith as my assistant. The importance of faith is beautifully set forth in the Heb 11. But for all it is so important, is it being seized upon by the mass of human beings? It is sad to say, no, but one must. And more than this they must confess that pure whole-souled faith in the Bible and in God's promises is on the wane. It is getting to be decidedly unfashionable to believe that the Bible is what it is represented to be,—the message of God to man,—or to believe that Jesus Christ will come a second time upon earth and that to reign. Such simple faith in God's word is looked upon as an evidence of a weak mind or of a superstitious nature.

The Bible is dealt out in fashionable pulpits as a work of man, a mere suggestion of thought for a discourse, not as the word of God. Not only among those professing to be Christians, but also in the world outside of the church, is the respect and veneration of the Bible being done away. Why, we live in such a glorious free country that our rulers having their ideas of liberty considerably expounded, deem it unjust that God should be allowed to speak through the Bible to the children in our schools. No matter if they are so surrounded outside of school that the word of God may never reach their ears, it will not do to let God speak to them in school for fear that they might be led to repent, believe and serve God.

In olden times little children were forbidden to come into the presence of Jesus. Now Jesus is forbidden to come into the presence of little children

Infidelity is on the increase, and true Christianity on the decrease. Now all this, true and deplorable as it is, need be a source of wonder to none who are looking for the coming of Jesus. It is only confirmative of the many other things that portend Christ's kingdom at hand. We are plainly told by Paul in (1 Tim. 4:1) "that the spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." Again in 2. Thes. 2: 2: that "that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, "and Jesus asks in Lk. 18: 8: "When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith upon the earth?"

This lack of faith in God on the part of the many has its important suggestions to the few who still cling to the Bible and its promises. It warns us of the external pressure in the way of unpopularity that is soon sorely to tempt us to flee from the Bible and its plain statements to the side of those who disbelieve it. It gives us time to prepare for the conflict between pride and duty; and we have this comforting assurance that the days of this severe trial shall be shortened. Let us stand for the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. For what if some did [do] not believe, shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? (Rom 3: 3.) Never. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised. (Heb. 10:23.)

Paul speaks from the sacred leaves of the Bible; Watch ye; quit you like men; be strong. (Cor.16:13.) Above all taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. (Eph.6:16.) Your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men but in the power of God. (Cor.11: 5.) "The just shall live by faith." (Rom 1: 17.) May God help us all to withstand the tendency to relinquish faith in God for man's speculation, and may Jesus soon come to make us immortal and give us rest in Paradise.

J. D. JONES.

Stand by the Old Book.

"Although my whole life has been spent in the study of the Scriptures, I am not competent to investigate them."—H. W. BEECHER.

The above sentiment, uttered by the great leader of orthodoxy, in a recent sermon, is well calculated to awaken serious reflections. The phraseology of the sentence, of course, shows the incompetency of the speaker, (which is no doubt true), but the evident design of the author of the sentiment, was, to saddle the incompetency on the Scripture, which amounts virtually to a charge that the Scriptures have failed in being a revelation of the divine will.

Is this charge true? Has God mocked the intelligence of his own creatures by giving a law and a gospel which is beyond their comprehension? Did our Savior trifle with, and mock the finite conceptions of his people when he commanded them to "search the Scriptures?" Was Paul mistaken when he testified of the Scriptures which Timothy had known from a child, that they were able to make him wise unto salvation? And furthermore, with H. W. B.'s conception of the Scriptures would the great apostle ever have blundered into the following statement, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." If Paul's estimate of the Scriptures was correct, H. W, B.'s is clearly incorrect. If the Scriptures are "profitable" in the various branches of theology mentioned by Paul, then are they competent in each and all of those branches. If the estimate placed upon the Divine Oracles by Beecher and others, be true, then the Bible ceases to be a reliable book. I would not dare to preach from it, if Paul did not regard it as a revelation of the divine will. I could not confide in it as a guide. As soon would I launch out into the broad ocean with a defective compass whose needle might, or might not, point to the north, as venture on the ocean of life, bound to the haven of eternity, with the Bible as a chart and compass, if it is not a clear revelation of the divine will. But, thank God, the good Old Book is not a book of riddles and enigmas, as men would make it appear by their attempts to reconcile its teachings with their fable and heathen dogmas. Remove from its sacred pages the mantle of human perversions, and all is plain and harmonious. No, the incompetency is not in the book, but in the man. It is not at all to be wondered at, that a man who fails to recognize the doctrine of Christ's literal second coming to this earth should be incompetent to "investigate" or understand the Bible. I can pick out a score or more of intelligent men, within the range of my own knowledge, in this western country who were driven into infidelity by just such expositions of the Bible, but who, on hearing it set forth in its literal beauty, without any constructions, embraced it joyfully, and cheerfully submitted to its discipline. The above statement was made in connection with an admission that the science of geology contradicted the Bible, when taken in its literal sense in its record of creation. It is true, as he asserts, that "the rocks have told their story," but they have spoken through the mouths of finite men. But it is not true, that "they have proven their story true." The computation of dates, and duration of periods in geology are absolutely arbitrary; and nothing less than a thousand years actual experiment and observation can make valid the assumed facts of geology. When those assumed facts are demonstrated to be actual facts, then it will be time enough to invalidate the truthfulness of Sacred history, or attempt to reconcile it, by other than a literal interpretation. Till then, let us stand by the Old Book.

GEO. THOMSON.

Much In Little.

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong!" (1 Cor. 16: 13.)

The old but true saying "much in little," came very forcibly to mind while reading the above exhortation of the apostle Paul to his Corinthian brethren, and if it was applicable to them 1800 years ago, is it not doubly so to the professed followers of Christ in these last days? A great deal is implied in the first sentence, "Watch ye." Not only are we to watch for the Savior's coming, but we are to watch our thoughts, our words, our acts, lest the machinations of the evil one, lure us away from God, and his truth. "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation," is the injunction of one who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin; and did you ever think, dear reader, how admirably the dear Son of God vanquished the wily tempter in the wilderness, by a plain—"Thus saith the Lord." Again. If we would "stand fast in the faith," we must have our feet well "shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." Nothing short of being rooted and grounded in the gospel can keep us from falling in these times of trial and peril "Quit you like men." That is, be good and valiant soldiers of the cross. "Preach the word; be instant in season, and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long suffering and doctrine" for the time has already come; when the mass of professed Christians will not endure sound doctrine, but are being turned unto fables. In short, don't weary or faint in well doing, but gird on the armor anew, and "be strong in the Lord," ever looking unto Jesus, who is the Author and Finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is now seated at the right hand of the throne of God, interceding for a lost and ruined world.

WM. E. ORR.

Immaterialism And Progression.

The golden age rushes on, and now must be near,
For latter day wonders, appear everywhere,
When if men would be great, they must have plenty of help.
And the way to secure it, is pure love of self.
To gain power and honor, riches sure must be had.
T'will make bad what is good, and good what is bad.

Amid the great progress, in this wondrous day,
Children care naught what parents do say;
They are prodigies now, progressed beyond years;
More wise now in council than those of gray hairs
And some are so far beyond the grasp of my mind
'Tis vain to attempt such great ones to define.

Some say 'tis an age of wondrous progression,
That teachers are giants in mental discretion.
"Blessed are the meek," they teach and declare,
For they shall inherit the sky and the air!
The soul that sinneth, it never can die;
'Tis a captive till death, then to heaven doth fly.

Then the immaterial soul with immaterial wings
Mounts through immaterial space, and immaterially sings,
With immaterial kindred in immateriality profound:
On immaterial thrones, unseen they are crowned.
With all immaterials they immaterially share
An immaterial victory in immaterial air.

And all disembodied, as true as 'tis strange,
With harps, robes, and crowns, they immaterially range.
Ever soaring aloft in those vast realms,
Those palm-bearing victors perpetually move;
Expanding, enlarging, at home everywhere;
Transcendant as ether and buoyant as air.
Thus the immaterial soul, it doth seem to me,
Is a stupendous, theological nonentity.
"Uncompounded, intangible, without form," like the air,
An immaterial nothing, going nowhere.

Now hear the word of God! "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and MAN became A LIVING SOUL." (Gen, 2: 7.) "The first MAN Adam was made A LIVING SOUL." (1 Cor. 15: 45.) "The soul that sinneth it shall die." (Ezk. 18: 4, 20.) "And every living SOUL died in the sea." (Rev. 16: 3.) "He utterly destroyed them, and all the SOULS that were therein....and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all THE SOULS that were therein." (Josh. 10: 28, 32.) "And they smote all THE SOULS that were therein with the edge of the sword utterly destroying them." (Josh. 11: 11.) "Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a SOUL from death." (Jas. 5: 20.) How immateriality can be smitten with the sword, utterly destroyed, and never die, modern theologians alone can explain. They must certainly excel the hero that Butler speaks of in his Hudibras.

"Sir Hugh was a great critic,
Profoundly skilled in the analytic;
He could a hair divide
Twixt south and south west side."

S. S. BREWER.

Christian Baptism.

"Repent, and be baptised, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."

The object of this communication is to show that baptism, administered according to the text at the head of this article, is the only baptism authorized by Christ and his apostles. The popularity of baptism in the three Names is a serious objection to its being sanctioned by Christ for he said to his disciples on one occasion, "Woe unto you when all men speak well of you; for so did their fathers unto the false prophets."—Luke, 6: 26. This was an intimation to them that truth would not become popular, and that whenever they found themselves teaching what was popular they would set it down as false doctrine. They never taught baptism "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," but "in the name of the Lord Jesus." And Paul would say, "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." So they could not go back on their own teaching, neither can others since then do so, without incuring that anathema. To teach baptism in the name of the three Persons, not only differs from the gospel which they preached, but it is so popular as to merit the "woe unto you when all men speak well of you.

The evidence is so conclusive that the apostles taught believers to be baptized in the name of Christ alone, that learned men like Adam Clark have been forced to admit the fact, from the evidence recorded in the Acts of the Apostles. But they seek to limit this to Jewish believers, and contend that the Gentiles were baptized according to the formula found in Mat. 28: 19. But of this they have no proof except the passage quoted; for there is no parallel to this in the whole Bible, but it stands solitary and alone like a false witness impeached by the testimony of true witnesses. The connection of the text at the head of this article, indicates that the baptism preached by Peter on the day of Pentecost was not limited to the Jews; for he said in the continuation, "The promise is unto you and unto your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Acts 2: 39. The promise here referred to, is that they should receive the gift of the Holy Spirit, if they would "repent, and be baptised in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." This promise was not limited to them, but included all that were afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. The promise, therefore, included the Gentiles and made them subjects of the same baptism. And it will be remembered that Peter was first sent to preach the gospel to the Gentiles, and that while preaching to them in the house of Cornelius, the Holy Spirit fell on all them that heard the word. "Then answered Peter, can any man forbid water that these should not be baptised which have received the Holy Spirit as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptised in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ."—Acts, 10: 47.

The received text of King James reads, "In the name of the Lord," but Murdock's translation from the Syriac reads as above, so does the Douay version, and some of the Greek manuscripts sustain this reading. So the idea that there was one kind of baptism for the Jews, and another for the Gentiles, is not sustained by the Acts of the Apostles, nor by any of their epistles. Paul taught that there was "one Lord, one faith and one baptism." But to baptise the Jews in the name of Jesus, and the Gentiles in the name of the three Persons would make two kinds of baptism. The only legitimate conclusion therefore is, that the words, "In the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," is a Trinitarian interpolation, and belongs to the same category of 1 John, 5: 7. Leaving it out the commission reads, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptising them; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

That this is the correct reading is evident. (1) Because the apostles did neither teach nor practice baptism except in the name of Jesus Christ; which would make them recreant to their duty if they had been commanded differently. (2) The testimony of two or three witnesses would have been requisite to sustain a new precept which apparently is out of harmony with the general tenor of the Scriptures. (3) The command to "baptise in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," is represented as being given after Christ rose from the dead, and so after his covenant was confirmed and made forever unalterable.

That Trinitarian baptism was not known in the Apostle's time is evident from Acts 8: 14–16, which reads as follows: "Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John; who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Spirit, for as yet He was fallen upon none of them, only they were baptised in the name of the Lord Jesus." The word "only," serves to distinguish between their act of receiving baptism as separate from their act of receiving the Holy Spirit. This is the obvious intent of its use, and yet the word "only" has a governing force over the whole sentence, and thus shows that no other name except his was used in their baptism. For the expression, "Only they were baptised in the name of the Lord Jesus," would convey a false idea if other names were used in their baptism, which would prevent the writer from so falsifying his own meaning. Had they known any other form but "in the name of the Lord Jesus," the sentence should have been put in a form to indicate that this was a departure from the usual custom. But the statement being made in an unintentional manner, without any effort to distinguish between baptism in his name as separate from other names, it is a clear proof that no other had been known at that time; for if there was any other formula authorized, a natural regard for truth would have required a statement to that effect in that connection.

The Gnostics, as their name indicates, laid claim to superior knowledge, and they were as conceited in their views as the modern orthodox are. They began early to pervert the gospel of Christ, and one of their number was Marcion, and he practised trine immersion. He commenced according to Thurman, "in A. D. 150, to baptise the Gentiles, in the name of the Lord Jesus," by "dipping three times."—Pamphlet on Trine Immersion, p 5. Here we find a departure from the single immersion practised by the apostolic church. And the reason that actuated him was probably that stated by Clement of Alexandria, whom Thurman quotes as addressing the churches, and saying, "Ye were conducted to a bath just as Christ was carried to the grave, and were thrice immersed to signify the three days of his burial."—p. 10.

Now if that was the object of trine immersion, it would not have been in the name of the three Persons. But afterward, when the three Persons were held to have been incarnate, and to have suffered on the cross, then their trine immersion might have been held to indicate the three Persons; and afterward they could improve it still further by the use of the three names. And any one acquainted with their faculty for interpolating Trinitarian sentiments into theological writings, as they have done in 1 John, 5: 7, cannot esteem it an improbable matter that they could do the same with Mat. 28: 19.

That trine immersion is an innovation on baptism as administered in the apostles' days is clear from the language of Paul in Rom. 6: 3–5, which is as follows: "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptised into Jesus Christ, were baptised into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so also should we walk in the newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

"If we have been planted together in the likeness of his death," is a reference back to the preceding statement, "Buried with him by baptism into death," refering to his burial in death. And Christ was buried by being laid out in his sepulchre, as a person is laid out in a coffin, face upward. So baptism admininistered in water by immersion backward, would be in likeness of Christ's entombment. And if we have been planted thus together in the likeness of his death, our rise, up from the water, would be in the likeness of his resurrection. And since Christ was buried but once, and rose but once, a single immersion would indicate this; whereas, trine immersion would spoil its significance as a symbol of his burial and resurrection.

In presenting these views for publication, the writer holds no one responsible for them but himself. It is the province of a Christian to examine and criticise what is presented for his consideration, and no one but a bigot will fear to have his position examined. We had better have the hay, wood and stubble of our theological views burnt up now, and have that replaced by gold, silver, precious stones, etc., than to suffer loss in the day of judgment by having them destroyed, even if we ourselves are saved, so as by fire.

That trine Timmersion, or rinitarian baptism will stand in that day, is a presumption that will be disappointed. "Many shall say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out demons, and in thy name done many wonderful works? Then will I profess unto them, "I never knew you." Many have done wonderful works in baptising "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," but they do not name the name of Christ at all in their baptism. And the majority of them by the term Son, represent a mythical character, instead of the lowly Nazarene.

The Flaw Hunters.

There are people who have a preternatural faculty for detecting evil, or the appearance of evil, in every man's character. They have a fatal scent for carrion. Their memory is like a museum I once saw at a medical college, and illustrates all the hideous distortions and monstrous growths and revolting diseases by which humanity can be troubled or afflicted. They think they have a wonderful knowledge of human nature. But it is a blunder to mistake the Newgate Calender for a biographical dictionary.

A less offensive type of the same tendency leads some people to find apparent satisfaction in the discovery and proclamation of the slightest defects in the habits of good men and the conduct of public institutions. They cannot talk about the benefits conferred by a great hospital without lamenting some insignificant blot in its laws, and trifling want of prudence in its management. Speak to them about a man whose good works everybody is admiring, and they cool your ardor by regreting that he is so rough in hid manner, or so smooth—that his temper is so hasty, or that he is so fond of applause. They seem to hold a brief, requiring them to prove the impossibility of human perfection. They detect the slightest alloy in the pure gold of human goodness. That there are spots in the sun is, with them, something more than an observed fact—it takes rank with a priori and necessary truths While their friends are admiring the wealth and beauty of a tree whose branches are weighed down with fruit, they have discoverd a solitary bough, lost in the golden affluence, on which nothing is hanging.

Hazlitt was sorely troubled with them in his time. "Littleness," he said "is their element, and they give a character of meanness to whatever they touch."—Good Words.

Advent Christian Times.

Tuesday Afternoon, Jan. 16, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, ... Editor

Those who get postmasters to write their letters should remember that we have to pay the postage and commission unless they attend to it themselves.

We thought that we could read anything that was writing in English, but must confess to one undecipherable letter. It came last week from Nashua, N. H. If the writer will kindly send us a translation we will endeavor to comply with his or her wishes.

A Cairo (Ill.) journal says that on account of the famine in Persia, the flood in China, the spread of pestilential diseases etc., etc., the Adventists "declare that time shall be no more after the year 1878"—which, absurd as it is, is about as fair a statement of fact as an Advent can get in any journal outside of their own publications.

In Harper's (Dec. 1871) we find the following:

"Dr. Lauder Lindsay, in an essay just published, which has excited some attention, takes the ground that the mind of the lower animals, does not differ in kind from that of man, and that they possess the same affections and capacity for education and are liable to the same kinds of mental disorders."

Some of our readers complain of the annoyances they receive by mail in the form of papers, tracts, etc., advocating Seventh-day keeping, Restorationism, etc. To such we would say—Be not carried about by every wind of doctrine; but if in anything you receive you find passages commanding your attention, compare them with the "sure word." Believe all that can be proved from it—no more!

Many who have not time to crack nuts and pick out the meats, like to eat a few of the "meats" occasionally when picked out by others. To such we commend as an occasional dish for a winter evening, our "Brief extracts," and "Gleanings." They are gathered from business letters, mostly, and many of the best thoughts were not intended for publication. But we would like more meats for our "Gleanings"—statements concerning successful meetings, baptisims, conversions, and all news of interest to the body,

The Second Advent Times has wonderful skill in Mosaic theology. It takes isolated passages of Scripture and fragmentary paragraphs of opinion from its exchanges, combines them into variegated views, and then criticises the spots!

—So says the Methodist Recorder. "Wounded birds," etc. We are left to presume that the infrequency of citations from Scripture in the Recorder of late is owing to the managing editor's conviction that the Bible ought never to be quoted unless the entire volume is given. "Isolated passages," however apt or opportune or appropriate, are not to be tolerated.

THE SOUL.

A SCRIPTURAL COMMENTARY.

1 Ki. 19 : 2. After Elijah had slain the prophets and priests of Baal, Jezebel sent word to him to let the 'gods do so to me, and more also, if I make not the life (soul) as the life (soul) of one of them.' 'She evidently believed she could kill the soul of Elijah, and he as evidently feared she would; so (v. 3) 'he arose, and went for his life (soul), and came to Beer-sheba.'

There he left his servants, and went alone into the wilderness 'a day's journey....and he sat down and requested for himself (lit. his soul) that he might die; and said: It is enough; now, O Lord, take away my life' (soul). (v. 4.)

v. 10. 'They seek my life (soul) to take it away.' v, 14. 'They seek my life (soul) to take it away.'

Ch. 20 : 31. The servants of Benhadad advised him to surrender himself to his conqueror, 'peradventure he will save thy life.' So he sent to the king of Israel, (v. 33) saying, 'I pray thee let me (my soul) live.'

V. 39. In the prophet's parable to Ahab, he said: 'Thy life (soul) shall be for his life' (soul), and in the application (v. 42) he said to Ahab: 'Thus saith the Lord, Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man that I appointed for destruction, therefore thy life (soul) shall go for his life' (soul).

2 Ki 1 : 13. The third Captain with his fifty men plead with Elijah: 'Let my life (soul) and the life (soul) of these fifty, thy servants, be precious in thy sight.' Previously one hundred 'souls' had perished by fire from heaven. Hence he prayed, (v. 14) 'Let my life (soul) be precious in thy sight.'

Ch. 2 : 2, 4, 6. 'As the Lord liveth, and thy soul liveth.' 'Thy soul' here is a periphrasis for 'thou' or 'thyself.'

Ch. 4 : 27. 'Her soul is vexed (bitter), within her.' 'She is in bitter sorrow over the death of her son.' Right here we call attention to a point of some interest. 'Her soul is vexed WITHIN HER.' Mark, the soul is not the person, but is included IN the person, as the mind really is: but to make the soul both the container and the contained is one of the 'blunders of immaterialism.'

V. 30. 'As thy soul liveth.' As truly as you live!

Ch. 7 : 7. The Syrians 'fled for their life' (soul.)

Ch. 9 : 15. 'Jehu said, If it be your mind, (soul) let none go forth....to tell it.'

Ch. 10 : 24. 'If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, his life (soul) shall be for the life (soul) of him.'

Ch. 12 : 14. 'The money that every man is set at.'—Margin—'of the souls of his estimation.' Reference is here made to the half-shekel state-money for the soul. (Ex. 30 : 12–16.)

Ch. 23 : 3. 'And the King made a covenant to walk after the Lord and keep his commandments and his testimonies and his statues, with all their heart and all their soul.' Not with two separate entities—a rational heart and a rational soul—but with the affections as well as the intellect. It was to be a service of love, and not simply a dry conviction of duty. In v. 25, another word adds intensity to the expression: Josiah 'turned to the Lord with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might,' i. e. he gave himself FULLY to the work of the Lord. "Heart,' refers to the AFFECTION, 'soul,' to the MIND, 'strength,' to ACTION. He obeyed not in words only, but in deed and in truth.

1 Chron. 5 : 21. Reuben, Gad and Manasseh made war with the Hagarites, and took 'of men (lit. of souls of men) an hundred thousand.' Another instance of periphrasis, or the Hebrew idiom already referred to, see Num. 31 : 35.

Ch. 11 : 19. David said, 'Shall I drink the blood of these men that have put their lives (souls) in jeopardy? for with the jeopardy of their lives (souls) they brought it.'

Ch. 22 : 19. 'Set your heart and your soul to seek the Lord.'

Ch. 28 : 9. 'Love (God) with a perfect heart and a willing mind, (soul).

2 Chron. 1 : 11. Solomon asked not the life (soul) of his enemies.

Ch. 6 : 38. 'If they return to thee with all their heart and all their soul.' When we read body and soul, or body and spirit, or soul and spirit, straightway 'distinct entities' are imagined. Why not infer distinct rational entities from passages like this?

Ch. 33 : 31. 'With all his heart and all his soul.'

Esther 4 : 13. 'Think not with thyself (thy soul) that thou shalt escape,' i. e. do not cherish in the mind the secret thought of escape.

Ch. 7 : 3. 'Let my life (soul) be given me.'

V. 7. 'Haman stood up to make request for his life,' (soul).

Ch. 8 : 11. 'The king granted the Jews....to stand for their life (soul). And they stood for their lives, (souls.) (Ch. 9 : 16.)

Ch. 9. 31. 'As they had decreed for themselves,' (lit. their souls.).

Job, 2 : 4. 'All that a man hath will he give for his life,' (soul). One of the few truths told by the Father of lies.

V. 6. 'Save his life,' (soul).

Ch. 3 : 20.

'Wherefore is light given to him that is in misery,
And life to the bitter in soul'—

those whose minds are full of bitter grief.

Ch. 6 : 7. 'The things my soul (i. e. I) refused to touch.'

V. 7.

'What is my strength, that I should hope?
And what mine end that I should prolong my life,' (soul),

i. e. my case is hopeles, therefore I would live no longer; there is nothing for me in the future.

Ch. 7 : 11

'I will speak in the anguish of my spirit (ruach);
I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.'

This is a parallelism: the two sentences are each the equivalent of the other, and refer to the mind. Soul and spirit seem to be here used interchangeably—a very rare occurence.

V. 15. 'My soul chooseth strangely, and death rather than life.' The next verse explains: 'I would not live alway.'

Ch. 9 : 21. 'Though perfect I should take no thought for myself, (lit. my soul).

Ch. 10 : 1. 'My soul is (i. e. I am) weary of my life.' 'I will speak in the bitterness of my soul,' or mind, or feelings.

I cannot forbear to here insert the commentary of Dr. Adam Clarke upon this passage. For cool assumption, and entirely impertinent inference they are seldom equaled, even in dogmatic theology.

'Here is proof positive that NEPHESH does not signify the animal life, but the soul or immortal mind as distinguished from CHAI, that animal life; and is a strange proof that Job believed in the distinctions between these two principles; was no materialist, but on the contrary credited the proper immortality of the soul.' [!!]

Now the periphrasis, 'my soul,' here means no more than the same figure in the multitude of passages where it occurs, as in ch. 6 : 9, 'The things my soul refused to touch'—not that his immortal mind refused to approach, but that he—the person—would not defile himself with. A weak man's weak argument should not prejudice the cause he may favor; but when a man like Dr. Clarke speaks we are fairly entitled to hold the system he defends as responsible to no small extent for his utterances. And what shall we say of his theory if HE can consider it strengthened by such begging of the question as this? 'Weak as water,' is the best illustration we can recall of such logic.

ONLY ONE ARTICLE.

Owing to the length of Eld. Braden's third letter and our reply, we give this week only his article. Our response will appear in the next issue. After that we expect to continue to give an article from each writer each week, as heretofore.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

Saturday, Dec. 30. Boston, Mass. Called upon some of my old parishioners, with whom I had been associated for more than forty years. One of these Br. Larvey is more than fourscore years old and in good health cheered with the blessed hope. Old scenes were revived, and the prospect of getting through the wilderness soon animated our hearts. Another, father Hobart, is eighty-nine years old. His health, faith and hope sustain him in his last days. And like the patriarchs, he is "like a shock of corn fully ripe"—waiting for the "coming One." The day is soon coming, when the faithful pastors will be able in the presence of the "Chief Shepherd," to say—"Here am I, and the children that thou hast given me." Also visited in Chelsea. Brn. Couch and Boutell, showed me their new chapel, which is a model of simplicity, and economy. Besides, it is so arranged, as to give a parsonage, and vestry in the first story. This is practical common sense. But little expense and great usefulness. Before they built they drifted about, losing their strength, and usefulness all for want of a home. Now they have it, and are prospering in the Lord. Let others go and do likewise. I dined with Eld. Couch, who with his accomplished wife, are enjoying health, and are doing good among the people here. And their labors, with those of Br. Boutell, are giving life and strength to the Advent cause in Chelsea.

Sabbath, Dec. 31. 1871 goes out to-day, and passes down the stream of time and is to be among the things of the past. What wonderful facts, and memories it carries with it! It has been one of the eventful years of time in the natural, moral and religious world. With the Adventists it is a marked year, on account of one of the most remarkable signs of the near coming of Christ. The civil power of the great anti-Christ has been taken away. His dominion has passed into other hands and he stands as a simple priest in Rome. The next grand and glorious event is the coming of Christ to destroy him by the "brightness of his coming."

With most students of prophecy, the fall of the temporal power, is a marked sign of the speedy coming of Christ. The consuming process is accomplished by the "word of his mouth," and now the dominion is taken away by the kings, and next in order in prophecy (Dan. 7 : 27) is the kingdom of the saints under the whole heaven. Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly!

I spoke to-day at the Lowell St. chapel in Boston. The Advent church worshiping in this place is true. They stand on the truth of the Lord's coming in his kingdom as an event nigh at hand. They believe, and speak, and act it out. Some of them look with interest to the arguments for 1873.

In the forenoon I read Heb. ch. 10, in which among other things the apostle commands frequent meetings of the saints for exhortation and worship; and not to be discouraged at the trials of the way, and to cast away their confidence, which had great recompense of reward. The hour was filled up with a discussion on the topics of the chapter with out-gushings of noble believing souls. Prayer, praise, exhortation, and exposition, edified the audience. Many of the speakers remembered the days when we were "first illumined," in 1840 and onward, by the clear and Scriptural teachings of the Low Hampton reformer, in Chardon St. and in the Marlboro chapel. And they were not ashamed of the truth or the Advent name, that designates the great truth of truths, the coming of Jesus. I showed in the afternoon to a full house, how, in what sense "Christ is our life," and at night, how, and in what sense, Christ was to destroy the works of the devil, and [illegible] back to his people a world of perfection and immortality. I had [illegible], and as great blessedness as I ever enjoyed in the forty-two years since the beginning of my labors in B[illegible] glorious day, and a triumph for [illegible], and the rejoicing of the [illegible] people of God. Besides we [illegible] Some new ones are re[illegible] truth. Light is spreading.

It was the last day of the year, and at night I pressed upon the unprepared the duty of beginning a new and a religious life. When I came to the city I had no expectation of speaking, but only to attend to my business here, and then hurry back to the West. But the people clung to me, and so I had to remain. Indeed I have not had so warm or cordial a reception in this old field of labor, for many years. God bless them.

Br. Adams, the Business Agent at the Crisis office, as also Brn. Couch, Boutell, Leslie, and Charles and O. Goodrich, showed me no little kindness, and they have my thanks. When they come West, as I hope they will some day, I shall pay them back in Scripture measure.

Monday, Jan. 1, 1872. Another year has dawned upon us. I did not sleep after the labors of the Sabbath till the last sands of the old year ran out, and the glass of time was turned over, to measure out the new year.

In the beginning of this new year, we should resolve that our habits, passions and appetites, should be our servants and not our masters. That we will control our tempers, not give way to anger, or to any of the works of the flesh; but keep our bodies under, that we adhere to Christ and his truth—look forward, and press forward, with true courage and stedfastness, in true imitation of Christ and his apostles, and so be ready to meet him, and "give up our account with joy." At an early hour I went with Eld. Cyrus Cunningham, of the Advent church, Hudson St., to Newton, Upper Falls, to attend the wedding of Miss Abbie M., daughter of Eld. Luther T. Cunningham, who marries Br. L. A. Piper, of Chelsea. It being a proper, and wise union, the wedding was the occasion of much pleasure, and they received the congratulations of all. They are both faithful disciples of Jesus, and look forward to another and more interesting scene—the marriage supper of the Lamb.

In the p. m. I went to Quincy, and enjoyed a precious visit with Br. D. W. Perry, and family, old and dear disciples, as well as friends. At night returned to the city, and attended the anniversary of Emancipation Proclamation, by President Lincoln in 1863, at Tremont Temple. Dr. Haven, of Zion's Herald, and Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, with others made interesting speeches. In the last nine years, the colored people have made rapid progress in education, and civilization, of this I had a greater personal knowledge than either of the speakers. I have been among these poor people, and have seen all that the speakers said of their progress, and more besides.

Tuesday, Jan. 2. Called upon Dr. Lewis, No. 17 Bacon St. He has just opened the Bellevue Turkish Baths. He showed me over his establishment. For completeness, and perfection there is nothing like it, in this country or the world. I found the baths delicious, as well as healthful. I trust the Dr. will have a large patronage, and give health and comfort to his patrons.

At three p. m. I was welcomed at Athol, Mass., by Dr. James Hemenway and wife, and was at home with them. I find them very pleasantly situated with a good home of their own—a thing, I wish all our Advent preachers might enjoy. They have an Advent church of about fifty members, to whom Br. H. administers the word. They love him and cannot bear to hear of his leaving, a subject which sometimes happens to come up. Well the Lord will direct, and will provide. Let us all trust in him.

I shall not be able to speak to the church this time, although I have for long years desired to do so.

Wednesday, Jan. 3. Left Athol for Brattleboro, Vt., and arrived at noon. Here I had to lay over and stopped at Brattleboro House. Mr. Thomas Evans, the proprietor, showed me every attention. Travellers, stopping over, will do well to call on him. His house is close by the depot.

On Thursday I reached Castleton, where I found a welcome from Br. and Sr. Mathewson and the Advent church, Many friends called in during the day, with whom I renewed old friendships and fellowship. Among those were Wm. S. Miller oldest son of Father Miller, always faithful and true. And from my intimate association with his father, I am the more beloved and esteemed by him. Our meeting was affecting, and tears flowed freely as we shook hands, and spoke of the eventful past, and of the glory soon to be revealed.

Br. Sherman, also came in, one of the pillars of the Advent church here. He has been greatly afflicted since I was last here in the loss of his beloved companion. All miss her in the domestic circle, the church, and Sabbath school, as well as in the community; for in all these relations she was a light, and an ornament.

At night I spoke in the vestry of the chapel to a good audience gathered at short notice. Wm. L. Miller, Br. Mathewson, Dr. Smith and others backed up the truth. It was a good time. Praise the Lord.

I find Elder Mathewson, in a strait The church in Worcester, want him for their pastor, and the church in Rutland, Vt. want him, and the church in Castleton say they can't part with him. He would like to gratify all, as he feels a sympathy for them. But he can only supply one church, and which one, he is now praying the Lord to show him. Just now we want as many as two more S. G. Mathewson's.

Friday, Jan. 5. Dined with Br. Sherman. All his household were present, in health and good cheer. But I missed her that till lately was the light of this domestic circle. I missed her presence, and words of cheer she always gave in my past visits. "She sleeps, but not forever." Soon she with the faithful ones will awake to everlasting life.

I spoke a 7 p. m. in the chapel from Is. 44 : 3–6, on the outpouring of the Spirit, and the revival of the work of God. At the close the church renewed their covenant, to be the Lord's, and five others came out on the Lord's side. We had a blessed refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The prospect looks good. I am detained here a few days unexpectedly.

Saturday, Dec. 6. Went to Low Hampton, N. Y. the old home of Father Miller. Being so nigh I could not deny myself the pleasure of a call, at least, upon the children of the family, that remain here. John H. Miller, still resides at the old homestead. I visited the rooms where the old man used to write, and where I so often visited him, and held converse on the word of God, and the promises of good things to come. But the man is gone. All is desolate. I miss his noble form, his intelligent conversation on the word of God, his ready wit and good humor which at proper times filled us with cheer; and more than all his solemn and sweet presentations of the truth, respecting the Lord's coming, the judgment and the kingdom of God. But he sleeps in the old graveyard. I next went there, where we laid him twenty-one years ago, Dec.

20, 1849. Here I found the marble head stone, with an open Bible chiseled out with the words of Dan. 12: 12, 13; and at the top the words—"At the time appointed the end shall be."

It was cold, and the snow covered the ground. It was just such a day as the one on which we laid him here. It brought the past fresh to my mind. Twenty-one years ago. It seemed like yesterday. I was then forty-five years old, and he was sixty-eight. I am now sixty-six. In parting with the old man, he said, "Br. Himes, you will live to see the Lord come. I shall sleep for a little while." And he charged me to be faithful. In visiting his tomb, I feel the admonition renewed, and the hope of living to see Jesus come revived. Death will be swallowed up in victory soon; on the approach of the "Life giver."

I made pleasant calls and returned to Castleton to preach in the evening on the gospel of reconciliation, pressing on all the unconverted to come to Christ. Only one came out to-night. But there was much deep feeling, and many spoke with effect.

I have during the day conversed with many who weep for the dead ones. Some like Rachel, who will not be comforted because their children "are not." They seem to be dragged into the tomb. This is not right. We should be reconciled. Let the will of the Lord be done, and be happy about it. We shall see our dear ones again soon. We should rejoice in hope—"The blessed hope."

SABBATH, Jan. 7. Spoke this a. m. on perfect peace. (Is. 26: 3.) Had a happy time. In the p. m. spoke on the "signs of the times." (Mat. 16: 1–3. I showed there were no signs of the conversion of the world. (2 Tim. 3: 1–5; Mat. 24: 37–39; Mat. 13: 28–39.) But there are signs of the coming of Jesus. (Lk. 21: 24–28; Dan. 7: 25–27.) The dominion of the papacy is gone, and the kingdom comes soon.

The old believers were very much cheered, and the people generally see the truth of these things now, as they never have done till of late. The light is shining more, and more. At night I spoke from (Is. 55: 1–3.) The invitation to the waters of life, and the promise of the "sure mercies of David," which Paul declares in the resurrection of the dead. (Acts ch. 13.) And without this there is no future life. At the close, I invited all to come. "Ho every one that thirsts! Come ye to the waters." Eleven young people came to Jesus, six of whom spoke of being blest. It was indeed a time of blessedness to all. God is indeed reviving his work. And Br. Mathewson, has reason to feel that he is in the way of duty to remain with this people. He immersed one, and received three into the church to-day. We have had a blessed day. I was delighted to see Brn. James Pattle, and Peter Pavadee in our meeting to-night, and have them take part in the service. They are old fellow-laborers of former years in Lowell, and Salem. They now reside in Fair Haven Vt. The Lord bless them and help them to hold up the light.

MONDAY. Jan. 8. Have had rest to-day. And at night I spoke from Rom. ch. 10, on the conditions of salvation. I showed how deeply Paul felt for his brethren and kinsman according to the flesh, and thus showed how deeply we as ministers of Christ, should feel for our congregations who are out of Christ. And pressing home the truth upon the hearts of sinners, there were twenty penitent souls came to the altar. Most were justified, and felt to praise God. The church with Br. and Sr. Mathewson were deeply affected at this manifestation of the goodness and power of God.

I was to leave in the a. m. but Br. M. and the brethren said I must hold on a little longer, and I dare not refuse to stay.

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

UPON FOUR PROPOSITIONS,

Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

ELD. CLARK BRADEN'S THIRD LETTER.

Br. Himes: I am now ready to respond to your rejoinders. Your attempt to array my position in my first letter against my language in my reply to Mr. Hughey, is all based on a careless reading. I say in my first letter that 'spirits have not a bodily organization that can be apprehended by the senses.' As to their having no body or organization, and as to their immateriality, I affirmed nothing—no more than I did in my debate with Mr. Hughey. Our Savior says, "a spirit has not flesh and bones." Spirits can be seen only in vision. (2 Ki. 6: 16, 17.) Had you always added the qualifying—"that can be apprehended by the senses," that much space in your letters would have been saved for more important purposes.

In your reply you appeal to Eccl. 3: 19; Gen. 6: 17; 7: 20, 21, to show that brutes have a spirit as well as man. I ask you to state unequivocably whether you assume that spirit when applied to brutes has the same meaning as when applied to man. Do you assert that brutes have body, soul, and spirit, the same that man has? When the distinction of man into body, soul, and spirit is made, do you assert that brutes have a spirit in the sense spirit is there used? To make these references avail you anything you must answer in the affirmative. Dare you do so? I expect an unequivocal answer.

Your appeal, Rev. 3: 1, has no relevance whatever. An angel is often called a "spirit of God" because sent by him. The passage simply means that the messenger was full of the spirit of inspiration, or fully inspired. I hope before the discussion proceeds further we will have a clear answer from you on these points.

I will distinctly and emphatically affirm that when we use spirit in the sense we do when we say man has a body, soul, and spirit, the soul or spirit of the brute, and the spirit of man are radically different. Nay, I will go farther. I will affirm that when we use spirit in the sense we do when we say man has body, soul, and spirit, the brute has no spirit. Dare you affirm that it has? If you dare not then I shall utterly refuse to notice all appeals to passages in which the souls of brutes are spoken of. I also affirm that the spirit of man, in such a sense, and the spirits of higher orders, are the same in kind but differing in rank. In the Bible, spirit is used in several senses, and your whole system is based on bringing into the pneumatology of man, the low materialistic ideas of physical science and zoology. You would rather drag man down to the level of the brutes, to save your system, than to elevate his spirit to the rank of angels, and have it overturned.

In Gen. chs. 6 and 7, the reference is to life, or life-principle, alone, and merely declares that men and beasts lost their lives. So in Eccl. 3, the reference is to life alone. The language has no reference to anything but the natural event of death, common to both man and brutes; and has no teaching whatever concerning man's spirit, as to its nature and destiny. I nowhere find it said that the brute has a body, soul, and spirit. That brutes were made in the image of God. This image pertains to man's spirit alone. (Jno. 3: 6; Eph. 6: 21–23; Col. 3: 10) Nor that Christ took on him their nature. Nor that thier spirits made perfect, with angels, compose the church of the first-born. Nor that their spirits in heaven, with those on earth, are named after Christ. (Heb. 12: 22; Eph. 3: 15) I nowhere find them regarded as moral responsible beings, as are men, in common with angels. I find spirit applied to the rational moral part of men, in the same sense it is applied to angels and spirits of higher orders. They are subject to the same law, and have the same destiny. Hence I conclude that the spirit of man and spirits of higher orders are the same in nature, but differ in rank. Now I trust that in answering this you will keep out of physical science and zoology, and confine yourself to spirit in the only sense it is used in this discussion—the sense in which it is used in 1 Thes. 4: 23; Heb. 5: 12.

Daniel's spirit was grieved in its sheath (body.) Paul's spirit was stirred in him. The spirit of man alone knows what is in him—the spirit of man in him. (1 Cor. 2.) The spirit lusts against the flesh, and the flesh against the spirit. (Gal. 5: 17.) There is a law of the spirit warring against the law of the members or body. (Rom. 7; 18–23.) The inner man is the spirit, the outer the body. So in 2 Cor. 4: 16. The outer man wastes away; the spirit, or inner man, is renewed or strengthened day by day. (Eph. 3: 16.) This has no reference to prolonging its existence. Such a idea is nonsense. (2 Cor. 5.) T[illegible]bernac'e is the same as the [illegible]urth chapter. The inhabi[illegible] [illegible] tabernac'e is the wearer [of] the clo[illegible]g, and the inner man or spirit of [R]om. 7, and Phil. 1: 21–23, declares that this [sp]irit, inner man, would depart, be absent from [the] body and present with Christ. So in 2 Tim. 4: 6, Paul calls his decease a departure. So does Peter call it a putting off the tabernacle or body. (2 Pet. 1: 12–15.)

From the Scriptures we draw these conclusions. (1) The body is the outer man, the house, the tabernacle, the clothing of the inner man or spirit, the rational part of man; the spirit of 1 Thes. 5: 23; Heb. 4: 12. (2) The spirit is the inner man, the inhabitant of the house, tabernacle or clothing, the flesh, the outer man, or body. (3) The spirit, while in the body, can act distinct from the body, and be affected distinct from it. (4) It can act contrary to the flesh or outer man or body. (5) The spirit departs from the house, tabernacle, outer man, flesh or body. The state of this spirit after its departure we will attend to in due time. Your admission that popular opinion, or common sense, sanctions my interpretations of these passages is true; and fatal to your far-fetched perversions, which fritter away all meaning. I give these interpretations without long elaborations, because the passages can have no other that common sense will sanction or even suggest.

We are now ready for Eccl. 12: 7 and kindred passages. The dust or body returns to the earth and the spirit to God who gave it. Our Savior commended his spirit to God. Stephen commended his spirit to our Savior. Paul and Peter's inhabitants of the house or tabernacle, their inner man, their spirits departed from the house, tabernacle, clothing, outer man or flesh-man to be absent from the body. Decease or death was a departure. Now, Br. Himes, in the name of common sense and a decent regard for the common sense of the spirit of revelation, do, in all kindness tell us what returns to God—what departs—what leaves the house, or tabernacle or clothing? What is abs[ent] from the body, what did Christ and Stephe[n com]mend to God, and in what state was it? U[nconsc]ious? Now dare you answer in one cl[ear s]entence without special pleading and runn[ing] off to utterly irrelavent Scriptures, and lugging into the pneumatology of man, the low meanings of physical science and zoology—meanings radically different from the only one spirit can have in the passages. I say spirit, inner man, inhabitant of the tabernacle or house, or clothing, or outer man, or body, or flesh, is used in the sense it is 1 Thes. 5: 23; Heb 4: 12; and in the same meaning as when applied to angels. It was a rational conscious entity, capable of thought, and living with God and praising him. Dare you deny it? Your reference to 1 Pet. 4: 19 does not meet the case, for that was done while living, and not at death. It refers to protection from temporal calamity.

Your reasoning on Acts 2: 27 is another specimen of special pleading. Why did not you explain the 31st verse? therefore I quote. You run back to the 27th and from that to Ps. 6: 10, then run off to irrelevant Scripture to get a special meaning to suit you, and then foist it Ps. 6: 10, then lug it into Acts 2: 27, then at last into the 31st verse, which for the first time you seem to see, or dare to notice. Now I deny that Ps. 6: 10 is a parallelism. One line refers to the spirit in sheol, or the underworld; the other to the body in the grave. Instead of destroying Acts. 2: 31 by special pleading on Ps. 6: 10, I prefer to allow the Holy Spirit in Acts 2: 31 to explain Ps. 6: 10. He quotes the passage in the 27th verse, and then explains it in the 31st verse. "He foreseeing this spoke of the resurrection of Christ. His spirit was not left in hades (or the underworld); neither did his flesh (or body) see corruption" (in the tomb of Joseph.) Such is the comment of the Holy Spirit on Ps. 6: 10. I infinitely prefer it to Br. Himes' special pleading. Now Br. Himes, I want again, a few frank answers to some pointed questions. We are told that the divine Spirit who became incarnate in Jesus of Nazareth created the worlds and all things—that he set in order the dispensation—that he had glory with his Father before the world was—that he thought it not robbery to be equal with God. Did this divine spirit lay in the pit of corruption? Was he unconscious between his death and his resurrection? Was death to this divine spirit an utter extinction of conscious being? I am curious to hear your answer. I say his body was in the tomb of Joseph. His spirit went to hades, into Paradise, and from thence led forth a multitude of captives. As he died as all men die, his spirit went where all good spirits (of men) go. Its state was the state of theirs. His spirit was conscious. So are theirs.

Your assertion that soul in the passages (Acts 2: Ps. 6) means the person, I deny most emphatically; for in both places spirit or soul, and body or flesh, are mentioned. Spirit is located in hades, and the body in the grave, or where it would have seen corruption. Soul sometimes has such a meaning, but the context absolutely forbids such a meaning here. My position that man has a soul that exercises the passions men exercise in common with the brutes, I sustained by an appeal to passages where the soul like or animal man is contrasted with the spirit-like or spiritual man. Your assertion that because soul like body is material, the soul which it resembles in certain particulars must be material, is rather rich. I say of a child it is an angel, therefore all angels are children! Then man has a body—a soul like the principle or entity in animals that exercises the passions man has in common with the brutes; and the man controlled by this is a soul-like or animal man. He has a spirit which bears the image of God, which with the angels form the church of the first-born above, which in the bodies of saints on earth, and in the spirit of just men made perfect in heaven, forms the family which wears the name of Christ, which departs and is with God; which returns to God; which cannot be killed or affected by death, as we have shown in Mat. 10: 28; Lk. 12: 4. It is like in nature the higher order of spirits.

We are now ready for your last reply. You again utterly misapprehend my position. In mental moral and physical power man was a full grown man, possessing a vigor and acuteness of these powers he has never had since they were depraved by sin. But in acquired knowledge he was a child. He was not a beast nor an idiotic savage, but a child in acquired ideas. He must have been; for knowledge comes through the senses, and intuition or intuitive ideas occasioned by the use of the senses; and are but few. Man had to be taught language, and concerning natural things alone. It is a fact that the root words of all languages and the root ideas of all words are materialistic. Man had to be taught rude agriculture. He had to be taught the names and traits of animals. He had to have clothing made for him. The command given to him was adapted to persons in a state of childish innocence and simplicity. These are facts narrated by the Bible. That man did not understand the penalty of the law as we do now, is simply a fact. Do you pretend that a single great idea of the Bible was unfolded in full at first? This principle is acknowledged by all commentators. I know it will be fatal to your system. I know what was the amount of knowledge possessed from age to age, from reading the Bible, arranging it in chronological order. Now I will astonish you more. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were pastoral barbarians. They lived in tents, were clothed in skins of their animals, and lived on their flesh and milk. The Hebrews whom Moses taught, were freedmen released from over four hundred years of bondage. They were not equal to our freedmen, for they were not slaves in so civilized a nation. The question is, then, "What did they or their prophets know of man's nature, and of his spirit, and destiny? What did God reveal to them?" Not what did he reveal of himself and other spirits. We are not to measure the Bible teaching concerning man's nature and destiny, by the alphabet of revelation, any more than we should its teachings concerning the mission of Christ, by what was written before the Babylonish captivity. Whether you like it or not this is common sense.

I now take up your reply to my argument founded on Mat. 10, and Lk. 12. When I read it I felt like exclaiming in astonishment—'Has he read what I said?' You started out with attributing to me what I most explicitly denied, and then ended by running into that very confusion of thought you charge on me. I most explicitly said that when God kills, as men do. He takes away natural. I most explicitly said that after he killed he then destroyed spirit and body in gehenna; or he cast them into gehenna. Destruction here does not affect the conscious being of the spirit. After killing, the spirit has conscious existence, or what does God cast into gehenna? To destroy does not mean to extinguish conscious being. Nor does everlasting destruction mean everlasting extinction of conscious being. It means to cast into gehenna. To banish from the presence of God. After it is done the unclean and liars are without, the abode of the righteous. They are conscious. (Rev. 22: 14.) I now deny that destroy, when applied to spirit means to extinguish conscious being in a single instance.

The reader will now please turn to Mat. 10: 28, and Lk. 12: 4, and read carefully the language quoted in our former article. We will now restate our position. (1) The death here expressed by the word kill is the natural death, or the death all men die, both as inflicted by God and by man. (2) It does not affect the existence of the spirit. God alone can do that. (3) He does not do so when he kills or takes the natural life. (4) Death does not affect the conscious existence of the spirit. That is clearly taught by this passage. (5) After God kills he punishes by casting them into gehenna. (6) Destroy here does not mean to extinguish conscious being. It means cast into gehenna, as interpreted by the Holy Spirit in the other passage. Then death does not extinguish conscious being. God does not extinguish conscious being. He casts into gehenna. My brother gain wades through a multitude of Scriptures to fritter away the meaning in these passages. Now will he please tell us if 'soul' here means "life hid with Christ in God?" Has the wicked man any life hid with Christ in God? If not, does this warning have any application to him? But granting his exegesis true, he has the righteous have life, and all have being. Now will he tell us what life or being a spirit can have that is not a conscious being. The passage plainly teaches the conscious existence of men in death.

We will now submit our second direct argument. It is based on Ex. 3: 6. God here declared, "I am the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, the God of Jacob." At the time this language was uttered, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob had been dead hundreds of years. In Br. Himes' theology they had been as though they never had been; had been extinct hundreds of years; had been non-entities; for he denies that the spirit is an entity, and that the departed spirit is one; hence they were non-entities. God then said, "I am the God of the non-entities!!" "Credat Judæus appella, non ego." Let me illustrate. In August, 1866, I was promised the presidency of Southern Illinois College, if it ever was brought into existence, and I was its President three years. In July 1869 it ceased to have any existence. From August to October 1866 I could say, "I will be President of Southern Illinois College when brought into existence." From October 1866 until July 1869 I could say, "I am President of Southern Illinois College." Now I can only say, "I was President of Southern Illinois College." Had I said so before October 1866 I would have been laughed at for claiming to be President of what had then no existence. So if I say so now, it would justly expose me to ridicule. I could only say, "I am President" when the college had actual existence. Then if the patriarchs had existed, and did not then exist, God could only say, "I was their God," in reference to the past, or "I will be their God," in reference to their resurrection. To say "I am" in reference to either of these periods would be as glaring a solecism as for me to say "I am President," in either the first or the last case. He said—"I am their God!" Hence they, when he spoke to Moses, had as real an existence as the college did from Oct. 1866, to July 1868. They were not extinct or non-entities, for God never said "I am the God of non-entities." Mark! I do not say that this was the intended meaning of the passage, nor even that Moses so understood it. This is no part of the argument. I merely say God could not use this language unless they were consciously in existence.

My next argument is based on our Savior's reference to this language, in his reply to the Saducees, as recorded Mat. 22: 23; Mk. 12: 18; Lk. 20: 27. The Saducees believed in neither angel nor spirit. They denied the possibility of the resurrection because there was no human spirit. They presented a dilemma to our Savior concerning the woman who had had seven husbands. He answered that. He then did more. He verturned the whole basis of Saduceeism by showing the conscious existence of the dead, by an appeal to Ex. 3: 6. "Now that the dead are raised up (or can be raised up) can be shown by what God said to Moses at the burning bush. 'I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob,' for he is not the God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him.' Our Savior before this language had fully answered the Saducees' dilemma. This language overturns their whole system by showing that God's language showed that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were alive when he spoke to Moses. He is not the God of non-entities, but of the living. Hence all who are dead, though dead to us, are alive to him.

CLARK BRADEN.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Br. Clowes has been elected pastor of the Pittsburgh (Pa.) church. He was expelled from the M. E. Conference for the crime of —heresy.——We hear that Br. A. W. Sibley's labors at Sandy Hill, N. Y., are giving good satisfaction. Church and Sunday School are prospering.——Br. C. Fox has "locked up his tool-chest" for the winter, and is ready to hold meetings as desired. ——When Br. Marston was in Farmer City, Ill., recently, one young man on the opposition exposed his ignorance by a remark that if the wicked should be burned up "their ashes and cinders would be three feet deep over the entire surface of the globe." "O wise young man!" The discussion at that place is postponed, not by brother M's request, however.——Br. S. Pike, Ridgeway, Iowa, would welcome any preaching brother passing that way.——The remark by a California paper that Adventists in large numbers are going over to the Christadelphians is not true.——We are happy to be able to contradict the statement that Br. J. C. Smith was dead. He is alive, and full of the love of God, but in feeble health. He is located in Arvonia, Kas. Hope he will be able to occupy in that great field soon.——Br. G. W. Miller, (Minn.) says: "I have just returned from a tour on the frontier, found the churches hungry and thirsty. They eat the word with a relish, and I trust many received it into good and honest hearts."——Br. D. S. Clark is having an excelent interest at Arbor Hill, Iowa. He has baptised twenty-five from the child to the gray headed parents. Some forty reclaimed and converted. The people think of building a house of worship.——Br. G. W. Hurd baptised one at Pleasant View, Brown Co., Ill., recently. ——Br. P. S. Brick, Toronto, Iowa, is now ready to enter the field as the brethren may call or the way open. Keep him busy in the work of the Lord.

Correspondence.

Letters From San Francisco.

Rev. Dr. A. L. Stone on "The Natural Immortality of Man, and the Doom of the Impenitent."

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1, 1872.
Monday, 1 o'clock, A. M.

To the Editor of The Times: The old year has passed, and the New Year has been welcomed. We will all hope for more and better service this year than ever before in the same period of time. Wish you Happy New Year!

Last night—it does not seem last night yet—I attended at the Pavilion Skating Rink. Put in this heading of the programme as it stands, and it will 'tell the story':

RELIGIOUS SERVICES
Will be held Sabbath Evenings, for the present, at the
PAVILION SKATING RINK,
Northwest corner of Stockton and Post Streets (opposite Union Square), conducted by Rev. A. L. STONE, D. D., Pastor of the First Congregational Church. Commencing at 7½ p. m. Seats Free.

A Series of Discourses on Questions of Doubt. Ninth Question, Sunday Evening, December 17th, 1871:

"Concerning the Natural Immortality of Man, and the Doom of the Impenitent."

Then follow the hymns selected for the occasion.

It was a rainy night—4th edition of the Storm of the Season—but a congregation of five or six hundred was gathered at the Rink, fully one-fourth being persons of correct ideas on the Life and Death question. The Advent Christian membership proper was well represented, and there were many of other denominations known to me to hold the Advent doctrines.

Before opening his sermon, the reverend doctor said that he would take occasion to state that when he came into the Rink a gentleman was standing on the outside, giving handbills to such as would accept them. That gentleman was not employed by those in charge of the services at the Rink; and while he was at liberty to offer his circulars, the congregation could exercise their liberty in accepting or refusing them, and he would exercise his liberty in making this explanation.

Now it will appear that the handbill spoke for itself in disclaiming any connection with the orthodox managers; and the point with the Doctor was to notify his people to reject similar favors hereafter.

Here is a copy of the obnoxious document:

☞ "No candid Christian can look the Doctrine of Life only in Christ fairly in the face, in the light of Scripture, and not joyfully recognize and confess its truth."—Rev. Dr. Leask, of London, (Congregationalist.)

THE INEXORABLE SCRIPTURAL

ARGUMENT AND DEMONSTRATION

BY

REV. HENRY CONSTABLE,

The learned and eloquent Episcopal Cathedral Preacher of Cork, Ireland:—

THE DURATION AND

NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT

Utterly overthrowing, by Scripture quotations, comparisons and criticisms, the God dishonoring doctrine of Eternal Torment; which is shown to have been drawn into the creeds of Christianity from the philosophy of the heathen.

The great subject is treated in this little work by a master scholar and reasoner. "The Scriptures and the Apostolic Fathers teach eternal life only in Christ."

FOR SALE AT
WHITE & BAUER'S,
Washington Street, opposite Post Office,
SAN FRANCISCO.

PRICE................FORTY CENTS.

This recent work is pronounced "unanswerable" by hundreds of the clergymen of Great Britian, of all Protestant denominations. Please read.

N. B.—Preaching in harmony with the above named argument every Sunday, at usual church hours, at the Mission Street Chapel, opposite the New Mint.

The Doctor's sermon was really too weak to make an argument. He had an extempore opening, in which he gave two or three definitions for the Hebrew and Greek words rendered soul, in such a confused manner, and with so many vague qualifications that I (who am somewhat cultivated in the business of getting the "gist" of 'what a man says'), cannot at this fresh season state exactly what he did say. As to what he meant, I didn't comprehend this part at all. Only: he said the root, the radical idea of the words was, "animate life;" that they sometimes meant body and soul, and sometimes merely soul!

Then to his MS. He preached from an assumed basis that his present inquirer agreed that man was capable of immortality—of being made immortal, I suppose he meant—and that there was an intermediate conscious state of the dead. So it could not be a very radical argument. He said that it had been declared that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul was of heathenish origin; and he "replied" on this by boasting of the "glimmering of light" for the benighted heathen. [A palpable skipping and begging.] He said all material things had or were expected to have a consummation in this life: fruition. Not so the soul. If the soul was annihilated at the judgment, then it never had a fruition. [If granted, what then? Was anything ever more pitiful for a Doctor of Divinity?] Ergo, the soul must be immortal! That is—(we might ask?)—it must flower and fruit in holiness, or sin eternal! But he jumped so as to let none of his audience catch the logical conclusion of his thin speech.

He said he did not know but a "dissuasive" in the shape of an eternal hell was necessary for the moral government of the universe.

He said "eternal life" in the Scriptures was superimposed on life personal, and meant a blessed life. He said death, destroy, perdition, etc., were terms used in a tropical sense when describing the destiny of the impenitent. The never-dying worm of the unquenchable fire were brought forward at one sweep, as in themselves conclusive; and capped by the smoke of the torment which ascendeth for ever and ever.

I was really disappointed at the weakness of the effort. I thought the reverend Doctor could do better. But when invited to preach on this subject he was supplied with "Whitmore" and "Hastings," and asked to strike some new or unexploded reasoning if he could; and so he was reduced (?) to the weakest in despair of any. Can this be so?—I throw it out as an apology.

Of course the Doctor's rhetoric was elegant. And he will probably commence his new year with regrets over his publicly expressed distaste for that liberty on the part of Eld. Hopkins which resulted in the distribution of 500 handbills last night.

The fact is the Immortal Soulists are being pushed to their tents. Philosophy falsely so-called is their only recourse. "Candid Christians" must see the truth when they "face" it. And honest men, Christians or no Christians, who can read, can soon understand and know that the Bible doctrine is only eternal life through Christ.

It is supposed that Eld. Grant is snowed in; or has adjourned over in Chicago for the holidays. He was to have been in Vallejo last night. Anxiously expected here. A.

A Correspondent ("A") under date of Dec. 25th, writes:

We have just had a second edition of rain and wind storm, that has caused mingled rejoicing and sorrow. For the farmer's hope the first storm was welcomed, and was cause of great thankfulness, though the railroads did suffer, and travel except by river was interrupted. The second storm—prophesied by the signal corps, and disbelieved in up to the last moment by the majority of our people—has done great damage in various parts of the State, though an aggregate of good springing from it will undoubtedly tell of its beneficence before the spring closes. Now the very dryest of farms or ranches will bring forth abundantly. A little too much for some places, but surely enough for all.

Holiday week, and the Legislators are down here to spend their vacation. The Legislative stock of speaking ability does not seem to be up to the average; therefore there may be more talk at the present session than ever before. But with us more particularly the interest is in the probability of attention to the preachers that will organize the campaign for the Church at Sacramento next week. All the papers have announced the promised return of Eld. Grant, and spoken kindly of his past services in the city.

Twenty-five copies of Constable's great argument on the Duration and Nature of Future punishment have been received from you, and placed on sale. A new advertisement of the masterly work will be out in a day or two. It has told already heavily in our city and in Oakland.

We have not received a copy of THE TIMES for nearly a month—owing to the snow blockade, I suppose. Eld. Fassett preached yesterday morning on the Resurrection of the Dead, and his closing remarks brought tears from the eyes of many hearers. After listening to the Elder, I came across Market street and up Powell, and stepped into Trinity Church, where Dr. Lyman, (formerly pastor of the American Chapel adjacent to Rome), preaches. It is an elegant building, and was handsomely decorated for Christmas. Dr. Lyman — an eloquent speaker — had just commenced his discourse when I entered. (I thought I'd be in sermon-time.) His text was: "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." After discoursing for a few minutes on what constituted godly and saving repentance, the Doctor boldly and grandly made the second Advent proclamation. He spiritualized not at all. He said, of course, that whether the the Judgment Day was near or afar off, the decisive closing moment in our probation — in death — was confessedly near at hand. But he proclaimed: "All signs in the heavens and on the earth, so far as we can discover them, seem to warn us that we are in the 'last days' described by Christ and the apostles." He spoke of the destruction of Jerusalem, as a scene of dreadful horror; but not to be compared with the terrors of that great Day of Wrath, "which appears to be at our very doors." He besought his congregation to make haste and repent, for they knew not but the morrow would close the volume of time. A more emphatic Second Advent sermon could not be expected from the editor of the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

In front of the communion table, on the edge of the velvet cover, were these words:

"I come quickly."

"Amen: Even so, come, Lord JESUS."

In speaking of a meeting of the Episcopal Church Union, a few evenings since, Dr. Lyman gave similiar utterance.

The Episcopal Church, as most of your readers I presume are aware, always did hold to a literal second coming of Christ, having its Advent services largely devoted to the second coming, and all its forms of prayer based on the doctrine of a literal Second Coming. As—what could be closer to our hope?—"Through Jesus Christ our Lord, at whose second coming in glorious majesty to judge the world, the earth and the sea shall give up their dead; and the corruptible bodies of those who sleep in him shall be changed and made like unto his own glorious body," etc. I have been surprised often times, to find that some Adventists supposed that in doctrine they more nearly approached the Methodist or other denominations that would be termed 'dissenters' in England. Not so. "While the form of sound words" is abased in the Episcopal Church, it holds, by its letter transmitted for many generations, to the true pre-Millennarian faith.

A friend of Dr. Lyman told me this morning that the Doctor recently said to him, that he never rose from his couch at the beginning of the day without thinking, "What if this day is the last of time? Am I ready to meet Jesus?" So fully is he convinced that the end is at hand.

It is expected that Elds. Grant and Wilson will be at Vallejo next Sunday, and here in San Fransisco on the succeeding Lord's day. A great revival may be confidently hoped for in this city and at Sacremento under their united efforts. Let the prayers for them all contain a petition that nothing may occur to disturb the harmony of endeavor that should characterize the labors of all the friends of divine truth on this coast.

For my part, I propose to do what little I can for the cause, unchecked in disposition or zeal by the fact that I have been indirectly challenged as an "infidel," because I advocate the theory of a diversity of race-origin. I will not call him or his correspondent "infidel," for in so doing I should tell what I know is not the truth. We had better not ourselves fall into the sin of bigotry and epithet-tossing. Sometimes we call names because we have not sufficiently studied the case on which we raise and fling hard words.

California Paradise.

About forty-five miles south from San Francisco, is the beautiful and fertile valley of Santa Clara, twenty-five miles in length, and nineteen in width. It is walled in from the ocean by a beautiful range of mountains on the west; and also on the east, and south are mountain ranges, reminding one of the language concerning Jerusalem: "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem."

Three rivers take their rise in the mountains and run through the valley: the Gaudaloupe, Cayote, and Los Gatos.

The village of Santa Clara, and the city of San Jose is located within this valley three miles apart. The former contains three thousand, and the latter ten thousand inhabitants. San Jose is pronounced as if J was silent, and giving S the sound of Z and E the sound of A, and emphasizing the last letter, while giving a flowing pronounciation as if it was one word, thus: San Oza. The signification of which is St Joseph, in Spanish.

I have often heard of this valley through Br. and Sr. Reed, who reside in Santa Clara, who, in writing us, declared it to be "next to Paradise." Eld. Grant also, it will be remembered, was enraptured with its beauty and fertility, and well he might have been, as he was here in the month of April, when the fruits trees were in blossom, and all nature was in its virgin beauty. He made the remark I am told, that he never expected to get nearer to Paradise than this, in this world." A Baptist missionary direct from Palestine, said, "This valley is just as near like Palestine as could be, only it exceeded that country in almost every particular." Bayard Taylor, the world renowned traveler, once signified his intentions to make this his home, after his travels were ended, and selected the spot where to erect his dwelling.

My visit occurs during the holy-days, (Dec. 25–28) as by invitation of Br. and Sr. Reed we spent a few days with them. And though in mid-winter, I can imagine the truthfulness of all which has been said of the attractiveness of this sequestered spot on this coast, and on our curse-smitten planet. The long looked for rains have set in, causing the green grass to spring up and nature to begin to awake from her brief slumbers. This, with the multitude of evergreens cultivated, and the fact that many plants unkilled by frosts retain their leaves, and blossom through all the winter months in the yards, and gardens, make it appear to us like early spring.

Much pains is taken in the setting out of ornamental trees, and plants, and many house lots contain these together with various fruit trees, making each home attractive and pleasant. And in the gardens are seen vegetables and "garden sauce" of mature growth, and others just coming on as lettuce, beets, onions, etc., while the gardener is at work spading and preparing the growth for new seed.

Among the ornamental trees may be seen the following evergreens, the Australian Jum tree, having blue-green leaves; an exceeding fast grower, of majestic and towering height. It is said to reach the altitude of five hundred feet! The Pepper tree, with sea-green leaves, and possessing out-spreading branches which will seat underneath its shade three hundred people, when full grown. The Pine tree is noble, and appears even more beautiful than in our native land. The Italian Cypress, Arbor Vitæ, and other evergreen trees are left to grow natural, and, also, are trimmed in every conceivable shape. The Palm tree, and the Fan Palm are both most beautiful, their trunks being formed by unfolding leaves excinderd at the trunk and developed to any height the gardener chooses. Those trees that are not of this class, which add to the variety of the scenery in the season of their freshness, and when covered with foliage, are the California Maple, the Willow, the Cottonwood, and other trees familiar to us, with the Century Plant, and others, some of which are in blossom, with rose bushes bearing fully developed roses at this season of the year, give enchantment to the view.

FRUIT TREES.

Of course these are now silent in their own praise, being naked of folinge and barren of fruit. But we can imagine the fragrance from their abundant blossoms and the deliciousness of their beautiful fruit in their seasons. The Apple, Apricot, Peach, Pear, Plum, Cherry, Fig, Prune, Date, Pomegranate, Olive, Almond, etc., all abound in this valley. Who can conceive the charming sight to witness all these arranged in their glory, or loaded with their various fruits? There are orchards looking like forests in the distance, and under them are some fruits still ungathered, food for robins and other birds which begin to sing in the branches.

VINEYARDS

abound, which is a curiosity to one who has never before beheld them The vine is cultivated in rows with their trunks trimmed from one to ten feet in hight, and occupying acres of land. They are now being trimmed for another season, and are cut very close; and in fact all fruit bearing trees and vines are docked and trimmed closer than in any place I ever visited, and this is necessary to prevent the luxuriant growth from ruining the trees or breaking the branches.

Strawberries of every variety are cultivated. Ninty-tons are sent from Santa Clara per week, and one hundred and thirty tons from San Jose to San Francisco per week! And two crops are gathered a year.

The most beautiful white wheat is grown here—One man has sown this year 5000 acres.

PRIVATE GROUNDS.

These are like the Garden of Eden, so far as can be imitated in this world. To attempt a description is in vain.

One must think all the while passing through the pleasant walks, and thickets of trees, and the arbors of running vines, especially when all the trees, and plants, and vines are in their prime, of the first Paradise given to Adam and Eve. We visited two, and were well paid for the time spent in them in the many reflections awakened in our minds toward the great Creator of all, in giving such variety and beauty in his works for man's enjoyment, and in the contemplation of what must have been the first Eden of God on earth, and what glories await our world in its restitution, and when Paradise is regained. May we be there.

EARLY SETTLEMENT.

This valley was settled in 1780 by the Franciscan order of monks. Their valuable property now in this valley is in possession of the Jesuits. The old towns were made of adobe buildings from one to two stories high. They were partially destroyed in 1783 by a flood caused by tidal waves from the ocean, the inhabitants having to flee to the mountains for safety. In 1786 their buildings were thrown down by an earthquake. The ruins of the old mission house are still remaining; and several buildings are as perfect as when first erected, save their age and antique appearance.

Between Santa Clara and San Jose, a distance of three miles, is a turnpike on each side of which are set out the California willows, which afford an arbor and shelter from the summer sun. These trees were set out by order of the Franciscans Fathers in 1790, near one hundred years ago, under which the procession of Priests and Roman Catholics walked between the towns bareheaded.

COLLEGES.

At Santa Clara is a Catholic College for boys and young men, with a large theater building attached. The Mission grounds occupy ten acres enclosed At San Jose is "the College of Notre Dame" for girls and young ladies. Both these schools are well patronized. The State Normal School is building at this city, and a Methodist College.

PRESENT INHABITANTS.

Though this valley is settled with many rich and well-to-do citizens, besides those whose business calls them here, there are those who are poor and live in poor dwellings, but none the less unworthy for that.

The widow of Dr. Nicholas Smith of Hallowell, Me., is now a resident with her daughters in San Jose. One of her daughters led the way, coming to this land for her health, being consumptive. The result was favorable. Sr. Smith is hearty and well, full of faith and still waiting for the Lord. She is comfortably situated, and so is her family; and they have no desire to return to Maine.

Br. and Sr. Reed are located in Santa Clara in a comfortable yet humble dwelling 15x21 feet, and fifteen feet in height to the ridge pole, with a small shed attached. This little cottage is hired for $50 per year, and is surrounded with fruit trees. Fruit is given them in great abundance. The fruit dish was brought in last evening having thirteen kinds. One pear measured twelve and one half inches around and seven inches in length.

This little dwelling is a place of retreat after battling with the world, and for the truth. Here they retire for a season and recruit and get fresh strength to go out into the storm again, and preach, exhort, sing, and scatter tracts and books, bearing their own expenses, unless Providence raises up kind friends to aid them. They are doing a noble work on this coast. We have consulted about future plans. We have made the days we have spent together days of prayer for guidance and a new anointing for the work. Our plans are to have this people have "the gospel of the kingdom." From this humble retreat we hope to go out as did the disciples from Jerusalem, "endowed with power from on high!" We are despised by a haughty, lukewarm church and ministry, and a wicked world. Yet as a feeble people we are making both to think of these things as never before. The church is stirred and trembles at the prevailing of the truth, and the world hide their fears under scoffing. The San Francisco Chronicle says: "There is an article of faith in this office that when the angel Gabriel blows his horn he can't escape an interview with some number of our ubiquitous staff, even at that late hour."
O. R. FASSETT.

Historical Extracts.

Turning to Josephus' discourse on hades, (p. 608, sec. 5,) we find the following statement: "This is the discourse concerning hades wherein the souls of all men are confined until a proper time which God hath determined, when he will make a resurrection of all men from the dead; not procuring a transmigration of souls from one body to another, but raising again these very bodies, which you Greeks seeing to be dissolved do not believe in their resurrection. But learn not to disbelieve; for while you believe the soul is created, and yet is immortal, by God according to the doctrine of Plato that God is able when he hath raised to life that body which was made as a compound of the same elements, to make it immortal."

Now we wish to notice it is here stated that the body is compounded of the same elements as the soul. And by turning to Plutarch's history (p. 610,) we find Josephus' statement in regard to the philosophy of Plato, confirmed. He says Justice was the next topic, and when Plato asserted the happiness of the just, and the wretched condition of the unjust, the king was stung, and being unable to answer his arguments he asked the philosopher what business he had in Sicily, and finally had him sold into bondage; for, according to his own maxim, said he, this man cannot be unhappy. A just man he says must be happy in a state of slavery as well as in a state of freedom.

We consider the king's test quite a severe one, but at the same time just, in acordance with the philosophy of Plato. We fail to see how this doctrine can be mad to harmonize with the sufferings of the patriarchs, and prophets, and all Christendom, and Christ himself.

But again turn to Josephus, (p. 493). In his discourse to his countrymen, the Jews, about the time he surrendered to the Romans, when he was in the cave where the forty cast lots and became each other's executioners rather than surrender to the Romans, he says: "The bodies of all men are indeed mortal and are created out of corruptible matter; but the soul is ever immortal and is a part of Divinity, that inhabits our bodies;" thus contradicting his previous statement that the soul and body are made of the same element, now stating that the soul is a part of Divinity, (which must eternally suffer, according to Plato's teaching) and that the body is made of corruptible matter.

Plutarch, (p. 457) speaking of Alexander's exploits, says in the course of his expedition he took ten Gymnosophits, or Indian philosophers, who had been principally concerned in instigating Sabeas, their ruler, to revolt, and had brought numberless other troubles upon the Macedonians. As these ten were counted the most acute and concise in their answers, he put the most difficult questions to them that he could think of, and at the same time declared he would put to death the first who answered wrong, and after him all the rest, the oldest among them to be judge.

He demanded of the first, "Which are the most numerous; the living, or the dead?" He answered, "The living. The dead no longer exist."

The second was asked whether the earth or the sea produced the largest animals. He answered, "The earth; for the sea is a part of it."

The third was asked, which is the craftiest of all animals. Answer, "That with which man is not yet acquainted," refering to man himself.

The fourh, What was the reason for persuading Sabeas to revolt. "Because," said he, "I wished him either to live with honor, or die as a coward deserves."

The fifth, "Which do you think the oldest, the day or the night?" Answer, "The day, by one day."

The sixth, "What are the best means for a man to make himself loved?" Answer, "If possessed of great power do not make yourself feared."

The seventh, "How might man be a God?" "By doing what is impossible for man to do."

The eighth, "Which is strongest, life or death?" Answer, "Life, because it bears so many evils."

The ninth, "How long is it good for man to live?" Answer, "As long as he does not prefer death to life."

Then turning to the judge he ordered him to give sentence. The old man said, "In my opinion they have all answered each one worse than the other." If this is thy judgment, said Alexander, thou shalt die first. No, replied the philosopher, except you choose to break your word, for you declared the man who answered worst should die first. The king loaded them with presents and dismissed them.

I think these philosophers, which were before Plato's time, were correct in their answers as to man's nature and the state of the dead. So we find that even heathen philosophy in the early ages (previous to its apostasy,) was in harmony with the Bible doctrine. Now I wish to inquire who these philosophers were, and whether their doctrine and testimony are reliable or not. Turning to Josephus (p. 587,) we find Aristotle, who was one of Plato's best students, making some statements and admissions that are very important, being the evidence of an opponent. He says: "I think therefore that it is evident to everybody, that Cherilus means us, because the Solymean mountains are in our country wherein we inhabit, as is also the lake called Asphaltites, for this is a broader and larger lake than any other which is in Syria, and thus Cherilus does make mention of you." 'But know that not only the lowest sort of the Grecians, but those that are had in the greatest admiration for their philosophic improvements among them did not only know the Jews, but when they lighted upon any of them admired them also, it is easy for any one to know; for Clearchus who was the scholar to Aristotle, and inferior to no one of his class, in his first book concerning sleep, says that Aristotle, his master, related what followed of a Jew, and sets down Aristotle's own discourse with him. The account is this as written down by him. Now for a great part of what this Jew said it would be too long to recite it; but what includes in it both wonder and philosophy, it may not be amiss to discourse of now that I may be plain with Hyperochides. I shall herein seem to thee to relate wonders and what will resemble dreams themselves. Hereupon Hyperochides answered modestly and said for that very reason it is that all of us are very desirous of hearing what thou art going to say. Then replied Aristotle, for this cause it will be the best way to imitate the rule of rhetoricians which requires us first to give an account of the man, and of what nation he was, that we may not contradict our master's direction. Then said Hyperochides, go on if it please thee. This man, (then answered Aristotle,) was by birth a Jew and came from Cœle-Syria. These Jews are derived from the India philosophers. They are named by the Indians Calamis, and by the Syrians Sudas, and took their name from the country they inhabit, which is called Judea; but the name of their city is a very awkward name, for they call it Jerusalem.'

"In further speaking of this same man, he says: 'Now this man, when he was hospitably treated by a great many, came down from the upper country to the place near the sea, and became a Grecian, insomuch that when we ourselves happened to be in Asia about the same place whither he came, he conversed with us and with other philosophic persons, and made a trial of our philosophy; and as he had lived with many learned men he communicated to us more information than he received from us.'"

This is Aristotle's account of the matter as given to us by Clearchus, and this is sufficient, for it takes away from the advocate of immortality even the seeming evidence of heathen philosophy by Aristotle's admissions and statements, and he was one of Plato's best scholars.

ELD. JOHN BROWN,
Brownsville, Houston Co., Minn.

From Br. J. W. Farrow, Carrollton, Ill.

I cannot keep a document from THE TIMES office in my possession. They are seized with avidity as soon as I have hastily perused them, and are gone on their mission, spreading light and truth wherever they go. God bless the heaven-sent truths they bear. And though the tracts and papers fall as silently as snow flakes, may they take root deeply, bring forth fruit abundantly unto the glory of God and the salvation of souls. I have taken my stand for the plain Bible truths as against anti-Bible theology. For this I have been most bitterly persecuted. But having obtained help of the Lord, I have so far been able to stand,—being planted on the Bible. Oh, what a sure foundation! And not being overthrown, my opponents are now trying to retreat in good order. But not a few have deserted the old ship of inferential theology, and came boldly over to the chapter-and-verse-theology of the Bible. Hence I am strengthened in the Lord, confirmed in his word, and determined to press on. I now thank the Lord that I am counted worthy to suffer for his truth's sake.

From D. S. Clark, Arbor Hill, Iowa.

I commenced meetings Dec. 16, in the S. H. where you held your meetings last winter; and they had not forgotten the instruction you gave them on that occasion. Commenced with a good interest which continues to the present time, although we have had some very cold weather since the meetings commenced. Most of the time the house has been so full that we could not do as much as we should have liked in getting the unconverted to come out and take a decided stand. I find in holding meetings that we cannot do too much by way of encouraging the sinner to break away, and that by having them come forward to a seat. I know some say that the Lord can bless them just as well in one part of the house as another. So he could bless them as well at home as at meeting, if they only would give themselves to him. God works by means, and I mean by the help of the Lord to use all the means of grace that he has put into my hands to get my fellow men to make a start to serve the Lord.

Since the meetings commenced there have some twenty-five or thirty started to live Christians. Br. Nakes' son with the rest, and now all the family profess to love Jesus; also their granddaughter, Alice Raymond, has come out very decided on the Lord's side. They all feel to bless God for what he has done for them and their neighbors.

Br. Stowell's family have started for the kingdom, with others. Still they come. My prayer is they all may get ready for the coming of Jesus, which I believe is very near. Let us awake to new labor for sinners, that they may be getting ready for that event. I never felt more in the work than I do at the present time. I expect to hold some meetings at Dexter when I get through here. Sr. Shurk and her son William came over to our meeting in this neighborhood, and he was blessed, and went home a better young man than when he came. How blessed it is to feel that God loves us and that we are now ready for his kingdom. Remember me and mine that we may be fully ready when the Master comes.

From R. B. Dutton, Center Point, Iowa.—I have come to a stand-still, and as Br. Burr says, I am "being toughened" to begin at the starting-point. I came out here into this big prairie where there are no Adventists and bought me a little home, and I thought, by the help of the Lord, I could get men to see the truth. The inhabitants, mostly, made no profession of religion. I thought it would be an easy task. I appointed a meeting for Sunday, to get an expression from the people on the subject of a protracted meeting. They seemed quite anxious to have it, but the devil had the inside track and I had to settle with him before I could go any further with my meeting. To explain: the sub-director refused to let me have the school house on the ground that the fuel was bought by taxation, and should not be burned for meetings. I asked him if that was the only objection. He said no, and added that there were no lights for that purpose. "Is that all?" "Yes," said he. "Then," said I, "we will begin our meeting here to-morrow night, if the Lord will."

The next morning I took my team and went to the timber, some seven miles away, and got a load of wood; took some candles; and with a light heart and a free spirit, feeling rather independent, I went to fill my appointment. I found a good many people gathered. Being quite hoarse, I offered the congregation some of our Minstrels, and asked them to sing while we were waiting for the rest of the congregation to come. But instead of taking the Minstrels, an old Calvinistic brother (about the only person who made any pretensions to religion) rose up in the midst of the congregation, and said: "When I left Old Kaintuck I brung one of the best song books, and some of the best hymns, too, that ever was in this country." And he drew from his pocket one of Dr Watt's first collection of hymns, which take us away, nobody knows where. Some of these we sung; and so we made a start, and had a few good meetings.

There seemed to be an influence for good on the minds of the people. But our Calvinist brother soured on us, and said he had rather his children would go to hell than have them go to heaven with us. Then the Prince that makes bad weather set to to stop our meetings, and it snowed and blowed until the snow was about eighteen inches deep on a level, and drifted until many of the roads are impassable now.

We feel as though we had scattered some bread that may be gathered by and by, and intend to renew the contest as soon as convenient. I ask the prayers of the dear ones in our behalf. Can not some preaching brother come and help me?

NO ROOM FOR HIM.—Even yet, Christ Jesus has to lie out in waste places very often, because there is no room for Him in the inn—no room for Him in our hearts, because of our ungodliness. There is no room in the inn, and we put Him in the manger, and he lies outside our faith, coldly and dimly conceived by us.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

Tuesday Afternoon, Jan. 16, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

The Advent Christian Times is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a year. One Dollar for six months.

☞ The Times maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saints' inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil: the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The W. A. C. P. Association is composed of ministers in good standing in the various Conferences, and delegates from churches composing the same, meeting at least once each year for the choice of officers and the transaction of other business. The officers are a Board of Trustees as follows:

Joshua V. Himes, President; Wm. Sheldon, Vice President; D. R. Mansfield, Treasurer; O. S. Knapp, Auditor; Wm. L. Himes, Secretary; F. Burr, O. R. Fassett, and A. S. Calkins, Publishing Committee.

Joshua V. Himes, Business Agent,

To whom all communications should be addressed.

That Reaper.

Will not the ministry call the attention of farmers to the fine chance we offer them to obtain a good Reaper at a low price? Help us sell this machine, and you will help the cause in so doing.

Wanted

We will be obliged to any one who will give us the following P. O. Addresses.

W. R. Howe, Kansas; E. P. Burdett, formerly of Hancock Co. Ill. tf

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

Our Debt Pledges.

Some months since we made a proposition for pledges to the amount of the interest-bearing debt of the Association. There have been some responses, and not a few have paid in money for the special purpose of lightening that load. The amount of the debt is now reduced to about $600. There are pledges to the amount of $135, to be paid whenever this amount is subscribed. Only $465 more will rid us of this load. Shall we have it? Some urge that the pledges are not the best way. Perhaps not. Yet those who loaned their money prefer to receive it back in as large sums as possible. Hence if the amount is pledged, and then all paid in about the same time, it will be more convenient. But our friends can please themselves, and give outright, as they choose. The amount needed is a little more than we had hoped, owing to there being more interest due than we had reckoned. The case stands thus:

Amount of debt, Jan. 1, '72 ....$600
Pledges Go 135

Shall we close the account the present month? Why not?

To Correspondents.

A. Y. Z. Received, and papers sent....E. N. BLISS. The Editor may possibly come and help you this winter. He intends making a visit to every church in the ... but we know not where you can find a helper. ... are wanted where one can be had. ... your regular P. O. Address.... G. W. CROSBY. We have not a copy of that number left. You ... something on that point in the Quarterly we sent you.... W. A. ALLEN. Will send.... J. PERSON. All right. No trouble.... J. W. FARROW. Do ... know where to get the work you speak of.... C. L. JONES. It was Cr and paper sent to I. L.... A. ARMOUR. Yes.... P. L. FRY. We have never seen ..., but could get one from London, if desired. J. S. LAWYER. Thanks for papers. We get the Standard now.... L. LYMAN. Thank you.... P. W. MATTS. We have not a copy of that No. of the Banner, but we shall reprint Br. Brown's article by and by, revised.... E. N. BLISS. Will give it.... A. ALDRICH. Thank you.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of The Times, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawyer, M. B. Geer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Blak, I. C. Welcome, J. F. Huber, Grand st., N. Y. church, Aurora (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. E. Brown, M. F. Wistrom, R. W. Wilson, R. M. Lampard.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $140. See advertisement.

Pledges.

The undersigned agree to pay the sums affixed to their names, toward paying the debt of the Western Association (about $1,000) whenever the full amount of the debt shall have been pledged.

H Hubbard, $5,00; S Pike (pd.) 10,00; B F Betts, $5; Thos Davidson, 5,00; G E Merrill, 5,00; H W Norville, 5,00; F A Childs, 25,00 (pd); Jas P Moore, 1,00; A C Huston, 4,00; A Brother, 5,00; A Brother, 150,00; A Friend of The Times, 25,00; G Shurlieff (pd), 5,00; R Holder, 2 50; J F Huber, 5,00; R Mann, 5,00; Mary L Hunt (pd), 5,00; L S Conner, 1; E Cheney, 2 00; O N. $1; S Nye, $25; Cascade (Iowa) church, $10 00; L. H. Ferrell (pd.) $10,0; R. Visser, 1 00; H. M. Jones, 5,00; J. Lowry, 5,00; R. H Evans, 2, 0; R. W. Wilson (pd), 25 00; L. S. Palmer, 5,00; D. D. Reed (pd), 2,00; H Zader (pd), 2,00; R. H. Evans (pd), 2,00; L. Tuttle, (pd), 50c; D. C. Corwin (pd), 1,00; D. A. Dickinson, (pd.) 1 00; C. S. Hall, 10,00; A Friend (pd), 1,00; A Edwards (pd), 1 00; E Kennedy (pd), "Amicus" 10,00; M C Lardier (pd), 5 00; K Cole (pd), 1,00; Wm S Miller 1,00; T Shipley (pd), 2 00, S S Leutier (pd), 1,00; J. H. Bruce (pd) 5 00; S E Ragland (pd), 1,00; G W Smith (pd), 1,00; A W Porter (pd), 1,00; M J Stearns (pd), 1,00; A S Johnson (pd), 5 00; C Palmer (pd), 50c; M S Welden (pd), 75c; M Campbell (pd), 1,00; A Watson, (pd), 1,00.

It does seem to us that this list of pledges does not grow as fast as it should. We are doing something toward extinguishing our debt, but not enough. Seven more "hundreds" would wipe it out. Many are doing nobly. Will not others respond soon.

Communications.

G E Merrill (2) J D Jones E Drew M M Eastman S S Brewer P S G Watson L C McKinstry R H Gresham C C Marston M J James N Field J Bower Delia J A Newton A A, M S L Miles, A.

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged.......................$472.29

E Williamson.........	50	Toulon church.......	$1 10
Two sisters, Detroit..	1 00	A S Johnson.........	5 00
J Prosser............	25	J L Russell.........	5 00
T Virgin.............	1 15	J W Graham.........	2 00

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, JAN. 13.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

A F Dugger
M L S Miles
S E Ragland
J F Atwood
O B Quimby
W S Carter
C W Smith
J W Hard
J McLean
J Prosser
J W Rosbrook
J Fellows
H Munger
G F McNorme
J L Russell
N R Sutton
A A Phelps
S B Mabey
J Carver
S Babcock
C P Dow
J Towsley
J Backmore
F Atterbury
N Jewett
W S Miller
A B Johnson
L Shootler
T Shipley
I P Burke
N Matthews
M E Weston
A F Dugger
P Hitchcock
J A Newton
M Cook
J H Bruce
G Shurlieff
D L Palsgrove
S F Weare
W Cornell
J L Hudson
L D F Armstrong
C A Sumner
F Burr
A J Young
B H Hall
O L Garlic
L M Snell
A B Cushing
S P Whitney
A Lewis
C H Albertson
J Bower
C C Stanbro
J Gildersleeve
E H Durand
N H Doolittle
S M Mack
J H Patton
R J Arnot
R H Williams
J B Morgan
W N Murrells
J N Porter
L M Jackson
M A Seymour
G W Prime
O G Watkins
H J Goodwin
E VanVelzer
P W Matts
W D Peavy
W Leaf
E Chapman
C K Gile
L Lyman
H Wislett
C Cole
P Baker
J Powerman
W Ragland
N O Moore
W Usher
A W Averill
O D Gibson
M B Mills
F P Pierce
C M Clare
L B Bennett
N J Wade
A Bailey
M Smith
J McMichael
A M Sidwell
M C Lardier
C L Gilbert
E Williamson
D Crane
L A Huntley
M C Gillespie
J Merrill
P F Willoughby
J S Brandebury
H J Goodwin
L Battolph
L Curtiss
P Livingstone
A Morse
J D Mayfield
W Churchill
P Hitchcock
M L Turner
H Puterbaugh
E Scalte
D S Clark
E H Jacobs
J Snook
N O Moore
R Price
A B Cushing
C Carpenter
A Wheeler
N Matthews
M Wistrom
G V Greenman
L M Judkins
G W Hurd
R D Hindman
E Williams
W Colton
E L Stoughton
W M Palmer
G W Hurd
W Parson
R A Miller
D Habat
C M Keves
G S Bremer
P Foster
S J Buswell
E O W
C C Marston
J Young
A W Porter
J M Wright
M Brown
B F Mikesell
R Mann
J W Graham
T Virgin
J A Smith
R Taber
G W Miller
H D Brown
F Burr
A Gilmore
A A Stiles
E Haff
J Carr
J S Barlow
N Collins
J P Barnes
W C Hicks
J Barnhart
F S Smith
R Russell
J H S Mowrey
W Kidney
A B Wilson
R A Hakes
G E Merrill
F J Houghton
R Southwood
N Matthews
M Brodbent
G Thompson
E A Carter
J Wheeler
M Carroll
J F Robinson
T McLane
J W Burroughs
W J Custar
E Cook
E S Jennings
J F Florey
C Palmer
E Pike
J Averill
A S Johnson
H Botsford
J Squires
E R Baker
M J Stearns
E S Penwell
J R Mitchell
A Watson
M Campbell
L N Snell
W Nichols
S Whetstone
W Kyle
C R Paige
A E Babcock (2)
N O
W C Hicks
G Wright jr
J W Hays
C R Griggs
J Walker
P Hammer
V Hunt
G W Hurd (2)
A S Dean
W F Fahnestock
R Ralston
B R Bentley
S C Raymond
G E Merrill
A King
D S Clark
Z Wood
G Thomson
C C Marston
M C Russell
E Drew
S Nye
S S Brewer
P S G Watson
A J Marsh
R R Dutton
A P Moore
T M Preble
E C Andrus
N Field
C C Marston
C H Foster
A F Dugger
M J Janes
J H Whitmore
J M Orrock
J I Leslie
M S Hall
E P Daniels
N Field
N C Miller
T H Rapel
S Stuart
H W Betton
J Brown
R P Hoge
A S Johnson
N Ronquist
J M Snook
H A King
E Everett
P L Fry
O R Fassett
A Foven
M E Howe
L M Stoddard
J G Watson
J R P Well
F S Hugues
G S Dremple
S G Mabee
H M Dabey
J M Bowling
F S Morgan
E E Bush
J Brier
I Everett
F Chittenden

Books and Tracts by Mail.

F Burr
J McMichael
J G Bush
G W McClure
J W Osborn
E A Marsh
C L Gilbert
P Hitchcock
A J Young
G A Bremer (2)
O G Watkins
J Chittenden
N Matthews
M A Tibbetts
W M Palmer
G J Williams
J Pine
R M Lampard (2)
E Temple
M E Howe
A Edwards
W Churchill
G W Prime
A M
S S Huntley
C M Keve (2)
E Chase
E A Brown
J L McLeon
E H Durand
S M Mack
H Willett
J Bowerman
J A Hooker
R H Williams
S B Mabey
O G Watkins
P Livingston
J S Brandeburg
B J Goodwin

By Express—C P Dow

Book Notices, Etc.

The Herald of Health is one of the best magazines devoted to Hygenic topics, which is praise enough for any journal. Published by Wood & Holbrook, 15 Laight St., New York, at $1 per annum, with Premium Book; $1 25 without Premium.

The Little Corporal is now published by John E. Miller, still at Chicago. It is an excellent monthly for the young, and deserves to prosper. $1.50 a year.

Littell's Living Age for the new year has not come to hand. It is, however, one of the most valuable periodicals of the day—a mirror of British and, to some extent, Continental and American opinion. $8 a year. Littell & Gay, Boston, Mass., Publishers.

The Chicago Pulpit is a new and commendable publishing enterprise, undertaken by the Index Company, 433 West Jackson St., Chicago. It proposes to give the best efforts of preachers of different denominations in that city. We trust the Adventists will be allowed space for at least one of Br. Burr's best efforts. We wish the Pulpit success in any event. $2.50 a year; $2 when taken in clubs of five or more.

Obituary.

ANNIS.—In Milroy, Ill. Dec. 1871, Catherine Mero, wife of Eleson Annis: aged 78 years.

Sr. Annis was born in Maine, where, at the early age of fourteen years she gave her heart to the Savior, and united with the F. W. Baptist church. She and her husband, with whom she lived over half a century, were among the first settlers of Illinois. Her last years were attended with much suffering but we trust she sleeps in Jesus, waiting his voice to call her to a life that will know no sorrow.

The consolation God's precious word affords on such occasions, was presented by the writer.

C. W. Smith.

Morning Star please copy.

Marriages.

WILLIAMSON—HARRISON.—At the residence of the bride's father, Edwin Harrison, by Eld. E. H. Durand, Mr William J. Williamson and Miss Elizabeth Ann Harrison, all of Grant, Huron Co. Mich.

ANDERSON—RICHARDS.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Buchanan, Jan. 8, 1872, by Eld. D. R. Mansfield, Mr. Frank O Anderson, of Niles, and Miss Laura B. Richards.

PATTY—COZAD.—In Milroy, Knox Co. Ill., Jan. 7, 1872 by Eld. C. W. Smith, Mr. Josiah Patty and Miss Alice Cozad, both of Milroy.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

Having closed my labors at my trade for the season, I am ready to attend to calls to hold meetings abroad. Brethren wishing my labors, who feel that the interest is such as will sustain a meeting, can address me at Leslie, Ingham Co. Mich. C. Fox.

Notice.

Churches, or individuals, desiring my services as an Instructor in vocal music, or as a Minister, are hereby informed that I am now at liberty to travel, and give lessons in music, or preach, as may be desired.

Please address, G. W. Green, Box 16, Memphis, Clark Co., Indiana.

Notice.

The 1st anniversary of the organization of the Advent Christian church at Arena. We propose (the Lord willing) to hold a general meeting of days on the above occasion, Jan. 26. We cordially invite our brethren to meet with us and work for the Lord. Eld. Adrian and other preaching brethren will be present to assist. Come with a zeal to labor for the perishing

Geo Thomson.

Appointments.

CONFERENCE REGISTER.

Hoosick Valley Conference, Q. M. Hebron, N Y. Jan. 17-21

Women's Christian Association, Semi-annual meeting, Charlestown, Mass. Jan. 17-24.

Western District, Wis. Q. M. Brunswick, Eau Claire Co. Feb. 1-4.

Illinois, Annual Meeting, Rochelle, Ogle Co., Jan. 18.

Iowa A. C. C. Q. M., Manchester, Feb. 22-25

Indiana, Northern District, Big Indian, Jan. 18-21.

MICHIGAN.

Detroit, as Brn. Sears and Lindsay may arrange Sunday, Jan. 21. J. M. Snook.

The third Q. M. for the Eastern District of Michigan will be held at Lapeer, commencing Wednesday eve. Feb. 21, and hold over Lord's day. The Rail Road is now in running order from Port Huron to Flint. The Brn. have a pleasant and commodious chapel and plenty of accommodations, with large hearts, and hope to see a large attendance. J. M. Snook, Sec'y.

The third Q. M. for the Southern District of Mich. will be held at the Munger S. H. five miles north of Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co. commencing Wednesday eve. March 20, and hold over Lord's day. Teams will be at the station at Eaton Rapids on the arrival of the p. m. trains from Grand Rapids and Jackson. Eaton Rapids is on the Grand River Valley R. R. Let there be a full attendance.

J. M. Snook, Sec'y. pro tem.

ILLINOIS.

Hadley Station, Pike Co. Friday Eve. Jan. 26, and over Sunday. Subject: Man as he was, is, and shall be. J. G. Bush.

Elida, Winnebago Co., Jan. 17-26, as Br. Spotswood may arrange. C. C. Marston.

Afton, Sabbath, Jan. 21.
Beemerville Feb. 4.
Milroy, Feb. 11. C. W. Smith.

Amboy, Lee Co., Jan. 28.
Bureau Co., in Br. Bliss' neighborhood as he may arrange Jan. 29 to Feb. 2.
Rochelle, Ogle Co. Feb. 4-7.
Ackerson's S. H., Ogle Co., at Br. Ackerson may arrange Feb. 7. C. C. Marston.

The Northern Ill. A. C. Conference will hold their next annual session at Rochelle, Ogle Co., commencing Thursday, Jan. 18, 1872. The ministers and delegates of the several churches are earnestly requested to be present.

S. B. Mabey, Sec'y. N. W. Spencer, Pres't.

INDIANA.

Holton, and vicinity, as Br. Case may arrange, Jan. 18-31, G. W. Green.

The third Q. M. of the Northern District of Indiana A. C. C. will be held at Big Indian, six miles N. E. of Royal Center, on the Chicago and Cincinnati R. R., commencing Jan. 18, and holding over Sunday.

A cordial invitation is extended to all.

E. C. Andrus, Sec'y.

OHIO.

I will commence a meeting at Millville Hocking Co. Ohio on Saturday Jan. 20 and continue for days. A. E. Babcock.

MINNESOTA.

Medo (Blue Earth Co.) in Br. Weston's neighborhood, Wednesday eve. Jan 17 to continue through the week if the brethren so arrange.

Shelbyville, Brown S. H. Tuesday eve. Jan. 23.

S. C. Wellcome.

IOWA.

The second Q. M. of the A. C. C. of Manchester District commences Thursday, Feb. 22, with the Elk Valley church, at the Otisville S. H. continuing over the Sabbath.

This is comparatively a new field. Let every lover of Jesus and his cause be there. Come, brethren, laden with the Spirit of Jesus, praying in the Holy Ghost. Come, to work for God and his cause. M. J. Janes, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN

Black River Falls, Eve, Jan. 29.
Wrightsville, as Br. Chase may arrange, Jan. 30.
Augusta, Shaver's S. H. Jan. 31.

P. W. Hough.

The Second Q. M., in the Western district of Wisconsin will be held with the church in Brunswick, Eau Clare Co. Feb. 1, and over Lord's day. Let us have a grand rally of warm hearts, with sweet words for each other, and noble testimonies for Jesus. Come the first day.

P. W. Hough.

NEW YORK.

Regular meetings are held by church at 128 West 24th St., New York city: three times on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings.

T. J. Cox.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Charlestown Jan. 17, and onward.

The remainder of my time on this trip East is engaged. E. S. Jennings.

Advertisements.

"WIDE AWAKE and Fast Asleep" a $10.00 pair of superb French Oil Chromos—subjects life size—exquisite fac similes of original oil paintings, given away to every subscriber to

HENRY WARD BEECHER'S

Great Literary, Religious, weekly newspaper. Agents having great success! One took 1,000 names in three months; another 672 in 35 days: another 118 in one week; one 61 in one day, and many others equally well, making from $5 and $10 to $40 per day. Takes on sight! An old agent who knows, says: "I think it the best business for canvassers ever offered. Sorry I did not engage sooner." Pays better than any book agency. A rare chance to make money.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED!

Intelligent men and women wanted everywhere. If you wish good territory, send early for circular and terms! J. B. FORD & CO., 27 Park Place, New York; 11 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; 285 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill. 1t

"HOW TO GO WEST."

Forty years ago, Illinois was as far West as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of Progress and Improvement, the word West has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid Line of Railroad.

This Line of Railroad is the Burlington Route, which starts from Chicago by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and, running through Burlington, reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific, and other railroads running from those cities

People going to Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, California, or any point in the Territories, will study their own interests by going "By way of Burlington," for the rates of that Line are always as low as any other, and it is the best Route in the West, therefore you are more sure of your safety and comfort.

The Burlington Route has admirably answered the question "How to go West?" by the publication of an excellent pamphlet, containing a large, truthful map of the Great West, and much interesting and valuable information, which can be obtained free of charge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

VICK'S

FLORAL GUIDE

For 1872.

The First Edition of Two Hundred Thousand copies just published. It is elegantly printed on fine tinted paper, in two colors, and Illustrated with over 300 engravings of Flowers and Vegetables, and

TWO COLORED PLATES.

The most beautiful and instructive Catalogue and Floral Guide in the world—112 pages, giving thorough directions for the culture of flowers and vegetables, ornamenting grounds, making walks, &c.

A Christmas present for my customers, but forwarded to any who apply by mail, for ten cents, only one-quarter the cost. Address, JAMES VICK, Rochester, New York.

WAIT'S

TURBINE WATER WHEEL.

HUDSON RIVER CHAMPION

A WORD TO MILL MEN.

I have been building the Jonval Turbine for the past eight years. Have built some seven or eight different kinds of wheels. Am acquainted with nearly all the first class wheels in the country, and am fully persuaded that the Champion stands alone without a rival. Early I discovered that the tangential and centrifugal forces of the water, exerted a tremendous power which is expended against the outer rims of those wheels, which discharge vertically and against the scrolls and curbs of most other kinds, which is lost to all useful effect.

For a long time I studied and experimented carefully, to bring this wasted power into use without injuring the other high qualities of the Wheels.

My efforts have been crowned with success, and I can now offer you a Turbine which can compete successfully with all others in the economical use of the water, while for simplicity of construction, strength and durability, it is the champion of the world.

It has no complication of gates, with their multitude of Levers no cranks, pin, segments nor pinions to get out of order. No series of leaky joints; no rubbing surface to wear away, to waste the water: nothing to ache the wheel but water; hence it will never wear out. There is no lateral motion, nor do their steps wear out like other wheels.

The Jonval Turbine has given the highest percentage of power ever attained in any public test. Several of these Jonvals have been taken out which were in perfect order (having run but a short time), and the Champion placed in the same curbs, venting the same amount of water, and have obtained from six to eight per cent. more power in every instance than the Jonvals gave.

These wheels are perfectly proof against injury from flood-wood. Should any pieces get into the curb which could not pass through the wheel, you have simply to open a door (like a safe or cupboard), enter the curb, and remove the obstruction, and it is all ready for work again. This can be done in five minutes.

They are now in operation in every section of the country, giving unbounded satisfaction and taking the places of all other wheels. The extreme low price for which they are sold astonishes everybody.

Circulars sent free. Address

P. H. WAIT, Sandy Hill, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4. Fifty copies, $35. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—The Times and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $3.50 a year.

FREE. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage. H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—The Times and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.

This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to The Times can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

THRESHING MACHINE.

For Sale. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $600. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $350. Warranted as represented.

N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure. (tf) Address, A. J. Stone, Hesperia, Mich.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS.

Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new 7 strand White Wire Clothes Lines? They last forever, sample free, so there is no risk. Address at once Hudson River Wire Works cor. Water St. and Maiden Lane, N. Y. or 16 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. [n14-tjan28

THE CLOW REAPER.

This celebrated piece of farm machinery, by Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., was tested with sixteen other Reapers at Ripon, Wis., in July, 1870, and received the highest encomiums of them all. The standard of perfection for quality of work was forty. The Clow Reaper was marked forty, or perfect by the committee. The other machines ranged from 39½ down to 21½. This machine is specially admirable for its light draught—which saves horseflesh: it can be drawn all day by a pair of light horses. For its simplicity—which decreases liability to breakage or derangement. It has only one hundred pieces, where other machines have three times that number. For the arrangement for lowering and raising the cutters. For the facilities for turning and backing. It can be used as a mower as well as a reaper. No cog-wheels are used to drive the sickle. It has had fewer accidents from breakage than any other machine.

USUAL PRICE, $160.00;

but the machine presented to The Times office will be

SOLD FOR ONE HUNDRED & TWENTY DOLLARS!

If taken soon.

For any further information, address;

J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich.

Our Book and Tract Column

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $5, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 5c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures, with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 25c. post paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 20c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 3. 5c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 2 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 26. BUCHANAN, JANUARY 23, 1872. WHOLE NO. 406.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

J A Peterson
188 No Curtis St
15 '72

Contents.

Personal; Field's Discussion; Paul's Expectation and Desire; Br. W J. Cumming's Case, E. H. Durand; To All Whom it May Concern, P. W. Hough; A Dying Nation; What Does it Prove? N. Field; Rich Toward God, G. E. Lee.......201

Speed Thy Coming, King of Glory—poetry; Human Nature and Life, Delta; The Work of the Spirit.202

Sabbath Dialogues, O. D. Gibson; Thoughts on Supporting the Ministry, P. W. Hough; An Interesting Experience, John H. Paton.......203

Our Delays; Constable; Editor's Journal; A Discussion between Elds. Braden and Himes.......204

Editorial Gleanings; At Home; Abroad.......205

Letters and Extracts.......206

Brief Extracts; Rome the World's Ruler; Conference Minutes; Our Book and Tract Column.......207

Business Agent's Department; Book Notices; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements.......208

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

Tuesday Afternoon, Jan. 23, 1872.

PERSONAL.

Last week's paper contained my hasty apology for my absence from the office. I arrived in Winona Sunday afternoon. I found Edwin very feeble. Indeed, he did not recognize me at all after my arrival. I was satisfied that all was being done for him that could be done, but there was little ground upon which to base hope of his recovery; and by Tuesday night hope was extinguished, and we awaited with aching hearts the moment of dissolution.

At half-past ten Wednesday night he expired, quietly like one going to rest in sleep. I need not tell those who knew his life how he died. He died as he had lived, a Christian. For four days he was quite unconscious of all around him except that he invariably recognized his wife whenever she spoke to him. His words were few. At one time he seemed to be commending his companion to "trust in Jesus." About an hour before he expired he spoke, and said "Mother." Half an hour later he said, gently, "Addie"—and thus with his last thoughts upon his mother, and his companion and their best Comforter and Friend he "fell on sleep."

I brought him, with his wife and child, to our home, where we arrived Saturday evening. As I write we await the return of father, when we shall attend to the last sad services for the dead, the time set for the funeral being Wednesday forenoon (Jan. 24.) To many of the friends in and around Winona we feel that as a family we owe a debt of gratitude that cannot be easily repaid. I will not mention names—but he who notes the gift of a cup of cold water, even, will not forget their kindness to his deceased servant.

As to my own feelings, the bereavement of the family, and the loss to the cause, especially in Minnesota, I feel that my language is too poor to properly express them. We feel that we do not weep alone: very many of the family of Christ who knew him personally, and not a few of his own children in the gospel, mingle their tears with our own. But he has fallen like a soldier, at his post. Let us cherish his example of cheerful, unflagging zeal, patient self-denial, and untiring faithfulness.

William L. Himes.

FIELD'S DISCUSSION.

For some time this desirable work has been out of print. The main topic is the Intermediate State, or Condition of the Dead. When a new edition was announced some of the Doctor's old Disciple friends announced that they would buy and circulate it as soon as ready—because they thought it would help their side—that Mr. Connolly had the best of the argument. We shall soon know whether they really so felt, or were indulging mere bragadocio. The book has not yet made any converts to immaterialism that we have heard of; but we have learned of its bringing not a few to adopt the Bible theory.

The book has heretofore been sold at one dollar. The present edition is in paper covers (pp. 318) and will be sent post-paid for 50c. We hope for liberal orders.

PAUL'S EXPECTATION AND DESIRE.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject indicated is now ready. Paper cover. Price: Two copies post-paid 10c. 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

QUERIES.

I. B. It would be very proper to say that the Pharisees immerse their hands before eating, because that is just what they did do. And the same is true of cups and tables. They were cleaned by dipping them into water. Baptizo does not occur in Tit. 3:5. The statement that it is the water that is baptized, and not the person or thing is nonsensical as well as untrue. The baptism is by putting the person or thing in the water. We give below a list of definitions of baptizo by the most celebrated lexicographers.

To immerse repeatedly into a liquid; to submerge; to soak thoroughly; to saturate.—Donnegan.

To immerse, immerge, submerge, sink; in N. T. to wash, perform ablution, cleanse; to immerse, baptize, administer the rite of baptism.—Greenfield.

To dip, immerse, immerge, plunge; to wash, cleanse, purify.—Groves.

To baptize, to plunge, immerse, overwhelm in water; to purify, to wash.—Hedericus.

To plunge, plunge in water, dip, baptize, bury, overwhelm.—Jones.

To dip repeatedly, dip under. Mid. to bathe, hence to steep, wet, pour upon, drench. Note. The examples of this signification given, are worthy of notice, viz: "over head and ears in debt"—"a boy overwhelmed with questions;" to dip a vessel, draw water, to baptize, N. T.—Liddell and Scott.

To baptize, to immerse, to wash.—Pasor.

To dip, immerse or plunge in water; to baptize, to immerse in or wash with water.—Parkhurst.

To baptise, wash, immerse.—Robertson.

To dip in, to sink, to immerse, to dip in a vessel, to draw water. In N. T. 1, to wash, to lave, to cleanse by washing; in Mid. to wash oneself, perform ablution. 2, to baptise, to administer the rite of baptism.—Robinson.

To plunge or immerse; also to dye, as we immerse things in water for the sake of dyeing or cleansing them; to dip, submerge, overwhelm in water: to cleanse, to wash.—Scapula.

1, Properly, to immerse, and dip in, to plunge into water; then because a thing is customarily immersed and dipped into water, that it may be washed; hence 2, it signified to cleanse, to purify with water.—Schleusner.

To plunge, immerse; to cleanse, to wash.—Schœttigenius.

To baptize, to plunge, to overwhelm, to dip into; to wash by plunging; sometimes to sprinkle, besprinkle, to pour upon; to purify and consecrate to God by plunging.—Schwarzius.

To plunge or immerse; to plunge under, or overwhelm in water; to cleanse, to wash.—Stephanus.

Generally, and by the force of the word, it has the sense of dipping and immersion. Specially, it is properly to immerse or dip into water. Metaphorically, by metalepsis, it is to cleanse, to wash, because it is customary to dip and immerse anything into water, that may be washed or cleansed. —Stokius.

Immerse, wash.—F. S. Suicer.

To plunge, immerse, dip, dip in, to make wet, to wash, to cleanse, to purify.—Suidas.

To baptize, to dip into water, or to plunge one into the water.—Wilson.

Immerse.—Wolderus.

To dip all over, wash, baptize.—Young.

Br. J. W. Cumming's Case.

Br. Himes: Enclosed find a copy of the certificate concerning the usage of Br. Cumings of Forest Bay:

Forest Bay, Huron Co. Mich. Dec. 15th, 1871.

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that Eld. W. J. Cumings has been justly dealt with by those that have had the distribution of relief-goods in this place. Though he lost all his household goods, and clothing of himself and family, (wife and three children) yet he has received nothing but some clothing for himself and wife, and some bed clothes. Though he has lost no house of his own, yet he lost a house he had engaged for the winter. He intended to build in the spring. It is now necessary he should have a house. But he is refused help to build with simply on the ground of his religious faith. We who would gladly help him are prevented by our heavy losses by the late fire. We recommend him to you as one who is worthy of your confidence and assistance. Signed, L S. Conner, W. Potter, Susan Potter, Sarah E. Conner, James Caughill.

He has commenced building. Has a log house raised, but can not get any help to put the roof on. Those that are willing to help, or wish to "lend to the Lord," can help Br. C. He will be able to do good in that field if supported. Address W. J. Cumings, Port Hope, Huron Co. Mich.

E. H. Durand.

To All Whom it may Concern.

Whereas, the church at Springville, Vernon Co., Wis., have incurred a debt in building a house of worship, which it was expected would have been cancelled at the dedication—probably would have been had not the distress caused by the fires, called for help just before that time. The people and brethren and sisters have done nobly, yet there is a debt remaining of something over $150.00. Some of this is about due. The object of this notice is, that if any friends of a free house and free gospel have any means to appropriate in this direction, and will forward it to the address of Seth Hamilton, Springville, Vernon Co., Wis., it will be thankfully received, and faithfully applied, and acknowledged either to the donor, or by the press.

In behalf of the church,

P. W. Hough.

A Dying Nation.

The accounts of the famine in Persia, which continue to arrive in greater detail, bid fair to treat the world to the spectacle of a calamity the like of which has not been witnessed in historic times, at least—the sudden extinction of a nation by want of food. This has really been the fate of the great states which once filled the valley of the Euphrates, and it is a fate which has for centuries been threatening some modern states—Spain for instance. Man has stripped the soil of trees; the absence of trees has brought drouths; drouths have slowly diminished the productive powers of the ground, and finally destroyed them—the population in the mean time dwindling in numbers and vitality. Spain had forty millions of people in the time of the Romans, and flowed with milk and honey; it is now an arid region, only half of it under cultivation, with only sixteen millions of inhabitants, and if modern science had not come to its aid, would probably go the way of Babylon. Persia was one of the most powerful states of antiquity, and even in the fourteenth century was able to support the army of Tamerlane, who marched without commissariat or baggage, during a bloody contest. It is now almost a wilderness, with a population of two millions—about half of them nomads, which is rapidly perishing from famine brought on by three years' drought. The worst of it is, that, owing to the absence of either common roads or rail roads, it seems to be impossible for the charity of the rest of the world to reach the sufferers, so that there is really a strong prospect of the total depopulation of that country. The moral of this horrible story is—look after your trees.—The Nation.

What Does it Prove?

The following appeared in the editorial department of a late number of the Bible Examiner.

There are certain great facts, which stand out in the Bible, which must and will hold their place in spite of all efforts to remove them. In the first place: "God has made of one blood all nations of men," etc., (Acts, 17:26). This includes the entire race of Adam, or all men. Second: "Jesus Christ did, by the grace of God, taste death for every man." He "gave himself a ransom for all" (1 Tim. 2:5, and Heb. 2:9). Third: he gave command that his gospel should be preached to "every creature" (Mk. 16:15). Here is not exception of any man. If there were any of the race for whom Christ did not die, then there could be no gospel for them; and to preach it to such would be to proclaim a lie. Christ who is "the Truth" could not have commanded the proclamation of an untruth. Hence, there is no man or class of men but what there is a gospel for them: a gospel that they can believe without believing a lie; else they could not be "dammed"—condemned for not believing it, and this gospel would bring them salvation by faith. The race is all of "one blood," and Christ partook of that; so that, if any are by generation "the serpent's children," Christ must have also been the same. This cannot be admitted for a moment. Hence, no man can be such a child by natural birth.

Again: if Christ partook of the "one blood," and "tasted death for every man," then all men were in God's plan of mercy and all were "given to" Christ; for God gave him "power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as the Father had given him" (John, 17:2). "All flesh" embraces all men, unless an exception is manifestly made; and Christ "gave himself a ransom for all." If this proves that all men will ultimately "be saved," I cannot help it."

If it does not prove that all men will ultimately be saved, will the editor of the Examiner please tell his readers what it does prove. The logic of the extract may be summed up in the following syllogism.

God gave Christ the whole human family that he should give them eternal life.

But Jesus says, that it is the will of his Father that of all that he hath given him he should lose nothing but raise it up at the last day. Therefore all the human race will be saved, as they were given to him by his, Father, and he gave himself a ransom for them!

The Examiner may well say that if his quotations prove universal salvation "he can't help it." The way he has combined and explained them, nobody else can help it. Every Universalist in the land, who can comprehend his meaning will say that he has proved it conclusively.

N. Field.

Rich Toward God.

Reader, are you rich toward God? are you in possession of those riches which shall "abide forever," or are you laying up treasures for yourself that shall utterly perish in the great burning day when all things earthly shall be dissolved? (2 Pet 3. 10. 11.) Have you the blessed assurance that your name is recorded in the "book of remembrance," which was written for those that fear the Lord? (Mal. 3. 16.)

If not, remember the words of our Savior, that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things he possesseth" (Lk. 12:15), and learn a lesson from the parable of a certain rich man, who had much goods laid up for many years, but sadly neglected to lay up for himself treasure in heaven. For we find that just as he was about to "take ease, eat, drink, and be merry," his soul was required of him. "So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God." Lk. 13: 16–21.)

Now what we learn from a contrast, is, that it is not necessary to be rich in this worlds goods in order to be rich in faith." For, "hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he has promised to them that love him?" (Ja. 2:5.)

Oh! to be an heir of the kingdom! Is it not more desirable than being an heir to any earthly inheritance ever yet bestowed? Certainly it must be, according to the description given of it, for it will be a kingdom, the greatness of which shall be "under the whole heaven." (Dan. 7:27) and it shall "never be destroyed." (Dan. 2:44.)

Here are to dwell forevermore the "saints of the most high," and they shall never know aught but joy and gladness, for "sorrow and sighing shall flee away." (Is. 35:10.)

Then let us love and fear him who hath promised to bestow such a glorious gift; for none others shall receive it. Is not such a kind benefactor worthy of our admiration and praise? Surely we can do none to much, if we give our all for Christ, for he gave his life for our sakes, that we might partake of that "life which is to come:" and so let us present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is our reasonable service." (Rom. 12:1)

Let us forsake the vain things of this world, and "press toward the mark for the price of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, "for it lies at the end of the race. Then "he that overcometh, shall inherit all things," even "that great city, the holy Jerusalem." (Rev. 21:7, 10.) And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lambs book of life.' (Rev. 21. 27.)

George E. Lee.

Speed Thy Coming, King of Glory.

Speed thy coming, King of glory!
  See, the nations wait for thee;
Superstitions old and hoary
  Tremble thine approach to see.

All the ancient east is waking,
  As from dream of troubled night;
Peoples through their fetters breaking
  Rise to hail the dawning light.

All the west in expectation,
  All the islands of the sea;
Every human habitation
  Thrills with strange uncertainty.

Is he coming? Is he coming?
  He, the long expected one?
He, the waited for and promised
  Since the work of death begun?

O'er all earth the watch-fires burning
  On the distant hill-tops round,
Mark where saints wait thy returning,
  Eager for the joyful sound.

Shall the cry be never answered?
  Shall the hope be never met?
Shall the world which thou hast ransomed
  Never gain her lost estate?

By thy bloody sweat and passion,
  By thy dying agony,
By thy glorious resurrection,
  Let the world thy glory see!

Speed thy coming, King of glory!
  Hear the universal prayer;
Bid thy waiting church before thee
  Rise to meet thee in the air.

—Rev. F. Bottome.

Communications.

Human Nature And Life.

In my last communication to THE TIMES, I promised to write of the "Composition of the Book of Genesis." I will say therefore, that it is becoming an accepted fact, among oriental scholars, that the Book was not written in continuous order, as one would sit down to write a sermon or a lecture, but is composed of some three or more parts distinct from each other, and differing so much in style of composition and thought-experience as to lead irresistibly to the conclusion by the critical reader, that it is the compilation of the works or manuscripts of several writers, or at least that they were written upon different occasions, and with different objects directly in view. (One of these, was in all probability Moses, while the compiler was probably Samuel.)

The first chapter of Genesis is what may be termed an "Anthem," or recitative poem of the order of the creative beginnings of God (if I may so speak), giving in order the distinctive phenomena of life-manifestation; and this anthem was probably composed for the use of the congregation in the establishment of the Tabernacle service in the Exodus of Israel. And I would here note that a beautiful rendering of both word and spirit of the ancient writing may be found in McWhorter's Hebrew Poems of the Dawn, where the anthem style distinctly appears. I would also refer to the little work of Rev. Fredrick Heaidekoper, in which the first eleven chapters of Genesis are arranged in parallel columns, showing the fact of two manuscripts, at least, telling the same story, though from different stand points, and as I said with different objects in view. These manuscripts, from the different manner of speaking of God, are designated as the "Elohim" and the "Jehovah" manuscripts. These eleven chapters belong more properly to what may be called the pre-historic ages, while the remainder comes more directly under the line of history. With this brief notice I will now pass to the farther consideration of my subject, refering to the different MSS. as occasion may require.

And here let me call your attention to the fact (opposed to the common traditional theology that "God created all things out of nothing,") that the Chaldaic word, Bara, translated created, does not justify any such construction of idea, but instead signifies nothing more than we would gather from to shape or form, like as the carpenter forms or builds the house; the carriage builder shapes the carriage—not "out of nothing," but from material on hand; and we get the true idea of the writer in translating the first verse of the book in this way: "In the beginning God shaped the sky and the earth." Dr. Conant, of the A. B. Union, whose familiarity with the Hebrew is second to none, says" that the word Bara in its primary sense signifies "to cut; to hew; to shape by hewing to a line;" and that we have no foundation in the Scriptures, here or elsewhere, for the idea that the world was created "out of nothing" by arbitray Divine power. ' I will still farther state that the Hebrew relative noun Bonch signifies the builder. I have taken this pains to explain, because I wish the readers of THE TIMES to fully understand the premises from which I shall draw my conclusions in the succeeding articles.

And now, as we carefully read the record of the divine ways of creation and life imparting, we may see (when thus divested of the traditional interpretation of theology,) all the various preparatory steps of creating or "shaping," in the Divine processes, that are so persistently claimed by the best, the most thorough scientists of the day. Not a single link is missing in the chain of preparatory work necessary to human nature and life. If we in our confinements of minutia are unable to find all the links in the backward tracing to which we are compelled, the inspirations of the Hebrew poet have not stumbled in the anthem of sublime imagery of panoramic vision of statement, and all the "law processes of natural selection," from the chaotic formings of nebula, to the inception of human nature and life are distinctly noted and recognized as the divine plan of God.

Huxley, or Sir William Tompson, cannot go any farther back in their researches than the "beginnings" of Deity, as set forth in Genesis; and even Darwin may point to this—"We will make the man into our image to be in our likeness," as a "Raboi's text," behind which he may entrench himself against the assults of valley-vision-girded men, who have never learned to look at the divine handiwork from the top of the mountains of God.

In this "we will make the man" (which is the true rendering of the original writing,) lies a deep, I may say, a profound significance of meaning. You will notice that the creation "man" is named as something that is—as something already existing, and from which the Creator (the Builder) shapes the divine image. Like as we may say the potter shapes after a certain copy the clay that is upon his wheel: he takes clay previously prepared, and from this previously prepared material, he shapes the image, or copy. And we are led to believe from the careful reading of Genesis, that the "man in the image of God," is formed, shaped, created, from the "prepared clay" of MAN, THE ANIMAL.

The point I would make right here, is this: while I most earnestly believe in the intelligent, creating power of God, I also just as firmly believe, that like as we see the divine preparatory work, in all the other creations of Deity; so "man in image of God" is no exception to the divine law of procedure; and I maintain that the Scriptural declaration of inspiration, so far from teaching the exertion of absolute divine power in arbitrary creation, on the contray favors this view of the instrumental action of the law of "influence and preparation," that we observe in every other department of life: and I am fully prepared to believe that time was, when the animal man existed on the earth, while as yet "the man in the image of God" was not.

I am fully aware that in taking this ground I am running counter to the traditional ideas of "the church," but this is no reason why it should be condemned. "The church" teaches "inherent immortality," yet the readers of THE TIMES do not hesitate to question the teaching; and the "traditions of men" are of small moment when we are seeking the truth of God that shall endure; and so I do not hesitate to say that I believe in the animal creation of man, preparatory to the human creation, which possesses, finitely, the divine attributes of the infinite Deity.

In this inspired record of the divine idea, of man as the last, and not as the first of the divine creatings—of humanity postponed until after the plant and the brute, there lies a depth of meaning that is not by any means explained satisfactorily, by the common method of theologians, who say that "the earth must first be supplied with vegetable and animal, in order to man's subsistence;" there is something more than that; and to my mind this "something more" is the eternal law process of "conditional preparation" prior to the generation of all life, and by which, (as I have before said,) all germinal life has enwrapt within its conditional formations, all the elements of life continued or of the dissolvings of death; and human nature is in this respect, in no wise different from the other creations of God.

As to the question (raised in The Crisis by its California Correspondent,) whether the human race descended from one first pair or "center," or from "different centers," as is maintained by many eminent scientists; whether from a single "Adam and Eve," or has flowed together from the different centers of the different cosmical conditions of different continents, I answer, to my mind the Scriptures, while giving more particular history of one family, or "race," favors most the idea of different centers, and of distinct races, who exhibit the varying effects of the influence (climatic and otherwise,) of the differing conditions of producing existence.

However, while I say this, I am willing to concede that "humanity" as a nature, though it may not have descended from a single pair, is still essentially one species: that as a modern writer has said; "the differences that divide the nations into the "natural divisions of Caucasian; African; Malay, and others, are extrinsic and accidental, while in the intrinsic and essential attributes of being and becoming there is ever a unity." I say I am willing to admit this; and that "man in the image of God" may look at us, out of the nation of Africa or China; of Asia or Australia, as well as from the eyes of the Saxon or Norman.

Humanity as the subject of history and its divine education is one; and its divine law of "righteousness and salvation" is the same, whether on the burning sands of the African desert, the ice-fields of the extreme north, the cities of Europe or America, or "the island, of the sea."

Grant that the animal man was "developed" by the preparatory processes of gradual ascent and circumstantial modification from the lower orders of animal life—(I say grant that this be proven,) it does not follow that the human soul (I use the word "soul" in its true sense of living organism) that is in the image of Deity was born of "the ape," on the contrary I do not believe that the "highest" ape that is or was possesses, or possessed sufficient capacity of being and becoming for the production of humanity.

The Scriptures do not say that God made the "prepared monkey" into the divine image; but instead it is the prepared clay of the animal man, that the divine potter shapes into the divine image, with the capacity of becoming into the divine likeness of conditions of "life eternal," as sons of God. Here is a point that is overlooked by both the friends and the opponents of the so called "Development Theories" of the day; but nevertheless it is a point of great importance in the determinings of faith in respect to the "immortal soul" (of which we hear so much in popular theology, and find so little in the Bible;) and too, rightly considered, it will be found a great help for man in his searchings for the "way of righteousness," and in his understanding of faith in Christ.

From my readings in the researches of science, compared by the record of inspiration, I am led to believe that the "animal man" existed upon the earth, long before the sun looked upon "humanity," with its germinal capacity of infinite spiritual becomings of divine life of enduring existence.

But now admitting this to be a fact (as I believe it is), can you not see the liability of influence that shall determine this human soul towards the superdevelopment of the animal man, instead of in the way of the "divine man?" "Human nature" is (so to speak) the living link between the animal man and the "God-nature," and it holds in its capacity of being, possibilities of destruction in animality, and the becomings of life eternal in the conditions of divinity.

Like the corn, humanity may be so conditioned as to perish in the constant dissolvings of matter; like the corn the human, though now throwing its roots downward and "hellward," may lift its head upward and heavenward: but unlike the corn (because of higher capacity of organism,) the human as it looses its hold on earth, may become divine in its character of life, needing no longer the earthy "root," in the perpetuation of its blissful, "life-imparting" existence.

And now in closing this article, permit me to call your attention to the word "human," of which so much has been said. This w[illegible] familiar to the eye of the Engli[illegible]eader, comes to us from the "S[illegible]krit" of those Aryan brothers of [illegible]s in India, and signifies the "divine man" HU, (or heui) being the name of God, and thus may we see even in the growth of language the inspiration of a higher life enfolded as a prophecy of our being.

This may seem to some a little thing, but to my mind there is a power of life in the word, and I often think when I hear men talking about "such an act" being human (i. e. god-like) or inhuman (i. e. brutal,) that though "they know not what to do," yet VOX POPULI VOX DEI!

I shall in my next article continue this subject of the "divine becomings" of human nature, from the "beginnings thereof," in germinal life, to its divine appearings of prophetic fulfillments.

DELTA.

The Work of the Spirit.

Inquirer. I have come, sir, to have a few words with you on a subject of great importance. I find it exceedingly difficult to form any idea of the works of the Holy Spirit. I have heard a great deal about it, and witnessed no little controversy as to its extent, and its being resistible or irresistible, but I never can form any clear idea of what it is.

Pastor. I am glad to see you, and will do what I can most willingly, to remove your difficulty. It may be just as well to refer you to your own conscience for information, such as may enable you to form a clear conception of the work you mention. You know what it is to have thoughts in your mind?

I. Yes, of course I do.

P. Well, you know also what it is for such thoughts to start up in your mind, though they were never there before, or though no one is either directly or indirectly presenting them, so far as you know?

I. Yes, I know all that.

P. And you know, further, that such thoughts come before your mind when you not only do not wish them, but when you are doing all you can to keep them away?

I. Yes, I am quite aware of all that.

P. You are aware also that such thoughts awaken very powerful feelings within you, and lead you to act very differently from the way in which you would act, if no such thoughts occurred?

I. There is no doubt that such is the effect.

P. Well, let me suppose that you are living altogether careless of God and your eternal interests—suppose that you wish, and are even determined to do so—but the thought of an eternal future, or of coming death is suggested to your mind; you try to banish it, but you find it imppssible to do so—it keeps ever before your mind. No one speaks to you on the subject, and you take good care not to read or to hear what might strengthen the influence of that thought. Still it keeps to you, and ever and again, when you had supposed you had got over it, there it returns upon you with greater force than ever. Could you imagine that this continued effect, wrought in defiance of your utmost efforts to prevent it, is without a cause?

I. No, assuredly.

P. Then what is its cause?

I. I must own I have never thought of that point.

P. But had you no virtual belief in how thoughts came into your mind?

I. Well, I imagined that all that turmoil of various cogitations that goes on in one's mind was just the working of the mind itself.

P. But I am speaking of what is done in defiance of the mind itself.

I. Is not that you speak of just the natural conscience?

P. What do you mean by the natural conscience?

I. Oh! You know as well I can tell you—just the natural conscience.

P. I have an idea of what conscience means, but I can form no idea of what you mean by it, when you think of it as a distinct power, working against the will and power of man, and yet itself merely a capacity of his mind. Observe the real case before us. I am speaking of your having thoughts coming before you, returning again and and again upon you, in spite of your utmost desire to be rid of them; these thoughts affect your conscience and make you uneasy in sin—they stir the conscience to an extent that makes you wretched—and all this, while you are doing all you can to get them away from your conscience, that it may be at ease. Can you imagine that such thoughts can be brought and kept before you, against your will, by any power or susceptibility of your mind itself?

I. It must be admitted that there is something in what you say. I had not thought of that. I have been always told that these convictions were just the work of the natural conscience.

P. The case has been with you as with others; you have not taken time to think what natural conscience is. There is a susceptibility to feel the innocence or guilt of certain actions—to feel the guilt or virtue of certain courses, and when thoughts of a certain kind are presented we feel accordingly—this susceptibility we call conscience; but to regard this as capable of originating thought, putting it before the mind and keeping it there in spite of all a man can do to banish it, is plainly out of all measure unreasonable.

I. I cannot but think you are right.

P. Then, in case where no human being is suggesting a good thoughts to your mind, and where you are not wishing that thought—where you are in fact doing your best to keep out of the way of it, and that thought nevertheless comes, and keeps before you, agitating and powerfully affecting you—how would you account for it?

I. I suppose it must be referred to the agency of the Spirit of God. We seem to be shut up to that conclusion.

P. Does not that give us a very definite idea of his work?

I. So far, I must admit it does.

P. Can there be anything more clear and definite than that of which you are conscious when right thoughts come to your mind, even against your will, and when the objects thus presented in thought influence all your affections and constrain you both to feel and to act in a way you would never otherwise pursue?

I. That is a very definite statement; but then I have been so accustomed to think of the Spirit directly influencing the will—or directly melting the heart, and so leading to right understanding and belief—that it is difficult for me to think of what you speak as the work of the Spirit at all.

P. Then whose work can it be?

I. I confess I am utterly at a loss to account for it but by this agency.

P. You seem to have thought that the Spirit of God dealt with man in he way which supposes the reversal of he constitution which God has given im. We think, feel, will, and act hen we proceed according to the nature of our mind. We turn attention to some object of thought, we feel according as that object is fitted to affect s, and if we keep attending to that bject we are lead to will and act accordingly. Hence the great aim of any ne wishing to secure our pursuing a given course, is, first of all, to secure ur attention to considerations fitted to nduce us to pursue it. Do you not hink this is God's course of dealing with us, when he seeks our hearts and bedience?

I. Well, it seems the reasonable ay, but it is not what I had thought.

P. Is it not the Scripture idea of he work of the Spirit that he takes of he things of Christ and shows them o men?

I. Yes, I know that.

P. And does not that seem just hat is done, when these momentous ncerns are brought up to your mind, nd kept before it, even when you are ishing to get away from them?

I. That did not strike me before.

P. And do you not think that the roken, bleeding heart of your dying edeemer, brought in upon you in hought, is the most powerful thing in he universe to touch your heart, and hange it too?

I. That is different from what I ave imagined, but it is the true thing I cannot doubt it. It is definite also more definite than anything that ver came before me on the subject.

P. It is not in my power to give u any longer time at present. Do ot fail to remember that the Spirit of od is at work with you in every true d holy thought that comes before ur mind.—Prof. Kirk.

Sabbath Dialogues.

(Continued.)

W. But Christ taught the church ho should be living at Jerusalem at destruction to observe the Sabbath, r he says—"Pray ye that your flight not on the Sabbath day." This s down this side the cross, and st be holy time, or he would not ve directed thus.

C. But why did he also say, "Pray that your flight be not in the nter." Was that holy time too?

W. Oh no, I suppose it was an acunt of the danger of their perishing the cold.

C. Well as Christ has made no tinction between winter and Sabth what right have you to say the ason of one is because it is holy e, and the other not? The evident ason was, that the Jews still adhereg to the law, would keep the gates sed, and also stone them, in their d zeal to keep the law.

W. That is possible, but then we l the apostle Paul made that his eaching day, thus showing that he garded it holy time.

C. Now Br. do you suppose that he would keep the Sabbath as holy time, and then he heard to say, "One esteemeth one day above another, another esteemeth every day alike; let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind." Now if he considered the Sabbath law binding, would he have left it at such loose ends, as in the above language? Would he not rather be heard crying, and in his bold manner, "No drunkard or extortioner, or reviler or Sabbath breaker, can enter the kingdom of God." It seems to me this would be more like the apostle Paul.

W. I know he has never spoken of Sabbath breaking in particular, yet I have understood him to favor the Sabbath.

C. Now is it not a little singular, Br., that if the fourth commandment in the decalogue was considered the great commandment in the law and binding on Christians, that Christ or some of his disciples should not some where denounced Sabbath breaking? But instead of this Paul says: "Wherefore if ye be dead from the rudiments of the world, why as though living in the world, are you subject to ordinances?" Again, "Blotting out the hand writing of ordinances, that were against us and contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross. Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days."

W. But stop, those last texts you quote from Col. 2, do not so refer to the Sabbath of the Lord, but to the Jews Sabbaths or feasts days; for you see he calls them "ordinances."

C. Now before we go any farther let me know what you understand by "ordinance." Then, perhaps, we can understand one another better.

W. Well I understand it to be outward ceremony, and no doubt the apostle means the ceremonial law."

C. Your definition, I think, is correct; for Webster says it means rule, law, rite, which is a religious ceremony, so we agree on its meaning. Now let me ask, was not the Sabbath, an ordinance or ceremony?

W. I think not.

C. Why not? What made that any more holy to the Jews than any other day?

W. It was because God sanctified and blessed it from the beginning.

C. No, no, you mistake again. God's sanctifying it, did not make it more holy with them. Why then should he say—"Remember the Sabbeth day to keep it holy." If it was holy of itself, it would read "Remember the Sabbath day for it is holy." So you see it rests with their keeping it, whether it is holy with them.

W. Well I guess you are right; for to those who do not keep it, it cannot be holy time, although it may be with God.

C. Well, then, what is it "to keep it?" What does it consist in, but the observing the restrictions laid upon that day such as, "Thou shalt do no work," etc.

W. Certainly as the fourth commandment will show.

C. Then, it was an outward work of the law and comes under what you call "ceremonial law," and what the apostle calls "hand writing or ordinances;" which he says Christ "blotted out," "nailed to his cross," etc. And now if you can show it is not an "ordinance" then it will be exempt from this charge

[illegible] one thing, Br. C., per[illegible] not notice: it is called "hand writing of ordinances," and must mean that which was written in the book of the law by the hand of Moses, (2 Chron. 34: 14), and not the ten commandments; for they were written in stone by the finger of God. So you see they cannot be called "hand writing."

C. Well, I must confess if you can see any difference between what is written with the finger, and with the hand, you have keener perceptions than I have. What kind of writing would you have, if you take away the finger work? But how came they in the apostles day to know there were any such commandments? Did the tables of stone exist then? Nay, but they got them from the "hand writing of Moses," or "books of the law," which were read in their synagogues

W. But does it not look reasonable that the "Sabbath days" here spoken of refer to their other "Sabbaths," seeing it is associated with "meats and drinks, and new moons," etc.

C. I do not see as that will alter the case, for there is reason to think he refers to both; for if the words "Sabbath days" refer to the feast-day Sabbaths, to what does the phrase, "or an holy day" refer to? Would not this cover the seventh-day Sabbath? It seems the apostle has built a hedge on every side against your position.

W. But let me ask you a question: did not Christ say to the young man who came to him, "If ye will enter into life, keep the commandments?"

C. Certainly, and did not the young man say, "which?"

W. Yes.

C. And did he tell him which?

W. Yes.

C. Did he say, keep the "Sabbath?"

W. Why, no, he did not mention that in particular, but then that was one of the commandments; and of course he meant the whole decalogue.

C. Now Br., then do you believe the whole Decalogue is in force now?

W. Certainly.

C. Then you must believe that you and I may have the sins of our parents, and great grand parents, visited upon us; for it is there declared, "I am a jealous God, visiting the iniquities of the parents upon the children to the third and fourth generations of them that hate me.

W. Oh! no! I think that Christ so changed that, that a man is amenable for his own sins only.

C. Then you think so much of the Decalogue is removed. Why then may not some of the rest be?

W. The evident reason why that was abolished was because it was contrary to the spirit of the gospel.

C. Well, what is there in Sabbath keeping, that agrees with the gospel; for if we keep it acceptably, we must go to the law to learn how to keep it, else how shall we know, for you must admit that the gospel gives no directions to keep, nor how to keep it.

W. No, nothing definite.

C. Then "In it thou shall do no work, thy son, thy man servant, maid servant, or thy cattle, nor anything that is in thy gates." Now in following this, we must not harness our horse, or yoke our oxen and drive them one or more miles to meeting, as we now do; neither must we put forth our hand to rescue wasting property, and so on to the end of the catalogue.

W. But Christ taught us we might do good works on the Sabbath.

C. Yes, but have we a right to do any other on that day?

W. No, I suppose not.

C. What better then, is the seventh-day, than other days. We have no right to do any thing but good on any other day, and this we may do on the seventhday. This seems to argue that Christians are to keep all days holy unto the Lord, by being "zealous of good works," and ceasing from their own or the works of the flesh.—(To be continued.) O. D. GIBSON.

Thoughts on Supporting the Ministry.

—No. 2.

In my first letter on this subject I left the reader with the statement that God's gospel was free; that he called the ministers and appointed their field of labor, whether in the streets or lanes of the city, or the hedges and highways: their commission girdled the globe, and he promises them his presence to the end of the age. But this statement will make some inquire, Has not Paul said that "they that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel?" Very true! But did he say that the preacher's duty turned on this condition? Certainly not. For he say "Wo is me if I preach not the gospel!" Let me illustrate so as to be understood. A brother in Christ living in Illinois has sent me at different times a barrel of apples. Now he sent them free. But if I was benefited by them, I had to pay the freight, and then I obtained the benefit. But if I had not paid the freight, two things must have followed: (1) I should not have been benefited by the act of kindness bestowed upon me; and (2) he would have ceased to send any more. So it is with our heavenly Father. He sends us the gospel free, but demands that we "pay the freight;" and if any member of the church fails to do their part in this matter, spiritual leanness must follow; and if the whole membership fail in this respect, God will soon remove the candlestick from them; for there can be no greater insult offered than for us to refuse to pay the freight on what has been sent to us by some friend. But how much greater must the insult be when offered to God, when we refuse to "pay the freight" on the gospel by which we are to be saved. (To be continued.)

P. W. HOUGH.

An Interesting Experience.

BY A BAPTIST MINISTER OF EASTERN MICHIGAN.

Editor "TIMES," Dear Br: I address you as brother not because you are an Adventist, merely, but because I have reason to believe you have an interest in the cause of Christ; and I feel that our fraternal greetings should extend to all who own the authority of our Master—Jesus. That which gives your name—Adventist—is a doctrine not so very uncommon among the orthodox churches, for very many, if not a majority of them, believe in a personal "second coming" of Christ; but because they do not care to inquire into the revealed and logical consequences of that coming they fail to apprehend the truth that the wicked "shall be as though they had not been," before the fulfillment of the promise—"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things have passed away." (Rev. 21: 4.) "These words are true and faithful." (v. 5.)

Some, in the various denominations, whose creeds teach the doctrine of a personal coming of Christ, rather than admit the necessary consequences to which I have referred, because they conflict with the pet (though we think unscriptural) theory of the soul's natural immortality, are led to ignore that central element of the Christian's hope, by "spiritualizing" the promise away. I believe you hold and proclaim in their revealed order the main truths of the Bible, with reference to man's creation, nature, fall and loss; the plan of recovery and the destiny of both man and the earth.

I am a Baptist; have been pastor of the church here for nearly fifteen months, since the time I was ordained, having preached for them several months before that time.

For six months past I have preached "immortality only in Christ," which met with the approval of some, but awakened opposition in others, which led me finally, under a sense of justice to resign. The resignation was accepted a week ago. Now I am free; and yet not free. God only knows what the result will be.

I was led first to question the truth of the popular theory of the destiny of the wicked nearly ten years ago; believing then in the "immortality of all men." I was inclined to Universalism, but could not reconcile the many express statements of Scripture respecting the eternity of punishment. Thus years passed and meanwhile I endeavored to "continue patiently in well doing," serving the Lord. I found pleasure in that service, always seeking to commend Christ as a Savior from personal sin and its consequence. I never doubted my own acceptance, but, though I could look forward with a joyful anticipation of being ever with the Lord, there was a cloud—a dark cloud over my mind on account of the unsolved difficulty, the possibility of many millions of the human family, even now and forever to continue, writhing in the agony of hell as described by the popular preachers.

Though my feelings caused me to recoil from the view, I could not allow this matter to be decided in my mind by my feelings. God's word was my standard. Yet I am forced to admit I did not abide by its plain statements—my conclusion in reading being influenced by my former view of immortality.

When I first heard that doctrine assailed by one of your preachers (Adam Mackie), I saw what might be a solution of my difficulty, if it were true; but of that I must be convinced. It was not enough to know that immortality is not asserted of man in the Bible, I must be convinced that it is not implied. I did not like to give up that view, because at first it seemed necessary to the preeminence of man over the beast. So I was slow to decide, sometimes by the press of business even tempted to "let it alone." At the ordination I was, and so expressed myself, "undecided," but since then have thought and read more on the subject than ever; compelled to it by having to meet the various elements, "Universalists," "Orthodox" and "Adventists." I was not with any one of them; but could not satisfactorily to myself, meet any of them.

Sometime during the early summer I read "Constable on Future Punishment," which seemed in the main so clear that I could not resist the conviction—"The end," not the beginning, "of those things is death." (Rom. 6.) Since then the Bible has seemed a new book to me. It has been easy to study and easy to preach, not being so often obliged to put a peculiar and unnatural construction on words so commonly used in common language.

There is much I do not understand (and never may); some points still seeming to favor the old view; but such is the general harmony of the truths made plain, each with the others, that I am satisfied. The cloud is gone, and man is yet man, with all the preeminence over the beast he ever had, or that was necessary to his "dominion." With present light I see a glorious harmony between the design of creation and that of redemption. They are one. If immortality would have been glorious,—worthy of an all wise, all mighty and a loving Father, and "worth living for" before or without the entrance and obstruction of sin; surely it will be no less worth living for now, nor less glorious, when sin shall be destroyed.

To speak as some professing to be Christians do of the death of the sinner, with the characteristic: "Is that all?" or, "If that is all, it is not worth while trying to avoid it," is to cast a keen reproach in the face of him who "made man to have dominion," and reveals a very discreditable motion of their action—merely to get rid of punishment. They may think that is the Spirit of Christ, and may succeed in deceiving others; but God cannot be thus deceived. "His people will be a willing people in the day of his power"—when there will be no punishment to dread. JOHN H. PATON.

Advent Christian Times.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Jan. 23, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - EDITOR

OUR DELAYS.

We are compelled again to apologise for our delays in the paper, our Almanac and some other publications. The news recorded in another column of the death in our family will account for some of it. In other respects we have been delayed by matters, such as delays of freight on railroads, sickness of hands in the office, etc., etc. We are straining every nerve. May we not plead forbearance on the part of our friends a little longer.

CONSTABLE.

We learn that the orders for this work are in advance of the supply. We shall be compelled to wait until the new edition is published before we can obtain copies to fill orders now on our book. Friends will be patient. It is worth something to know that the popular demand has absorbed the first edition of so excellent a work on future punishment, chiefly outside of our body. Let light spread and knowledge increase.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

FRIDAY, Jan. 9. To-day Br. Mathewson is called away to attend the funeral of Sr. Miles, at Bristol, and I am left alone to carry on the work. I had set the time for leaving to-day, and felt that I must hasten on west. But there were so many seeking God, and Br. M. called away, that my duty to stay was without a doubt. And so I visited in the day, and preached at night from 2 Cor. 5: 13–17. Eleven souls came out resolving to be henceforth on the Lord's side. Some of them will no doubt live and maintain their profession, as they will have the best of care from Br. and Sr. Mathewson. In a time of worldliness and temptation like this, we can have but little hope of raising young converts to positions of usefulness, strength and final acceptance without the tender and constant care of the elders, and faithful laborers in the church who are the nursing fathers and mothers in Israel.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 10. Visited old friends in Fairhaven. I find a wonderful change in this place. The marble and slate factories are doing a great business, and by it the town has been built up in numbers and wealth. New churches have been erected, and, outwardly at least, the course of religion seems to prosper.

I called upon James Pottle, one of the partners of the "Marble and Marbleized Slate Company." They have a large establishment and are prospering in their business. He showed me over the establishment, and gave me an insight into the way in which they marbleize the slate. It is a wonderful process and some parts of it are yet a secret. How they can paint the plain slate, and make a perfect and durable marble, even more beautiful than the ordinary stone, is a wonder. I saw some most beautifully perfect imitations of Sienna Porphyry, red and green Pyreneese Marble. Also Egyptian, Spanish, Galway, Green and Broctella. Of these kinds of Marble they make table-tops, lamp-bases, and every description of ornaments and furniture.

There is no end to the slate and marble in this region. There are numerous establishments and a great business is done, not only in Fair Haven, but in Rutland and Castleton. In the latter place Br. C. S. Sherman carries on a large business in the best, pure, white marble. He is shipping it to all parts of the country.

With Br. Atwood I dined with Peter Paraday, an old and faithful Adventist. He, with Br. Pottle attends the Baptist church and Bible class, and lets his light shine. We had quite a discussion after dinner on the subject hades and gehenna, and the state of the dead, in their intermediate and final state. He had been looking at hades as a place of conscious beings, of happiness or misery, in accordance with the popular view of the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. I showed them that the heathen held this view, but Christ and his apostles never. With them hades was the grave that was to give up the dead at the resurrection, and not a shadowy abode in a literal cavern under the earth. It is the grave, as said Paul (1 Cor. 15: 25) "O grave, hades, where is thy victory?" We then referred to every text and settled the matter in all the texts except Luke 16: 23, where the rich man is said to lift up his eyes in hades. And this I showed was a parable, taken from the false notions of the intermediate state held by the Pharisees.

Gehenna is the place, and the only place of punishment. Men are raised out of the grave, hades, (Rev. 20: 14–15), and cast into gehenna, or "the lake of fire, which is the second death." This is the lot and punishment of the lost, and not eternal life in misery.

I enjoyed a pleasant call on Br. Gilbert, an old friend of more than thirty years. We often used to meet with Father Miller in this place, and at Hampton, and discuss Bible questions. He is still a student of the word of God, and holds to the blessed hope. Returned at eve to Castleton, where I preached from Luke 19: 13—"Occupy till I come." I expounded the parable and pressed on all to seek and serve the Lord Jesus Christ. Eight souls came out. Many renewed their covenant to be more faithful lest they come short in the day of reckoning.

THURSDAY, Jan. 11. Among others, to-day I had a conversation with Mrs. Ballou, better known as Alice Dutton, a popular writer for the monthlies, and a lecturer on "Woman's Rights." She is an Episcopalian, but holds that at death the spirit enters the presence of God perfected and glorified, and that there is no resurrection of the dead. I showed her from the Bible, that the spirit was the life, and not an entity or being that left the body at death, and that this idea of a spirit going out from the body at death, to heaven or elsewhere, was simply a "popular superstition," with no foundation in the word of God. She reasoned like others of this class, but gave nothing new.

I spoke again at night, and the interest continues, so that Br. Mathewson said I could not go till after Sabbath, and I dare not say no, though duties seem to call me elsewhere, and to the beloved West. Some new cases to-night, and many of the converts spoke strongly, and cheered the hearts of pastor and church. There is deep feeling in the congregation. Br. Langdon Miller, of Illinois was present and was deeply moved. The Lord give him full redemption.

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

UPON FOUR PROPOSITIONS,

Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

ELD. HIMES' THIRD RESPONSE.

My brother advances nominally two new arguments; really only one. But perhaps I cannot better expose the sophistry of the first than by an examination of the illustration with which he seeks to enforce it. How, he asks, could he say, I am president of the college, while the college is suspended, or dead. He fails to see that his illustration is no illustration, because there is no analogy. The office of president attaches to the college itself, is dependent upon its continuance, and is not confined to any individual. If the college dies, the presidency expires with it as a part of it. When the college died, my brother's office died with it. But when Abraham expired, God's relations to him were not affected. He had arranged and provided for this very emergency. It was as much a part of his plan as that he should be "a father of many nations," or have a resurrection and inheritance in the future.

The relations of God to his people are not in the least affected by their death. They would be better illustrated in this way. I will suppose myself the founder and patron of the college. I have provided means for its temporary support. In bad hands, or owing to circumstances, it runs down, and I see it must die. But I announce my determination to restore all that is lost, and add even more than the original donation. The college is at last suspended. In time I visit persons interested in the general subject of the college. I announce myself, I am the patron of the college! Is there any impropriety in the language? Could I in indirect phrase more pointedly recall to their minds the fact that the defunct college still occupied my attention, was the object of my solicitude, was the subject of my promises, and would in due time be resurrected by my power?

This is just what God means by calling himself "the God of Abraham," who is truly dead, and buried in Machpelah. (Gen. 25: 8.) But God purposes to raise him up. Hence Jesus says, "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham." I wish to call especial attention to the fact that my brother and Christ are directly opposed to each other in their arguments from this passage; also to the fact that his argument is wholly extra-Scriptural, and that it is unscriptural, will appear hereafter. By his first argument the reader is led to the main question with his mind impressed with the thought that the language, "I am the God of Abraham," can possibly have no other signification than that Abraham was alive and conscious after his death. Yet I would not insult the intelligence of my readers by assuming that they will be so impressed by the phrase, "God of a non-entity," followed by two exclamation points, as to forget that it is only bathos and not logic. No one can doubt, allowing it to be the fact that Abraham is now dead and unconscious, that if God is bound to him by promises, and intends to raise him from the dead to enjoy their fulfillment, he could with perfect propriety, both as to taste, logic and grammar, say, "I was the God of Abraham." That he is so bound appears from Heb. 11: 13, where we learned that Abraham died with full faith in certain unfulfilled promises; from v. 16, that God is "their God" by virtue of their faith; from v. 35, that "the better resurrection" was the worthies' hope.

Now, says my brother, 'Have ye not read, as touching the dead that their spirits all live'—"I am the God of Abraham?" But Christ cited the phrase "as touching the resurrection [not the state] of the dead." (Mat. 22: 31.) But says Eld. Braden, "Now that a rational entity survives the death of the body have ye not read, 'I am the God of Abraham?" But Jesus takes up the very same words and says, "As touching the dead, that they rise, have ye not read, I am the God of Abraham?" (Mk. 12: 26.) The difference of opinion here is quite apparent. One says the dead are alive; the other that they are dead, but will live again. But says my brother, Now that the dead are conscious, Moses showed at the bush. But the Savior said, "Now that the dead are raised, Moses showed at the bush." (Lk. 20: 37.) Now unless death and resurrection are synonymous, my brother and the Savior are at open variance. I leave our readers to decide which teacher they will follow.

I must not omit reference to one other point. It is intimated that Christ only sought to prove the existence of separate human spirits, and thus show the possibility of a resurrection—that the dead can be raised: that the Sadducean objection to the resurrection was philosophical—that there could be none because there was no surviving rational spirit. This is all a mistake. The Sadducean objection to a future life was not passed upon philosophic subtilties; they rejected it solely on the ground that it was not taught in the Books of Moses—a doctrine my brother holds with them, I believe. And the resurrection was the sole point in controversy—no other issue was considered. And how tame the passage appears when we read that the Sadducees slunk away silenced and ashamed before an argument that the resurrection they denied was possible! Who believes they denied the power of God to raise the dead? They only denied that he had promised to or would do it. Who that has read the passage ever doubted that the Savior demonstrated the very point in dispute—the resurrection?

Now lest any should fail to see clearly the force of the Savior's argument, which is implied, and not fully expressed, let me refer the reader to Rom. 4: 17. "Abraham is the father of us all (as it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,) before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which are not as though they were." My brother's point that "God is not a God of non-entities!!" assumes mathematical proportions just here—it occupies very little space. Here is a direct affirmation that God sometimes speaks of things he intends as if they were already accomplished facts. "All live to him," not because they are alive while they are dead, but because he who quickeneth the dead, to whom all time is an ever present now, purposes their resurrection. 'For whether we live we live, unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord; whether we live therefore or die, we are the Lord's. For to this end Christ both died and rose and revived, that he might be Lord of both the dead and the living.

I might make an apt application of my brother's reasoning just here in behalf of the Pharisaic doctrine of the preexistence of souls. God said, "I have made thee [Abraham] a father of many nations." Mark it! "I have made thee a father! Not will, but have done it. Now as "the nations" were not yet born, it follows that their souls preexisted; else Abraham was the father "of non entities!!" This absurd conclusion is a just deduction upon my brother's premises. Again we read, "Now that the dead ARE raised." According to this logic, this is a solecism, or, else, the resurrection is in the past. Many immaterialists believe that it is, and use my brother's arguments to prove it: and if his argument is sound, they are right, and he, to be consistent, should go with them.

I now call attention to the fact that this argument proves nothing to the point of the proposition before us, which relates not to the separate existence of spirits, but to their eternal duration. I can afford to give him all he can claim for his argument, defective as it is, and still the main question remains without support. Can not the reader see that mere survival is not eternal existence? Will my brother give us one argument directly to the point?

I did not misunderstand my brother upon Lk. 12: 4. His confusion of thought is just here. He assumes that when it is said—"Fear him who after he hath killed hath power to cast into gehenna," that the killing spoken of and the casting into gehenna are both after the resurrection. I showed that this is not so: that "kill" refers to the power to take this life previous to the judgment (just the power man exercises), and the rest of the sentence to the ability exceeding that of man, to extinguish all being, after the judgment, in gehenna. He seeks to show that after the judgment God kills the man, and then casts in gehenna—what? the soul or the body, or both? He says the man is "killed" before he is cast in gehenna, that is, soul and body are separated. Hence we have two entities, at least. God says he will "destroy both soul and body in gehenna." Hence both the separated entities must go into gehenna. His position then is this: at the resurrection the spirit is returned to its body. After judgment the sinner is killed. This separates his soul from his body again. The two separate entities are then cast into gehenna, to exist in that state eternally; for he says destroy does not mean destroy, but something else: but whatever it means of one, it must of the other. One would think that if the corpses and souls both go into gehenna, they would best go together. What especial purpose may be in casting the corpses in separate from the souls, I cannot conceive, unless it be to add horror to final punishment.

My brother lays no little stress upon his conclusions. My attention is directed to his premises. And the repetition of his conclusion from Mat. 10: 28 and Lk. 12: 4 effects nothing, because the premises are false, and the conclusions are therefore illegitimate. We are both addressing principally Christians and Adventists, people who are slow (at least professedly) to believe anything relating to religious matters upon any man's bare assertion. They want either Bible or argument. I would be sorry to be convinced that any of our readers would believe that 'destroy' means or does not mean destroy simply because Eld. Braden or Eld. Himes says so. I have affirmed that 'destroy' in Mat. 10: 28 means destroy, and have given a reason for my opinion. Christ first tells us something man can do. We agree as to what that is. He then tells us what man cannot do, and adds that God can do that very thing! Man cannot do to the psyche what he can to the body, but God can do to both just what man can do to the body—destroy them, kill them. I showed from the Lexicons that the primary sense of 'destroy' is utter destruction, to slay, or kill; and that either of these supplied for the original word, to test the definition, stood the test. Now some good reason why the primary sense should not be received here must be shown before a secondary sense is admissible. If it can be proved that the soul is indestructible, then destroy must bear a secondary sense here. Until he does so the primary sense must stand. But my brother has admitted that God can destroy the soul, literally, if he will. God affirms that he will do so. Why not believe it?

But he says—"Destruction here does not affect the conscious being of the spirit. After killing the spirit has conscious existence, or what does God cast into gehenna?"

Here is the confusion of thought I spoke of. He will have it that God kills the sinner after the judgment, and then casts the spirit into gehenna. But he does no such thing. It is "the soul that sins that dies;" God will destroy both soul and body in gehenna."

He says, "I deny that destroy, when applied to spirit, means to extinguish conscious being in a single instance." Very well, I deny the proposition at the head of this series of articles, but does that prove anything? Now I affirm that in Mat. 10: 28 destroy means just what he says it does not mean—total extinction of being. This is the natural sense of the language. Will he show a reason why it should be rejected? He says Rev. 22: 14 (15) shows that disembodied spirits are conscious. I would like to know how it shows it. I confess I cannot see. He says I "wade through a multitude of passages to fritter away the meaning in these passages." This is a very short way of avoiding an argument. I leave the candid reader to decide what it proves. He asks "what life or being a spirit can have that is not a conscious being?" I have not affirmed that it has any life of any kind But I would like to know if he is prepared to assert that there can be no life without consciousness? He implies it: will my brother affirm it? He says prevailing opinion is the equivalent of common sense. Then he should give up immersion as nonsensical, for the majority are in favor of sprinkling. I suppose he would call it "common sense" when the Lystrians would have worshiped Paul supposing him to be a god; and also "common sense" when the tide turned and they stoned him for an impostor. Prevailing opinion slew Christ, persecuted his followers, and finally corrupted the church. Is it therefore "common sense?"

I again call attention to the fact, that we have had no direct argument upon the main question, the eternal conscious existence of the human spirit. Three of his six articles are now concluded, and we have "three arguments" to prove that spirit is a separate entity. Will our brother give us something bearing directly upon the proposition? The word soul and spirit occur some sixteen hundred times in the original Scriptures, in which he is well versed. Surely among all these, he can find one instance where their ceaseless existence is definitely asserted. To produce one such text would settle the whole question. Perhaps, however, he has learned a fact that Alexander Campbell early discovered—"That immortality in the sacred writings is never applied to the spirit of man." Or he may agree with Olshausen, that "the doctrine of the immortality of the soul and the name are alike unknown to the entire Bible." Or Tillotson, "that the immortality of the soul is rather supposed, or taken for granted, than expressly revealed in the Bible." But he will hardly assert with Prof. Vinet, that "the doctrines of the existence of God and the immortality of the soul are everywhere taken for granted in Christ's words, but never proved." These are all learned immaterialists, and all confess that my brother's proposition can only be inferred, not demonstrated. This explains why he is compelled to go outside of Scripture for his premises, and to admit that the heathen had light on the nature of man and the future life far clearer than that enjoyed by God's own people with his word in their hands, in which, Christ says they were justified in thinking they had eternal life. The reader will now perceive that my brother has no direct Scriptural argument upon the main question. There is none in the Bible. Certain things not taught in the Scriptures must first be admitted before he can make any headway. He cannot adhere to the old principle he represents: "We choose to speak of Bible things by Bible words, because we are always suspicious that if the word is not in the Bible, the idea which it represents is not there." When he has searched the Bible in vain from beginning to end for the words never-dying soul, immortal spirit, or any equivalent expression, instead of becoming suspicious that the idea is not there, he straightway sets about constructing theories by which to inject it into the volume.

My brother materially modifies his theory of the growth of language and the progress of intellect, but again warns us against "the alphabet of rev[illegible] "his is the first "alphabet" I have heard of that was to be dispensed with after it was learned or that gave false ideas of the language to which it belonged. In my school days I was taught that the alphabet was essential for the formation of words to convey ideas. He who throws away the alphabet of revelation, and then attempts to understand the word of God, will succeed as well as the pupil who should refuse to learn his letters, and insist that his primary education should be a course of metaphysics. "The alphabet of revelation" is certain simply—stated fundamental truths They are not a ladder by which one may climb to a higher level, and then kick it over; but are the corner stone of the Christian system. The Old Testament like the New is to be understood in its simple grammatical sense, explained by the same laws of language that we employ in the interpretation of other books. Talk about "root meanings," and "materialistic senses," and primeval childish simplicity only mystifies what is perfectly plain, and gives opportunity to reject the natural sense. But that this is the true sense is old Disciple doctrine. Let us both stick to it in this debate.

It is nothing to the question whether Abraham was a barbarian, or the Hebrews out of Egypt only a remove above the Digger Indians. My brother has not surprised me at all in his assertions. I have heard the same thing before; but I never saw it proved. The point is simply this. "All Scripture given by inspiration is profitable." If God inspired an idiot to write, it is written in the language of men, and all that is necessary to understand it is to understand the simple laws of language. The Bible was designed for the common people. Its great truths are revealed in simple language. We must accept the evidently plain and literal, as a basis for the interpretation of the difficult, or obscure. If an explanation of a difficult passage involves a contradiction of a plainly literal passage, this is prima facie evidence that the gloss is incorrect.

My brother affirms that Adam was placed under a law whose penalty he was incapable of understanding. In support of this he employs a theory of man used by Universalists, Restorationists, and Rationalists as a basis of their theories. And if he is right, they are clearly right, for it is unjust to place a being under a law the penalty of which it cannot comprehend. But God is just; therefore he would not do such a thing. Man was placed under a law the penalty of which was death—simply the dissolution of his being and a return to his native elements. "Dying thou shalt die." True it was asserted he should not die—dying thou shalt not die. But the author of the statement has never proved himself reliable authority, and I choose not to believe him. It is my opinion that he uttered a deliberate falsehood.

My brother finds something "rich" in a remark I did not make. He is welcome to his inference from it. He may see the point more fully before we are through. Man has a body, he goes on to say, and a soul in common with the brutes. If he is controlled by this he is a soul-like man. (Please read again my remarks on 1 Cor. 2: 14.) But man also "has a spirit, which bears the image of God." I have asked before, and now I ask again—What is man? What are the essential things or qualities of which we can say, This is man! My brother describes three entities, two of them intelligent, one without these qualities. Man possesses the three. Sometimes one of the entities controls him, sometimes the other. Who is the him, the man? In the outset my brother said we ought to have a clear definition of man. Will he give it?

I do not think my argument on Acts 2: 31 will fall before such phrases as "special pleading," "irrelevant Scriptures," "foist special meanings," backed by an arbitrary denial and affirmation. Many eminent immaterialists support me. As to assertions I will put in the counter-assertion that 'soul' nor 'spirit' (of man) ever mean a separate rational entity, in the Bible in a single instance. It is very easy for him to say soul is a separate entity, and then affirm that the word occurs in that sense in Acts 2: 31. Can he not see that in so doing he assumes the very point he is to prove? I show, and he cannot deny it, that "my soul" occurs frequently in Scripture as a periphrasis. I affirm that it never occurs in the sense of a separate rational entity. I show that the periphrasis makes good sense; and suits the context; for Peter says it was of the resurrection that David spoke; and resurrection means the revival to life of a dead person.

My brother wants some frank answers upon the subject of Christology. I cannot doubt, in view of his articles, that he would delight to draw me into the discussion of some side issue. He is "curious" to hear my answer. I am equally curious to hear his answer to this question. He says, Christ's body went into the tomb of Joseph; that Christ's spirit went to hades. Now will he tell me where Christ himself went? And what constitutes Christ? If these questions are "frankly" answered, I shall be disposed to speak further. If he is prepared to maintain that the spirit of Christ was the pre-existent Logos, I am prepared to test the value of his argument, upon his own premises. Meanwhile I simply deny that the spirit he commended to God was a pre-existent being at all, or even a rational or a separate entity. He urges that 1 Pet. 4: 19 does not meet the case, that the soul was committed to God while the person was living, not at death. But it was in view of death. And it certainly has more bearing upon the question than the references my brother gives to prove spirit a separate rational entity. When spirit is mentioned in any of them it is always the spirit of a living man: and in most of them the spirit is not mentioned at all—unless the spirit is the person. If my brother will take this position, I shall then be prepared to meet him. As the case stands at present the man—the person, is the body, or the soul, or the spirit, or neither of them, according to the exigency of the case. We are told that "the image of God" in man pertains to his spirit. This might be and still the spirit not be a separate rational entity. But I trust every reader will turn to the passages he cites. They will learn that only converted persons have a spirit at all. In order to possess one they must be "born again," and "put it on!" Moreover I fail to see even if it be true that "the image" is in the spirit, how that proves it to be an immortal rational entity. On the contrary, I can see an excellent reason for its extinction if that image is lost or marred beyond recovery.

He says spirits of dead men are in heaven. He cites Eph. 3: 10—"Of whom the whole family in heaven is named." How does he know the family in heaven are disembodied human spirits? How did they get to heaven? He tells us that good men's spirits go at death where Christ's spirit went—to hades. Is hades in heaven? Where does the disembodied spirit go? Eccl. 12: 7 is quoted to prove it goes to God. God is in heaven. So it goes to heaven. But when we get to Acts 2: 31, the spirit goes to hades. And in Eph. 3: 10 we find them all back in heaven again. Surely this is migration, if not *trans*migration of souls!

He thinks I might have saved space by leaving out the quotation from the Hughey debate. No doubt. He might have exercised the economy he suggests by omitting his lame rejoinder. The phrase "that can be apprehended by the senses," has no bearing whatever upon the point I made. The simple fact is, that my brother attempts to define God—an act which he told Mr. Hughey was "blasphemous presumption." He then affirmed that "no one by searching can find out or define God." Is it not verging or quibbling when one says we may not say "God is without body or parts," but may say "He is without body or parts that may be apprehended by the senses?" Is not the one an "untaught question" as much as the other? My brother stands condemned out of his own mouth as "attempting to be wise above what is written." He assumes as a fact what the Scriptures nowhere affirm; he bases on that assumption an analogy; from the assumed analogy he draws a conclusion; this conclusion he asserts to be demonstrated truth, and forthwith makes it the basis of argument. I showed out of his own mouth that he knows nothing about God's nature, nor can know anything by the Bible. I showed that his analogy—always a doubtful method of reasoning—was imperfect; hence his conclusion was worthless. Finally, after arguing that spirits are without organization or bodies, he affirms that man possesses distinct rational entity "in common with spiritual beings," leaving us to infer that after all they do have bodies, of one kind or another.

My brother gives a list of passages commencing with Daniel's grief of mind, and ending with Peter's death. Not one of them is pertinent to the question. I shall not attempt an explanation of Rom. 7: 18–23; Gal. 5: 17 and kindred passages, until my brother shall inform us what MAN is. If he will tell us what is essential, that we may lay our fingers upon it and say, "This is man!" I am prepared to meet him. That the inward man is the spirit is pure assumption. In passing I note that he styles the idea that the renewal of the inward man means the prolonging of its existence—"nonsense." May be not. There is a contrast, an antithesis. The one "perishes," the other is "renewed—"strengthened," my brother says. Exactly. But what for? Evidently that it may not "waste away" like the other. Another thought. Rom. 7: 25—"With the mind I serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin." "The mind," my brother says is the spirit, a rational entity. Then "the flesh" is also a rational entity; for intelligence is predicated of it as much as of the other. But the "I," the personality, is distinct from both of these. Hence there are three entities. What is the man—what constitutes the "I, myself?"

Daniel's "spirit was grieved in its sheath." Very true—the only place it could have feeling. Now will he please give us a passage that says the human spirit was either grieved or felt any emotion whatever when out of "its sheath?" That would be something to the point. As for Phil. 1: 23, and 2 Cor. 5: 1–10, they do not refer to "the spirit" at all, unless the spirit is the personality, the MAN. Is it?

My brother says that spirits can only be seen in vision, and cites 2 Ki. 6: 17. I hope the reader will turn to the passage. I doubt if poverty of agreement could be better demonstrated than by the citation of such a passage for such a purpose. In the first place the young man saw with his "eyes;" and, secondly, no rule for seeing spirits was mentioned. In this case preternatural power was given to the young man's eyes. There was no "vision" at all.

And now in conclusion a few plain words. The question before us is of "vital importance," as my brother has said. It should be settled by argument, and not by appeals to prejudice. My ideas may be of a "low materialistic order." If they can be proved so by the word of God I shall not object. But I do object in the name of decency and common sense to the "lugging in" of these continual appeals to popular prejudices in such expressions as "dragging man down to a level with the brute," "low materialistic ideas," "lugging in materialistic philosophy." I have no objections to the name materialist. It means a believer in something substantial. But when my brother asserts that materialism is essentially lower than immaterialism he asserts what cannot be proved. Is he a Manichæan? Does he believe that matter is essentially evil? Did not he who made this still fair creation call it very good?" Are not our resurrection bodies to be material—that can be handled and felt, like Christ's? Is not our future home to be a material abode—not gross, but substantial? Dare he affirm that there is positively a thing or a being in existence that is absolutely immaterial? Did he not in the outset say that as to the materiality or immateriality of the spirit he would affirm nothing, thus dodging this very point? Does he not know that the most bestial philosophies and religions the world has seen have immaterialist systems? Are not most heathen systems, and Mohammedanism, and the Romanist corruptions of the dark ages, and Mormonism, and modern spiritism and the filthy Woodhull-ism all founded on immaterialism? Not one of them could exist for a moment without the dogma my brother maintains. There have been infidel materialists, wretched characters. But all their sins and vagaries and error and filthiness, are but a drop in the bucket compared with those with which immaterialism has flooded the church and the world.

I do not "drag man down to the level of the brute," and my brother knows it. I put man where the Scriptures put him, at the head of this mundane creation, with the privilege of immortality if by patient continuance in well doing he will seek for it. (Rom. ch. 2.) But if he chooses the "broad way," he is "like the beasts that perish." (Ps. 49: 20); as "natural brute beasts made to be taken and destroyed, and shall utterly perish in his own corruption. (2 Pet. 2: 12.) We have the Bible and each affirm that it teaches the views we defend. Let us meet each other in manly argument. My brother can continue in "low" appeals to popular prejudices and attempts to be as the mind by references to philosophy and zoology (!!) to which I have made no appeal (spite of his assertions to the contrary), but I shall not feel bound to notice them. Appeals to prejudice, are usually the resort of those who are short of argument, and this fact is generally understood.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

The church in DeKalb are enjoying a season of refreshing under the labors of Br. S. B. Mabey assisted by Br. W. H. Kendall, late of the Christian (old New England) church. Br. K. is highly commended as a servant of the church. It is hoped that his health may improve and he be able to give himself wholly to the work of the ministry. Eight or ten have been reclaimed and converted.——Br. J. M. Bowling writes from Southern Illinois that there is a deep interest there in the discussion. He says Br. Calkins did work while he was here, and set his stakes firmly.——The brethren of Mason Co., Mich., talk of organizing. Br. Gordon, an Adventist-Winebrennarian, is with them.——Bros. Grant and Wilson were snow-bound in the Rocky Mountains about New Year's. Br. Grant preached in the cars on New Year's eve.——Br. Thos. Histed, of Bay City in the Saginaw valley, will welcome any Advent preacher passing that way.——We have received several letters regretting that a chart such as we proposed cannot be published for lack of support.——Prof. Huber writes—"Every Advent church, and so far as possible, every Advent believer should have one."——Br. Little writes from Missouri that the doctrine of the nature of man and his future destiny has been truthfully presented in "the local paper" in his section, to much profit. Some are being enlightened.——Br. H. M. Wheeler reports progress in Schuyler Co., Ill. One brother and his wife were converted by THE TIMES, of which he had made them a present.——Br. W. M. Buell of Moscow, Mich. was lately assailed for his faith, and told that he was fit only for Kalamazoo—i. e. the Insane Asylum there. In reply he asked them if they thought they could prove their immortality dogma from the Bible. "Oh! Yes, in fifty places." He advised them to search the Scriptures for the facts in the case, and the result might lead them to feel that "the lunatics" were not all among the Adventists. Undoubtedly many really do imagine that the Bible not only teaches, but plainly states that doctrine.——There were some forty conversions at Br. D. S. Clark's recent meeting in western Iowa. He is now at Dexter, with good prospects.

The Times.

AT HOME.

– – – 227, 637 immigrants arrived in New York in 1871.

– – – There have been some symptoms of trouble between this country and Spain. War, even, has been talked of, but it is not an event likely to occur.

– – – The New York Times predicts a financial crisis as imminent and inevitable, and warns all to prepare by proper economy, and a reduction of liabilities. But "economy" does not mean to stop your paper, that is not economy.

– – – On Sunday week in New York at the St. Stephens Roman Catholic church, Rev. Dr. McFlynn denounced the reading of the Bible in public schools, and declared it contrary to the Constitution of the United States.

– – – Chicago was recently the scene of a riotous demonstration on the part of the property owners who wish to be allowed the privilege of putting up wooden shells all through the city. The City Council were driven from their rooms, and one policeman seriously wounded. Quiet was restored.

– – – According to the late census in New Hampshire, out of a total population of 318-300, there were 15,835 persons over the age of 70, or 5 per cent of the whole number. Of this aggregate more than 7,000 were between the ages of 70 and 75; nearly 5,000 were over 70 and under 80; 600 were octogenarians and 309 were between 90 and 95. Ten were 98 years old, 2 were 99, and 6 had passed the age of a century.

ABROAD.

– – – 25,664 deaths by snake-bites, and 12-554 by wild beasts are reported in British India, for the past three years.

– – – France is in a wretched condition. Thiers is as tyranical toward the Press as a Bonaparte or Bourbon could be.

– – – Full details of the small-pox epidemic in England are published. There were 13-174 fatal cases in 1871—about eleven times as many as in 1870.

– – – The Cuban rebellion cost Spain about $24,000,000, and 20,000,000 men each year. On an average, about 55 men a day are disabled or killed. The insurgents have about 10,000 men in arms.

– – – The Austrian Prime Minister, Count Von Andrassy, received a deputation of Catholics, to-day and in reply to their address, declared that the Pope was under no constraint, as was shown by the recent appointments by him of some thirty bishops. The relations between Austria and Italy are on a sound footing. He knew of no Catholic power which could be justified in offering the Pope an asylum.

– – – The Imperial ukase just issued at St. Petersburg gives the military contingent to be raised by conscription in 1872, at six for every thousand males. This used to be considered a proportion only required in time of war, the peace contingent ranging from two to four per thousand. The levy now proclaimed will be equivalent to the raising of from 120,000 to 140,000 recruits, between the ages of eighteen and forty. The nominal period of service for which these men are enrolled, is twenty-two years for the Guard, and twenty-five years for the other divisions of the army. At the end of ten to fifteen years' service, however, the soldiers usually obtain a virtual discharge, being sent home on an indefinite furlough, and their names being merely retained on the reserve force of their battalion. The Russian soldier, unlike those of the British and French services, is encouraged to marry, and special lodgings are provided for the married men and their families. The ranks of the army are largely recruited from among the youths born in barracks, as they are taught no other trade but soldiering.

– – – The Czar Alexander has issued a decree granting furloughs to fifty thousand men of the Russian Army, and it is straightway assumed that the peace of Europe is assured thereby. Possibly the courteous circular of Count Andrassy, and the amicable relations despite the late ficticious pugilistic encounter, professed by the Court of Berlin, have something to do with the Czar's decree. Yet, what after all, are fifty thousand men among a million and a half? And, which is still more pertinent, what would the absence of five hundred thousand men on furlough signify with the Russian railway system what it now has become? The truth is, the whole military problem of the future is changed in Russia, by railroads and telegraphs, and if a new Napoleon were to attempt hereafter, another campaign of Moscow, he would probably come to grief very much faster than his predecessor. For the rest, a certain proportion of the Russian Army have furloughs every year in time of peace, and such would doubtless have been granted them just now, even had Count Andrassy been less affable, or Prince Bismarck more grimly sententious. The simple truth is, that all the great European Powers, England perhaps excepted, are getting ready to fight, although when they will set about it no one at this moment can safely venture to predict.—N. Y. Times.

– – – A special correspondent of the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, writes to that paper from Moscow, as follows: "All newspapers, and among others the Sowremennija Iswestija, are full of military intelligence, and even in the most peaceful society war is the chief topic of conversation. Russia appears to have become a vast camp. Meanwhile the government issues orders important in a military point of view. Millions are spent in military stores, munitions, horses, and forage, and both in this country and out of it numerous contracts are in course of execution. New forts are building at Kiew, Nicolaief, Viborg, Brest, Litewski, Cronstadt and Marschaw. Formerly men who were the only support of their parents escaped military service, but now they form a class apart, the fifth, and are liable to be called any day, while the youths who have passed their 17th year are sent to regiments to learn their drill. Men of the reserve and soldiers on leave are not allowed to leave the country. The army is already armed with breech-loaders, and by next Spring the troops serving in the Caucasus, in Siberia, and in the far East will also be similarly provided. All this makes every one anticipate a war, and the press endeavors to embitter the already sufficiently excited feelings, and to [illegible] them against Austria. Strangers who wish to visit military establishments or fortresses, can only do so, according to a lately issued regulation, when accompanied by a watchman in the service of the particular establishment visited. The journeys of the Grand Duke Alexis and Michael are considered to be of political importance."

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 40c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 5c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man is of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 30c.

Correspondence.

From H. J. Munson, Girard, Kas.

We are still constant in the "present truth" and trying to do good as we have opportunity. I have greatly desired to send for more tracts, and to send the paper to some friends; but not being able to do so I have deferred writing. The cause progresses but slowly here, a few constant ones who seem willing to bear the burdens and reproaches for "Jesus' sake." We thank God for small blessings—a little help, good help—but pray for more. You, Br. Himes, know full well our earnestness. We have, as it were, nothing of this world's goods, and the maintenance of my family greatly hinders me in doing what I otherwise would in preaching the gospel of the Kingdom. I would gladly devote my whole time to the work could I feel that circumstances justified it. I pray the good Lord to give us grace to do according to our ability, and open the way whereby it may be increased.

When we read your appeal to the brethren for the liquidation of the debt of the association, we thought, Who is poorer than we? Any surely we can devise to spare one dollar at least towards paying it off.

We did not know for a long time how we were to send the money, but here it is—a dollar for each of us (wife and I); and now I will tell you how we are able to send it; for we are able. You know we had when you were here no window to our house except two large panes of glass. We thought we must have one, and so I engaged to do a job of work for the lumbermen, by which I might get one. But when we read of your labors among those poor but good Arkansas brethren and sisters, many of whom dwell in log houses without window, and we said, We can do without a window a while longer, and send the money in response to "the appeal." And now may it be accepted as our freewill offering, though small, and may the Lord's blessing attend it, and all who labor for the cause.

From Br. A. Cairns, DeKalb, Ill.

Through the mercies of God I am unexpectedly in this place. And when I look back over the short period since I left here I feel more determined than ever to sound the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" A little more than two years since I left this town; and to see what has happened! The "Frog" power dared the world to fight and what has come to pass? Her troops were withdrawn from Rome, and the Man of Sin was left in a defenceless state. In the mean time the bishops from all parts of the world being met at Rome to decide the question, Is the Pope infallible? The vote was taken. The majority voted that he was divine. What followed? Victor Immanuel knocks at the gates of Rome. The Man of Sin makes a feeble resistance, but the conqueror takes possession of the city of the seven hills. He begins then to look for help to them he thought his friends, but no response comes. Because the Lord has said these shall hate the harlot, and shall make her desolate. And we hear him exclaim, "All is lost. Our friends have all forgotten us. Our only trust is in Almighty God." And now he is as it were, a prisoner in his own house. The mighty cry will soon sound forth, "Babylon is fallen, to rise no more." Everything betokens the coming of the Prince of Peace.

From C. R. White, Louisiana, Mo.

In the affairs of this world the majority rule. The minority have to yield submissively. Verdicts are rendered in favor of the majority, though oftimes it is subsequently discovered that the minority was right. But a day is coming when this order of things will be reversed. The minority will rule. The verdict at the great Assize will be given in favor of the minority, not because of the minority, but because the minority was right. Many are called but few will be chosen. "Fear not little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom." But the "few" will not be really few in number, but a countless number, as the sand on the sea shore; but they will be few, a little flock relatively, compared to the great multitude, the many called.

Let none despair because of being in the minority. Yet let none claim the promise because they are in the minority; but let us all see that if we are in the minority, that we are right. "Take heed, he that thinketh he standeth lest he fall." Fatal errors have been held by minorities as well as majorities.

Why is it? Preaching Christ and him crucified was an offence to the Jews. Preaching Christ's coming to be glorified in his saints and to give them their crown and reward as imminently near, seems to be an offence to many of his professional followers. If one wishes to make them mad, mention the doctrine, and their wrath is kindled. They have not patience to listen to the evidence of such good news, as it ought to be to the real Christian. Many of the Reformers of the day, religious and others, might more properly be called Deformers.

A sum in theological arithmetic: "When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from Heaven in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction," etc.,—how many of the wicked will be left?

A slight misprint occurred in my letter as published in THE TIMES of Oct. 24. I am made to say, "My brethren is increased," instead of my burden. However, as it reads, I thank God it is also true—increased in numbers, and if not in faith and hope yet, judging from the love-feast column, "letters and extracts," my brethren are still holding on to the faith once delivered to the saints, and rejoicing in the hope of the glory of God soon to be revealed. Dear brethren and sisters alllow me to make a suggestion. In our daily secret approaches to our Heavenly Father, let us not omit three things; our own personal holiness and sanctification; pray for one another, (prayer for all saints); and especially pray for the Lord Jesus to come quickly; omit that not.

From B. J. Goodwin, Chickasaw Co. Iowa.

Br. Collins' article was good. I think it should satisfy every thinking mind. While reading it the thought occurred to me that the Lord might have something to do with suggesting names to his enemies for his children. When Christ was first preached that he had come into the world and had been by wicked hands crucified and slain, and that there was "no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved," (Acts 4: 12) his disciples were called Christians by way of reproach. But in the course of time the name became so popular that many who were not Christians got into the church and perverted the doctrines of Christianity; and when at length a reformation took place, the reformers were reproached with some other name. But no name was given them except the first one which indicated that the Christ had come, nor yet that he would come again until within a few years. Now the Midnight Cry is sounding. The virgins are rising and trimming their lamps and getting ready to go out to meet their Lord. This time he will come and will not tarry. So the name Adventist is very appropriate now, and every who watches for and really loves the appearing of the Lord will be called by this name, even though he may call himself Baptist, Methodist, Christian, or some other name. I am not ashamed of the name, Adventist. It indicates my faith in Jesus that "he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day." (2 Thes. 1: 10.)

Sr. Kate L. Sloan, Lapeer, Mich.

I am one of the little church in Lapeer that desires a home in the kingdom. You will no doubt remember that six years ago when you and Br. Snook came here with the tent, you organized a little band together, and I believe that none of that little number ever went back into the world. But since that time we have seen many changes. A few have moved away, others have fallen asleep, and new ones have come among us. Also we have seen dark hours as well as sunshine. But truly Israel's God has been our God. He has done great things for us. We number more to-day than when we started. But because we do not have the crowd we are not in the least discouraged. We know and believe we have not a popular doctrine, and we are not a popular people. But this we do know: God has always been with us; and I believe we have the evidence that we have passed from death unto life. We love all God's people wherever they may be.

Oh, how many precious seasons we have had together! I have often attended the prayer meetings in the other churchs, and I never enjoy any like our own. It always seems that there is more interest and unity. We have had two regular prayer meetings a week, and have had preaching quite often, but not regularly. But we had no place to call our own where we could meet together. We have had our prayer meetings in private houses, and when we had preaching we would get a place somewhere, if possible, but it was not always possible. But now we have great reason to thank God that we have got quite a comfortable place of our own. He put it into the hearts of the brethren to build, and by his help they did it in a short time, although few and not over-burdened with this world's riches. Now we feel that the Lord has a work for us to do. Trusting by his grace assisting us we may do it, we have Eld. Mackinto preach to us quite often, and we live in hope that when you visit the churches in Michigan you will come to Lapeer; and we will heartily welcome any of the preaching brethren that will come and break the bread of life to us. The railroad is now running through this place, which makes it more convenient than in the past.

From Br. Henry Campbell, Green Point, N. Y.

"Why, seeing times are not hidden from the Almighty, do they that know him not see his days."—Job. 24: 1.

The above is a very pertinent question, and is in substance similar to one we often hear in reference to the time of the Lord's coming. The disciples after the resurrection of our Lord, asked the question, "Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" The Lord told them it was not for them "to know the times and seasons which the Father hath put in his own power." God in his infinite wisdom saw it would not be for their good to know the time of the restoration of the kingdom. He therefore withheld that knowledge from them. He, seeing the end from the beginning, knew there was a long road to travel, through blood, fire, and all kinds of suffering, for a period of 1260 years, which, if they were to know before hand might not produce in their hearts very pleasing sensations. We consider it a great favor conferred on the church then, to withhold from her the knowledge of this long period of tribulation. Our blessed Lord himself was not permitted to make known the time, for God, the Father, had not made it known to him at that time, as we read in John 15: 15. "For all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." In ch. 16: 15, we read, "All things that the Father hath are mine: Therefore said I that he shall (in the future) take of mine, and shall shew it unto you." After this our Lord was put in possession of "all power in heaven and in earth." Therefore the knowledge of times and seasons was his. After his resurrection the church had to pass through a fiery trial before she could be instructed in reference to her deliverance.—Dan. 12: 9, 10. I thank God that time of open persecution from Pagan and Papal Rome is in the past, and we have reached the time of the end when knowledge has increased on this subject. I have been looking for the return of our blessed Lord from heaven nearly thirty years. When I first heard you, Br. Himes, in New York, I was in the strength of manhood and was able to travel and talk to the people about the blessed hope; but now I can labor but little, and sometimes write a little to let it be known that I am still looking for our coming King.

There are two questions to be answered in reference to the Papal church, which are very important for us to understand. (1) Is her system of religion an abomination in the sight of God? We say positively, Yes; because it is idolatry. Witness the worship of the host in the mass. (2) Has it desolated the true church, and worn out the saints for 1260 years? History gives a positive answer, Yes. We now ask, When was the abomination of desolation set up? We find that the hinderance to the rise of that power was removed in 508, and in thirty years after, the Man of Sin and the Son of Perdition was set up, in 538. From this point we come down 1335 years and reach 1873. "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days."

From J. Powell, (a Welsh brother) West Blue Mound, Wis.

I get advantage and profit above many of my equals in mine own nation. In the winter of forty-four I got a series of lectures into my eyes and mind out of the prophetic chart. The operation affrighted me a little. But in short time the message came sweet as honey in my mouth. But disappointment made the little book bitter after it was eaten, and consequently I felt indifferent, and fell into slumber and slept. But, blessed be God, I heard a rumor; not only rumors of war, but for better: "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" Go ye out to meet him." Then I arose and trimmed my lamp. And by every effort I can make I am willing to proclaim the Midnight Cry, especially to my own country people. Because "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." This gospel means the Midnight Cry, "The Bridegroom cometh." The time is short. We have a great deal of work to accomplish.

"And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples and nations and tongues and kings." (Rev. 10: 11.) Whoever this passage refers to, they have but very few years to accomplish it. There is no reference here to those that preach another gospel. They preach immortality independent of Jesus Christ "who hath abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

While I watch and "am as a sparrow upon the house-top," by chance I find out a little band in Castle Prairie that love Jesus' appearing, and I went over to see them, and they "instructed me in the way of the Lord more perfectly." And when I was disposed to pass into Castle Prairie I was in perils of waters always. While Eld. Hitchcock baptised eight happy souls in the river I stand on the bank this side, and I can't cross it. And I make up my mind to do all I can to try to get a little band this side of the river, in Arena.

The first thing I pray to God to conduct the effort. The next thing I invite the Elds. to come over into Arena and help us. And the next effort, I scatter tracts and books and THE TIMES about town. Eld. Hitchcock came over and held a series of meetings and sowed the good seed. But, alas! the accuser rose up—some sort of Jannes and Jambres—to resist the truth. The next effort, Brn. Biron, Meigs and Peavey made arrangements to get a grove meeting, and invite Elds. Thomson and Adrian to preach the word, and to water the seed, and the Christian friends came from Castle Prairie, and Sauk, and Crystal Lake, and they prayed for us to God that giveth the increase. When Eld. Thomson came over the next time the field was white already to harvest; and "he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto eternal life; that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together. "This is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes."

From John Bower, Hinton, Mich.

I have been in Ashland, Newaygo Co. a week. The people were beginning to get waked up when the professed United Brethren preacher came and claimed the school house to hold a protracted meeting. I gave it up, thinking it better than to have words about it. I heard him try to preach three times. Such an effort I never heard before. May God forgive me if ever I refuse to preach his word. His first text was,—"What is truth?" he could not tell where it was, but it could be found in one of Paul's epistles. And he stated the Bible was not all truth: The historical and poetical was not truth. Of all the blunders and theological manœuvers this capped the sheaf. A number of his own brethren were disgusted, and by Thursday night he run out into a prayer meeting, and then quit. There is a good prospect now for good, and I intend to look after it. There are some eight or ten that will come into church order soon. After being crowded out of the school house I preached one evening in Mr. Simpson's lumber camp. Had a good hearing, and many that never heard before were interested. Mr. Cooper, who makes no profession, offered me his lumber camp as long as I wanted to hold meetings. But I thought it better to wait than have opposition meetings. I find the devil is always pleased if he can get the professers of religion to fight.

I got home just in time to attend the funeral of Sr. Hinton, on Saturday last. The brethren have taken the necessary steps to build a chapel next spring. Some $400 have been subscribed. We have an increase in our congregations. There is a great desire to hear on these glorious truths of life in Christ.

From Seth Hamilton, Vernon Co. Wis.

Doubtless some who read this may be conscious of indulging in bad habits from which they wish to be free. Now is a good time to break loose from their bondage. Come! Resolve that they shall not accompany you another year. Bid them an eternal farewell, and then look to the Lord for help to keep the enemy in subjection. Jesus is soon coming, and if we are ready, we must be without spot and blameless; we must cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord, or we shall not be prepared to go in to the marriage of the Lamb. None but the pure will be there. Then leave the brandy, gin, and whisky, rum and tobacco; evil speaking, evil surmising, evil habits, backbiting, joking, impatience, unkindness, judging, and every other evil habit, and let them keep your company no more. Leave these weights. Be free in Jesus, and happy in his love. Do not hesitate. Say, yes; I will do it for Jesus' sake; and in his strength be an overcomer, and inherit all things. [illegible] I entreat you, make no excuse. [illegible] it; say, I will! May God [illegible] with the good decision.

By a close examin[illegible] of God's word we see that we a[illegible] down in the very last end of man's probation. I for one feel thankful that I can see the plain truths that are handed to us in these days, and I hope to be living so when Jesus comes, and have an entrance into God's everlasting kingdom.

From Br. E. N. Bliss.

I love to read the experiences of brethren in regard to the habits that they have overcome. I thought that it must be interesting to others to read my experience in the use of tobacco. I was led at the early age of eight years to see that I was a lost sinner, and I was led to fall upon my knees and ask God for Christ's sake to forgive my sin, which he did, and filled my heart brim full of love and peace. But I was ashamed to let any one know of it, and so tried to live a Christian life to myself. But it was poor business that I made of it, and I soon gave up my hope, and the age of nineteen found me a wild young man. When about fifteen I became the possessor of an old fashioned silver "four-pence," which was the first money that I ever had. Being in company one Sunday evening with two boys of my own age, one of them said he wished he had a cigar. Now I felt very proud of my riches, and I told them that I had a four-pence, and that we would get three two-cent cigars, and so we did; and no young man felt any prouder than I did with my cigar in my mouth. But my pride soon had a fall; for I was soon trying to turn myself inside out, and I was as sick a boy as any one need to look at. But night's sleep made me all right. And at the age of nineteen the smell of tobacco smoke was an offence to me. As my mates were all of them smokers but one, and I thought that I must smoke too, I went to taking lessons. The first lesson had the same result as that five years before. But I persevered until I became an expert at it.

I needed two more things in order to graduate and get my diploma—drink rum and swear. So I went in for them too, and at the age of twenty-two I was a fit subject for my diploma.

About two years from this time I was on a visit to my father's with my young wife, and my father was trying, as many times before, to persuade me to leave off the use of tobacco. I told him I would do it if he would abandon his tea and coffee. He pushed his cup of tea away, and coolly turned to my mother and asked her to get him a tumbler of water. I was taken at my word. I had given my word, and considered it as sacred, and I went without the weed for ten days, and in that time I had bloated as full as my skin would hold, and I could not work any for the last three days, and it seems as if I must die. At last I yielded. Took a cigar, and I felt relieved, and in two days I was well again. And I took to my pipe and tobacco for eighteen years. Then I again took up my cross to walk in the steps of my Savior, and about three months after that the thought came to me, Why do you not redeem your pledge to your father. I began to argue that I could not do it. But a voice seemed to say, The Lord will help you! I took my tobacco out of my mouth and planted it in a hill of corn, and told my heavenly Father that if he would help me to go without it, I would give him the money that it cost me every year. Praise his name, I have not had a chew in my mouth since—now seven years. But I kept on smoking. I never went to bed at night without my pipe, and sometimes I would drop asleep and lose the pipe in the bed, and I would light it in the morning before arising. I have often wished to have a prayer-meeting close so that I could get out and light my pipe. In short, I was a perfect slave to it. Five months after I had left off chewing, I was impressed to give up my pipe. I said that I could not. Yes, you can. No, I can't. "My grace is sufficient for you." I do not believe it! "What! you profess to love me, and do not believe me?" There it would end. The next day it would begin again, and the same conversation would take place in my mind. Finally one evening while on my way to meeting I took my pipe out of my mouth and tossed it into the street, and if I ever did pray, it was then, as I walked along on my way to church. Thanks to my dear heavenly Father, his grace has been sufficient for me: for I have not cared anything for it since. He has truly been good to me. I have often wondered why it was that I was so impressed to fulfill my promise to my earthly father. But I soon found out. I was led to go out and proclaim the gospel of the kingdom, and it was not fit that I should do it while a slave to that narcotic. Besides, I feel like a new man, in body and mind.

Brief Extracts.

W. Winter, Wautonwan Co. Minn.: We have no Advent preaching here except THE TIMES. There was one minister here last summer who gave the first Advent sermon I ever heard. There are a good many more in this part of the country who are most, but not quite, Adventists. I can see the meaning of a great portion of the Bible now as I never saw it before. ——————E. W. Huson, Belle Plain, Iowa: For the last year I have, in connection with my business, been preaching the coming of the Lord and the destruction of the wicked, with very good success. The prejudice has subsided some, and a good many have received the truth. Thank God, I am no more a lonely pilgrim. Three long years I was alone. Now we have a prayer meeting every week, and I preach twice each Sabbath to large assemblies. We invite traveling preaching brethren to call on us, and they shall have a welcome home, and we will get a house for them to preach in. ——————Br. Luther Ackerman, Warren Co. Minn.: I thought of course that you would stop the paper when the first year expired. Was very glad that you did not, for I like to read it, although I am not a Christian. I believe the Advent doctrine. I became convinced of its truth by reading the Bible to find Scripture to fight it. And the more I read the less fight there was in me. And I read until I could see that it was through the craftiness of the deceiver that the doctrine of the immortal soul had been so universally taught. [And we trust ere he writes again, our brother may become a Christian. ED.]——————Br. P. Holler, Nashville, Mich.: I am now engaged in a discussion with Eld. Weaver, a F. W. Baptist minister, where Br. Ferriss held meetings when he was here. The Lord's word has the victory, and it is shining more brightly than ever. We expected to make arrangements to have Br. Ferriss come back and hold a protracted meeting. Pray for us. And let every one just now solicit subscribers for THE TIMES. Many will subscribe on account of the discussion. ——————Br. W. I. Lewis, Whitehall, Mich.: THE TIMES is all the preaching we have that we call "the right kind." We have not heard an Advent sermon in about eighteen months, and we thirst to hear the word preached in its purity as a weary traveler thirsteth for water in a desert place. We do wish some Advent preacher would come this way and hold a series of meetings. It might be the means of doing much good. In the meantime we shall try to let our light shine, and tell people of the coming of Christ. We hope to be faithful till Jesus comes, and at last to be gathered into his everlasting kingdom.——————Sr. M. E. Wright, Cascade, Iowa: Dear brethren and sisters, scattered abroad; how precious and cheering to lone pilgrims are your communications. Though we are living in a time when iniquity abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold, yet the Lord has a remnant left that are praying, Thy kingdom come! What a blessed hope is ours! The hope of being translated, changed from mortality to immortality. It should and does lift our hearts from the groveling things of earth to things above. Oh! the precious thought of seeing Jesus, and being made like him, to die no more. But we must be pure in heart to behold his face in righteousness. Oh! for the sanctifying power, the saving influence of the Holy Spirit. May we wrestle and pray, and never give over until we feel the holy anointing and know that we have a clear title to that inheritance that is incorruptible, undefiled, and fadeth not away.——————Br. Joseph Harrison, Adair Co. Mo. THE TIMES is our main preacher here. It rejoices our hearts that we can have the great privilege of reading a paper that teaches the truth, and proves its position as it progresses, by the word of God. Br. Malley and Br. Snow preach for us once a month. We organized thirteen months ago, and we are the only little band that stands faithful for the Lord in these parts, of those that Br. Y. Higgins organized in this part of the country. The rest have gone back to the world. We are trying to let our light shine, to live for Jesus, that when he comes we may meet him with joy.——————Br. H. d. Jones, Sauk Co. Wis. A few here are still trusting in the Lord and looking for his Son from heaven. There is much opposition among the Methodists. The F. W. Baptists have withered some, as king Jeroboam's arm did when he put it forth to lay hold of the man of God. The ministers utter nothing but slander and ridicule, one saying two weeks ago, that the Advent ministers were knaves, and their followers were fools. But God will protect us. He is doing much for us, and I will praise him while I have breath. Pray for us. We have now a place where we can hold meetings, and if any of our preaching brethren come this way we want them to call at Merrimac, and we will try and help them on their way. ——————Br. Geo. W. English, Montpelier: Although it seems I can do but little, I am desirous of aiding the cause of truth and right. I feel that we are fast passing down the stream of time, and that our probation will soon be ended, and our hope no longer a hope but a reality! Oh! with what vigor, then, with what new energy we should work while it is called to-day! A few of us here are patiently waiting for the return of the blessed Savior. God help us to be faithful to the end.——————Br. Thos. Fry, Burnet, Co. Texas: We ask an interest in your prayers that we may continue faithful until Christ comes, that we may then meet all who have loved his appearing, in the new earth. I belong to the Christian church, because there is no other for me to join, or, rather, they hold nearer my faith than any others. But they preach the dogma of endless torment, which I do not believe.——————Sr. Sarah A. Simms, Scott Co. Ill.: Although I am a Methodist, yet by reading and hearing your doctrine, I have embraced your views, and am in sympathy with all of "like precious faith," looking for the glorious appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Rome the World's Ruler.

Often times when discussing the universal Kingdom prophecy, I have been met with the challenge on history—"Rome has not for many centuries [usually the denial extends to thirteen or fourteen centuries] been a universal monarchy, in any sense." I have insisted that all respected profane history—in other words, all respectable profane history—has concurred in the affirmative. And now I accidentally glance at the opening article on Rome, in Harper's Monthly for December, 1871, and find in the first three paragraphs the following: "So was established, with no dream of its future greatness, the city which for so many centuries made itself the mistress of the world. Its first conquests were by its arms. Extending gradually its boundaries, it embraced at last almost the entire civilized world. 'I am a Roman citizen,' was passport and safe-conduct in every tribe and province. Falling to pieces, corrupted by its own greatness, the Roman empire lost not its sway, but only changed its sceptre. The emperor gave place to the pope. The supreme authority was transferred from the palace of the Cæsars to the Vatican. The legions of vanquished soldiers gave way to hordes of invincible monks, the tyrrany of a Nero, and a Caligula to that of the Inquisition and the Jesuit fathers. And again for centuries Rome ruled the world, which seemed by the irruptions of the Northern barbarians to have broken the yoke, which was really only changed not lightened. Thus Rome has a double history," etc.

I know these are only passing words, in a popular magazine; but they are of a piece with ten thousand inadvertant and yet in one sense regular testimonies to the character of the Roman power, considered as a prophesied universal monarchy. These are among the expressions of a prevailing acknowledgement, certainly not prejudiced to suit Adventist views. In the usual order of narrative and descriptive writing, the concession comes up, to support that which it does indeed seem hardihood to deny.—Crisis.

Conference Minutes

Missouri and S. W. Iowa.

THIRD DISTRICT.

The fourth Q. M. of the third District commenced with the Alanthus church, Saturday, Dec. 23. Members present, A. F. Dugger, G. L. McClure, and J. Scarce.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year. James Finders, Sec'y; H. Bilimire, Pres't; Eld. L. B. Combs, Vice Pres't.

On recommendation from the church, Br. J. Scarce was granted license to preach.

The Ringgold church was presented by Br. McClure and was received into the conference. Br. J. Scarce reported the Ringgold church in a prosperous condition, and a good interest in all that section to hear present truth Four have been added to their numbers under the labors of Brn. Dugger and McClure. Owing to the heavy snow which fell on Friday our meeting was not largely attended, yet we had a good meeting and a good interest manifested to hear the word preached. Adjourned to meet with the Empire church in the month of June.

JAMES FINDERS, Sec'y.

Michigan.

EASTERN DISTRICT.

Met at No. 6, Rives. Quite a number of members and brethren were present. An invitation was extended for the brethren to participate with us, which they did. Br. S. Champlin was received as a delegate from the Jackson church, and Wm. Davey from Rives. Sr. Roby Tuttle was received to membership and granted a license to preach.

The following communication from Moscow church was read, and request granted: "To the Michigan A. C. Conference, greeting:

"We, the Advent Christian Church of Moscow, do by this instrument recommend that the name of J. B. Bissell, who has been a member of this church, be erased from your register. In behalf of the church.

DAY CONKLIN, Sec'y."

On motion it was decided to hold the Q. M. at the Munger S. H., five miles north of Eaton Rapids, beginning March 20.

The following resolution was passed: Resolved, That this Q. M. recommend the National Conference to advise a course of reading for young men wishing to enter the ministry.

The reports of the ministers were somewhat encouraging, though most felt that they had not been able to occupy as much of their time preaching as they would have liked. On the whole the cause is prospering, the preaching was by Br. Preston and Sr. Tuttle. Closed on the Lord's day evening with the communion. Adjourned.

J. M. SHOOK, Sec'y pro tem.

Michigan.

WESTERN DISTRICT.

Met at Sumption's Prairie. Ministers present, Elds. D. Mathewson, D. R. Mansfield and James Ferriss. The Conference opened with Eld. Mathewson in the chair. F. H. Russel was chosen Sec'y The church at Marcellus, Mich., was received. It was voted to hold the next Conference with that church some time in March.

There was a good attendance all through the meeting. At the morning love feast (Sabbath) was a perfect victory, the dear ones confessing to the goodness of God. The Lord truly was with us in the Spirit.

On Sabbath evening thirty-six sat down to partake of their Lord's supper. Three happy souls were buried in the likeness of the Lord's death, burial and resurrection. Praise the Lord!

I never attended a meeting where the saints of God took so much interest as at this one. The words spoken seemed to take deep effect on saint and sinner. There was a deep feeling manifested all through; members renewing themselves in spirit, and sinners pricked to the heart, almost persuaded to become Christians. The seed sown, will in the future spring up to the glory of God. A vote of thanks was extended to the church for their kindness and liberality shown those from abroad.

T. H. RUSSEL, Sec'y.

Wisconsin.

EASTERN DISTRICT.

Our Second Q. M. for this district held at Webster's Prairie was not a failure, although the stormy element combined to make it such. A fearful snow storm set in and raged for two days, which not only prevented the attendance of many from a distance, but made it nearly impossible for those in the immediate vicinity to get out. But there were a few there, and the spirit of the Lord with us abundantly, which made up for the deficiency in numbers. Our meetings were characterized with a spirit of earnestness and zeal, proving that those present were really alive to the grand and stirring issues of the day in which we live. We were ably assisted in the meetings by the following preaching brothers, Elds. Adams of Delton; Graves of Oregon; and Eld. Groat of Ironton. We regretted the absence of Br. Barnes, but the storm was too severe for the old veteran to venture out. As far as we could learn, the churches in the district are, in the main, in good working order.

The following churches are regularly supplied: Fairfield, Crystal Lake, Prairie du Sac, Arena. Others are supplied occasionally. There is a want of more laborers to supply the ground already occupied, and in addition to this, the Macedonian cry is ever ringing in our ears from the regions beyond—"Come over and help us." We need more organized effort in order to make the material already in hand more effective, as well as to induce new laborers to enter the field. Oh! that we might all feel the weight and importance of the mission entrusted to us. "The end of all things is at hand."

The church and the world are profoundly slumbering in reference to the great truths of the age in which we live. Who shall sound the alarm? Are the watch men asleep? "Wo to them who are at ease in Zion." Brethren, let us awake and press the battle to the very gates. Come out from your farms, and shoe shops, your sewing machine agencies, your patent right and patent medicine arrangements, put the gospel trumpet to your mouths and trust the Lord. God will take care of you and give success.

One precious soul started for the Kingdom in our last meeting, to God be the praise.

GEO. THOMSON.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin. Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath, Everlasting Punishment—64 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—30 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—[illegible] pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—40 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,200 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers in to Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 40 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul, and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 15c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 214 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age with account of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 50c.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 40c. post-paid.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 [illegible]

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Good. 400 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25. Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 15c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 20c. $2 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 [illegible]

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c. post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—[illegible] 40c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type, post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with [illegible] a "Bible View of the Personality of God." [illegible]

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred [illegible] ted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and others that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth $1.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 18 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 20c; 12mo. 75c.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 18c; $[illegible] dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 60 a dozen.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 120 pp. 20c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy. by Wm. Sheldon. 117 pp. Paper covers, 30c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 45 pp. 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth, earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 15c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 60c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $[illegible], sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; with maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 60c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.

The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.

A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.

The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.

The Immortal Soul, Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.

Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.

[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]

Revelation 20 5c.

The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.

Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 [illegible]

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $[illegible] by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. [illegible] by express.

ENGLISH GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

then, as I walked along on my way to church. Thanks to my dear heavenly Father, his grace has been sufficient for me: for I have not cared anything for it since. He has truly been good to me. I have often wondered why it was that I was so impressed to fulfill my promise to my earthly father. But I soon found out. I was led to go out and proclaim the gospel of the kingdom, and it was not fit that I should do it while a slave to that narcotic. Besides, I feel like a new man, in body and mind.

Brief Extracts.

W. Winter, Wantonwan Co. Minn.: We have no Advent preaching here except THE TIMES. There was one minister here last summer who gave the first Advent sermon I ever heard. There are a good many more in this part of the country who are most, but not quite, Adventists. I can see the meaning of a great portion of the Bible now as I never saw it before. ————E. W. Huson, Belle Plain, Iowa: For the last year I have, in connection with my business, been preaching the coming of the Lord and the destruction of the wicked, with very good success. The prejudice has subsided some, and a good many have received the truth. Thank God, I am no more a lonely pilgrim. Three long years I was alone. Now we have a prayer meeting every week, and I preach twice each Sabbath to large assemblies. We invite traveling preaching brethren to call on us, and they shall have a welcome home, and we will get a house for them to preach in. ————Br. Luther Ackerman, Warren Co. Minn.: I thought of course that you would stop the paper when the first year expired. Was very glad that you did not, for I like to read it, although I am not a Christian. I believe the Advent doctrine. I became convinced of its truth by reading the Bible to find Scripture to fight it. And the more I read the less fight there was in me. And I read until I could see that it was through the craftiness of the deceiver that the doctrine of the immortal soul had been so universally taught. [And we trust ere he writes again, our brother may become a Christian. ED.]————Br. P. Holler, Nashville, Mich.: I am now engaged in a discussion with Eld. Weaver, a F. W. Baptist minister, where Br. Ferriss held meetings when he was here. The Lord's word has the victory, and it is shining more brightly than ever. We expected to make arrangements to have Br. Ferriss come back and hold a protracted meeting. Pray for us. And let every one just now solicit subscribers for THE TIMES. Many will subscribe on account of the discussion. ————Br. W. I. Lewis, Whitehall, Mich.: THE TIMES is all the preaching we have that we call "the right kind." We have not heard an Advent sermon in about eighteen months, and we thirst to hear the word preached in its purity as a weary traveler thirsteth for water in a desert place. We do wish some Advent preacher would come this way and hold a series of meetings. It might be the means of doing much good. In the meantime we shall try to let our light shine, and tell people of the coming of Christ. We hope to be faithful till Jesus comes, and at last to be gathered into his everlasting kingdom.————Sr. M. E. Wright, Cascade, Iowa: Dear brethren and sisters, scattered abroad; how precious and cheering to lone pilgrims are your communications. Though we are living in a time when iniquity abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold, yet the Lord has a remnant left that are praying, Thy kingdom come! What a blessed hope is ours! The hope of being translated, changed from mortality to immortality. It should and does lift our hearts from the groveling things of earth to things above. Oh! the precious thought of seeing Jesus, and being made like him, to die no more. But we must be pure in heart to behold his face in righteousness. Oh! for the sanctifying power, the saving influence of the Holy Spirit. May we wrestle and pray, and never give over until we feel the holy anointing and know that we have a clear title to that inheritance that is incorruptible, undefiled, and fadeth not away.————Br. Joseph Harrison, Adair Co. Mo. THE TIMES is our main preacher here. It rejoices our hearts that we can have the great privilege of reading a paper that teaches the truth, and proves its position as it progresses, by the word of God. Br. Malley and Br. Snow preach for us once a month. We organized thirteen months ago, and we are the only little band that stands faithful for the Lord in these parts, of those that Br. Y. Higgins organized in this part of the country. The rest have gone back to the world. We are trying to let our light shine, to live for Jesus, that when he comes we may meet him with joy.————Br. H. H. Jones, Sauk Co. Wis. A few here are still trusting in the Lord and looking for his Son from heaven. There is much opposition among the Methodists. The F. W. Baptists have withered some, as king Jeroboam's arm did when he put it forth to lay hold of the man of God. The ministers utter nothing but slander and ridicule, one saying two weeks ago, that the Advent ministers were knaves, and their followers were fools. But God will protect us. He is doing much for us, and I will praise him while I have breath. Pray for us. We have now a place where we can hold meetings, and if any of our preaching brethren come this way we want them to call at Merrimac, and we will try and help them on their way. ————Br. Geo. W. English, Montpelier: Although it seems I can do but little, I am desirous of aiding the cause of truth and right. I feel that we are fast passing down the stream of time, and that our probation will soon be ended, and our hope no longer a hope but a reality! Oh! with what vigor, then, with what new energy we should work while it is called to-day! A few of us here are patiently waiting for the return of the blessed Savior. God help us to be faithful to the end.————Br. Thos. Fry, Burnet, Co. Texas: We ask an interest in your prayers that we may continue faithful until Christ comes, that we may then meet all who have loved his appearing, in the new earth. I belong to the Christian church, because there is no other for me to join, or, rather, they hold nearer my faith than any others. But they preach the dogma of endless torment, which I do not believe.————Sr. Sarah A. Simms, Scott Co. Ill.: Although I am a Methodist, yet by reading and hearing your doctrine, I have embraced your views, and am in sympathy with all of "like precious faith," looking for the glorious appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Rome the World's Ruler.

Often times when discussing the universal Kingdom prophecy, I have been met with the challenge on history—"Rome has not for many centuries [usually the denial extends to thirteen or fourteen centuries] been a universal monarchy, in any sense." I have insisted that all respected profane history—in other words, all respectable profane history—has concurred in the affirmative. And now I accidentally glance at the opening article on Rome, in Harper's Monthly for December, 1871, and find in the first three paragraphs the following: "So was established, with no dream of its future greatness, the city which for so many centuries made itself the mistress of the world. Its first conquests were by its arms. Extending gradually its boundaries, it embraced at last almost the entire civilised world. 'I am a Roman citizen,' was passport and safe-conduct in every tribe and province. Falling to pieces, corrupted by its own greatness, the Roman empire lost not its sway, but only changed its sceptre. The emperor gave place to the pope. The supreme authority was transferred from the palace of the Cæsars to the Vatican. The legions of vanquished soldiers gave way to hordes of invincible monks, the tyranny of a Nero, and a Caligula to that of the Inquisition and the Jesuit fathers. And again for centuries Rome ruled the world, which seemed by the irruptions of the Northern barbarians to have broken the yoke, which was really only changed not lightened. Thus Rome has a double history," etc.

I know these are only passing words, in a popular magazine; but they are of a piece with ten thousand inadvertant and yet in one sense regular testimonies to the character of the Roman power, considered as a prophesied universal monarchy. These are among the expressions of a prevailing acknowledgement, certainly not prejudiced to suit Adventist views. In the usual order of narrative and descriptive writing, the concession comes up, to support that which it does indeed seem hardihood to deny.—Crisis.

Conference Minutes

Missouri and S. W. Iowa.

THIRD DISTRICT.

The fourth Q. M. of the third District commenced with the Alanthus church, Saturday, Dec. 23. Members present, A. F. Dugger, G. L. McClure, and J. Scarce.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year. James Finders, Sec'y; H. Bilimire, Pres't; Eld. L. B. Combs, Vice Pres't.

On recommendation from the church, Br. J. Scarce was granted license to preach.

The Ringgold church was presented by Br. McClure and was received into the conference. Br. J. Scarce reported the Ringgold church in a prosperous condition, and a good interest in all that section to hear present truth Four have been added to their numbers under the labors of Brn. Dugger and McClure. Owing to the heavy snow which fell on Friday our meeting was not largely attended, yet we had a good meeting and a good interest manifested to hear the word preached. Adjourned to meet with the Empire church in the month of June.

JAMES FINDERS, Sec'y.

Michigan.

EASTERN DISTRICT.

Met at No. 6, Rives. Quite a number of members and brethren were present. An invitation was extended for the brethren to participate with us, which they did. Br. S. Champlin was received as a delegate from the Jackson church, and Wm. Davey from Rives. Sr. Roby Tuttle was received to membership and granted a license to preach.

The following communication from Moscow church was read, and request granted: "To the Michigan A. C. Conference, greeting:

"We, the Advent Christian Church of Moscow, do by this instrument recommend that the name of J. B. Bissell, who has been a member of this church, be erased from your register. In behalf of the church.

DAY CONKLIN, Sec'y."

On motion it was decided to hold the Q. M. at the Munger S. H., five miles north of Eaton Rapids, beginning March 20.

The following resolution was passed: Resolved, That this Q. M. recommend the National Conference to advise a course of reading for young men wishing to enter the ministry.

The reports of the ministers were somewhat encouraging, though most felt that they had not been able to occupy as much of their time preaching as they would have liked. On the whole the cause is prospering, the preaching was by Br. Preston and Sr. Tuttle. Closed on the Lord's day evening with the communion. Adjourned.

J. M. SHOOK, Sec'y pro tem.

Michigan.

WESTERN DISTRICT.

Met at Sumption's Prairie. Ministers present, Elds. D. Mathewson, D. R. Mansfield and James Ferriss. The Conference opened with Eld. Mathewson in the chair. F. H. Russel was chosen Sec'y The church at Marcellus, Mich., was received. It was voted to hold the next Conference with that church some time in March.

There was a good attendance all through the meeting. At the morning love feast (Sabbath) was a perfect victory, the dear ones confessing to the goodness of God. The Lord truly was with us in the Spirit.

On Sabbath evening thirty-six sat down to partake of their Lord's supper. Three happy souls were buried in the likeness of the Lord's death, burial and resurrection. Praise the Lord!

I never attended a meeting where the saints of God took so much interest as at this one. The words spoken seemed to take deep effect on saint and sinner. There was a deep feeling manifested all through; members renewing themselves in spirit, and sinners pricked to the heart, almost persuaded to become Christians. The seed sown, will in the future spring up to the glory of God. A vote of thanks was extended to the church for their kindness and liberality shown those from abroad.

T. H. RUPEL, Sec'y.

Wisconsin.

EASTERN DISTRICT.

Our Second Q. M. for this district held at Webster's Prairie was not a failure, although the stormy element combined to make it such. A fearful snow storm set in and raged for two days, which not only prevented the attendance of many from a distance, but made it nearly impossible for those in the immediate vicinity to get out. But there were a few there, and the spirit of the Lord with us abundantly, which made up for the deficiency in numbers. Our meetings were characterized with a spirit of earnestness and zeal, proving that those present were really alive to the grand and stirring issues of the day in which we live. We were ably assisted in the meetings by the following preaching brothers, Elds. Adams of Delton; Graves of Oregon; and Eld. Groat of Ironton. We regretted the absence of Br. Barnes, but the storm was too severe for the old veteran to venture out. As far as we could learn, the churches in the district are, in the main, in good working order.

The following churches are regularly supplied: Fairfield, Crystal Lake, Prairie du Sac, Arena. Others are supplied occasionally. There is a want of more laborers to supply the ground already occupied, and in addition to this, the Macedonian cry is ever ringing in our ears from the regions beyond—"Come over and help us." We need more organized effort in order to make the material already in hand more effective, as well as to induce new laborers to enter the field. Oh! that we might all feel the weight and importance of the mission entrusted to us. "The end of all things is at hand."

The church and the world are profoundly slumbering in reference to the great truths of the age in which we live. Who shall sound the alarm? Are the watch men asleep? "Wo to them who are at ease in Zion." Brethren, let us awake and press the battle to the very gates. Come out from your farms, and shoe shops, your sewing machine agencies, your patent right and patent medicine arrangements, put the gospel trumpet to your mouths and trust the Lord. God will take care of you and give success.

One precious soul started for the Kingdom in our last meeting, to God be the praise.

GEO. THOMSON.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin. Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath, Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—20 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—48 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,800 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 3c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers in Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 40 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul, and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 15c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 116 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age, with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 40c.

NEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 40c. post-paid.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Good. 400 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 30c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 20c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $4 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4.00.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED; and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c. post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 40c. post paid. The first four in one vol.—large type 25c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 30c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Historians, Theologians and authors that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlinear word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlinear translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 18 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 18mo. 75c.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Containing the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 120 pp. 20c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy. by Wm. Sheldon. 217 pp. Paper covers, 30c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 48 pp. 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 6c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.

The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.

A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.

The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.

The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.

Last-day Tokens. No. 3. 25c.

[Tokens Nos. 1 and 2 are out of print at present.]

Revelation 20 5c.

The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.

Evangels of the Coming One. 8c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 00.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $25 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Jan. 23, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: } Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
L. P. FOX, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.
A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.
N. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS, } Editorial Com.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, Business Agent,
To whom all communications should be addressed

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

That Reaper.

Will not the ministry call the attention of farmers to the fine chance we offer them to obtain a good Reaper at a low price? Help us sell this machine, and you will help the cause in so doing.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

Wanted

We will be obliged to any one who will give us the following P. O. Addresses.
W. R. Howe, Kansas. tf

Field's Discussion.

For some time this desirable work has been out of print. The main topic is the Intermediate State, or Condition of the Dead. When a new edition was announced, some of the Doctor's old Disciple friends announced that they would buy and circulate it as soon as ready, because they thought it would help their side—that Mr Connolly had the best of the argument. We shall soon know whether they really so felt, or were indulging mere bragadocio. The book has not yet made any converts to immaterialism that we have heard of; but we have learned of its bringing not a few to adopt the Bible theory.

The book has heretofore been sold at one dollar. The present edition is in paper covers (pp 318), and will be sent post-paid for 50c. We hope for liberal orders.

Our Debt—Pledges.

Some months since we made a proposition for pledges to the amount of the interest-bearing debt of the Association. There have been some responses, and not a few have paid in money for the special purpose of lightening that load. The amount of the debt is now reduced to about $600. There are pledges to the amount of $135, to be paid whenever this amount is subscribed. Only $465 more will rid us of this load. Shall we have it? Some urge that the pledges are not the best way. Perhaps not. Yet those who loaned their money prefer to receive it back in as large sums as possible. Hence if the amount is pledged, and then all paid in about the same time, it will be more convenient. But our friends can please themselves, and give outright, as they choose. The amount needed is a little more than we had hoped, owing to there being more interest due than we had reckoned. The case stands thus:

Amount of debt, Jan. 1, '72............$600
Pledges due............135

Shall we close the account the present month? Why not?

Pledges.

The undersigned agree to pay the sums affixed to their names, toward paying the debt of the Western Association (about $1,000) whenever the full amount of the debt shall have been pledged.

H Hubbard, $5,00; S Pike (pd), 10,00; B P Betts, $5; Thos Davidson, 5,00; G E Merrill, 5,00; H W Norville, 5,00; F A Childs, 25,00 (pd); Jas P Morse, 1,00; A C Hustson, 4,00; A Brother, 5,00; A Brother, 150,00; A Friend of THE TIMES, 25,00; G Shartleff (pd), 5.00; R Holder, 2.50; J F Huber, 5.00; E Mann, 5.00; Mary L Hunt (pd), 5.00, L S Conner, 1; E Cheney, 5.00; O N. $5; S Nye, $25; Cascade (Iowa) church, $10 00; L. H. Ferrell (pd.) $10.00; R. Visser, 1.00; H. M. Jones, 5.00; J. Lowry, 5.00; R. H Evans, 2.50; E. W. Wilson (pd), 25.00; L. S. Palmer, 5.00; D. D. Reed (pd), 5.00; H Zader (pd), 2.00; M. H. Evans (pd), 2.00; L. Tuttle, (pd), 50c; D. C. Corwin (pd), 1.00; D. A. Dickinson, (pd), 1.00; C. S. Hall, 10.00; A Friend (pd), 1.00; A Edwards (pd), 1 00; E Kennedy (pd), "Amicus" 10.00; M C Lardler (pd), 5 00; E Cole (pd), 1.00; Wm S Miller 1.00; T Shipley (pd), 2 00, S S Lootier (pd), 1.00; J. H. Bruce (pd) 5.00; 4 E Ragland (pd), 1.00; C W Smith (pd), 1.00; A W Porter (pd), 1.00; M J Stearns (pd), 1.00; A S Johnson (pd), 2.00; C Palmer (pd), 25c; M S Welden (pd), 75c; M Campbell (pd), 1.00; A Watson, (pd), 1.00; M Smith (pd), 1 15; J Peterson (pd), 1 00; J G Kelley (pd) 50c; J B Patton 5 00; G P Person (pd), 5 00; T Fry (pd), 1 00; D C Day (pd), 50c; I Morton (pd), 5 00; O N (pd), 5 00; W Anderson (pd), 1 00; Julia (pd), 15c; Aggie (pd), 5c; Emma (pd), 5c; Church at Jackson (pd), 5 00.

It does seem to us that this list of pledges does not grow as fast as it should. We are doing something toward extinguishing our debt, but not enough. Seven more "hundreds" would wipe it out. Many are doing nobly. Will not others respond soon.

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged............$465.24

J Haul............	$3 25	Mary C............	10
S B Thomas............	50	L Thomas............	50
G P Persons............	1 00	A Friend............	5 00
L F Town............	50

Fifty Cents Extra.

J Jank 50c; J Kern.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawver, M. B. Geer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Hink, I. C. Wellcome, J. F. Huber, Grand St. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. K. Brown, M F Wistrom, E. W. Wilson, R. M. Lampard.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand-raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $120. See advertisement.

To Correspondents.

N. WHEELER. We are all out of that number, but if we can find one will send....J. C. STODDARD. We have no tobacco tracts now. We are not certain that any good would come of agitating that question. We think it a matter of very little importance any way....JOHN HOBBS. The money was received and credited. Paper has been sent regularly. Don't know why you should not get it....E. G. LYMAN. Thank you. Will send Constable soon....J. H. MILLS. The book was sent to S. J. Will send Life Beyond Death in a few days....J. F. RANDOLPH. Have Or. your paper to '73....G. W HURD. You are right. Thank you....P. W. HOUGH. Everything in that department and "Our Pulpit" has been delayed. They will be resumed by and by....J. H. PARSONS. You did not give your P. O. Address. What is it? We would not advise Christians to join secret societies. But we leave it to every man's conscience....E. COOK. We send the books, and would send a minister if we could. Br. Dugger will come if he can, no doubt....JOHN MAXWELL. What is your P. O. Address? You give no State, even....J. M. BOWLING. As the space is limited, we cannot very well do so....ROCKBRIDGE. If the writer of the letter about printing a pamphlet will give name and P. O. Address, we will reply to it....J. BOWER. Nine dollars....W. N. PILE. No hurry. We thought you might like to reply....D. T. T. Thanks for that "diary of events." Excellent.

New Press.

W Dunbar 2 00; W M Beall 20 00; E S Dixon 2 00; P Waterhouse 1 00.

Communications.

W L Skeels C E Barnes S J Roney C S Branch M A Tibbetts N Field.

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, JAN. 20.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

H Austin
E S Penwell
J Jank
A M Sidwell
J Barnum
J Hobbs
M Vibbard
M Newbury
J S Lawver
P Wezel
G H Holliday
A Friend
E A Huff
W J Hurd
A B Cushing
S B Mabey
S H Hough
G T Adams
J B Parkin
J Lowrie
F Burr
L Scott
I Boddy
N Henquist (2)
A W Ward
J Wilbur
G T Adams
A Huff
J B Chamberlain
W T Adee
C C Marston
A S Fuller
J S Englerth
S A Rice
C C Marston
S J Rosbrook
F Decew
J B Patterson
M Kunce
J Dick
E C Brooks
F Reynolds
W D Hinds
C W Wyllys
S Crunce
G P Persons
E G Lyman
J H Whitmore
S Wyttenbach
J D Deering
J W Taylor
W Lord
W W Smith
G W Hurd
J B Patten
C R Stouffer
L W Ward
F Burr
T M Allen
C M Shepherd
E Writter
L N Bowles
F A Chase
J L Ames
D Clow
E Gibson
P S W Deyo
B Clark
J Hunt
W Nichols
H Hobbs
C S Branch
Q McLaughlin
I Allen
G F Gridley
N Blair
J Richards
J Corner
H J Cole
J D Janes
N Field
T Histed
J C Morrison
U L Kinne
J Fisher
M G Durham
T H Ford
H A King
D Thomas
J T Huber
H H Davis
M Smith
W Tomlinson
D D Reed
O R Fassett
W Young
A M Breed
D S Clark
P D Austin
D C Day
F C Davidson
J Maxwell
J Folin
R B Dutton
C Churchill
W Nichols
R B Williams
R H Miller
E H Penwell
I Morton
O N
G P Persons
L H Vreeman
S B White
J H Paton
M A Tibbetts
C Bannell
N Wheeler
P Scott
S Bose
A Stoneburg
M M Rhodes
J C Stoddard
P A Marsh
J R Preston
C M Borth
P Nokes
C C Flagg
M J Wellman
J Maxin
S C Ketchum
N Jewett
G W Stetson
J M Groce
C S Branch
A Cressey
H J Swedland
S J Roney
R Burtonshaw
E Lewis
W P Barr
J M Snook
G E Okerlind
W H Hacking
H M Jones
E P Goff
L Town
S Weed
C Lee
S Workman
A F Pricket
G Moses
W Murphy
J Curtis
E S Dixon
W H Nellegar
Vineland
D N Schenck
I Body
L F Cole
P Cannon
J P Bachelder
G W Lawson
C S Branch
W M Buell
H J Hicks
H H Skinner
A H Briggs
I Way
A D Mackie
N S Loomis
H M Wheeler
W Dunbar
L H Little
J H Parsons
B J Goodwin
M S Boyd
N McLeod
W L Skeels
J T Randolph

Books and Tracts by Mail.

W J Cook
J W Graham (2)
T Virgin
N Orcutt
E O W
W C Hicks
A Myers
J M Wright
P Hammer
M Carroll
A E Babcock (4)
P Paraday
G Thomson (2)
J Barnhart
H M Dubey
M Campbell
J R Mitchell
G T Adams
J S Englerth
J Histed
A E Damon
H Austin (2)
E A Huff (3)
S J Rosebraugh (3)
J B Patton
J M Parkin

Book Notices, Etc.

Zundel and Brand's Quarterly is the title of a publication devoted to new music for the organ or melodeon and the voice, chiefly of the class called "Sacred Music." The mere mention of the fact that it is edited by John Zundel is a sufficient recommendation and guarantee of its quality. $1 a year; or 75c. for the organ music only; or 60c. for the vocal music alone. Address, Zundel & Brand, Toledo, Ohio.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

Having completed my engagements with three churches, I am now at liberty to fill new calls more extensively, and devote my time to the work of an Evangelist and Missionary, as the Conference appointed me. If necessary, means are provided. As there is none raised for that purpose, I hope those who wish my labors will write to me the prospects for good and interest to sustain, that I may arrange to save time and expenses. Don't delay.

PETER S. W. DEYO, Charles City, Iowa.

Information Wanted.

Will some of the officers of the Advent church at Randolph, Cattaraugus Co. N. Y. please correspond with me, at Spring Mills, Allegheny Co. N. Y.

[n860] A. H. ERBOR.

Notice.

Having closed my labors at my trade for the season, I am ready to attend to calls to hold meetings abroad. Brethren wishing my labors, who feel that the interest is such as will sustain a meeting, can address me at Leslie, Ingham Co. Mich. C. Fox.

Notice.

Churches, or individuals, desiring my services as an instructor in vocal music, or as a Minister, are hereby informed that I am now at liberty to travel, and give lessons in music, or preach, as may be desired.

Please address, G. W. GREEN, Box 16, Memphis, Clark Co., Indiana.

Notice.

The 1st anniversary of the organization of the Advent Christian church at Arena. We propose (the Lord willing) to hold a general meeting of days on the above occasion, Jan. 28. We cordially invite our brethren to meet with us and work for the Lord. Eld. Adrian and other preaching brethren will be present to assist. Come with a zeal to labor for the perishing.

GEO. THOMSON.

Appointments.

CONFERENCE REGISTER.

Western District, Wis. Q. M. Brunswick, Eau Claire Co. Feb. 1-4.
Iowa A. C. C. Q. M., Manchester, Feb. 23-25

MICHIGAN.

A series of meetings at Porter Center, by request of the Methodist friends there, commencing Monday evening Jan. 29, and continue as interest may demand. JAS. FERRISS.

The third Q. M. of the Northern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the church in Millbrook, commencing Thursday eve Feb. 22. We hope to have a full representation at this meeting. Come, brethren, let us rally for the Lord. A general invitation is extended to all. JOHN BOWER, Chairman.

The third Q. M. for the Eastern District of Michigan will be held at Lapeer, commencing Wednesday eve. Feb. 21, and hold over Lord's day. The Rail Road is now in running order from Port Huron to Flint. The Brn. have a pleasant and commodious chapel and plenty of accommodations, with large hearts, and hope to see a large attendance. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

The third Q. M. for the Southren District of Mich. will be held at the Munger S. H. five miles north of Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co. commencing Wednesday eve. March 20, and hold over Lord's day. Teams will be at the station at Eaton Rapids on the arrival of the p. m. trains from Grand Rapids and Jackson. Eaton Rapids is on the Grand River Valley R. R. Let there be a full attendance.

J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y. pro tem.

ILLINOIS.

Union church, Shabbona Grove, Saturday eve Feb. 3 as Br. Clapsaddle may arrange.
Afton, Sabbath Feb. 18. G. W. SMITH.

Hadley Station, Pike Co. Friday Eve. Jan. 26, and over Sunday. Subject: Man as he was, is, and shall be. J. G. BURR.

Elida, Winnebago Co., Jan. 17-26, as Br. Spotswood may arrange. C. C. MARSTON.

Afton, Sabbath, Jan. 21.
Beemerville Feb. 4.
Milroy, Feb. 11. G. W. SMITH.

Amboy, Lee Co., Jan. 28.
Bureau Co., in Br. Bliss' neighborhood as he may arrange Jan. 29 to Feb. 2.
Rochelle, Ogle Co. Feb. 4-7.
Ackerson's S. H., Ogle Co., as Br. Ackerson may arrange Feb. 7. C. C. MARSTON.

INDIANA.

Holton, and vicinity, as Br. Cass may arrange, Jan. 18-31, G. W. GREEN.

IOWA.

The second Q. M. of the A. C. C. of Manchester District commences Thursday, Feb. 22, with the Elk Valley church, at the Otisville S. H. continuing over the Sabbath.

This is comparatively a new field. Let every lover of Jesus and his cause be there. Come, brethren, laden with the Spirit of Jesus, praying in the Holy Ghost. Come, to work for God and his cause. M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

Black River Falls, Eve. Jan. 29.
Wrightsville, as Br. Chase may arrange, Jan. 30.
Augusta, Shaven's S. H. Jan. 31.
P. W. HOUGH.

The Second Q. M., in the Western district of Wisconsin will be held with the church in Brunswick, Eau Clare Co. Feb. 1, and over Lord's day. Let us have a grand rally of warm hearts, with sweet words for each other, and noble testimonies for Jesus. Come the first day.

P. W. HOUGH.

MINNESOTA.

Winona District Q. M. Feb. 2 and over the Sabbath, with the Canton church, in Fillmore Co. in the Brick S. H. near Br. Peter Brode's.

St. Paul District Q. M. Feb. 9, and over the Sabbath at the S. H. near Br. Libby's, West St. Paul.

Ottawa District Q. M. Feb. 16, and over the Sabbath. Will some of the brethren living in the District decide where they will have the meeting, and write me at once?

Hutchinson District Q. M. Feb. 23, at Silver Lake. A general attendance is requested of all who love the Lord and his appearing. Business of importance will be brought before each Conference.

GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist for the States.

NEW YORK.

Regular meetings are held by church at 128 West 24th St., New York city; three times on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings.

T. J. COX.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Special Conference will be held in the Second Advent Chapel on Central St., Worcester, Mass., to commence on Tuesday, Feb. 6, at two o'clock P. M., and continue every day and evening through the week and over the following Sunday. The special object of this conference will be to examine the evidences relating to the time of the Lord's coming; to get more fully prepared for that event, and to lead sinners to Christ before he comes to close up the scenes of probation. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and especially to all the preaching brethren.

"The more that come with free good will,
Will make the banquet sweeter still."

By unanimous vote of the church.

H. W. BURTON, W. F. COLLINS, E. G. HIGGINS. } Committee.

Advertisements.

"HOW TO GO WEST."

Forty years ago, Illinois was as far West as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of Progress and Improvement, the word West has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid Line of Railroad.

This Line of Railroad is the Burlington Route, which starts from Chicago by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and, running through Burlington, reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific, and other railroads running from these cities.

People going to Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, California, or any point in the Territories, will study their own interests by going "By way of Burlington," for the rates of that Line are always as low as any other, and it is the best Route in the West, therefore you are more sure of your safety and comfort.

The Burlington Route has admirably answered the question "How to go West?" by the publication of an excellent pamphlet, containing a large, truthful map of the Great West, and much interesting and valuable information, which can be obtained free of charge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE For 1872.

The First Edition of Two Hundred Thousand copies just published. It is elegantly printed on fine tinted paper, in two colors, and illustrated with over 300 engravings of Flowers and Vegetables, and

TWO COLORED PLATES.

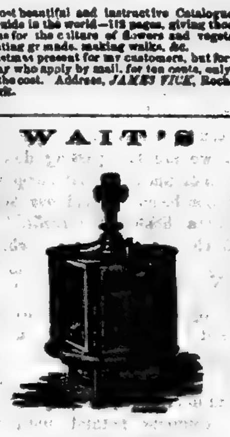
The most beautiful and instructive Catalogue and Floral Guide in the world—112 pages, giving thorough directions for the culture of flowers and vegetables, ornamenting grounds, making walks, &c.

A Christmas present for my customers, but forwarded to any who apply by mail, for ten cents, only one-quarter the cost. Address, JAMES VICK, Rochester, New York.

WAIT'S

TURBINE WATER WHEEL

HUDSON RIVER CHAMPION



A WORD TO MILL MEN.

I have been building the Jonval Turbine for the past eight years. Have built some seven or eight different kinds of wheels. Am acquainted with nearly all the first class wheels in the country, and am fully persuaded that the Champion stands alone without a rival. Early I discovered that the tangential and centrifugal forces of the water, exerted a tremendous power which is expended against the outer rims of those wheels, which discharge vertically and against the scrolls and curbs of most other kinds, which is lost to all useful effect.

For a long time I studied and experimented carefully, to bring this wasted power into use without injuring the other high qualities of the Wheels.

My efforts have been crowned with success, and I can now offer you a Turbine which can compete successfully with all others in the economical use of the water, while for simplicity of construction, strength and durability, it is the champion of the world.

It has no complication of gates, with their multitude of Levers, no cranks, pin, segments nor pinions to get out of order. No series of leaky joints; no rubbing surface to wear away, to waste the water; nothing touches the wheel but water; hence it will never wear out. There is no lateral motion, nor do their steps wear out like other wheels.

The Jonval Turbine has given the highest percentage of power ever attained in any public test. Several of these Jonvals have been taken out which were in perfect order (having run but a short time), and the Champion placed in the same curbs, venting the same amount of water, and have obtained from six to eight per cent. more power in every instance than the Jonvals gave.

These wheels are perfectly proof against injury from flood-wood. Should any pieces get into the curb which could not pass through the wheel, you have simply to open a door (like a safe or cupboard), enter the curb, and remove the obstruction, and it is all ready for work again. This can be done in five minutes.

They are now in operation in every section of the country, giving unbounded satisfaction and taking the places of all other wheels. The extreme low price for which they are sold astonishes everybody.

Circulars sent free. Address

P. H. WAIT, Sandy Hill, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 25c. a year. Ten copies, $4. Fifty copies, $20. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly [illegible] ted Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book giv[illegible] subscriber paying the full subscription pri[illegible] mone, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. A[illegible] Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

FREE. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee-keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage. H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.

This noted health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

THRESHING MACHINE.

FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $500. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $250. Warranted as represented.
N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure.
(tf) Address, A. J. SWARTS, Hesperia, Mich.

FANNING MILL. I make an excellent machine for cleaning wheat. It will take out all cheat and oats, and leave the wheat clean and fit for seed. I will ship one of these machines to the first brother who will send $25 to the office of THE TIMES. They are well worth $35. E. M. Wheeler, Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Ill.

THE CLOW REAPER.

This celebrated piece of farm machinery, by Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., was tested with sixteen other Reapers at Ripon, Wis., in July, 1870, and received the highest encomiums of them all. The standard of perfection for quality of work was forty. The Clow Reaper was marked forty, or perfect, by the committee. The other machines ranged from 39½ down to 21¼. This machine is specially admirable for its light draught—which saves horseflesh; it can be drawn all day by a pair of light horses. For its simplicity—which decreases liability to breakage or derangement. It has only one hundred pieces, where other machines have three times that number. For the arrangement for lowering and raising the cutters. For the facilities for turning and backing. It can be used as a mower as well as a reaper. No cog-wheels are used to drive the sickle. It has had fewer accidents from breakage than any other machine.

USUAL PRICE, $160.00;
but the machine presented to THE TIMES office will be
SOLD FOR ONE HUNDRED & TWENTY DOLLARS!
If taken soon.

For any further information, address:
J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—20 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—32 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,500 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $1 75 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul, and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 10c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 50c.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1; leather $1 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25. Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 20c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 20c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 60.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 30c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 5c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A Treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
[illegible] Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 10c.
[illegible] mmortal Soul: Mythology and Theology vs. [illegible] 10c.
[illegible] okens. No. 2. 25c.
[illegible] s. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]
[illegible] Revelation 20. 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 20.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 00, by express.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 27. BUCHANAN, JANUARY 30, 1872. WHOLE NO. 407.

LIBRARY COPY AURORA COLLEGE

Contents.

Hades....209
"Consistency, Thou art a Jewel," J. D. Jones; Watching and Praying, Martha J. Janes; Dr. Cumming's Retrospect in the Light Of Prophecy, South London Chronicle, Jan. 6....210
Prophecy in Its Bearing On the Present Crisis....211
Making Light of the World; The Hymn of Cleanthes, Personal Letters; The Discussion; Editor's Journal, Eld Edwin T. Himes, L. C. Collins; Hades, concluded....212
No Sound without Ears; Editorial Gleanings; At Home; Abroad....213
Correspondence; Brief Extracts....214
Preaching in the Cars, Sacramento Record, Jan. 6; Circular Letter, Frank Burr and Silas B. Mabey; The Fruits of Anarchy, N. Field; Our Book and Tract Column....215
Business Agent's Department; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements....216

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

Tuesday Afternoon, Jan. 30, 1872.

HADES.

There are few subjects connected with theology on which so much variety of thought, and so much confusion of thought exists as on the subject of Hades, or the intermediate state of man. By this state we mean the condition of man from the period of death to that of resurrection.

The variety of thought upon this subject is quite apparent. One has only to take up the different works, or portions of works, that have been written upon it in order to see this. The boasted unanimity of Rome utterly disappears before this mysterious question. Protestant theologians are here not at much greater variance with Roman controversialists than they are with one another.

The confusion of thought that exists upon it is equally apparent. Writers who, upon most other subjects, exhibit consistency and clearness, are here utterly lost in a maze of hopeless perplexity, inconsistency and self-contradiction. For examples we may point to the learned Archbishop Usher's chapter on "Limbus Patrum," in his "Answer to a Jesuit," and to Bishop Pearson's article on "The Descent of Christ into Hell," in his "Exposition of the Creed." Neither of these great writers is evidently here at home. Perplexity and confusion of thought are evident at every step they take in their argument. Some great fundamental misconception must needs exist to account for the utter confusion of minds such as those of Pearson and Usher.

Nor can it be said that the question is one of little or even of secondary importance. The vast amount of thought that has been expended on it is proof of this. Man can never be indifferent to the question of the nature of that state to which all the past generations of his race have gone; in which those he has loved now abide; to which he feels himself drawing nearer each day and hour that he lives. And it is also certain that there are few questions which have afforded a basis, real or fictitious, to a greater number of the doctrinal questions that have agitated Christendom, from the earliest ages to our own. One half of the vast doctrinal system of the Church of Rome is built upon what she supposes to be the intermediate state of the dead. New theories, or revivals of old ones, swaying multitudes of minds, ground themselves upon what is thought of this state. Systems and sects would collapse and fall to the ground if their support from this mysterious source were withdrawn.

No man, then, can be charged with undertaking a needless, an uninteresting and unimportant task, when he applies himself to the best of his ability to this question. If he has only truth on his side, if he can only make clear that which is now lost in hopeless confusion, and make that certain which is now confidently disputed, he cannot be said to have written to no purpose or in vain.

For our part we would not venture upon this field if we did not think we had something to say which was worth hearing. We do not claim for our thoughts absolute novelty. We are not of opinion that absolute novelty is any recommendation in our branch of science,—that of theology. We have met with the main features of our view in many writers, both modern and ancient. But in some of these it is so mixed up with other questions to which chief prominence is given, and in others discredited by the accompaniment of erroneous views upon fundamental doctrines, that there appears to be urgent reason for presenting it before the Christian public in a form such as we now propose. To the lovers of truth in every church of Christ, we commend this effort to clear up and establish upon its Scriptural basis a most important question. We ask but for a candid hearing. We ask but for readers who will say, "If the view here advocated be indeed God's truth, we will accept it with all our hearts."

Chapter I.—Man in his Origin.

I. It will scarcely be disputed that in this inquiry into the intermediate state of man, the preliminary inquiry must be, What is man? The understanding of human nature, so far as it can be understood by us, will of necessity be found the very best guide to our understanding what is affirmed of it in any of its conditions.

II. Now here we have no doubt whatsoever that most Christian inquirers have approached this fundamental question from the wrong side. As it appears to us, we have mostly formed our opinions of human nature from some philosophical system, and then, if we have not deemed any further inquiry altogether superfluous, applied ourselves to Scripture chiefly for the purpose of confirming a foregone conclusion. This appears to us to be altogether and completely an error. To the believer in the divine authority of the Scripture there can be no dispute as to whether it or any human philosopher can speak upon this point with the greater weight. The only question can be as to whether Scripture has here given us information. If it has, it cannot be disputed that the Maker of man is the one who is best able to inform us as to the nature of the creature of his hands. One verse of the Bible on the nature of man, on the source of his life, on the meaning of his death, must outweigh a whole treatise of Plato, Aristotle or Epicurus.

III. Now certainly, when we read the Scriptures with any care, we will repeatedly find that they do speak on this question. They do not indeed speak on it in the way of formal treatise; but they seldom speak in this way of any of their doctrines. Systems of theology may be drawn from Scripture, but Scripture itself does not, generally, propound theology in this systematic way. Its definitions and descriptions of man, in all his conditions, in his rude origin and mature completion, in life, and death, and resurrection, will be found by any fair inquirer to be just as full and systematic as its declaration upon almost any other subject on which it treats. We will then endeavor to learn what we can of man from our Bible. If we are not greatly mistaken it will give us as full and as clear ideas of him as we require. More than this we cannot ask. We also believe that any real additional information beyond what we have in the Bible is not to be found in philosophical treatises upon human nature. They may be full where Scripture is only brief; but where they pretend to add to the real amount derivable from Scripture, we are quite satisfied that they are at best but guessing, and are generally wrong.

Almost the earliest, and certainly the fullest account we have given us of human nature is in Gen. 2:7. It is worthy of our closest consideration. It is the word of the Maker telling us what the creature was which he made. The words are, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

IV. No careful reader of this verse can fail to see that the creation of man is described in two distinct stages, in each of which he is described as man, though his condition in these two stages is widely different. The first stage is the creation of the organized body and figure in a lifeless state: "God formed man of the dust of the ground." Here we have the figure as it lay lifeless and thoughtless. And yet this figure was man. We cannot dispute this for God tells us so himself. It was man before he could think, or feel, or breathe.

V. That we are not straining language with any desire to accommodate it to a theory is evident from the fact that writers and reasoners of the highest ability, and whose opinions on the subject of our present work differ altogether from ours, have taken the very same view of it that we do. "Man," says Bishop Hall in his "Contemplations," "God did first form, then inspire." "Man," says Augustine, "was up to this only body." "He was already man," says Tertullian, "who as yet was but earth."[1]

VI. Now this is a most important point to be clearly understood. We have brought before us in this verse what man originally was. We have here told us by God himself all that we can truly and properly claim him as our own. Here is our origin. It is not much. It is dust. This is a great point to be clear upon. Man did not become man after the breath of life was breathed into him; he was man before. He was man when as yet he had no life; when he had neither spirit nor soul, whatever ideas are attached to these terms, placed within him by his Maker. "God formed man of the dust of the ground." We insist upon the plain meaning of this Scripture to its fullest extent. We are here not told that God formed man out of dust and spirit, or out of dust and soul, but out of dust and dust only. Man now has soul and spirit. They belong to him so long as God leases them to him. But the time was, be it long or short, when he had neither one nor other, and yet was man. And our plain inference is that the time might come when he would be bereft of both, and yet, when that which was thus bereft of soul and spirit would still be man.

VII. It will be well here to give the opposite view of man as to what he is thought properly to be, and to which we suppose the text in Gen. 2: 7, to be flatly opposed. It is the Platonic view of human nature, now in its main features thoroughly incorporated into our prevailing Christian theology, so that to most minds it appears to be as much a part of divine revelation as the existence of a God, the incarnation of Christ, or future rewards and punishments. According then to Plato, man was not formed out of the dust of the ground. Man was truly and properly a soul, which, for one reason or other was united to a body. This union to the body Plato considered an evil, and he therefore regarded death as a blessing in itself, inasmuch as it dissolved the undesirable union, and freed the soul, i. e., the man, from that which was a clog and a burden to him. Death was, in Plato's view, not the cessation of existence to man, but the change of his mode and condition of [illegible] change to the good man of sure unmitigated blessing.[2]

VIII. It will be quite plain to anyone acquainted with the theology of Christendom how clearly the Platonic idea has interpenetrated it. We do not, of course, say that Christian divines have adopted the entire theory of Plato. Few of them, for instance, agree with his idea that the soul had an existence long before its connection with the body; they generally suppose, we believe, that the body of each man is formed prior to, or at all events, contemporaneously with his soul. Again, few of them believe with Plato, that the dissolution of soul and body will be permanent. The Christian doctrine of a bodily resurrection forbids them to suppose this. Their theory, of necessity, most grievously disparages the importance of the resurrection of the body, because it teaches that man has a true life without the body; but still, few of them openly dispute the idea of the re-union of soul and body, however little they can possibly see it to be required. But the idea of Plato, that what he supposes the soul is the true and proper man, and that the body is not the true and proper man, has undoubtedly pervaded Christian theology to its very core. Thus Bishop Butler, one of the greatest thinkers that England has produced, has devoted a chapter of his grand "Analogy" to prove that "our organized bodies are no part of ourselves," and that man can and will exist in the truth of his nature, when his body lies in the grave in dust. And John Wesley, a man of profound mind, has thus defined his idea of man's nature: "I am now," he says, an immortal spirit, strangely commingled with a little portion of earth. In a short time I am to quit this tenement of clay, and remove into another state."[3]

It will not be disputed that Butler and Wesley here represent the current opinion of Christendom. They do not hold the body to be the true man, or essential to the idea of man. Man is, with them, a soul which may or may not inhabit the body, but which, whether inhabiting the body or not inhabiting it, is the true and proper man. This opinion we believe to be the very foundation stone of an amazing amount of false doctrine. This false philosophy of human nature has tainted the theology of centuries.

IX. Nor can it be said that it is only the text of Gen. 2: 7, which teaches a philosophy of our nature directly opposed to that of Butler and Wesley. All subsequent Scriptures give us the very same idea which we have taken from this old text. Thus when man had sinned, and God came to pronounce his doom, God reiterates in even fuller terms the first description of his proper nature. He tells Adam that he is to "return to the ground, for out of it he was taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." (Gen. 3: 19.) How different, how opposed to Wesley's definition: "I am an immortal spirit, strangely commingled with a little portion of earth!" We surely cannot place the two definitions together without perceiving that they convey different and opposing ideas. The idea conveyed in God's words was that adopted by the old saints. Thus, when Abraham takes upon him to intercede for Sodom, he says, "Behold, now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, which am but (only) dust and ashes."[4]

X. If we look into the accounts of Scripture, we will find also that where death has taken place, when the spirit and soul have left the body, when the body has been brought to that very condition where Adam's body was ere God breathed into it the breath of life, yet this body reft of all life is still regarded in the Scriptures as the man. Popular theology teaches that in death the body is like a garment laid aside from use, or a dwelling abandoned, while the wearer of the garment, or the dweller in the house, i. e., the soul, the real man, has gone elsewhere. But certainly this is not the view taken in Scripture. The very opposite view is there taken. The body, dead and lifeless though it be, is there looked upon as the man. Thus, whenever we read of burial throughout Scripture, we invariably read that Sarah, or Abraham, or Jacob, or Moses, or others as the case may be, are buried in the grave.[5] We never read anything of our common language on monumental stones and in funeral sermons, that all that is mortal of such or such a one lies in the grave, while he has himself gone elsewhere. The person, the individual, the man, he who was once alive, is throughout Scripture spoken of as lying in the grave.

XI. We will just look at one or two instances of the kind which are related at some length in Scripture. The widow woman at Zarephath has lost her son by death. Breath, spirit, soul, life, all have left the corpse. It lies

(Continued on page 212.)

---

[1] Hall's Contemplation "Of Man;" Augustine, 1: 497; Tertullian, "Resurrection of the Flesh," chap. 5: 103.

[2] Plato, "Phædo."

[3] Butler's "Analogy," ch. 1; Wesley's Sermons, 2: 721-0 (Rainbow, 1871, p. 177).

[4] Gen. 18: 27.

[5] Gen. 25: 10; 49: 31; 1 Kings, 13: 31; Acts, 2: 29; 1 Cor. 15: 4.

Correspondence.

From Alice T. Thomas, Holden, Mass.

In '42 I, with my dear husband, (who now sleeps) embraced the doctrine of the near coming of our blessed Lord. The resurrection, the inheritance of the saints, in the earth restored, were themes upon which I feasted. I have never lost my relish for the "blessed hope." I have loved it above every thing. Still I could never attain to that of which others spoke. Bringing myself right up to the judgment I felt a fear, a shrinking back. Oh, so unworthy! I prayed, Lord fit me for the kingdom. Last fall at Springfield camp meeting the subject of holiness and entire consecration to God was introduced. Others had the blessing and rejoiced in it. Oh! how far ahead of poor me. I could only feel a deep sense of unworthiness and meanness in the sight of spotless purity. I wept and prayed, and so I have struggled on. Oh! for holiness of heart and life—for the meekness of Christ. Well, I have given up the struggle, and now I simply trust in Jesus as my righteousness—my eternal all. I feel like a babe, borne in the arms of my blessed Savior. Oh! glory to his dear name! No merit of my own, none at all. Jesus is my righteousness.

[Our sister should not distress her mind by measuring herself with what others seem to enjoy. If she has given all for Christ, this is sanctification. Grace for the judgment or other scenes will come as it may be needed. Ed.]

From Henry Zader, Rock Co. Wis.

The Times is a precious visitor to me—all the Advent preaching I have, except my Bible and The Banner. My soul longs for the Bible truth to be preached in this city of Janesville, and that God would break in with his glorious light upon the dark superstition which this place is so full of. I am attending the Baptist meeting and Bible class. They do not agree with me in some points, but still keep asking my opinion on most passages, especially such as they do not agree upon themselves. I think there is some light given in the class. Oh! that men would open their eyes and see the glorious beauty there is in God's revelation when we take him at his word!

Dear brethren, my soul longs for the return of my Lord and Master, the Lord of glory, the rightful King. O Jesus, come, and come quickly, and redeem us from this world's wo and trials.

From G. W. Sprague, Prentiss, Me.

It rejoices my heart to think the day is hastening on when this poor sincursed earth shall be restored to its former Edenic beauty, and when the glorious King shall come and establish his kingdom that shall never be moved. Then shall he reign supreme in the new earth, and all shall be peace and joy and happiness. At the present time we can look around upon the world and view it lying in sin and wickedness and slumbering as it were on the brink of destruction, while we hear of wars, famines, pestilences, and devastating fires. All combine to keep earth in commotion, warning its inhabitants to prepare for that great and terrible day of the Lord. Truly God hath a controversy with the nations. He is speaking to them in unmistakable signs, and warning them of its approaching dissolution. Let us be faithful, for soon the last hour will come. Oh, who will be ready to hail it with joy, and exclaim, "This is our God, we have waited for him and he will save us?" Let us act wisely and except of the free salvation purchased by a kind and compassionate Savior.

From H. C. Russell, Grant, Mich.

I have noticed several times that we are denounced as unchristian and considered worse than infidels. I think surely the precious moments that are flying swifter than a weaver's shuttle must hang heavy on their hands when they can afford to spend so much time in such ridiculous insinuations. Who ever heard of an infidel believing in Christ as their Savior and reading the Word of God—except for amusement and ridicule? And who can say the Adventists do not believe in him. Yes, I might say more than any other denomination. Why we are called unchristian I cannot comprehend, unless it is because we believe the plain and positive truths of the Bible. Such slurs do not hurt us any, but in many instances it is hindering the progress of Christianity. And I cannot help thinking that our persecutors have need to look well to themselves lest the Almighty should denounce them as hinderances to the cause of Christ—particularly professing Christians and ministers. Our Savior set us an example of brotherly love, meekness and humanity, and commanded that we should follow in his footsteps. When ministers in their preaching cast slurs at other Christians they may have the satisfaction of knowing that it amuses their people, but they should know it is not pleasing in the sight of him whose eyes are too pure to behold iniquity. If I, as a professing Christian, should be the means of hindering sinners from coming to Jesus for salvation and pardon, I should very much doubt if "Well done good and faithful servant" would ever salute my ears. If they really believe our doctrine unchristian, surely as ministers of Christ they would reason with us and try to convince us of our error. This they do not; and why? Because they know perfectly well, that taking the Bible as their guide they cannot do it.

From Rachel Gibson, Chambersbury, Ohio.

I thank God my lot was thrown in a land of Bibles; that you and Br. O. D. Gibson, and Br. Whitney, ever came here to teach us about this great light, which having, we cannot be thrown into darkness by the world. May the Lord bless you all for teaching us his word. It shines brighter every day I live. I cannot, no, I cannot be cast down on this. I feel more determined to stand up for Jesus and his word, than I ever did. I do thank God that I, a poor weak child, may look according to the promise for his coming and kingdom. It cheers my heart to read letters from brethren and sisters, although strangers to me, yet I feel that we are one in Christ, and I hope to meet them in the kingdom. We have preaching here by Br. D. R. Fletcher every Sabbath. He gives us some stirring sermons. We are still pressing on for the prize, and feel determined to continue till Jesus comes, and we think that will be soon. We bless God for such a hope. We are not without trials; but the sweet words of Jesus comfort us. He has overcome the world; and if we overcome, we shall sit down with him on his throne. We are striving to this end. Notwithstanding we live in the last-day perils, yet how unnumbered our mercies! God help us to realize his abundant love toward us, and may we not forget those who have waded through persecution, toil and death, for the course of truth, and who now wait with the other sleeping ones of the Savior, for the appearing of Jesus the Lord, when he will bring the promised inheritance of the saints, where they shall die no more. How happy the thought. Let us consider with due weight our whole duty as servants of Christ. Let us be in earnest, ere death or the judgment shall cut off our opportunities.

From Geo. E. Whipple, Washington Co. N. Y.

With my grateful acknowledgements for your kindness in sending the ever welcome Times so long without pay, I hereby send a more substantial return. May you be kept useful in spreading the true light of life which lighteth every one that shall be admitted into the world to come, to show the blessings of our Lord when he shall come to be glorified in all them that believe what our Father has promised and confirmed by oath. Who also has given us assurance of the strongest nature concerning who is the true heir of the promise, by union with whom we are also made joint-heirs to the inheritance which, on account of its durability and excellence we hope soon to receive. We believe that then in due time the works of the devil will be destroyed, and the glory of our Lord will cover the earth to that extent that the light of the sun or moon shall not be needed, and when every enemy and his works shall be destroyed, and the will of God is done in earth as it is heaven, it will be good enough. Thanks be to our loving heavenly Father who has made unto us such exceeding great and precious promises, and may we with all those who love our Lord, take heed lest a promise being left us, we should come short of it through unbelief, or neglect of such great salvation.

The little flock who are not ashamed to stand up for the truth in Ft. Edward, are rejoicing in hope of soon beholding the king in his beauty, and of being made like him. We sustain two prayer meetings a week, besides preaching every Sunday evening. We shall be pleased to have you or any of the dear preachers of our Lord's word, the faith once delivered to the saints, stop with and deliver to us some of the sincere milk of the word, as you may be passing east or west. Although our numbers are small, and our means very limited, we will try to make it as pleasant as possible for those who minister to us in those things that pertain to our hope.

From Theria B. Weaver.

To-day, as I lie upon my bed, and my body is so racked with pain, it makes me think of fair land where the inhabitants never say I am sick, nor will any ever be cold, or weary, tired, tried or tempted, or endure privations, or crosses and losses, but all will be joy and peace, and nothing can enter that is impure or unholy. Only a few nights ago I felt as if my release was near. I truly expected, ere the dawn of the morning's light, I should be quietly sleeping that sleep that knows no waking, save by the Archangel's voice and the trump of God, and I did feel that I could pray, (and I did pray,) Father, if it can be thy will, let me sleep in Jesus: if not, I was willing to suffer still. For some wise purpose (no doubt) my life is prolonged. I think, at times, that I cannot do any one any good, and wonder why others much more useful than I am are taken away—taken from their little ones who so much need their care and counsel—and I am spared. But he who has said, not a sparrow falls to the ground without his notice, will not suffer anything to be done but for our best and eternal good.

Oh, for that rest, the crown of life to be given. I think we can look with eager eyes, and sweet expectations of hearing the the trumpet's sound at any moment, and seeing the king coming in his beauty. Oh, to be already to exclaim, "Lo! this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us." Blessed be the name of the Lord. He will save all that are ready, and I long to be there. The winter looks so cold, so gloomy, and dreary. I long to live in Eden's sunny land. I do love Jesus. I love to tell the story of his love because it did so much for me.

From S. A. Younglove, Huron Co., Mich.

There are, in these parts, a goodly number, who, like myself, are looking for the blessed appearing of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, at which time I expect, if we are faithful and keep our first love steadfast to the end, we shall be crowned with glory and honor, and immortality. I feel, through all, of the troubles and trials of this life, that God blesses me daily. And I do know that he is a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God. If he witholds the answer for a season, yet it is for some good purpose. How earnestly I prayed for the conversion of my companion, who is dearest to me by the ties of affection, yet I could see no change in him, and at times I felt that I never should. Again I would gain strength and speak to him on the subject. He would say that he would never be a Methodist. I was one of that denomination, and thought there was none better. I prayed earnestly in secret, and my Father which seeth in secret did reward me openly. I prayed that God would open the door of his heart, and send some one with whom he could unite. Then I felt if he did, it would be my duty to go with him. Last spring Br. Durand came into this neighborhood to preach. At first I thought I could not like him, for he was an Adventist, and when I had some tracts handed me to read, I merely glanced over their pages, not reading one word as I did so. One day our Methodist brother invited him to fill his place at our house, as the door is open to all who love the cause of Christ. I then attended his meetings quite regularly, and, thanks be to God, it was the means of bringing me to see the truths as they are written in God's holy word. My husband became interested and made the vow he would have Christ to rule over him. Imagine the hight of my joy as I stood at the water side and saw him buried with Christ by baptism, and rose to walk in newness of life. Now we can bow around the family alter and mingle our voices in prayer.

From Isaac Boddy, Knox Co. Mo.:

I am still alone in my views, in this part, although I find a great number that cannot agree with the doctrine of endless misery. Some take up with Universalism "in absence of a better Bible doctrine," they say. I contend that it is not a Bible doctrine in any respect. Some would like to have me join with them in Sunday-school and church relation—if I would not teach my views on some questions. But I have concluded to stay alone as far as the church is concerned, for this reason: that if the Lord has given me light, I shall not cover that light up; neither will I restrain my tongue from speaking my views. I work in the Union Sunday-school. Am not afraid to speak my views. Nor ask questions on the disputed questions; for the Presbyterian minister is a good Hebrew and Greek scholar, and always answers me on those points that come in our paper. I am in the faith that the Lord will send one of his faithful servants to this part of his vineyard yet, to gather a people that will be ready for his coming.

The Methodist minister requested me to send for the tract on the personal coming of Christ. And the Disciple minister wants some of our publications. He wants to know our views in order that he may know where we are; and if we have the truth he would like to know and receive it.

From J. W. Weltner, Hocking Co. O.:

Two years ago I subscribed for The Times at the request of my friend Wm. Huls; but finding that it advocated principles adverse to the doctrine I then believed to be taught by the Bible, I denounced it at once as heretical, and looked upon it as the work of deluded fanatics. Thinking that it would be expedient to "beware of the leaven" of the Adventists, I laid the paper aside, and informed you that I did not wish to renew my subscription. Since that time, however, I have had frequent occasions to meet the Advent brethren of this place and converse with them upon Biblical subjects, and in order to defend my belief I was obliged to study the Bible.

You know the result.

I would to God that all men would study the word of God instead of the traditions of men. The Bible should be the "man of counsel;" and if all would study it carefully and candidly, with unbiased minds, and allow God to be his own interpreter, there would, in my humble opinion, be great changes made in the principles of popular theology.

May the glad tidings of salvation and the speedy coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ be loudly proclaimed, so that many may be induced to accept the offers of mercy before the Master arises and shuts to the door. I ask the prayers of the prayerful that I may "stand fast in the liberty w[illegible] with Christ hath made us free."

From Z. Wood, Clarksville, Neb

I have been led under the guidance and care of my heavenly Father far away from my old home in Illinois into a new, and recently an uninhabited country—save by the Indian and herds of buffalo. Of course we have been and still are without Christian privileges and fellowship. Still the Savior has fulfilled his promise—"I am with you always." We have been made to rejoice in him.

This country is being settled up very fast, and mostly, in this neighborhood, by professing Christians. And I find several of like precious faith, looking for Christ's glorious appearing as the great hope of the church. We hope to have meetings soon at our own private houses. We are praying that the Lord will send Christian families to settle here, that are willing to labor and suffer, if need be, for Christ and his truth. This would be a grand and beautiful country if the curse and consequences of sin were removed. But may we ever realize that we are only strangers and pilgrims here, and while we are laboring for our bodily sustenance, be witnesses for Christ and his truth, and be found ready and waiting for him when he comes to raise the dear ones that sleep in the earth, change the living saints, put an everlasting end to sin, and reign gloriously forever with his Bride on the earth. This is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

From Philip A. Thomas, Cloud Co. Kas.:

The Times is all the preaching I get, and it gladdens my heart every time I see it, and read of the hopes and happiness of the brothers and sisters scattered over the land. May God bless them all, and all continue to strive to gain an abundant entrance into the eternal City. I have not seen an Adventist since I left Wisconsin in May last, save one—a seventh-day man. Notwithstanding our differences in belief we had a good long talk over the return and reign of our absent Lord. Oh! may the light shine in all the dark places that we may see our way into all truth. I try to talk and beget an interest in the great and vital questions that belong to this age, i. e., the coming of our Savior, and a preparation to meet him: but they are not themes that interest the people on the border. The all-engrossing question is how to get more land and get rich. Pray for us. There is a broad field in Kansas.

From L. Record, Lancaster, Ind.:

We are getting along as fast as could be expected in building a house for worship at Volga, four miles south of the college where you preached when here. Hope that if time continues you will be able to make us another visit and preach in our new house, and if that should ever be, may the blessing of God accompany your labors. I have been led to rejoice and thank God for the success of your labors in the South. It has been a source of much interest to me to read your "Journal." I can say, glory to God that so many are receiving the truth. We as a church are doing the best we can to keep up the worship of God regularly in our place, and striving to let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven. We are earnestly watching the signs of the times, "looking for the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ," feeling to say, "Come, Lord Jesus; come quickly!"

Brief Extracts.

Br. P. F. Rambo, Eaton Co., Mich: I would inquire of dear brethren and sisters, if we live as near to our God as we should. Do we fully realize the the situation, when we say we believe that Jesus is soon coming? Are we not "cumbered about much serving?" The question is, If the Lord should come, are there not many who are not ready? This is the question of the hour, and we as a people who proclaim these truths, should fully sustain them in our daily walk and conversation. Through the labors of Eld. Wilson, the truth as it is in Christ Jesus is fully sustained, and an abundant fruit is the result. Our class at Delta are fully alive to the importance of being ready to meet our absent Lord. Praise God for his mercies which endure forever.——Sr. H. H. Potter, Banks, Mich: The state of the people in here as regards religion is deplorable. There are no Adventists near us, and our neighbors regard us as little better than infidels. But God knows our hearts, and he is the one to judge us, and not man. God bless you in your noble work of preparing a people to meet their King. Our paper is worth an untold price to us, and we should be sorry to have to give it up. Hoping it may always be prospered until Jesus comes, I remain your sister in Christ.——L. Mary K. Sayre, Louisiana: I would supply several families in this neighborhood with the paper if they would only read; but I cannot see that the older people read anything, and the younger ones read only story papers. As for myself, I like it more and more, and should feel lonely without it. I can understand it better than anything else. It has led me to study the Bible more, and take a greater interest in books pertaining to the Bible. I have been reading the life of Christ. I often think of his sufferings, and then I feel as if I could never complain of anything.——Br. C. A. Stewart, Macon Co., Ill: I am not a member of the church; indeed there is not any Advent church in this county that I know of. I and my wife heard preaching in Pratt Co. last fall and winter, by G. W. Hurd and O. D. Gibson, and became interested with their explanations of the Scriptures, and subscribed for the paper, and we still wish to read it.——Br. C. S. Branch: I subscribed for The Times some time ago. Besides this I take three other papers, but The Times is the most welcomed of them all. I have done up three of them to-night, that I have read, to send to friends in New York. In fact I send all of them away after I read them. If all of your subscribers would do so I think it would be the means of doing much good. There are but very few in this part of Connecticut "of the precious faith." Here is a great field for missionary work, without going to Japan or China. We have men of intelligence and wealth, ministers and laymen that do not believe the Bible.——Br. P. V. Foulks, Corry

Pa: I find myself still an Adventist, though I attend the Methodist meetings, and get much good there; but find myself always as much of an Adventist as before. I expect to live and die one, unless my Master comes before that event. I, know I am weak and sinful, but I look to the Lord for strength to accomplish my duty and endure to the end. I hope to be remembered in your prayers, that I may meet you all in the first resurrection. I live in a land of Bibles and hope to make good use of the book. Many have the same privilege, but abuse or neglect it. May the Lord touch their hearts and awake them to a sense of their necessity, a hope in Christ, in whom alone is eternal life and salvation. I wish some Advent preacher could come here for a few weeks, even. There could be much good done.—— ——Br. Jno. Griffith, Burnstown, Minn.: It is near New Year's, and I do not wish to be the last one to renew my subscription. I love the subjects that my paper advocates. I spent my youthful years in the Methodist church. I was sincere in my belief, but have since seen my error. Many of my good friends are there still. I seem as yet to make no impression on them. They will scarcely read our best books. I long for them to see that their eternal life is not inherent, but in Christ. I hope the day is not far distant when Christ and the resurrection will be the popular doctrine. The time the tent came to Minneapolis I gave up my old views. I had some persecution. I owe my change very much to Br. Fassett. I am glad to hear from him in the TIMES. May the Lord prosper him and his wife in their labor in their new field.—— ——Br. B. F. Workman, Auburn, Ill.: Our little band of brothers and sisters are still firm in the hope of soon seeing our Savior. And since the meetings held at the dedication of the chapel in Auburn, many have made new consecrations, which has given life to our prayer meetings, which are well attended, and have a lively interest.

Preaching in the Cars.

From passengers who arrived Thursday, overland, we learn, among other incidents, that there was very impressive preaching services in one of the cars, when the train that left Omaha on Wednesday of last week reached the Summit or Back Bone of the Rocky Mountains. It was New Year's night. At the request of many passengers Eld. Miles Grant consented to deliver a short discourse. The train was moving in "fits and starts"—going perhaps a distance of a quarter of a mile at a time, when the snow shoveling force would be employed again. The hour was appointed half-past seven. The conductor made a provision of lights—borrowed from the mail and express cars. It was a mixed gathering—from the Pullman palace at one end and the second-class cars at the other—but a very attentive audience. The Elder announced to his congregation of about sixty persons that he would stop whenever the cars moved, and resume at the next snow blockade station, if he had not concluded before the movement was made. His text was—"Prove all things and hold fast to that which is good." After an exordium of ten minutes, the train started and made a half-mile trip. Then there was a pause of thirty-five minutes, during which the Elder concluded his discourse. His closing remarks were touching the insignificance of all earthly things, and the greatness of the proffered gift of eternal life. The time, the place, all the accessions and surroundings of the occasion served to render the scene remarkable and peculiarly affecting. Eld. Wilson offered prayer, and the exercises closed with the Doxology. The eloquent preacher, Eld. Miles Grant, is in this city, where he proposes to hold a series of meetings, at which he will expound the prophesies as interpreted by what are known as Second Advent Christians. He appears to have established for himself great popularity among his fellow-overland passengers; all of whom speak highly of his preaching and conversational excellence.—Sacramento Record, Jan. 6.

Circular Letter

OF THE NORTHERN ILLINOIS A. C. CONFERENCE FOR 1872.

Dear brethren in the churches and ministry: In writing this address we would make mention of some teachings and experiences that more particularly concern us as a people endeavoring to promulgate those seasonable truths that set forth a necessary preparation for the coming glories of the kingdom of God.

The great primal object of all Christian bodies is avowedly to bring about a condition of character and moral purity, such as shall warrant their adherents in indulging some kind of a hope of future life and blessedness. Any failure to accomplish this, is a failure to be deeply lamented, as it results in an eternal loss. Too high an estimate cannot be set upon the result sought for through a profession of Christianity, consequently too high an estimate cannot be set upon the means used to produce such a result.

We are before the world a peculiar people, in that we set forth as a means to, and a result of Christian character, many things widely different from any other class of people. If the things that make us thus peculiar are false, we should give them up and go back to our old associations. But if true, then we should cling to them with all the tenacity of an apostolic church, who sacrificed even temporal life for the truth's sake.

First, then, we advocate that "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." (1 Cor. 15: 3.) This expresses our view on the nature of the human race and the plan of redemption in its most extreme sense, and yet it is entirely Biblical. Its language confesses that our sins result in death, or in other scriptural language, "sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." (Jas. 1: 15.) To this we adhere. Can others do the same? For simply believing this statement, no more and no less, we are called heretics. More than this we never preached. Less than this is less than the truth. Different from this is perverting the gospel.

The language of the above text from Corinthians also asserts the death of Christ for us as a scriptural doctrine. We assert the same, viz: "Christ died." We fully believe it. Nothing more: nothing less. Can any one find fault? Yet we are branded as heretics for preaching this very doctrine. We accept the situation, and go forth declaring not our own words, but "thus saith the Lord."

Secondly, we advocate that "to them that look for him he shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation." This expresses the second advent of him who was dead, but who now lives forevermore. Connected with this second advent we read of immortality to the righteous, together with the kingdom of God on the earth renewed and made a perpetual joy.

For the truth of this the Scriptures abound in evidence. And for the nearness of the event, the Old and New Testament prophecies give ample proof. And yet, for looking for this same second advent, and believing it near at hand, we are considered fanatical by other religious bodies, who, denying the real death of man and of Christ, and advocating a ghostly inheritance for the only future state, would fain oppose us in our earnest efforts to win men from sin to holiness, by the cry of heresy and fanaticism:

From these two views as thus set forth, viz: that only justified ones are to receive immortality at the second advent of Jesus Christ, and that this event is nigh at hand, come many other Scriptural teachings wherein we differ from others, but suffice it to say in this connection that these two are the main points which make us a separate people.

That these views are true, long years of Biblical study more fully assure us, together with the religious consecration resulting from a hearty belief of them. And this last point mentioned is the perfection of all temporal conditions. To make men consecrated, holy, separate from worldliness in every sense is the professed aim of all theological teachings. Whatever accomplishes this fully, does for a person all that can be done this side of the judgment day. And has not a reception of Bible truth much to do in the work of sanctification? When Jesus uttered that memorable petition to his Father, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth," can any one think for a moment that he was ignorant of the nature of true sanctification, or holiness? Objectors may say it is God that gives holiness and purity of heart. Very true. But we ask, how is the work accomplished? Will it be done independently of the truth? We think not. The very prayer of the Savior signifies that God is to do the work, but to do it through the agency of the truth. The word of God is called the "sword of the Spirit." Every soul that becomes sanctified to God has, as a result, some personal experience and knowledge of God that was not possessed before. And we read that the office work of the Holy Spirit is to eventually guide the church "into all truth."

And as the Holy Spirit does not work separate from the truth, much less does it promote error. Is any one made happy by receiving error? It cannot be of God. God is not a supporter of falsehoods. Neither does he "make a lie." People may be sanctified in spite of their erroneous opinions, but God does not use error for this purpose.

Hence, we see the necessity of knowing and preaching the word of God in order to create a character in men suitable to warrant them in a hope of eternal life. And for lack of the true word men are perishing. The professed church of Christ is to-day far from the purity that God demands. The church and world run riot together, and but few lift their voices or hands against it. It is because truth is fallen in the streets, that holy men and consecrated hearts are so few. We see these things and know them to be true. And have we no commission at this time? Is there no warfare for us to wage? Shall we not be found in the front ranks to oppose error and save lost ones? Surely, we cannot rest from our warfare now. This is no time for getting oliveyards, and vineyards, and ease, and pleasure. The spirit of inquiry is already stirring the people, and thousands are anxious to know if there is any light amid the thick theological darkness that surrounds them. God puts a commission into our hands, and says, "Go, speak to the people all the words of this life." Shall we accept it? We seem to hear the answer coming up to us in the voice of an echo, borne on the breeze from every consecrated one, "Accept it." Amen! Let no sacrifice be too great for us to make in these last moments of time. Let the heralds of the coming kingdom of God leave all else and go forth to work for the heavenly Master. Let the churches sustain them, and hold up their hands as they feed the people with the bread of life.

Brethren and sisters of the churches and ministry, let us show the consecrating, sanctifying power of God in us, because of the truths concerning Jesus and his coming glory. Let the year 1872 be one of progress on our part in spreading the light of Bible Christianity. With true unity and unabated zeal, let us press home upon the people the great "present truth" God has given us, warring against modern spiritualism in every form and place, and opposing the adulterated Christianity of the times in which we live, ever seeking to bring men to that holiness and purity of heart that permits no abiding place within for sin or error of any kind. With God and the truth, Christ and the gospel, one and inseparable, let us manifest an increase of zeal and consecration such as shall show that we love the work of God more than all the allurements of this vain world. And then, when the trump of God shall sound, we may have an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom.

FRANK BURR. } Com.
SILAS B. MABEY. }

The Fruits of Anarchy.

The writer of the following extracts, which I take from a paper favorable to some of his peculiar views, was once associated with me in the old Indiana Christian Conference, broken up and demoralized by the advocates of the restoration of fleshly Israel. He originally belonged to the Campbellites, who justly regarded him as one of their ablest Indiana preachers. But they cast him out of their synagogues for teaching the mortality of man, and the destruction of the wicked. He found congenial society in the Indiana Christian Conference to which he was admitted as a member. For several years every thing went on harmoniously, until the Judaizers crept in among us, and ultimately demanded the adoption of their views as a part of the gospel of the kingdom, which finally resulted in the ruin of the Conference. This brother took sides with the Judaizers and assisted in enforcing the "rule or ruin" policy. The dogma of Jewish restoration was brought promently before the Conference, and insisted on as an essential part of the gospel of the kingdom. Finding that I had been deceived and circumvented by false pretences, I abandoned the State organization in despair; resolving to make no further effort until this Judaizing faction had drifted away.

After having spent years in making war on all order and government in the church of God, he is now effectually played out. But to the extracts. He says:

"Popes forbade Luther and many reformers to proclaim or publish the mortality of man. The Campbellites have repudiated Dr. Field for teaching 'The dead know not anything.' Dr. Field and Second Adventists have repudiated us, for the belief, that the world to come must be controlled by Christ and his immortalized believers; and nations, Israel at their head, restored to Canaan, must be the subjects. The priests forbade Peter and the apostle 'to speak any more in the name of Jesus.'"

The fact is the repudiation was the other way; of which abundant testimony can be produced. Again he says:

"There are no successors of the apostles, prophets, evangelists, bishops, pastors, and deacons; therefore, no one of us to judge heresy. Jesus says, 'As I hear, I judge.' (Jno. 5: 32.) Therefore, all of us must go to the officers' written words, whom God set in the church, and bear always with each other."

No evangelists, no bishop, no deacons!—of course no government, and no church. Anarchy and complete disintegration! Every man a church to himself!! Here is another extract that illustrates the operation of these anarchical ideas.

"Sectarianism says to me, you shall not teach a common school, or a select grammar class; or even preach in the school house that four of my brethren and myself, with others, have been taxed to erect. Here I am out of employment, this winter, but few of us in the faith. Well, I am going to preach the word of God's kingdom."

So much for disorganizing principles—pulling down everything and building up nothing. An able speaker living ten years in one place without gathering a church, having no place to preach, nor even to teach school! To cap the climax, this signal failure is charged to the sectarianism of the neighborhood in which he lives!

N. FIELD.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—30 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—44 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,500 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 10c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 30c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4, leather back, $5. Postage, 56c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $1; leather $1 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Gould. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c, post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 40c. post paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—15c. post paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 30c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 3. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 2 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $38 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $6 by express.

ENGLISH GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable. Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Jan. 30, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, ... EDITOR

MAKING LIGHT OF THE WORD.

Henry Dana Ward writes to the Advent Herald:

Why do the Lord's people make so light of his word? He pronounces on the ungodly their doom, and some thinking annihilation preferable, take leave to interpret accordingly—as if destruction carries annihilation with it. These bodies are destroyed, returned to dust, and left to sleep, until the great day of the Lord, when they awake and come forth from the grave. Earth itself goes to destruction and ashes in the final conflagration. But earth is not annihilated. It comes forth of a higher pattern from the Creator's hand.

—We are sorry such a clear-headed literalist as Mr. Ward should be guilty of such a paralogy as the above. The idea of an analogy between the cleansing of the earth by fire and the destruction of the wicked is too absurd. Let us glance at it.

The wicked are to be destroyed.

The earth will be destroyed. (?)

But the earth will come forth from its ashes "of a higher pattern," and not be "annihilated."

Therefore the destruction is not "annihilation."

And perhaps Mr. Ward will tell us, if his argument is worth anything, how, as "destruction" in the case of the wicked and of the earth means the same thing, he will escape the conclusion that the wicked are to be restored from their ashes, and "come forth of a higher pattern from the Creator's hand?"

THE HYMN OF CLEANTHES.

Our readers will no doubt peruse with interest "the poem" from which Paul made so apt a quotation in his address to the Athenians. The following version by Edward Beecher appeared in a late number of Old and New:

HYMN TO JUPITER.

Great Jove, most glorious of the immortal Gods,
Wide known by many names, Almighty One,
King of all nature, ruling all by law,
We mortals thee adore, as duty calls;
For thou our Father art, and we thy sons,
On whom the gift of speech thou hast bestowed
Alone of all that live and move on earth,
Thee, therefore, will I praise; and ceaseless show
To all thy glory and thy mighty power.
This beauteous system, circling round the earth,
Obeys thy will and wheresoe'er thou leadest,
Freely submits itself to thy control:
Such is, in thine unconquerable hands,
The two-edged, fiery, deathless thunderbolt;
Thy minister of power, before whose stroke
All nature quails, and trembling stands aghast;
By which the common reason thou dost guide,
Pervading all things, filling radiant worlds,
The sun, the moon, and all the host of stars
So great art thou the universal King.
Without thee naught is done on earth, O God,
Nor in the heavens above, nor in the sea:
Naught save the deeds unwise of sinful men.
Yet harmony from discord thou dost bring;
That which is hateful, thou dost render fair;
Evil and good dost so co-ordinate,
That everlasting reason shall bear away;
Which sinful men, blinded, forsake and shun,
Deceived and hapless, seeking fancied good.
The law of God they will not see nor hear,
Which if they would obey, would lead to life;
But they unhappy rush, each in his way,
For glory some in eager conflict strive;
Others are lost, inglorious, seeking gain;
To pleasure others turn, and sensual joys,
Hasting to ruin whilst they seek for life;
But thou, O Jove! the giver of all good,
Darting the lightning from thy home of clouds,
Permit not man to perish darkling thus;
From folly save them; bring them to the light;
Give them to know the everlasting law
By which in righteousness thou rulest all;
That we, thus honored, may return to thee,
Meet honor, and with hymns declare thy deeds,
And though we die, hand down thy deathless praise:
Since nor to men nor gods is higher need
Than ever to extol with righteous praise
The glorious, universal King Divine.

PERSONAL LETTERS.

Owing to delays and miscarriage of letters forwarded to us from the office many letters have only just come into our hands. All will be attended to soon.

Also, communications and letters for the paper have been delayed in the same way, including Eld. Braden's Fourth Letter, which has come just as we go to press, and will appear next week.

THE DISCUSSION.

We are unable to furnish the continuation of the discussion this week for the reason that Eld. Braden's fourth letter forwarded to us by mail, for some unaccountable reason failed to reach us. We hope to receive it or a duplicate in season for next week.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

CASTLETON, VT.

MONDAY, Jan. 14. Have made visits with Br. Mathewson among his people. We found every family more or less impressed with the importance of religion. We had special conversations and prayer. Personal religion was the theme. At night I met with them and spoke from Ex. 32: 20. "Who is on the Lord's side?" Quite a number of new converts came to the altar, and some were justified. The new manifestation of power in the congregation was deeply encouraging. We are truly having a blessed work of God. We have received liberal aid from this church in our Western Publishing Society, both in its beginning and progress. And we still have their sympathy. And any aid I can give them by my poor efforts in return, I regard as a duty I owe them, as a Western man. I trust this will be understood by our brethren in the West; and though some of them may seem to be neglected, yet I am doing what is for the best, and shall after a little delay, also give them a helping hand again.

TUESDAY Jan. 16. The M. E. church commenced a four days meeting to-day, and had three services. I attended morning and afternoon. Mr. Philips the pastor spoke in the a. m. from Mat. 5: 20—"Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter the kingdom of heaven." He gave us a plain, pointed and practical sermon. In the p. m. a pastor from Fairhaven spoke from 2 Cor. 5: 17. "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature, old things are passed away and all things become new." These sermons were studied, and well delivered in their best style. But the Methodist minister of to-day, is not the Methodist minister, of a half century ago. They have not the spirit or power of other times. There is a formality, dryness, and a want of the power that characterized them a half a century since. There is less persecution, and more honor; less of the Holy Spirit and naked trust in God, with more learning, wealth, and worldly conformity. There was a congregation of about thirty persons, most all of whom were believers, and of these there were several Adventists besides Br. Mathewson and myself.

We had more than our usual attendance and interest at the chapel at night. I spoke from Jer. 8: 20-22, "The harvest is past and the summer is ended and we are not saved." Several new ones came out and were blessed. And the work is deepening and widening. God has heard and answered prayer, and blessed the long continued and faithful labors of our brother and sister.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 17. Left Castleton for Rutland, Vt. and called upon Brn. French, Parsons and others, and talked over the interest of our cause and the state of the cause in the city. I find they were very much disappointed in not obtaining Eld. S. G. Mathewson for their pastor. They offered every inducement in their power for him to come—all he asked and more. But the Lord seemed to hedge up the way, and the claims of the Castleton church were so strong, that he did not feel that he could lightly consider them. The church and the people at large in Castleton, uniting in their expressed wish for him to remain, seemed to convince him that he ought to do so.

The church in Rutland, have now given Eld. D. T. Taylor a call to become their minister. Eld. T. is not only one of our ablest writers, but is a good pastor. We have very few pastors among us, most of our preachers being evangelists and missionaries. We are suffering from the lack of pastors, who can build up and enlarge the churches. If Br. Taylor, should go to Rutland he will build them up.

I took the cars, as I supposed for Rouses Point, with a view to see Br. Taylor at his residence. But found that my ticket carried me on a new route, via St. John's; so I came direct to Melbourne. Here, as alway, I found a hearty reception from father Gilman and family. And as I wished to visit the brethren in the neighborhood Br. G. harnessed the horse. I first called upon Br. Wilson, who was in affliction, having recently buried his estimable wife and child. He is sustained by our "blessed hope," as he expects Jesus to come soon, when the sleepers will all awake to everlasting life. We then crossed the St. Francis', bridged by ice, to Richmond, and visited Br. J. D. Daniels, late of Danville, P. Q. He is now settled here, and having weekly meetings at his house. Arrangements were made for me to preach at night. Richmond is filling up, and more people can be got out to hear than in Melbourne. I preached from John 5: 39, and gave the Scriptural evidence of the Messiahship of Jesus of Nazareth, and of his speedy coming. Nearly all spoke at the close, and we had a time of refreshing. I then took leave of the friends, and came to Montreal by the night train. Spent but a short time, and when business was done I had no time to visit the brethren, though I greatly desired to do so. Preached in Rutland, in the evening, at the chapel, from Dan. 7: 25-27, on the predicted fall of the Papacy, showing that that power had fallen, and the kingdom of God is at hand.

SATURDAY, Jan. 20. Saw several old friends, and believers of 1840. We have worked together from the beginning, and as old soldiers we have a sympathy peculiar to this class. It is good to see the old veterans, and hear them speak of nearing deliverance.

I had a pleasant interview with Br. McLean editor of the Independent, a local weekly paper of merit and high tone. He sympathizes with the Advent doctrine and people.

I also met Br. D. E. Grandy, who was brought in at the time of our great meeting at Vergennes, Vt. in 1842, when Father Miller was present, Col. Wines and Truman Grandy o Vergennes, Dr. Smith of Castleton, and a host of others were brought into the faith then and there. Some of them sleep, while Dr. Smith and others remain and are true workers in the cause.

At noon took leave of Br. French, who is one of the whole-hearted ones. God bless and reward him for his labors and sacrifices for the truth.

ELD. EDWIN T. HIMES.

Br. William: I have just received your letter informing me that our dear Br. Edwin is gone. So it seems he "ceased at once to work and live." Dear one, his work is done, and well done. He now rests from his labors, till the Master shall appear, when raised all glorious and immortal he shall receive the crown of life. Blest servant, and blest reward.

It was my privilege to be with him frequently, and to know him intimately during the past three years. In all our intercourse, I have ever felt that I never knew a young man in whom I saw so much to admire, and so little to condemn. I can say of him as John Wesley did of the sainted Fletcher, "I never heard him say an improper word, or saw him do an improper act." He was always gentle, genial and loving; and possessed in an eminent degree the patience and meekness of Christ. In his earnest, tireless, and self-sacrificing labors, he has enshrined his memory in many loving hearts, and made a mark for the cause of truth that will endure while time shall last.

As a minister, all was consecrated to the one work of preaching Christ. His only aim was to bring sinners to a knowledge of the truth, and to unite and build up Christians in the faith and hope of the Scriptures. And wherever he has labored there are living epistles of his success. During these brief years he has done a great and good work among us and his loss is irreparable. He had to an eminent degree the faculty of planning and systematizing labor. A thorough and valuable revision of our Conference constitution, the organizing of districts in our bounds and the holding of regular Quarterly Conferences, are mainly due to his efforts. He also inaugurated a plan for the raising of mission funds for the distribution of tracts and books, and thus aid in the dissemination of light and truth. His last work was to introduce Mission Boxes into families to aid in the good cause. One hundred of these were provided, and most of them put up, very many with his own hands, to receive the offerings of the little folks and others in the family. He judged that not less than three hundred would be needed in the State; and at the low estimate of even one dollar a year per box, would of itself make quite a Conference Fund to be disposed of as the Conference should judge best for the promotion of the cause. I am sure the friends who have received these boxes from his hands, will now prize them very highly and feel a deep interest in dropping their free-will offerings into these sacred depositories for the cause.

Br. Edwin was an able expounder of the word and defender of the faith; a ceaseless and sacrificing laborer in the the Master's vineyard. To the cause he gave his whole time, talents, health, and life. He did all that he could. It was a noble offering, and it has accomplished a noble work. Brief though it was its results will live and bear fruit till the day of Christ. May his mantle fall on the few who are left to battle for God and his truth in the blessed cause. And may his all-sufficient grace and providential care, attend comfort and bless the afflicted ones.

L. C. COLLINS.

A WORD FROM THE KASOTA ADVENTISTS.

Resolved, That in the death of Eld. Edwin T. Himes.—who died Jan. 17 1872 at Winona—we sincerely feel that he fell asleep with his armor on.

Resolved, That we tender our sympathies to the friends of the deceased.

Resolved, That in his death we lose a brother and laborer whose place it will be hard to fill.

Resolved. That we will strive to live so we may meet him at the resurrection morn.

Hades.

(Continued from First Page.)

colorless, and rigid, and lifeless. Yet Elijah regards this lifeless figure as still the widow's son. "And he said unto her, give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft, and laid him upon his own bed."[*] The dead body is regarded by the prophet as man. In the very same way our blessed Lord speaks. Lazarus, his friend has died. Where did Christ think and say that Lazarus was? In the grave. "Where have ye laid him?" he said to the standers by, and they pointed out the grave. Over the grave stands the Lord of life and he addresses what lay in the grave as Lazarus. "He cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth. And he that was dead came forth."

XII. We will now draw attention to another Scripture which establishes our view that with the body is essentially bound up the personality of man; that without the body it is not allowed that the man can be said to be. "I am an immortal spirit," says John Wesley. John Wesley thought that this spirit was his true self, that where it was, he was, and where it went, he went. But our great Father teaches an opposite doctrine. It is the evening of his resurrection from the grave. As his diciples speak of the wonders of that day, "Jesus himself stood in the midst of them." At the sight "they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed they had seen a spirit." Jesus proceeds to disabuse them of their error. He tells them "Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself."[*] In the mind of Jesus his body was absolutely essential to his personality. A spirit, whatever ideas we may attach to that term, was not, and could not be Jesus himself. He does not allow us for a moment to suppose that he could exist as a man independently of his body. Our modern notion that the true I, the true man, is a spirit, or a soul, which may leave the body, and yet without the body be the man, is rejected by our Lord.

XIII. If we are content, then, to take the teaching of the Scripture as our guide, we will see that its teaching is that man in his origin was made of earth in the very same way that all the lower creatures were created from it: that to any true conception of man the idea of body is absolutely essential: that no subsequent addition of spirit or soul, whatever be the ideas we attach to these terms, can assume to have superseded this idea of man; that as they were once disassociated from man, viz., ere God had given them to man, so they may be again disassociated from man: that man may return to his old condition ere he had them at all, and the dead body they have left is then the man, the person, the self.

CHAPTER II.—MAN ONE PERSON.

I. We saw in our last chapter what man was at first, and what man might become again, viz., body without life. We cannot too much insist on this as the Scriptural view of our original and essential nature. Man is not a spirit, man is not a soul. Attach what ideas we please to these terms, endow them with what capacities we fancy, it is not permitted us to use either of them, or both of them, as our definition of man. Man is earth. The body of man, in whatever condition it be, is man. Without the body we are not for a moment permitted to suppose that there is or can be such a person as man. Man may have spirit and soul, but he is not spirit or soul. They may be taken from him, but that from which they are taken retains the attributes of manhood; and spirit and soul, whatever they are, in whatever state or condition they be, to whatever place they may have gone, cannot have attributed to them, or to either of them, the attributes of manhood. The man, the person without them, has ceased to be a living person, whether we suppose them when separated from him to be living or dead.

II. Before we proceed to discuss the nature and properties of soul and spirit, so far as they are told us in Scripture, it may be well to say a few words on the utter absurdity of supposing them apart from the body, to be man or a person. We suppose that every one will allow that each man constitutes only a single person. We suppose that no one will maintain that any change of which man is capable can have as its result the making of two men or two persons out of what was but one. In life we allow that each individual, however composed, is yet but a single person. No one can surely contend that death converts this single person into two or three!

III. We will in the course of our inquiry have a good deal to say about death, and what it is. We do not accept the common definition of death as regards man, to be an adequate definition of it, but we fully accept it as a true definition of it, to a certain extent. The definition we refer to, is that death is a separation of the soul and spirit from the body. As we have said, we accept this as perfectly scriptural and true; we only object to it as not conveying the entire idea of what Scripture means and defines by death. But death is unquestionably the dissolution of union, the separation of the spirit and soul from the body of man.

IV. Now what is the result as regards person? Has it made two persons out of one? We wait for an advocate so hardy as to say that it has. Until he appears, we will assume that there is no man of sense and reflection who will say that it has. At once there is brought before us the question, whether is the body without the spirit, or the spirit, or soul, or both without the body, the true and real person? Plato has decided the question in his own way. He never fancied that death made two persons out of one, but he did fancy that death separated the true and real person from what had been associated with it for a time. With him the true real person was the soul. To it he gave all the attributes of personality. Accordingly, when death came, and the soul was separated from the body, the true person, the soul, went forth, leaving that body which was not a person, but had only been associated with a person, behind. When Plato makes Socrates speak of death and its separation, he makes him say always, "I depart hence to-day," "I depart to the gods." The separated soul he supposes to be the true person, to be Socrates. He is not guilty of supposing that another Socrates remained behind in the lifeless corpse.* He expressly denies that what the sad friends of the philosopher would then look upon would be Socrates at all. Socrates had gone away: was beyond the sky: the dead body they looked at no more deserved to be called Socrates than would an old garment which Socrates had worn and laid aside. The only difference was that he had worn one garment, the body made of clay, longer than another garment, the dress made of wool.

---

[*] 1 Kings, 17: 17-19.
John, 11: 34-44.

[*] Luke, 24: 36-39.

V. Now unquestionably our Platonic divines in heart adopt the theory of Plato. But then they are clogged with their recognition of a book of which Plato was ignorant—the Bible. This Bible persists in calling the body when dead the man. It says that Abraham, and Jacob, and David, and others departed from life, are in the grave, and it never says they are in heaven or anywhere else but in the grave. Now here is the perplexity of theologians who Platonise. They cannot deny that the persons who have departed this life are in the grave, without denying those numberless Scriptures which say they are. They therefore in words, whatever they think in their hearts, allow that they are in the grave. But they also hold, and possibly, if not probably, with a stronger faith, that these persons are in heaven, or hell, or a hades distinct from the grave! And thus we see that the recognition of spirit or soul, separate or united to each other, distinct or different names for the same essence, leads its Christian maintainers to the absurdity of supposing that death ha[illegible] converted one person into two. [illegible] life there was but one Abraham, [illegible] death there are two; in life there wa[illegible] but one David, in death there are t[illegible] Davids! In life there was but [illegible] Christ; during the three days of [illegible] death there were two. One Da[illegible] was in the sepulchre at Jerusalem; [illegible] other David was somewhere [illegible] One Christ was in Joseph's tomb; [illegible] other Christ was preaching to sp[illegible] in prison, or otherwise busily occup[illegible] One Abraham was asleep and d[illegible] another Abraham awake and li[illegible] Such is the abs[u]rd, yet necessary [illegible] clusion to which men who accept [illegible] Scriptures as true are led when [illegible] adopt the philosophical idea th[illegible] soul or spirit separated from the [illegible] is the true man, or a man or a [illegible] at all.—Henry Constable, in R[illegible]

NO SOUND WITHOUT EA

There can be no sound without an [illegible]; for sound is a SENSATION produced on [illegible]y sound-waves from a vibrating body.

Sound is not a certain something th[illegible]s through the air to the ear, but simply [illegible]lt of undulations of a certain kind in th[illegible]he vibrations of some body. Air is not [illegible] to produce sound, though under ordin[illegible]stances it is the medium. We may [illegible]t it is not necessarily the medium under [illegible]um-stances by placing the head under [illegible]and then having some one strike two st[illegible]her in the water at quite a distance from [illegible] The sound will be more rapid and loud [illegible]n the air. Again, by placing the ear at [illegible] of a long stick of timber, and then scra[illegible] oth-er end with a pin, the sound will b[illegible]

Sound is in the ear, not at a dis[illegible]n us, and is simply a sensation; or, in o[illegible]ds, an effect is produced on the ear by [illegible]uses, and we call this effect SOUND.

Should a cannon be fired out on [illegible]rairie, and no ear be within hearing d[illegible] there could be no sound. Let me be u[illegible] I do not say that the cause would not [illegible]ust the same manner, nor that the vibra[illegible] undula-tions would not go on just the s[illegible]t these undulations having no ear to st[illegible]on, the effect could not be produced, and [illegible] sound.

A tree falling in the woods wh[illegible]ar hears it, there can be no sound.

The undulations of the atmo[illegible]ust reach a certain tension or pitch befor[illegible] can per-ceive them. A body passing [illegible] the air produces no sound till the rapid[illegible]es a cer-tain swiftness.—PROF. G. S. B[illegible]

Some of our readers will [illegible]ber the Professor as an immaterialist [illegible] once furnished some food for discuss[illegible] these columns. We were wondering [illegible] read the above effusion from his pen [illegible]er his contact with us had not had a [illegible]ial effect, and he was feeling his way [illegible]l material-ism in the above article. [illegible]nd without ears." Do immaterial spir[illegible]e ears, im-material, of course? If a [illegible] in a body cannot distinguish sound [illegible] a vibrating ear-d[illegible]w is it to hear after it becomes disem[illegible]? That is what we are curious to k[illegible]s heaven a place of absolute silenc[illegible]e read in one place of silence there [illegible] half hour," but we always sup-posed [illegible]e in consequence of all sound being [illegible]d, not because no being there was was [illegible] of hearing. Will there be no mus[illegible]? Are we not really to hear our Savi[illegible]ce? Will there not be actually a "so[illegible] Moses and the Lamb?" If not ther[illegible] meaning attaches itself to the Savi[illegible]ortation—"He that hath ears to hea[illegible]n hear'" If "the spirits of just men [illegible] perf[illegible] are to be eternally deaf[illegible]ink er[illegible] ages shall have rolled arou[illegible] will earnestly desire "the re-dem[illegible] of their bodies," that they may hea[illegible]

I[illegible]f there be no hearing without ears, is t[illegible] seeing without eyes? We shou'd jud[illegible] Light is as dependent upon "un-dul[illegible] as is hearing. And are disembod-ied [illegible]blind, too? And if blind and deaf, wo[illegible] an unconscious state until the res-urr[illegible]e quite as desirable as to be con-scio[illegible] deprived of sight, hearing and fra[illegible] (A curious conscious state, truly!) I[illegible]ay be said, the disembodied spirit wil[illegible] see and feel in some other way than by[illegible] Indeed! How will you go to w[illegible]rove it? What! the cannon's roar, the[illegible]ing thunder imperceptible to the en[illegible] spirit whose material ears are clos-ed[illegible]adily perceived by the same spirit wh[illegible]embodied? Immaterialism must be c[illegible]r it will break itself down by its de[illegible] upon the credulity of the public.

[illegible] above article and remarks ap-p[illegible]n THE TIMES of May 30, 1871. S[illegible]ter we received the following c[illegible]nication from the Professor. W[illegible]ended to have given it a place b[illegible]his time, but it has been inad-v[illegible]ly delayed.

FROM PROF. BRADLEY.

[illegible]he Editor of the ADVENT CHRIS-[illegible]TIMES:

[illegible]iend has kindly put a copy of [illegible]paper of May 30 into my hands. [illegible]you have copied from the Baptist [illegible]n—to which, by the way, you [illegible]d have given credit—[We found [illegible] exchange without credit.—ED.] [illegible]ticle of mine, entitled "No sound [illegible]out ears." In commenting on it, [illegible]seem to be quite merry over it, [illegible]to imagine that under your cloud [illegible]erriment you have sailed off victo-[illegible]. Will you, therefore, allow me [illegible]e for reply to some of your re-[illegible]ks, and would-be arguments.

[illegible]he friend who handed me the pa-[illegible] remarked as he did so, "I don't [illegible]ow when I have been more amused [illegible]er any little thing, for he hasn't made [illegible]y reply at all to your argument."

You start out with—"We were won-[illegible]ring as we read the above effusion [illegible]om his pen, whether his contact with [illegible] had not had a beneficial effect, and [illegible]e was feeling his way toward materi-alism in the above article." Now Mr. Editor, is this the way you treat all those who are "feeling their way" toward your sublime hight. Do you turn around and ridicule those who are trying to climb after you? Do try to be charitable to the denizens in the lowly vale, for they may aspire to lofty soaring sometime. Don't clip their wings in too hurried a manner, for the fall might injure them forever.

But, to be serious, allow me to say that I believe we should all try to get good from all men. We should try to learn something from all with whom we come in contact. I profess to be ever ready to accept all truth just as soon as I make the discovery that it is truth. When convinced of the truth of your system of materialism, I certainly shall accept it, but I confess myself a long distance from it at the present time.

It appears to me that your whole system lacks consistency and proof. Perhaps I am blind so that I do not perceive the beautiful harmony claimed for it. Perhaps I have wholly misapprehended the entire scope of the Bible, but I think not; at least I try to understand what is taught.

You say, "Do immaterial spirits have ears, immaterial of course? If a spirit in a body cannot distinguish sound without a vibrating ear-drum, how is it to hear after it becomes disembodied?" Will you please tell us which cognises the sound—the ear, or the mind? Which perceives an object, the telescope, the eye, or the mind? You admit at once, that it is not the eye or the ear, but the mind. These are only the physical instruments. In this state of being it is evident that the mind is dependent upon materiality for its manifestations, but there is no evidence that such will be the case in the future world. You seem to imply in your query that in heaven sound will come to us in a manner similar to the present way. Of this there is no evidence. What proof have we that there will be an atmosphere similar to this which now fills our lungs? What evidence have we that there will be any air at all in heaven? You may suppose a thousand things, but you have not the slightest proof of any such thing. For all we know, the means for communication in the future will be entirely different from what we have in this state of being.

Here is one difficulty with your system. You seem unable to apprehend a state of being much different from the present. You are emphatic that all will be material. Let us speak for a moment about materiality, for it may be possible that we are not so far apart as might at first be supposed. What is materiality, and what is spirituality? What is the difference? Are they absolutely different in all respects? Have they no points of similarity? Is spirituality a product of the material, or not?

We cannot answer all of these questions, for we have no means of proof or verification; but we have our opinion, be it right or wrong. In looking at the material world, we find there are gradations, from the grosser up to the more refined. Commencing with the coarser earths, we follow up through the minerals, metals, fluids or liquids, air, gases, etc. Hydrogen gas possesses the most attenuated particles of all known substances—that is, so called substances—it being some fourteen times lighter than common air. We find in this investigation that the higher we ascend the more subtle and powerful does any substance become.

Water possesses a certain force, but when turned into a subtler form, in the shape of steam its power is vastly increased. Following in the train, we may suppose that electricity is a much more subtle substance, [Is it a substance?—ED.] and as much more powerful as it is more subtle. Thus far it has eluded all efforts to measure or weigh it. Our instruments are not yet perfect enough. And yet, who will say that electricity is not material? Certainly I could not say it. In fact, my opinion inclines to the view that it is a more subtle form of what we call matter.

So when we speak of the ether that is supposed to be the medium of light, we speak of that which we never saw or felt. We have no means of investigating its properties, and yet we feel quite certain that it exists. We believe that light cannot come to us without some medium, and since the air is not the medium, we conclude it must have some other, and this we call ether.

We say, that for all we know, electricty may be material. As yet its weight has not been determined. We only know its effects on other kinds of material. Going upward in the same sense, it may be that spiritual essence is only the refined substance of material.

Do not, however, understand me as insisting or attempting to prove that all these forms of matter have been made from the coarser materials; for I can conceive of their having been made just as they now exist.

I do not know that it is worth while to contend that spiritual essence is emphatically and entirely different from all other forms of matter This we do not know. Should we admit that it is simply matter in its highest sublimation, I do not know that it would in the least detract from the glory of the spiritual. Admitting that it is even material, this would not prove that it is subject to all the laws and changes of of coarser materiality. We think there must be laws and properties peculiar to its state of being.

But again I believe that the atmosphere is an entity, or, in other words, that it has properties distinctly its own. So electricity. So the ether. And thus I reason that the spiritual part of man may have an existence distinct from the body. You might just as well say that the atmosphere we breathe is a part of the body, as to say that what we call spirit or soul is a necessary part of it. Here is where the fallacy of your system in a measure lies—that the spirit or soul is only the result of vital actions. Some of your writers affirm that the brain secretes thought, just as the liver does bile. [We doubt this.—ED.] Admitting this to be true, it is easy to see that when the body decays the whole being perishes As yet I cannot see the evidence of such a position. The arguments adduced in support of such seem to be exceedingly weak. I do not say there are no difficulties on our side, but those on yours seem to me to be without number.

Finally, I expect the eyes of our spiritual bodies will be vastly different from what we now possess, and so of our ears and senses generally. The various mediums of our communication will probably all be different. In what respect I cannot tell, nor do I care To reason from the phenomena of this life, that like ones will exist in the future, is something we don't know anything about.

When I see the truth of your system, you may rest assured that I shall gladly adopt it, for all truth should be accepted.

G. S. BRADLEY,
Evansville Seminary, Wis.

REMARKS ON THE ABOVE.

It is not necessary that we should expend many words in reply to the above. In it the Professor raises an entirely new issue. He affirmed in his original article that there is "no sound without ears." If he had said no sound without mind, we should have set him down as a follower of Berkley, and as—

"When Berkley said, there is no matter,
It was no matter what he said,"

so we should have reasoned of the Professor's assertion. Our own opinion is, that when a tree falls the amount of noise produced is no way dependent upon the ears within hearing distance. To bring the matter to a point. If a cannon were fired upon an open prairie, says the Professor, with no sentient creature within hearing distance, there would be no sound. Now if this is true, it is also true that if a perfectly deaf man stood beside the cannon there would be no sound. But on the Professors new premises, if the deaf man were shot down at the first discharge of the cannon, and it were then fired again, it would then make a noise, because the disembodied spirit would hear it. Now we assert that if the spirit possesses a faculty by which it can hear independent of an ear, there is no reason for doubting that it can exercise that faculty while embodied. If all the Professor meant to say was, living human beings cannot hear without ears, we are heartily with him What he did say was—"No sound without ears!"

As to the rest of the article, our readers are intelligent, and will probably find as much "amusement" in it as the Professor and his friend forced out of our remarks, and we leave it with them. They will perceive that he is not an immaterialist any more. Refined or exceedingly sublimated matter is material still. The substance by which we think may be a thousand times lighter than hydrogen; but it is still substance, matter: and to believe that "matter can think" is materialism, surely.

As to the future world, we are not so much in the dark as the Professor thinks. We are to be material beings—like Christ after his resurrection—and dwell in a material inheritance—the renewed earth. It will be refined, not gross in any respect, but still material.

On the point whether we affirm that spirit or soul is "a necessary part" of the body we refer the reader to Mr. Constable's article on Hades, which we cordially endorse. And whether soul or spirit is "a result of vital action," depends upon what one means by the term. In one of its uses soul is vitality or life itself. But when it means mind it is the "result of vital actions." But in Scripture it is never an intelligent moral entity capable of conscious existence apart from the body.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

The "Evangelical" Adventists will hold a convocation at Pittsfield, N. H., Feb. 7, and onward, and an effort will be made to organize a Conference for New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, their cause probably being too weak to sustain an organization in each State.——Br. Marston's late visit to Elida, Ill. seems to have stirred all that region. Large audiences, and new subscribers to THE TIMES. One "M. E." brother declared he felt to "thank God and take courage"——The interest in Western Iowa with Br. D. S. Clark continues good. It seems he got into a discussion with a friend who left his Bible at home, and brought Josephus to prove the soul immortal! He is now at Dexter.——At Inverhuron and vicinity in Canada, quite a good work was being wrought by THE TIMES and our tracts We were urged to go there, but could not. Br. Newman is now mourning that others have reaped the seed sown. Never mind, brother. The Lord will provide by and by, and you will see his salvation.——In Sr. Rowell's field there is a good interest. At Martin's Ridge a number have risen for prayer, and some converted. The cause is onward.——We hear that Br. W. J Hobbs is beloved in his present field of labor—Springwater, N. Y. There is a fine church and excellent chapel there. We look for good news from that quarter. They have a good healthy opposition.——Br. O. D. Gibson having had some good meetings near Palmer, Ill., was confronted with a challenge for a discussion on the soul and the state of the dead, etc., from a Baptist minister. He concluded it best to accept. It begins to-morrow (Jan. 31).——This note found its way to our table last week: "Having seen a few Advent tracts, and not being permitted to read them, I thought I would send to your office and see if they could be obtained there." We have sent a good supply and expect good results.——Sr. Burr, of Chicago, is in feeble health, and at Dr. Spaulding's in Aurora, in hope of help from his treatment—which we all pray she may receive.——Br. H. Willett sends us a new subscriber, and tells how he happened to find him—by keeping his Advent papers and tracts lying about on his counter in his shop, where customers can see and read them. He advises other brethren in business to try it.——The Indiana Q. M. at Big Indian was excellent. Br. D. Mathewson did most of the preaching. One added to the church. The Conference are quite in earnest about a tent. It will cost about $350. We hope they will have it in the field early.——The people in Almer, Mich., have closed their school house to religious meetings. As a result the Adventists there will try to build a chapel. God "watereth" with persecution to secure an increase.——The evil report concerning Br. Adam Mackie, published in the Detroit Tribune, is a falsehood. The documents will appear in THE TIMES next week.——We judge from his reports in the Crisis that Br. Sheldon is having quite a successful trip South.——Eld. J. Couch has accepted the pastoral care of the church in Chelsea, Mass.——Br. Bowman having left the Methodists of South Carolina, by resignation, is now turned out by vote. They evidently do not love him as once they did.——Ten have been baptized recently at Suncook, N. H., four of them converted from Romanism. Eld. E. Morrill has been laboring there.

The Times.

AT HOME.

" " " Ten Savings and other banks have failed in New York of late.

" " " Congress is at work, i. e., talking. And really some legislation is being forwarded. Provision is made for the next House of Representatives to consist of 283 members. The West gains largely.

" " " The people's leaders at Washington say that we must build a navy. We are as liable to get into a war as other nations, and must get ready in time of peace! That's the road to the temporal millennium. All the world taxing itself to get ready for war.

" " " The Senate of Virginia has refused, by a vote of 8 to 21, to repeal the law punishing petty convicts with the lash. The whipping of women for petty offences is by no means an uncommon thing in Virginia. Every county and city has its post, its thong and whipper.

" " " When the present New York Legislature was elected, the people of that State were quite sure their political millennium was nigh. But since it has got in session that blissful epoch has again been postponed. They have got rid of some evils, to be sure; but then there are so many left!

ABROAD.

" " " There are signs of a breaking up in the ranks of the Republicans in France. The Democracy of Gambetta is too mild to suit the extreme tendencies of the day.

" " " A revolt among the Hookahs of Bombay has been suppressed by killing a hundred of them, and making prisoners of many others.

" " " A Paris paper, the Patrie, in its review of 1871, describes the year which has just elapsed as the gloomiest which any Frenchman living has passed through. During those twelve months of anxiety and humiliation no trace can be found, it maintains, of a single really consoling day. To find an equally mournful period in the history of France, it would be necessary to go back to the darkest times of the fifteenth century. In the opinion of the Patrie, the saddest reflection is that, after losing military superiority, territory, and civic honor, a still more valuable thing has been lost—viz: the opportunity of national regeneration.

---

*Plato's "Phædo," 56;

Communications.

"Consistency, Thou art a Jewel."

If no other reason can be found for calling consistency a jewel, its scarcity in the arguments and theories of men would be sufficient? For a more glaring lack of consistency I would point you to the theories of "modern spiritualists," as they choose to term themselves. We find them denying faith in materialism, and the power of Jesus to resurrect those who believe in him, because they have not facts to base their belief upon. Still they are ready to swear that Spiritualism is true, although they cannot place their finger upon one single isolated fact to demonstrate its truth to the satisfaction of such minds as Tyndall's. Refuse to believe one thing because they claim they have no facts to base their belief upon, and because they are reasonable persons that will not be convinced by anything but stern, stubborn facts; yet put their full belief in another theory that has fewer shadows of facts than the one they refuse to believe in has facts. Truly, consistency is a jewel when we consider such men's opinions, and I would that they might find the jewel and wear it in their theories.

In the Golden Age, Nov. 25, we find W. W. Clayton lauding the Devil's falsehood in the following language:

"Providence has put into our hands in modern Spiritualism a key to unlock many mysteries. It explains miracles. It demonstrates the supernatural. It accounts for visions, prophesies and ecstacies. It solves the problem of Christianity and other religions. It makes immortality certain. It lets us into the secret of that familiar religious experience known to the multitudes as conversion....It's the theory of the Old and New Testaments....Paul taught it."

In another article, issue of Dec. 2, he says—"The supernatural is a reality." As proof of this, he cites he wonders done in the dark by table-tippers and spirit-raisers. He says:

"Of the truth of immortality I need boldly to speak in this connection. It is demonstrated. The chief objection to the doctrine lying in the theory of mind as the production of organization and the difficulty of conceiving it as conscious and active when that organization is dissolved....Of course, the existence of one conscious spirit after death would prove the truth of immortality. But here [referring to the works of the spirit-raisers] are multitudes known and recognized of friends and acquaintances, whose forms were once familiar, who furnish unmistakable proof of their personal identity."

Whether the writer meant to refer to the illustrious spirit of Daniel Webster among the "multitudes"—whose message to earth was a regret that he hadn't lived long enough to revise his dictionary—is not clear. Doubtless he did, as Webster has been brought back to this mundane sphere many times to prove immortality.

The writer goes on to inform his readers that Jesus was not God, but a man approved of God. That "the Holy Spirit was not God, but an exalted spirit. Perhaps it was once in a body here below, once a mortal." Now my idea of the writer must be that he is anything but an "exalted spirit." I am led to think him a fallible man. That Spiritualism is the doctrine of the Old and New Testaments, and the teachings of Paul, I do not think needs any great argument to disprove. An examination of the Scriptures will show that Mr. Clayton erred when he made this statement. His own fellow-believers will not bear him out in this statement. They admit the contrary, as every candid reader must. Then how can Spiritualism have so much to do with the solving of Christianity's problem, when it is no part nor parcel of Christianity? What is Christianity but the teachings of Christ? Did Christ ever teach the fine art of tipping tables, smashing furniture, or talking to thin air?

If Spiritism be such a necessary accompaniment to the unlocking of mysteries, explaining miracles, demonstrating the supernatural, &c., why did Christ leave the delightful art out? Is it not charging him with imperfection in his work for the salvation of men, if we assert that he only proposed to draw the plan and denied them the key to salvation by which they might follow it out?

But I forget. Mr. Clayton's Christ is nothing but a man. Mine is what he purports to be—divine. According to Mr. Clayton's notion Christ wasn't up to the times: he was what would be called an "old fogy," did he live at the present day. If Christ did not teach Spiritism—and no one will slander his spotless character by charging him with that of which Satan is the author—then Spiritism is no part of Christianity, and has nothing to do with solving its problems.

As to Mr. Clayton's proof of the supernatural and of immortality, we must be so exacting as to ask an exhibition of it. Why, says he, don't you read daily of the wonders done in the dark; of the tables tipped, of the spirits raised, etc.? Does not this prove the supernatural, and the natural immortality of mind? Well, we do hear of such things; but before we lend enough evidence to such reports to take any pains to ascertain whether what we hear is true, we must hear of one at least of these mighty demonstrations being made in the light! We are suspicious of darkness. Jesus wrought his miracles in the pure sunlight of heaven. Anything which purports to explain all the wonders and secrets of Christianity, must be willing to step out into the same element.

Besides we often hear of the spirits of illustrious men using rather bad grammar when holding converse with mortals, and of their knowledge in respect to geography and orthography being rather deficient, when they, while upon the earth, were well educated: and we fear your mediums have too excessive control over their unfortunate spirits.

As to his idea about Jesus being only a man, why this is not new; others have said the same thing before. It was the argument of a Unitarian minister to-day in Bible class. Christ was no more of a God than other men. Yet he believed in him, as he was his ideal of a perfect man, spiritually. Here is consistency wanting again. Will a perfect man lie and impose himself as divine upon his followers? That Jesus did represent himself as divine, we take as unquestioned, except it may be by Unitarians. If they think he did not, let them read Mat. 22:41–46; 33:10; 25:31–46. If he did not, why should the high priest charge him with blasphemy? (Mat. 26:63–65.)

But why waste time in attempting to prove that which is self-evident to every person, i. e., that the term "Son of God," which Jesus claims as his title again and again, is a term implying divinity. The soldiers certainly understood it to mean this. (Mat. 28:40–43.) Also the Centurion.

Then if it is admitted that Jesus laid claim to divinity, the argument of those who declare him to have been only a man, yet set up the claim of perfection in his behalf, is shown to be inconsistent. If he was a man, he was an impostor. If an impostor, a liar, and far from our ideal of perfect manhood—although he may tally with the ideal of those who call him man. But, praise God! he was not a man, only, nor an impostor, nor a liar; but just what he laid claim to be—the Son of God, able to save man from the curse of death; to confer upon him the rich boon of immortality, through faith in his words and obedience to his commandments.

As a farther display of the inconsistency of man, let us notice the views of many in regard to the Bible. Never was the poor old Bible "stormed at with shot and shell" as at the present moment. It needs no defenders; it is capable of self-defense. Yet it is a pleasure to every firm believer in it. golden truths to stand [illegible] which has cheered them [illegible] darkness and sorrow, tha[illegible] as p[illegible] cu[illegible] them on to the world [illegible] come, in which all will be peace a[illegible] fullness of joy.

Many of those who pretend to be promulgators of gospel light are taking strangely inconsistent grounds in regard to belief in the Bible.

To-day I heard the Unitarian minister before mentioned say that the apostles all preached and wrote a different doctrine from that which Christ taught. He taught a spiritual coming; they believed in a personal and speedy return of Christ. While he laid the corner-stone of Spiritism, they were materialists, with the exception of John, who was more spiritual in his doctrine. That the books of Matthew, Mark and Luke were written by the direction of Peter and Paul, who believed differently from Christ. He failed to give any better proof of what he held to be Christ's teachings than his own opinion. Yet he pretended to believe the New Testament—such portions as he chose, discarding the rest as unworthy a moment's consideration. How consistent this seems when we consider that Christ was the great teacher. According to this person's views, here are twelve disciples with Christ during his whole ministry on earth, receiving from him daily the instruction he deemed necessary to make them his witnesses before him. Yet his teachings are so ambiguous, couched in such unintelligible terms, that they get just the opposite meaning he intends to convey. Yet Jesus is looked upon as a perfect spiritual teacher by this man. If all is true that he claims, the best we can say for Jesus is that he was a very imperfect teacher, and of his disciples, that they were very poor scholars. Can any one who claims to be guided by reason be so inconsistent as to say that the apostles did not know what Jesus meant; that they were so far from knowing this as to hold a different belief from that which Jesus wanted them to?

But when we complain of such doctrines, we quarrel with the times. The great sifting time has come, when true believers in the Bible are to be separated from partial believers. Immaterialism has to yield the Bible to materialists, and the question is now to be as it should, belief in the Bible and materialism, or in Spiritualism and immaterialism! Shall we stand by God's word, or renounce our belief in it? Shall we serve God or Mammon? Shall we believe God or Satan? For my part I propose to die an "old fogy," believing in the resurrection Christ has promised. J. D. JONES.

Watching and Praying.

Watch and pray, was the emphatic command of Jesus while here with his disciples. The reason assigned was that they did not know the time, and so long as the reason remains, so long will it be necessary for the waiting Bride to heed the admonition. To watch signifies keeping a vigilant lookout, and the necessity of watching always presupposes there are enemies prowling about. Peter describes one who is as fierce as the "roaring lion," and declares that he is "seeking whom he may devour."

Jesus has promised to come to our rescue; but the times and seasons are yet in his Father's hands: we are yet upon the evening's territory and we do not know the time, though warned of our deliverance by the signs of the times. Hence the necessity of watching, lest coming suddenly he find us sleeping in the cradle of carnal security.

The enemy is even now upon our track. Sometimes he frightens us into his lair by his terrible roaring about our being unpopular; so small a minority; weak and singular; making so much ado about trifles. Surely such little sins, such as conforming a little to the world, can do no harm when you get so much from the world by way of gain. And we let loose the reins, and ere we are aware find ourselves drunk with the spirit of the world, just because we did not watch.

Again we are lulled to sleep by his quietness, and anon like the stealthy beast of prey, he leaps upon us, and his deadly fangs are fastened in our flesh, because we had ceased to watch.

Sometimes he will appear as an angel of light. Now every sin, however heinous in the sight of our Father, is coated over: its real wickedness, its deformity, appears to add luster, beauty and worth to its ugliness, till we are drawn fairly into his clutches—only because we failed to watch. How timely the admonition of our Savior—"What I say unto you, I say unto all, WATCH."

Not that we may get rich, or attain to worldly honor, or fame; not that we may appear very pious in the eyes of our neighbors, not to pick flaws and find fault with each other, not that we may tell how such a sister was dressed at church, not simply to hear what the minister may say, and how he said it, nor to see what kind of gestures he made, neither to see whether he talked too low, loud, or long, but to see that our own hearts are pure in the sight of God, that we may keep ourselves, that that wicked one touch us not.

Watch lest we fall into temptation, and while we watch our own hearts and demeanor with vigilance, how necessary that we pray also that we may be filled with that Holy Spirit, without which w[illegible]an be none of his. Pray that we [illegible]ot left to ourselves to fall into temp[illegible] and so be led astray by many dec[illegible]l and hurtful lusts.

Pray that G[illegible]'s Holy Spirit may lead us into all truth, and so we be delivered from the power of the enemy and saved in the day of his coming. Paul says prayer is "letting our requests be made known unto God." We desire to be clean: let us ask God to make us clean by the indwelling of his blessed Spirit; and while we ask God to cleanse us, let us watch to see that our bodies are consecrated to him, fit temples for his Holy Spirit to dwell in. So shall we be saved from sin in this world, and at last find an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom.

MARTHA J. JAMES.

Dr. Cumming's Retrospect in the Light of Prophecy.

A discourse was delivered at the Scottish National Church, Crown-court, Russell street, Covent garden, on Monday night, by Dr. Cumming, entitled "A Retrospect in the light of Prophecy." The Rev. Doctor chose for a text the verses in the 24th Matthew and the 21st Luke, predicting great distress in the land, wars between nations, and signs in the sun, in the moon, and the stars, which were to herald Christ's coming, and quoted from the daily press at great length to prove that these predictions were becoming historical facts. He said he did not believe this world was ever to come to an end. What was meant by the end of the world was the finishing up of the age or the dispensation; the world was to be raised in temperature, augmented in beauty and fertility, and to become the loveliest element in the universe, without precedent, and without parallel in the history of the worlds that God has made, and therefore to suppose that this world was ever to be annihilated was absurd and scientifically impossible. It was not given to us to know the exact day and hour of Christ's coming, but we might judge his proximate nearness or remoteness. Christ laid down a series of significant phenomena which are to precede His coming, some of which indicate the nearness of the day and hour when He will come with power and great glory About twenty years ago he (the doctor) stated that the times mentioned by Daniel, and also in the Apocalypse, so far as he could see the solution of a subject confessedly difficult, would expire in the year 1868, and those who lived to that year would see, perhaps, these phenomena all upon a scale and with a splendor, a majesty, and a sublimity unprecedented. Some of his hearers said he was rash, whilst others whom he had conversed with since had admitted that he was right. He had predicted that by 1868 the Papal apostacy should be broken; that the kings of Europe, who for a thousand years had supported the Pope, and been his champions and apologists, instead of assisting, defending and encouraging him, would, in the language of the Apocalypse, eat and drink as with fire, and the whole states of the kings of Europe would be revolutionized. In 1868—the very year—the Pope summoned an Œcumencial Council, and the question was put to him why he had not included in the invitation to the council the crowned heads of Europe, as they were always at previous councils. The answer of the Pope was, that the middle age of Europe had gone, and he had not a single crowned head who was then his friend whom he dare invite to be present at the Œcumencial Council. It was decided at that Council that the Pope was infallible, a thing never before impersonated in a single individual, and in the words of Archbishop Manning, "What the Pope speaks upon dogmas, politics, ethics, morals, upon doctrines, he is as true as God Almighty could claim to be," and hence the Tablet had the following words:—"The Church that dares to assert that the Pontiff is infallible is either speaking by the inspiration of the Devil, or it is the very mouthpiece of the Holy Ghost;" in other words we must either accept that Church as the inspiration of the Devil, or the mouthpiece of the Holy Ghost. What next took place? It was strange but nevertheless true, that if the Pope blessed anybody, such a person was sure to come to grief, whereas if he cursed anybody, he was sure to prosper. The Emperor of Austria, for instance, warred against Prussia, and before he set out he and his army were especially blessed by the Pope; The blessing resulted in Sadowa! The Queen of Spain received the golden rose, and the Pope's special blessing; but scarcely had the blessing settled upon her head than she was a fugitive from her country. Maximilian received the blessing of the Pope and was murdered. The Pope cursed Victor Emmanuel in the most terrific terms—in terms which even uneducated people would stigmatize as coarse invective. What followed the curse? Victor Emmanuel is now king of Italy! His son is king of Spain, and his daughter is queen of Portugal. All three were cursed by the Pope, and all three are among the most enviable sovereigns of Europe. Wherever the Pope's blessing fell, there thorns and briars seemed to spring up. Had any of the predictions recorded received that fulfilment which would justify them in believing that that prophecy was ceasing to be prediction, and was being translated into living and actual history? He maintained they had. Take, for instance, another one in the 24th Matthew—"The gospel shall be preached in all the world for a witness, and then shall the end of the age be." Had the Gospel been preached? The Bible had been translated into every tongue; missionaries had preached it in the Arctic seas; in fact, from the pine forests of the north to the palm groves of the east the glorious Gospel in the tongue of every people had been proclaimed.

It was not to convert every nation, but but to be preached to every nation "for a witness."

Then we find that there were to be astronomical changes. The distress of nations, the seas and the waves roaring, earthquakes in divers places, pestilences, and plagues, and famines, and they had only to read the English and foreign newspapers to find how these predictions are being fulfilled—in the famine of Persia, the floods of Shanghae, the fire at Chicago, etc. Nations were to rise against nations, and there were to be wars and rumors of wars, and he need not say that in 1871 the most terrible war had been waged that had been waged, perhaps, for two hundred years. They had had the Crimean war, the Indian war, the Italian war, the Prussian and Austrian war, and the cinders of the last war had only begun to cool when the emperor Napoleon embarked in the terrible war he he had alluded to; and now we saw every nation arming to the teeth, and if that did not look like war nothing did. Look east, look west, it was rumors of war, nations rising up against nations, and the competitorship of capitalists and kings was who should forge the largest guns, who should cast the heaviest bolts, and who should be most prepared for war. Then there had also been earthquakes in Thibet, in China, in Mexico, in Japan, Greece, in Italy, in South America, and according to one writer there had been twenty-five earthquakes in the year 1870. The word "earthquake" meant moral revolution, as well as the motion of the earth, and Dean Alford said, whilst we accept it (in the chapter he had read,) in its literal and material sense, we must interpret it as having a moral, social and political meaning; and, taking it in its secondary and last sense, Europe had been full of tremendous changes and revolutions. The Rev. gentleman having quoted American papers as to meteorological and astronomical changes and pheuomena, concluded by inviting all present to prepare to meet their God.—South London Chronicle, Jan. 6.

Prophecy In Its Bearing On the Present Crisis.

The last four chapters of the Apocalypse clearly belong to the future; and as we have, from the first, limited our observations to the present, it may be supposed that we have no pupose leading us to the consideration of their meaning. It seems to us probable, that before another quarter of a century has elapsed, the first notes of that glorious song may be heard, "Let us be glad and rejoice; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his bride hath made herself ready." But on this point we have nothing but hopes and surmises to offer; and with them we shall not trouble our readers.

With respect to chs. 17 and 18, however, the case is different. They concern both past time and present. They show us "Babylon the Great" in all her glory : and they show us also her downfall. These are things with which we have to do—things which we have witnessed, and are now witnessing—and we must not pass them over without notice.

These two chapters are substantially one; they have but one subject, and form one consecutive history. And they are introduced, in the apostle's prophetical view, exactly as they should be, exactly as we have seen, and do now see them actually occurring.

The central figure, the main subject of the picture, is a harlot or apostate church. In the prophecies of the Old Testament this figure or symbol occurs again and again. A woman, of extraordinary splendor and power is placed before the apostle, and she rides upon, or governs and directs, a beast with ten horns, which is clearly identical with Daniel's Fourth Empire in its divided state; "a fourth beast, strong and terrible," and "it had ten horns" (Dan. 7.)

We have, then, here a dominant church, a corrupt or harlot church, riding upon, ruling, and guiding an empire, "Christendom," divided into ten sovereignties. This great fact has been seen in Europe, in Roman Christendom, for a thousand years. France, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Austria, Bavaria, Sardinia, Tuscany, Naples, Venice, these (varying a little from time to time) have submitted to the government and commands of a prelate, seated at Rome. The fact has exactly answered to the prediction, and there is no other or different interpretation to be found. The revelation made to St. John meant this, or it meant nothing. "The woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth." Rome and its Pope, issuing her commands to every sovereign in Roman Christendom, are here described, and described too, in a document bearing date in or about the year A. D. 96, and no other meaning or interpretation has been or can be pointed out.

Are there any other points of coincidence and confirmation? Assuredly there are, and here is one of the greatest strength or value:

"I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus" (ch. 17: 6). "And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth" (ch. 18: 24.)

Of whom during the 1260 years of the ten horns, could this be said but of the church of Rome? Who,—what power was it, which through a long series of years, thirsted for "the blood of the martyrs of Jesus?" No other answer but one can be given.

In the persecution of the Paulikians, a thousand years ago, more than 100,000 are stated to have been slain. The Albigenses were destroyed by a crusade, or "holy war," in which cities were destroyed, a whole country ravaged, and a large population massacred, or led captive. In one of these massacres 15,000 people perished. Then came a century later, the wars against the Waldenses, in which many thousands were slain. After the lapse of a century or two, the Reformation occurred, and now Rome slew in Spain her tens of thousands; in the Low Countries, 50,000 or 60,000, and in France, in various massacres, about 200,000. How truly was the woman described, as "drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus!"

But, "shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily" (Lk. 18: 7). Was not the French Revolution a judgment from God for the massacres of St. Bartholomew, and of the days of Louis XIV? Was not the devastation of Spain, by the French invaders, from 1809 to 1814, a judgment avenging the cruelties of the inquisition? But there is more yet to come.

"The ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire" (ch. 17: 16).

This sort of warfare and devastation has been going on for many years past. It began with the French revolution. The Romish church in that kingdom was plundered of all its possessions, and its clergy in thousands, slain or banished. Soon after an army was sent into Italy, "to make the church desolate and naked, and to eat her flesh." The invasion of Spain followed a few years later. The fall of Napoleon gave a short respite; but the "stripping the harlot church and making her desolate and naked," soon began again, and is now going on with increasing vehemence.

In Spain, such was the wealth of the church, that as lately as in 1847, a minister speaking in the Cortes, described it as still amounting to £16,000,000, per annum, though much had been already confiscated. In 1836 a decree was passed for the suppression of the convents, and in the following twenty years, up to 1856, as large a sum as £19,706,000, had been realised by the sale of the conventual estates. In 1768 the regular and secular clergy of Spain were stated to be 209,988. In 1857 they were only 43,661. Thus is the process of stripping and making bare going on in the most thoroughly Catholic country in Europe.

"The ten horns" were "to agree and to give their kingdom to the beast, until the words of God should be fulfilled." "And the woman" "is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth."

"To agree and to give their kingdom unto the beast," was, in effect, to give their kingdom unto the woman; for "the woman sat upon the beast," and the beast submissively "carried her." But this agreement and submission was only to last "until the words of God shall be fulfilled." This is clearly synonymous with the like expression, "The mystery of God shall be finished," which occurs in ch. 10. This finishing of the mystery of God was to take place at the sounding of the trumpet of the seventh angel; and that sounding has unquestionably been heard in the French Revolution, and the events which have followed it.

Are the ten horns, or kingdoms, now and for some time past, withdrawing their support from the beast the harlot rides? Let us consider, for a few moments, what have been the changes and movements of the last twenty or thirty years.

As recently as 1840 or 1850, a man could not read the Bible to two or three neighbors in Spain without being cast into prison. The same power part the woman, was seen in Tuscany, Naples, Lombardy, and all other parts of Italy. The persecutions of Madai, of Matamoras, and others are upon record. Under the Austrian government—generally a mild one—a village expressed its wish to become Protestant. The government replied that, in that case, they must go out of the Austrian dominions; for that such a change was not allowable. A few years after this, a Concordat was agreed upon between the Court at Vienna and the Court at Rome, in which the whole education of the young in the Austrian dominions was, absolutely and without reserve, put into the hands of the Romish Bishops.

Such was the State of Europe—of Roman Catholic Europe—only five and twenty years ago, when the present Pope began to occupy "the chair of St. Peter." What is it now?

On becoming Pope, poor "Pio Nono" thought foolishly, that by indulging the Italians in their desire for liberty and a constitutional government, he might place himself at the head of the whole Italian nation, and become virtually, the autocrat of Italy. Never did a man more fatally deceive himself. In less than three years the people of Italy had declared Rome a Republic, and the disappointed Pope disguised himself in the livery of a lackey, and escaped into the adjoining kingdom.

Napoleon of France then came to his aid, and replaced him in the palace of the Lateran. But after a while this great protector of the Papacy committed a blunder, as fatal as that of Pius himself. He resolved to free Italy from the oppression of Austria. He sent an army into Lombardy and defeated the Austrian forces. Austria surrendered Lombardy, and a few years after, Venice also.

But Napoleon, like Pio Nono, soon discovered that the ball once put in motion, would not stop when he bade it. The fancy of "an united Italy" took possession of the popular mind. Tuscany, Modena, and soon after, Naples and the Papal provinces, all threw off the yoke and the king of Sardinia and Piedmont became king of all Italy. The Pope lost in the king of Naples and the Duke of Tuscany, two servile adherents; while the court of Turin and the new king, Victor Emmanuel, were distant and jealous, if not entirely hostile. His own possessions, the territories of the church, too, had gone with Tuscany and Naples, and now for the first time for a thousand years, the Pope of Rome was almost "a landless laird."

The chief support of the Papacy had been for many centuries, the Austrian empire. In 1850 that power met France in the battle-field and was worsted. In 1866, she encountered the chief Protestant power in continental Europe—Prussia—and was again worsted. The effect of these two defeats has been to crush Austria and make her helpless and quiet. When the Papal court appeals to her for help, she replies, "I am very sorry to say that I can give you none."

Still France and the French Empire remained; and Napoleon was pledged to maintain the Pope in his seat. Another delusion, fatal, like the former, to the Pope was seen; and Napoleon rushed into war with Prussia. He, too, was at once hurled to the ground, and made a prisoner; and thus Rome's last support was struck from under her. Forthwith the troops of the king of Italy marched into "the Eternal City," and the Pope became unresistingly, a dethroned potentate.

Lastly, Spain also—up to 1868 a devoted servant of the Papal See—revolted. Isabella, ruled wholly by her confessor, escaped into France; and Spain like Italy became free, both politically and ecclesiastically.

A period of less than twenty years has sufficed to change entirely, the position of the papacy, and to take from it all its sway over the courts and cabinets of Europe. Even as recently as in the year 1858, Austria, Tuscany, Naples, Tuscany and Spain, were the devoted servants of the Pope, while France was the protector of Pio Nono, and stood pledged to maintain his power. All this is now reversed. If the poor dethroned Pope writes to Vienna, the answer he receives is, "Very sorry, but we cannot do anything." If he sends to Paris, the reply is just the same. Italy is ruled over by Victor Emmanuel, whom the Pope describes as his enemy, and Spain has for its king, Victor Emmanuel's son.

Nor is this all; it is but "the beginning of sorrows." Both Italy and Spain, hitherto the most priest-ridden of all lands, are in financial difficulties, and both avow, without any reserve, that they look to the possessions of the church as affording them the easiest means of extrication. In both of these kingdoms, they are about to make the Papal church "naked and desolate, and to eat her flesh." (v. 16)

One more instance of fulfillment is too striking to be passed over. The voice from heaven said, "She saith in her heart, I sit as a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow" (Rev. 18: 7).

These two chapters are full of the one subject—the calamities and the downfall of the Papacy. Yet, in the midst of all, we hear a voice, issuing from the Lateran itself. It says, "I sit as a queen; I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." All things external tell of calamity, of ruin, of absolute destruction. Yet the woman, the church herself, cannot see this; she still cries, with unutterable arrogance and pride, "I sit as a queen; I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

How wonderful an instance of infatuation! Can it be realized in actual history? Strange to say it is now exactly fulfilling before our eyes.

Just as Rome has declined, has crumbled away, and been left naked and bare, exactly in the same proportion has her pride increased and become intolerable. Three or four years ago, her crowned adherents had so fallen away, or perished, that a Papal journalist avowed that there were now "no Catholic sovereigns left in Europe." And this was the reason given why the Pope, in calling together a General Council, omitted, for the first time, to send any invitations to the princes of Christendom. This great public act, or omission of an act, declared to the whole world, without reserve, that "the Beast" no longer obeyed the orders or guidance of "the Woman."

The natural result of this desertion of "the ten horns" would have been, most men would have supposed, the moderation of the tone of the "Woman" who no longer rode upon "the ten-horned beast." But no, the prophecy had described her as exhibiting only an increase of arrogance and pretension, "I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

The Pope called his council, gathered it together, and presided over it, leaving all the Sovereigns of Roman Christendom wholly out of view. But was the tone and policy of that council one of toleration, of serious thought on the state of the church, and of a desire to review the past, and and to amend its faults? Not in the least. The main business of the council was to take still loftier ground, to declare that faults serious there were none, and could be none; for that all Popes were, and ever must be infallible, and divinely preserved from error. This was deliberately voted. It was voted that the Pope who dug up his predecessor, anathematized him, and threw his body into the Tiber, was infallible and incapable of error; that the Pope who tried to poison some of his Cardinals, and was poisoned himself by mistake, was infallible; that the Pope who excommunicated Queen Elizabeth, and blessed the Spanish Armada, was infallible! All the sins of hundreds of wicked Popes during fifteen hundred years were declared to be virtues. All Popes were divinely protected against the possibility of error. "I sit as a queen; I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

Such was the wondrous result of the last Ecumenical Council. It was assembled by a Pope who had seen his power and his adherents dwindle away for twenty years, and it answered his call by raising him to a higher pitch of pretension and moral power than any former Pope who had ever lived. And such is still the arrogance of the declining Papacy. Since that council was held, Pio Nono has seen his temporal power abolished. His territories are now entirely taken from him; even his city is occupied by Italian troops, and declared to be the metropolis of Victor Emmanuel's kingdom. But is there any sign of humiliation or even of doubt? Not the least. Every word, every act, that proceeds from the Pope or his secretaries, declares again and again his eternal supremacy, decreed by God; the impossibility of his falling into error, and the certainty of the approaching ruin of all his "persecutors." Precisely as the angel described it to John, is the voice of the harlot church even in her dying agonies: "I sit as a queen; I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

These two chapters evidently describe things which are now passing before our eyes. The nineteenth and the twentieth tell us of the marriage supper of the Lamb; and of the casting both the beast and the false prophet into the lake of fire. These events are at hand, but we lay no claim to the gift of prophecy, and shall not therefore, venture to utter the slightest surmise, whether they will occur in the times of the present, or the next generation. The eyes of most serious and sober students of prophecy are fixed we believe, at the present moment on the last five verses of chapter 16. We concur with them in the belief that "the tripartition of the great city" is to be expected before long. Meanwhile our Lord's own words ought to be ever on our minds—

"What I say unto you, I say unto all: Watch" (Mk. 13: 37.)—Rock.

It was not to convert every nation, but but to be preached to every nation "for a witness."

Then we find that there were to be astronomical changes. The distress of nations, the seas and the waves roaring, earthquakes in divers places, pestilences, and plagues, and famines, and they had only to read the English and foreign newspapers to find how these predictions are being fulfilled—in the famine of Persia, the floods of Shanghae, the fire at Chicago, etc. Nations were to rise against nations, and there were to be wars and rumors of wars, and he need not say that in 1871 the most terrible war had been waged that had been waged, perhaps, for two hundred years. They had had the Crimean war, the Indian war, the Italian war, the Prussian and Austrian war, and the cinders of the last war had only begun to cool when the emperor Napoleon embarked in the terrible war he he had alluded to; and now we saw every nation arming to the teeth, and if that did not look like war nothing did. Look east, look west, it was rumors of war, nations rising up against nations, and the competitorship of capitalists and kings was who should forge the largest guns, who should cast the heaviest bolts, and who should be most prepared for war. Then there had also been earthquakes in Thibet, in China, in Mexico, in Japan, Greece, in Italy, in South America, and according to one writer there had been twenty-five earthquakes in the year 1870. The word "earthquake" meant moral revolution, as well as ahe motion of the earth, and Dean Alford said, whilst we accept it (in the chapter he had read,) in its literal and material sense, we must interpret it as having a moral, social and political meaning; and, taking it in its secondary and last sense, Europe had been full of tremendous changes and revolutions. The Rev. gentleman having quoted American papers as to meteorological and astronomical changes and pheuomena, concluded by inviting all present to prepare to meet their God.—South London Chronicle, Jan. 6.

Prophecy In Its Bearing On the Present Crisis.

The last four chapters of the Apocalypse clearly belong to the future; and as we have, from the first, limited our observations to the present, it may be supposed that we have no pupose leading us to the consideration of their meaning. It seems to us probable, that before another quarter of a century has elapsed, the first notes of that glorious song may be heard, "Let us be glad and rejoice; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his bride hath made herself ready." But on this point we have nothing but hopes and surmises to offer; and with them we shall not trouble our readers.

With respect to chs. 17 and 18, however, the case is different. They concern both past time and present. They show us "Babylon the Great" in all her glory: and they show us also her downfall. These are things with which we have to do—things which we have witnessed, and are now witnessing—and we must not pass them over without notice.

These two chapters are substantially one; they have but one subject, and form one consecutive history. And they are introduced, in the apostle's prophetical view, exactly as they should be, exactly as we have seen, and do now see them actually occurring.

The central figure, the main subject of the picture, is a harlot or apostate church. In the prophecies of the Old Testament this figure or symbol occurs again and again. A woman, of extraordinary splendor and power is placed before the apostle, and she rides upon, or governs and directs, a beast with ten horns, which is clearly identical with Daniel's Fourth Empire in its divided state; "a fourth beast, strong and terrible," and "it had ten horns" (Dan. 7.)

We have, then, here a dominant church, a corrupt or harlot church, riding upon, ruling, and guiding an empire, "Christendom," divided into ten sovereignties. This great fact has been seen in Europe, in Roman Christendom, for a thousand years. France, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Austria, Bavaria, Sardinia, Tuscany, Naples, Venice, these (varying a little from time to time) have submitted to the government and commands of a prelate, seated at Rome. The fact has exactly answered to the prediction, and there is no other or different interpretation to be found. The revelation made to St. John meant this, or it meant nothing. "The woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth." Rome and its Pope, issuing her commands to every sovereign in Roman Christendom, are here described, and described too, in a document bearing date in or about the year A. D. 96, and no other meaning or interpretation has been or can be pointed out.

Are there any other points of coincidence and confirmation? Assuredly there are, and here is one of the greatest strength or value:

"I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus" (ch. 17: 6). "And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth" (ch. 18: 24.)

Of whom during the 1260 years of the ten horns, could this be said but of the church of Rome? Who,—what power was it, which through a long series of years, thirsted for "the blood of the martyrs of Jesus?" No other answer but one can be given.

In the persecution of the Paulikians, a thousand years ago, more than 100,000 are stated to have been slain. The Albigenses were destroyed by a crusade, or "holy war," in which cities were destroyed, a whole country ravaged, and a large population massacred, or led captive. In one of these massacres 15,000 people perished. Then came a century later, the wars against the Waldenses, in which many thousands were slain. After the lapse of a century or two, the Reformation occurred, and now Rome slew in Spain her tens of thousands; in the Low Countries, 50,000 or 60,000, and in France, in various massacres, about 200,000. How truly was the woman described, as "drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus!"

But, "shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily" (Lk. 18: 7). Was not the French Revolution a judgment from God for the massacres of St. Bartholomew, and of the days of Louis XIV? Was not the devastation of Spain, by the French invaders, from 1809 to 1814, a judgment avenging the cruelties of the inquisition? But there is more yet to come.

"The ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire" (ch. 17: 16).

This sort of warfare and devastation has been going on for many years past. It began with the French revolution. The Romish church in that kingdom was plundered of all its possessions, and its clergy in thousands, slain or banished. Soon after an army was sent into Italy, "to make the church desolate and naked, and to eat her flesh." The invasion of Spain followed a few years later. The fall of Napoleon gave a short respite; but the "stripping the harlot church and making her desolate and naked," soon began again, and is now going on with increasing vehemence.

In Spain, such was the wealth of the church, that as lately as in 1847, a minister speaking in the Cortes, described it as still amounting to £16,000,000, per annum, though much had been already confiscated. In 1836 a decree was passed for the suppression of the convents, and in the following twenty years, up to 1856, as large a sum as £19,700,000, had been realized by the sale of the conventual estates. In 1768 the regular and secular clergy of Spain were stated to be 209,988. In 1857 they were only 43,661. Thus is the process of stripping and making bare going on in the most thoroughly Catholic country in Europe.

"The ten horns" were "to agree and to give their kingdom to the beast, until the words of God should be fulfilled." "And the woman" "is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth."

"To agree and to give their kingdom unto the beast," was, in effect, to give their kingdom unto the woman; for "the woman sat upon the beast," and the beast submissively "carried her." But this agreement and submission was only to last "until the words of God shall be fulfilled." This is clearly synonymous with the like expression, "The mystery of God shall be finished," which occurs in ch. 10. This finishing of the mystery of God was to take place at the sounding of the trumpet of the seventh angel; and that sounding has unquestionably been heard in the French Revolution, and the events which have followed it.

Are the ten horns, or kingdoms, now and for some time past, withdrawing their support from the beast the harlot rides? Let us consider, for a few moments, what have been the changes and movements of the last twenty or thirty years.

As recently as 1840 or 1850, a man could not read the Bible to two or three neighbors in Spain without being cast into prison. The same power part the woman, was seen in Tuscany, Naples, Lombardy, and all other parts of Italy. The persecutions of Madai, of Matamoras, and others are upon record. Under the Austrian government—generally a mild one—a village expressed its wish to become Protestant. The government replied that, in that case, they must go out of the Austrian dominions; for that such a change was not allowable. A few years after this, a Concordat was agreed upon between the Court at Vienna and the Court at Rome, in which the whole education of the young in the Austrian dominions was, absolutely and without reserve, put into the hands of the Romish Bishops.

Such was the State of Europe—of Roman Catholic Europe—only five and twenty years ago, when the present Pope began to occupy "the chair of St. Peter." What is it now?

On becoming Pope, poor "Pio Nono" thought foolishly, that by indulging the Italians in their desire for liberty and a constitutional government, he might place himself at the head of the whole Italian nation, and become virtually, the autocrat of Italy. Never did a man more fatally deceive himself. In less than three years the people of Italy had declared Rome a Republic, and the disappointed Pope disguised himself in the livery of a lackey, and escaped into the adjoining kingdom.

Napoleon of France then came to his aid, and replaced him in the palace of the Lateran. But after a while this great protector of the Papacy committed a blunder, as fatal as that of Pius himself. He resolved to free Italy from the oppression of Austria. He sent an army into Lombardy and defeated the Austrian forces. Austria surrendered Lombardy, and a few years after, Venice also.

But Napoleon, like Pio Nono, soon discovered that the ball once put in motion, would not stop when he bade it. The fancy of "an united Italy" took possession of the popular mind. Tuscany, Modena, and soon after, Naples and the Papal provinces, all threw off the yoke and the king of Sardinia and Piedmont became king of all Italy. The Pope lost in the king of Naples and the Duke of Tuscany, two servile adherents; while the court of Turin and the new king, Victor Emmanuel, were distant and jealous, if not entirely hostile. His own possessions, the territories of the church, too, had gone with Tuscany and Naples, and now for the first time for a thousand years, the Pope of Rome was almost "a landless laird."

The chief support of the Papacy had been for many centuries, the Austrian empire. In 1850 that power met France in the battle-field and was worsted. In 1866, she encountered the chief Protestant power in continental Europe—Prussia—and was again worsted. The effect of these two defeats has been to crush Austria and make her helpless and quiet. When the Papal court appeals to her for help, she replies, "I am very sorry to say that I can give you none."

Still France and the French Empire remained; and Napoleon was pledged to maintain the Pope in his seat. Another delusion, fatal, like the former, to the Pope was seen; and Napoleon rushed into war with Prussia. He, too, was at once hurled to the ground, and made a prisoner; and thus Rome's last support was struck from under her. Forthwith the troops of the king of Italy marched into "the Eternal City," and the Pope became unresistingly, a dethroned potentate.

Lastly, Spain also—up to 1868 a devoted servant of the Papal See—revolted. Isabella, ruled wholly by her confessor, escaped into France; and Spain like Italy became free, both politically and ecclesiastically.

A period of less than twenty years has sufficed to change entirely, the position of the papacy, and to take from it all its sway over the courts and cabinets of Europe. Even as recently as in the year 1858, Austria, Tuscany, Naples, Tuscany and Spain, were the devoted servants of the Pope, while France was the protector of Pio Nono, and stood pledged to maintain his power. All this is now reversed. If the poor dethroned Pope writes to Vienna, the answer he receives is, "Very sorry, but we cannot do anything." If he sends to Paris, the reply is just the same. Italy is ruled over by Victor Emmanuel, whom the Pope describes as his enemy, and Spain has for its king, Victor Emmanuel's son.

Nor is this all; it is but "the beginning of sorrows." Both Italy and Spain, hitherto the most priest-ridden of all lands, are in financial difficulties, and both avow, without any reserve, that they look to the possessions of the church as affording them the easiest means of extrication. In both of these kingdoms, they are about to make the Papal church "naked and desolate, and to eat her flesh." (v. 16)

One more instance of fulfillment is too striking to be passed over. The voice from heaven said, "She saith in her heart, I sit as a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow" (Rev. 18: 7).

These two chapters are full of the one subject—the calamities and the downfall of the Papacy. Yet, in the midst of all, we hear a voice, issuing from the Lateran itself. It says, "I sit as a queen; I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." All things external tell of calamity, of ruin, of absolute destruction. Yet the woman, the church herself, cannot see this; she still cries, with unutterable arrogance and pride, "I sit as a queen; I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

How wonderful an instance of infatuation! Can it be realized in actual history? Strange to say it is now exactly fulfilling before our eyes.

Just as Rome has declined, has crumbled away, and been left naked and bare, exactly in the same proportion has her pride increased and become intolerable. Three or four years ago, her crowned adherents had so fallen away, or perished, that a Papal journalist avowed that there were now "no Catholic sovereigns left in Europe." And this was the reason given why the Pope, in calling together a General Council, omitted, for the first time, to send any invitations to the princes of Christendom. This great public act, or omission of an act, declared to the whole world, without reserve, that "the Beast" no longer obeyed the orders or guidance of "the Woman."

The natural result of this desertion of "the ten horns" would have been, most men would have supposed, the moderation of the tone of the "Woman" who no longer rode upon "the ten-horned beast." But no, the prophecy had described her as exhibiting only an increase of arrogance and pretension, "I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

The Pope called his council, gathered it together, and presided over it, leaving all the Sovereigns of Roman Christendom wholly out of view. But was the tone and policy of that council one of toleration, of serious thought on the state of the church, and of a desire to review the past, and and to amend its faults? Not in the least. The main business of the council was to take still loftier ground, to declare that faults serious there were none, and could be none; for that all Popes were, and ever must be infallible, and divinely preserved from error. This was deliberately voted. It was voted that the Pope who dug up his predecessor, anathematized him, and threw his body into the Tiber, was infallible and incapable of error; that the Pope who tried to poison some of his Cardinals, and was poisoned himself by mistake, was infallible; that the Pope who excommunicated Queen Elizabeth, and blessed the Spanish Armada, was infallible! All the sins of hundreds of wicked Popes during fifteen hundred years were declared to be virtues. All Popes were divinely protected against the possibility of error. "I sit as a queen; I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

Such was the wondrous result of the last Ecumenical Council. It was assembled by a Pope who had seen his power and his adherents dwindle away for twenty years, and it answered his call by raising him to a higher pitch of pretension and moral power than any former Pope who had ever lived. And such is still the arrogance of the declining Papacy. Since that council was held, Pio Nono has seen his temporal power abolished. His territories are now entirely taken from him; even his city is occupied by Italian troops, and declared to be the metropolis of Victor Emmanuel's kingdom. But is there any sign of humiliation or even of doubt? Not the least. Every word, every act, that proceeds from the Pope or his secretaries, declares again and again his eternal supremacy, decreed by God; the impossibility of his falling into error, and the certainty of the approaching ruin of all his "persecutors." Precisely as the angel described it to John, is the voice of the harlot church even in her dying agonies: "I sit as a queen; I am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

These two chapters evidently describe things which are now passing before our eyes. The nineteenth and the twentieth tell us of the marriage supper of the Lamb; and of the casting both the beast and the false prophet into the lake of fire. These events are at hand, but we lay no claim to the gift of prophecy, and shall not therefore, venture to utter the slightest surmise, whether they will occur in the times of the present, or the next generation. The eyes of most serious and sober students of prophecy are fixed we believe, at the present moment on the last five verses of chapter 16. We concur with them in the belief that "the tripartition of the great city" is to be expected before long. Meanwhile our Lord's own words ought to be ever on our minds—

"What I say unto you, I say unto all: Watch" (Mk. 13: 37.)—Rock.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Jan. 30, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead, their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
L. P. FOX, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.
A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.
N. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS, } Editorial Com.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, Business Agent,
To whom all communications should be addressed

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

That Reaper.

☞Will not the ministry call the attention of farmers to the fine chance we offer them to obtain a good Reaper at a low price? Help us sell this machine, and you will help the cause in so doing.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 60c. in paper.

Wanted.

We will be obliged to any one who will give us the following P. O. Addresses.

W. R. Howe, Kansas.

Field's Discussion.

For some time this desirable work has been out of print. The main topic is the Intermediate State, or Condition of the Dead. When a new edition was announced, some of the Doctor's old Disciple friends announced that they would buy and circulate it as soon as ready, because they thought it would help their side—that Mr Connolly had the best of the argument. We shall soon know whether they really so felt, or were indulging mere bragadocio. The book has not yet made any converts to immaterialism that we have heard of; but we have learned of its bringing not a few to adopt the Bible theory.

The book has heretofore been sold at one dollar. The present edition is in paper covers (pp 218), and will be sent post-paid for 50c. We hope for liberal orders.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawver, M. B. Geer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Hink, I. C. Wellcome, J. F. Huber, Grand St. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. E. Brown, M F Wistrom, R. W. Wilson, R. M. Lampard, M. E. Derham, Lapeer Church.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand-raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $120. See advertisement.

To Correspondents.

A. B. STILSON. What is your P. O. address?.... H. SMITH. We are out of back numbers, but will send you the whole of the discussion soon....F. S. MORGAN. Will give next week....L. M. STODDARD. App't came to late....T. NEWMAN. Your best plan will be to come to our State Camp Meeting in June, if possible....S. E. MABEY. We are out of Harps, but have some on the road. Will send when they come.

Communications.

W N Pile
N Field
F S Morgan
J D Jones
D Coggswell
Mary.

C C Marston
M Beck
W. C. Hicks
J. W. Taylor
F Reynolds,

P W Hough
A Armour
C C Marston
C S. Branch
G Churchill

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged			$403.99
Ottawa	$ .50	J Boyd	$3.00
J E Derham	$ .50	M Gurnsey	$1.00
W Buchanan	$ .75

Pledges.

L Bacon	pd $ 1 00	J Luthrell	pd $ 2 00
M Allen	pd $ 1 00	A S Butters	pd $ 1 00
J Bellows	pd $ 1.00	R M Rowell	pd $ 2 00
E Parker	pd $ 1.00	E J Child	pd $ 1 00
H H Hurlburt	pd $ 1.00	O Sibley	pd $10 00
J E Derham	pd $ 1.00	G W Crosby	pd $10.00

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, JAN. 20.

☞All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

E Bacon
W P Shockey
J H Whitmore
A Trowbridge
P M Grinnell
G W Crosbey
A Sawyers
N Macom
P A Green,

C C Marston (3)
D Mathewson
S G Raymond
S W Owen
M E Dereham
M J Mullet
H Willet
E C Andrus
J Mitchell

T Vandervoort
D D Chaffee
G J Clifford
C Fox
J D Johnson
A W Sibley
R H Gresham
P Lamphere
E J Childs

M Beck
S E Mabey
L C Collins
P Poulke
J H Whitmore
W E Brown
S A King
C Philmett
F A Smith
A D Hearn
C E Jupp
P Beck
S C Smith
E A Rich
M Gurnsey
S Cain
G Harvey
S E Mabey
C Schoonover
P A Green
A Pettingill
R L Scott
J Lowrie
R F Amsden
C C Marston
H Randall
B Allbee
R M Rowell
T Newman
A S Butters
J Luthrell
J P Dean
N C Miller
P De Grice
J Hays

S E Pearl
J J Goldsmith
G W Hurd
H H Hurlburt
R M Rowell
A Jackson
E Chase
G W Biggs
A O Sutton
O W T
A W Tucker
W W Wright
A Hall
I Dammann
A M Bidwell
S T Miller
N C Miller
M Fairfield
C M Richmond
W Morphey
S A Price
W Buchanan
J Wilder
S Chase
C F Horne
M Allen
C L Jones
I Gregg
D Carlyle
S T Crawford
P Nohe
W Baird
L C Collins
J Bellows

E A Clapp
J S Lawver
A J Williamson
C Boyd
E B Durand
O D Benton
J H Whitmore
A A Phelps
J T Carpenter
J Gleeson
M P Hathaway
C Fox
D D Hunter
G Tilley
G Reddell
L Bacon
W C Cole
"Ottawa"
E B Scott
W J Williams
T W Raymond
J M Byler
W Brookins
W E Brown
D W Wright
W Young
A Travis
M Allen
J E Wright
H A Plank
W H Jarvis
T W Raymond
C Sibley
J M Dalton

Books and Tracts by Mail.

S B White
J Vandervoort
J Boyd
C L Jones
E B Scott
H A King
G A Streeter
S P Crawford
J Bower
E Chapman
N McLeod
H Pyppell
C C Marston

L N Snell
D M Schenck
B J Goodwin
N J Nade
D C Day
R Bartenshaw
E Lewis
G Robertson
J M Grace
R L Scott
T W Raymond
H A Plank
S Weese

W H Hocking
I E Miller (2)
M Morphey
E A Marsh
W C Call
H H Hurlburt
D I Clark (3)
H M Wheeler (3)
M Allen
J Gregg
W Anderson
J Weaver

Obituary.

HIMES: In Winona, Minn. Jan. 17, 1872, Edwin Thompson, seventh son of Joshua V. and Mary T. Himes, aged 30 years and 6 months.

Edwin was born in Boston, Mass. July 17, 1841. Memory recalls many incidents of his childhood and youth over which his family and more intimate friends love to linger, but which must be suppressed here, though they might interest most of our readers. Still the fact that he was a public man, and though young had already made his mark in the Advent cause, so that, as one correspondent remarks, his "death will be a shock to every Adventist in the land," demands something more than an ordinary "obituary" notice of his death.

Edwin was converted while still a school boy at Chauncy Hall, in Boston, during a series of meetings conducted by Eld. S. W. Thurber. It was a genuine work. He straightway commenced growing in grace and in knowledge, and persevered in that course until his mind failed in his last fatal sickness.

Forced from school by ill health, he received a situation in a large wholesale house in Boston, which he filled with credit to himself until the development of a lung difficulty compelled him to give up whatever ambition he might have had in that department.

At this time he removed to Western New York, and resided in Springwater for a long time, making many friends, and finally securing quite vigorous health, when he returned to Boston, and conducted business for himself for a time. In all these years he remained true to his vows to be the Lord's, honoring his profession with well ordered life and godly conversation.

When his father removed West early in 1864, Edwin came with him. And he became interested not only in the church at Buchanan, but in the destitute region around; and with others he engaged heartily in Sabbath school work. After this his mind became exercised upon the subject of preaching the gospel. From this he shrank. He had a wife and child whom he loved with all the fullness of his great heart; and he knew that to be an Advent preacher involved frequent and perhaps long continued absence from home. He could hardly forget his father's experience, directly before him from his earliest childhood, and the fact that that parent's absences had been such as to leave him almost without a father, so far as his society was concerned. He could but dread such a life for himself. Yet be finally registered a vow, that if called to preach without any seeking on his own part, he would obey. One day, when the vow had been almost or quite forgotten, it was recalled by a committee from one of the school districts where he had held Sunday schools, who desired that be should not only keep up the school for the children, but "preach the word" to the older portion of the community.

It was a crisis in his life. He felt something of what was before him if he yielded. But he remembered his vow, and said, I will go! And from that time onward he never faltered in his new field of duty.

Some months after this, in the fall of 1867, he was ordained at the General Western Camp meeting at De Kalb, Ill., and returning home he at once commenced arrangements to give himself wholly to the ministry of the word.

He labored in different places in South Western Michigan, and his influence was always good and salutary. His quiet Christian manliness and dignity commanded respect, and the most bitter controversialist could not awake in him or call out in reply any of that acerbity, or hasty words, or unduly strong terms of condemnation which sometimes hinder the preacher's usefulness. He preached from house to house. When bitterly assailed—as he sometimes was—because of his connection with Adventism, he would endeavor to win, rather than controvert.

I recollect an incident that occurred in a neighboring town. Edwin was calling upon every household, to talk on spiritual things, and urge their attendance at the meetings he was holding. At one house he met a decidedly rude reception. Was not asked to sit down, but the man of the house broke out in a tirade against Adventists, and told a great many sad and bad things that he knew, or didn't know, or had heard of them, closing with an account of a man who had been ruined by the effects of the doctrine upon him. Edwin heard him patiently till he was all through, then simply remarked—"Well, brother that was bad, wasn't it? But," said he "I came to talk about some meetings we are having up to the school house. We want you to come and pray and talk about Jesus with us." And he continued plying his kind words in the same strain until the man saw that he wouldn't fight or be drawn into a controversy. I think it was about ten days afterward that that very man proclaimed himself an Adventist! I mention the incident merely as a sample of Edwin's spirit and his method of work.

The threatened return of his old lung difficulty warned him, after a time, that he must seek a change of climate. A visit to Minnesota convinced him that that was the best place for his health; and he removed thither with his family in 1869, settling at West St. Paul, in the midst of as noble and true a band of Christians as ever dwelt in church relationship. His health improved, his strength increased, and he threw himself into the work of the gospel with renewed ardor. Joining the Minnesota Conference he received at once the full fellowship and confidence of that body, and was soon promoted to places of labor and responsibility, and his influence was felt for good wherever its relations extended. He was emphatically, "a workman that needed not to be ashamed;" "enduring hardness as a good soldier;" "strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus;" not "striving about words to no profit;" but studying to show himself "approved unto God." And, now that he sleeps, we may say the truth—"His praise was in all the churches."

He did not believe himself immortal, though one might have thought so from the way he worked. No doubt he over-worked. But how could he help it? As it was, he fulfilled only a tithe of what was desired of him. He loved God and his cause supremely. His convictions were of the most intense character. He felt that he must do what he could, and of none can it be more truly affirmed, He did what he could!

When worn down by incessant labor, the malaria of the late dry season obtained lodgment in his system, and the fearful fever began its dreadful work. In the intervals between the relapses, he was so cheerful, so hopeful of the future that even those most intimately associated with him were quite blinded to the progress of the disease. But it was steadily accomplishing its fatal work. Had his lungs been sound, he might have lived; but they had been weakened by former disease, and failed him now.

The last few days of his life were passed in an unconscious condition. Of those about him he recognized only his beloved companion. He had not to make his peace with God—he had attended to that when well; he had given his best days and strength to his Master, and the approach of death, evidently did not disturb his peace. He was only anxious for his family. Among his last broken words was a commendation of them to Jesus as a friend and protector. About an hour before death he said—Mother! and a little later gently spoke his wife's name—Addie! And so he fell asleep.

How tame language seems as we remember his life and his death; his work, his virtues, his trials and his victories. The memory of them, is, however safely embalmed, as it can never be written, in the hearts of many, who will arise with him in the resurrection morning, to call him blessed.

He was brought to Buchanan as soon as possible; his father and brother, the former in Vermont, the latter in Illinois telegraphed to come home. All felt the blow keenly; but God lent supporting grace.

Funeral services were held at his father's residence on Wednesday forenoon, Jan. 24, opened by Eld. Ferris, who gave out the hymn on p. 380 of the Harp—"The Faithful Sentinel."

Away from his home and the friends of his youth,
He hasted the herald of mercy and truth;
For the love of his Lord, and to seek for the lost;
Soon, alas! was his fall, but he died at his post.

The stranger's eye wept, that in life's brightest bloom.
One gifted so highly should sink to the tomb:
For in ardor he led in the van of his host,
And he fell like a soldier, he died at his post.

He wept not himself that his warfare was done:
The battle was fought, and the victory won;
But he whispered to those whom his heart loved the most,
Tell my brethren for me, that I died at my post.

Victorious his fall—for he'll rise where he fell,
With Jesus his Master, in glory to dwell;
He will pass o'er the sea, he will reach the bright coast,
For he fell like a martyr—he died at his post.

And can we the words of our brother forget?
O, no! they are fresh in our memory yet;
An example so sacred shall never be lost,
We will fall in the work—we will die at our post.

After prayer by Br. Mansfield, in which he was joined in silent petition by many hearts, and singing of the hymn, "Shall we meet beyond the river," Eld. D. Mathewson addressed those present in brief, but exceedingly apt and timely remarks. At the grave we sang the hymn commencing—"Meet again," (p. 218 of the Harp), and in this hope we laid him away, trusting that he has but a short time to sleep. He has fought a good fight, kept the faith, finished his course. Henceforth is laid up for him a crown of righteousness which the Lord shall give, not to him alone, but to all who love his appearing.

Edwin's was the fifth death in Eld. Himes' family. Three of his brothers died in infancy. John died in Buchanan, seven years ago, six days younger than Edwin was when he died. Four brothers remain, two of whom reside at home, or in this place. John left no family; Edwin leaves a wife, and three children who are quite to young to realize their very great loss.

The blow, though fallen, is hardly realized yet. The sense of our loss grows upon us, and at times we feel that we cannot have it so—it must not be that he shall lie in yonder cemetery, so cold, so silent. But our faith is sustained. God doeth all things well. What we know not now we shall know hereafter. Our family circle is broken, and we can never meet again this side of the resurrection. But—

"Though our days on earth are fleeting,
And all temporal joys retreating,
Yet we hope for a better meeting,
Better far than days of yore,
When with father and with mother,
Companions and each brother,
We shall sing on without ending
At our Heavenly Father's door.
Sing the New Song forevermore."

BATES—In memory of Mrs. Lucy G. Bates, wife of Samuel Bates, deacon of the Advent Christian Church of Winona, Minn. who after four years of suffering and pain, fell sweetly "asleep in Jesus," Jan, 16, 1872: aged 50 years, 4 months, and 14 days.

Sr. Bates was a native of New England and found Christ precious to her soul in her Eastern home. In company with her husband and Miss Mary Ettie Bates, daughter of David Bates of Blandford, Mass. who has since fallen asleep, she was baptised Feb. 1854 by Eld. Miles Grant, at Russell, Mass.

She came with her husband to Minnesota, May 8, 1855. They made them a pleasant home in the valley of the Rollingstone, several miles from Winona, where they have since resided. She was among the first and most earnest to "contend for the faith once delivered to the saints" in this State, and at all times and under all circumstances "adorned the doctrine of God her Savior by a well ordered life and a godly conversation."

She loved the house of God and the place of prayer and ofttimes traveled many weary miles, when this country was new, to meet with those of "like precious faith," and listen to the preaching of the word which was as manna to her soul.

Four years since she was visited by a very trying and lingering sickness which served to bring out and develop every Christian grace with such perfection and beauty, that all who were privileged to meet and converse with her felt that she had been with Jesus.

Four years in suffering and trial she walked through "the valley of the shadow of death," leaning upon the arm of Jesus, never repining, but speaking of his goodness to her companion, moulding the minds of her daughter and son, a blessed light to the church of which she was a member, and a living witness of the efficacy of the religion of Christ to sustain its possessor in cheerfulness and joy under the most trying circumstances. Our ablest Advent preachers when visiting this part of the State felt their visit was not complete without an interview with this suffering saint. She received great comfort and consolation from the visits of Eld. O. R. Fassett and wife when in this State, and often referred to his last visit at her home.

She was deeply attached to our beloved Eld. Edwin T. Himes, recently deceased, who often visited her and administered the Sacrament to her in her home. The last effort she made was to prepare something to send him in his sickness. "I am so tired I can say but little for him," said she, "but tell him, God bless him!" Her husband started, his hand was on the latch, when she said, "Samuel!" He turned, and saw she was dying. She realized it, and said, "Lord Jesus receive me!" and she was no more.

Her funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, when, agreeable to her request, words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Rev. 14: 19—"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." As many as could be, of the Winona Church were present, and followed her remains with the relatives to the place of burial, and with neighbors and friends they surrounded that open grave united in singing—

"Sister thou was't mild and lovely."

RUTH M. ROWELL.

Notices, Etc.

Notice.

Notice to all interested in the truths belonging to this age, in the several Quarterly Districts of the state of Minnesota, to meet at the time and place appointed by the state evangelist,—in each Quarterly District, as business of importance will be brought before each District meeting. Preachers are especially invited to be present. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

To Advent Christians.

We are happy to recommend to you our brother Eld. P. B. Beck, as a faithful servant of the Lord Jesus Christ. He has been a faithful minister in this church for the last two years, and has been the means of doing great good here and elsewhere; and it is with sadness and regret that we part with him. As he goes forth to labor in other fields he has the prayers and best wishes of the church. And we ask of all Christians that they extend to him a welcome hand, and aid him in the cause by their prayers.

By order of the Advent Christian church of Toronto, Iowa. E. T. MILLER, Deacon.

Jan. 22, 1872.

Gold Pens.

You can get an always ready and reliable Gold Pen exactly adapted to your hand and style of writing, with which your writing will be done much cheaper, and with greater ease and comfort than with Steel Pens. Prices 25 cts, and upward.

Do you ask where? We answer, send a stamp to J. Morton, 25 Maiden Lane, New York city, and he will send you a circular that will tell you all about it. 1t·

Woman And Her Work:

A monthly paper of 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

Appointments.

CONFERENCE REGISTER.

Western District, Wis. Q. M. Brunswick, Eau Claire Co. Feb. 1-4.
Iowa A. C. C. Q. M., Manchester, Feb. 23-25

MICHIGAN.

Marlette, Presbyterian chapel, Monday and Tuesday evenings, Feb. 12, 13.

North Branch, Union S. H. Wednesday evening, Feb. 14.

Brockway Center, Friday evening, Feb. 16.

Advent chapel, Lake Shore, three miles north of Lexington, Sunday, 10½ a. m. Feb. 18.

GEO. WRIGHT, JR.

The third Q. M. of the Northern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the church in Millbrook, commencing Thursday eve Feb. 22. We hope to have a full representation at this meeting. Come, brethren, let us rally for the Lord. A general invitation is extended to all. JOHN BOWEN, Chairman.

The third Q. M. for the Eastern District of Michigan will be held at Lapeer, commencing Wednesday eve. Feb. 21, and hold over Lord's day. The Rail Road is now in running order from Port Huron to Flint. The Brn. have a pleasant and commodious chapel and plenty of accommodations, with large hearts, and hope to see a large attendance. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

The third Q. M. for the Southren District of Mich. will be held at the Munger S. H. five miles north of Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co. commencing Wednesday eve. March 20, and hold over Lord's day. Teams will be at the station at Eaton Rapids on the arrival of the p. m. trains from Grand Rapids and Jackson. Eaton Rapids is on the Grand River Valley R. R. Let there be a full attendance.

J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y. pro tem.

ILLINOIS.

Amboy, Feb. 11, morning and evening.

Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Feb. 13-23, as Br. Wheeler and others may arrange. Let the friends round about rally and come to this meeting to work for God and his cause. C. C. MARSTON.

Eld. Wm. McCulloch will preach in our vicinity (Cobden) on the third Sunday in February, continuing a few days; and in the vicinity of Anna the fourth Sunday, continuing a few days, as Br. Childs may arrange. J. S. LAWVER.

Union church, Shabbona Grove, Saturday eve Feb. 3 as Br. Clapsaddle may arrange.
Afton, Sabbath Feb. 18. G. W. SMITH.

Beemerville Feb. 4.
Milroy, Feb. 11. C. W. SMITH.

Rochelle, Ogle Co. Feb. 4-7.
Ackerson's S. H., Ogle Co., as Br. Ackerson may arrange Feb. 7. C C MARSTON.

IOWA

The second Q. M. of the A. C. C. of Manchester District commences Thursday, Feb 22, with the Elk Valley church, at the Otisville S. H., continuing over the Sabbath.

This is comparatively a new field. Let every lover of Jesus and his cause be there. Come, brethren, laden with the Spirit of Jesus, praying in the Holy Ghost. Come, to work for God and his cause. M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

The second Q. M. of the Mo. and S. W. Iowa Conference will convene with Empire church, Friday evening, March 1, and continue over Sunday. Let all the churches in the District be represented. Let none of the ministry fail to be there. JAMES FINDERS, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN

Coon Slough, Vernon Co Feb. 10 11.
JOB BROWN.

The Second Q. M., in the Western district of Wisconsin will be held with the church in Brunswick, Eau Clare Co. Feb. 1, and over Lord's day. Let us have a grand rally of warm hearts, with sweet words for each other, and noble testimonies for Jesus. Come the first day.

F. W. HOUGH.

MINNESOTA.

The next Q. M. for the Ottawa District will be held at Ottawa, Feb. 16, and holding over Sunday. Let the lovers of Jesus rally.

E. BACON, Sec'y.

Canton, Feb. 3, 4. JOB BROWN.

Winona District Q. M. Feb. 2 and over the Sabbath, with the Canton church, in Fillmore Co. in the Brick S. H. near Br. Peter Brode's.

St. Paul District Q. M. Feb. 9, and over the Sabbath at the S. H. near Br. Libby's, West St. Paul.

Ottawa District Q. M. Feb. 16, and over the Sabbath. Will some of the brethren living in the District decide where they will have the meeting, and write me at once?

Hutchinson District Q. M. Feb. 23, at Silver Lake. A general attendance is requested of all who love the Lord and his appearing. Business of importance will be brought before each Conference.

GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist for the States.

NEW YORK.

Regular meetings are held by church at 128 West 24th St., New York city: three times on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings.

T. J. COX.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Special Conference will be held in the Second Advent Chapel on Central St., Worcester, Mass., to commence on Tuesday, Feb. 6, at two o'clock P.M., and continue every day and evening through the week and over the following Sunday. The special object of this conference will be to examine the evidences relating to the time of the Lord's coming; to get more fully prepared for that event, and to lead sinners to Christ before he comes to close up the scenes of probation. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and especially to all the preaching brethren.

"The more that come with free good will,
Will make the banquet sweeter still."

By unanimous vote of the church.

H. W BUXTON, W. F. COLLIER, E. G. HIGGINS. } Committee.

Advertisements.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4. Fifty copies, $35. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

FREE. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee-keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage. H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

THRESHING MACHINE.

FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $600. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $350. Warranted as represented. N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure. (tf) Address, A. J. STONE, Hesperia, Mich.

FANNING MILL. I make an excellent machine for cleaning wheat. It will take out all cheat and oats, and leave the wheat clean and fit for seed. I will ship one of these machines to the first brother who will send $25 to the office of THE TIMES. They are well worth $35. H. M. Wheeler, Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Ill.

THE CLOW REAPER.

This celebrated piece of farm machinery, by Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., was tested with sixteen other Reapers at Ripon, Wis., in July, 1870, and received the highest encomiums of them all. The standard of perfection for quality of work was forty. The Clow Reaper was marked forty, or perfect by the committee. The other machines ranged from 38¾ down to 21¾. This machine is specially admirable for its light draught—which saves horseflesh; it can be drawn all day by a pair of light horses. For its simplicity—which decreases liability to breakage or derangement. It has only one hundred pieces, where other machines have three times that number. For the arrangement for lowering and raising the cutters. For the facilities for turning and backing. It can be used as a mower as well as a reaper. No cog-wheels are used to drive the sickle. It has had fewer accidents from breakage than any other machine.

USUAL PRICE, $160.00;

but the machine presented to THE TIMES office will be

SOLD FOR ONE HUNDRED & TWENTY DOLLARS!

If taken soon.

For any further information, address:
J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich.

Advent Christian Times.

ORA COLLEGE

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be i[illegible]eased."

VOL. IX.---NO. 28. BUCHANAN, FEBRUARY 6, 1872. WHOLE NO. 408.

Contents.

Spiritualism; Signs and Wonders, C. M. Keach; Ecclesiastical Bummers..........217

A Discussion between Eld. Clark Braden and Eld. Himes, Continued; Bigotry..........218

James Fisk Jr; From Arkansas, G. W. Crosby; Illinois Conference..........219

Brief Editorials; Help Wanted; A Brief Recollection of Rev. J. V. Himes..........220

Destroy—Gehenna; A Misapplied Text; At Home and Abroad..........221

Poetry; Life and Death, J. D. Jones; A Correction, T. M. Preble; The Support of the Ministry, C. C. Marston..........222

Eternal Misery, S. Morrett; One of the Lessons of the Year; What's the Matter? G. F. M; The Event of 1871; Our Book and Tract Column..........223

Business Agent's Department; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments, Advertisements..........224

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

Tuesday Afternoon, Feb. 6, 1872.

Spiritism.

Of good angels we learn from Heb. 1: 14 that "they are all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation." And we are informed in the 78th Ps., 49th verse that God cast upon the Egyptians the fierceness of his anger, wrath and trouble, by sending evil angels among them." The Scriptures give numerous accounts of the visits of the two kinds of angels mentioned in these quotations, but none whatever of disembodied spirits. The fact is, it is just here the Devil brings in the fallacy by which thousands are undone; and we unwittingly give currency to it by teaching our children to sing the the little heterodox song,

"I want to be an angel,"

when we know, or ought to know, that man can never become an angel, either good or bad.

But then it may be asked, how do you reconcile these views with the case of the witch of Endor raising the prophet Samuel? 1 Sam. 28: 7–25. In reply we would say this case furnishes a most perfect illustration of the "seeing medium" of the present, and if the reader will turn to the history of this transaction, he will soon be convinced of the truth of our position. The medium, and not Saul, saw the apparition representing Samuel, and described it so that "Saul perceived that it was Samuel." Then the conversation followed in which, no doubt, the voice as well as the peculiar style of the prophet was copied; all of which accords with the experience of those who are guilty of the same sin now. Matthew Henry, in commenting upon this Scripture, says, "We have here the conference between Saul and Satan. Saul came in disguise, (v. 8) but Satan soon discovered him (v. 12); Satan comes in disguise, in the disguise of Samuel's mantle, and Saul cannot discover him. Such is the disadvantage we labor under in wrestling with the rulers of the darkness of this world, that they know us while we are ignorant of their wiles and devices." Hoping the reader may take time to examine the reasoning by which Henry was led to this conclusion, we pass on.

The Scriptures teach that vast numbers of evil spirits inhabit our atmosphere; and among these Satan is mentioned as "the Prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience." (Eph. 2: 2.) Of these evil angels our Savior cast a "legion" out of one man; and they are the "familiar spirits" which are ever lurking about our paths, acquainted with all our secrets, and as ready now as in the past to give "revelations" to those who will not hear "Moses and the prophets." God has given us a revelation once for all, but those who are not satisfied with it, find the devil able and willing to communicate. He comes to them "with all power and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness, in them that perish; because they receive not the love of the truth that they might be saved; the pulpit and the religious press, with few exceptions, the meanwhile asserting that the whole thing of calling up spirits, is a hocus pocus trick Would it not be better to treat the matter seriously, and set people on their guard against the "wiles of the devil?"

A writer in the London Quarterly Review, for October, 1871, who] seems to hate Calvinism as sincerely as he discredits the existence of any "force" except those generally acknowledged by scientists, has made the most plausible argument against the view that we have been endeavoring to present that we have yet seen. His position in his own words, is as follows: "The so-called spiritual communications come from within, not from without the individuals who suppose themselves to be the recipients of them; that they belong to the class termed subjective by physiologist and psychologists; and that the movements by which they are expressed, whether in the tilting of tables or the writings of planchettes, are really produced by their own muscular action, exerted independently of their own wills, and quite unconsciously to themselves. And of the truth of this position we hope to be able to satisfy any unprejudiced reader, though we entirely despair of convincing such as have already surrendered their common sense to the delusions of a credulous imagination."

We have read the author's long argument, covering some thirty pages of the Review, without prejudice, and we believe without having surrendered our common sense to the delusions of a credulous imagination, and we are compelled to say that he has not touched a single one of our facts. And while we are ready to admit that there are many pretenders, expert in legerdemain, and who for money impose on the credulous by various artifices, as Dr. Scott says of the Professors of sorcery in Egypt, and others who are self-decived, as our author contends, through "unconscious cerebration," yet we assert that the cases we have presented, whatever may be thought of his own, do not fall into either of those categories, nor can they be accounted for on any hypothesis that exclude the supernatural. What, for instance will we do with the muscular action theory in a seance at Jeffersonville, an account of which we gave last week. On that occasion the pencil wrote intelligent communications, untouched by human hands; a fact witnessed by several gentlemen capable of judging in the premises, and whose veracity is above suspicion. Here was evidently supernatural power, or we must give up all our confidence in contingent knowledge. The case of our friend and the writing medium, given in the Observer of the 3d inst., equally refuses to be accounted for by the "arguments" of the London Quarterly, and we are compelled to remain immovable in our position.

Bring these spirits now to the crucial test of our Savior's rule, "By their fruits ye shall know them," and there remains not a shadow of doubt as to their character. That they are "demons," and teach the "doctrines of devils" becomes at once apparent. Visiting Boston in the summer of '69, we embraced the opportunity of calling at the publishing house of the "New Spiritual Philosophy," (?) on Washinton St., for the purpose of ascertaining the character of their literature. Glancing over the titles of the books as they appeared on the shelves, we read as follows: "The Complete Works of Thomas Paine," "Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire," "Volney's Ruins," "Errors of the Bible Demonstrated," "Orthodoxy False since Spiritualism is True"—et hoc genus omne. Before leaving we purchased a copy of The Banner of Light, a weekly paper, quite as large as the Christian Observer, from which we learned, among other things, that they had at that time more than two hundred missionaries in the field, sowing broadcast over the land the damnable heresies of these wicked spirits. Of these indefatigable missionaries, the paper contained the following editorial notice: "There is much complaint of many of our best test mediums that they are rude and ungentlemanly, or not lady-like, if females. It may be so from several causes and not injure the mediumship or tests through them. A natural life and natural actions are best adapted to mediumship, and these are by some people called rude, and even wicked, by a few whose false system of morals and religion has been terribly perverted by the doctrine of total depravity."

Further quotation or comment is unnecessary. And we only add, in conclusion, that, if the "powers of darkness" represented by these spirits could prevail, every pillar of our Christian civilization would be removed and earth would speedily become a hell.—G. in Christian Observer.

Ecclesiastical Bummers.

I met one of them awhile since in the cars. We had known each other pleasantly before, and had had many walks and talks together, but none just in this live.

Said he: "What you and those with whom you are associated need is, some enlarged views. You are too narrow and circumscribed in your thoughts; you cannot get out of your ecclesiasticism; your church relations and your church creeds hold and bind you hand and foot. You need to throw aside your church names and your organizations, and just take the broad and liberal name of Christian. The church will never accomplish anything much for the world till we get rid of all denominational names, and are enlisted under one banner."

So he talked, and I listened thoughtfully, and, in respect to him, I hope, discriminately. I knew a little of his history. He had graduated from a Presbyterian seminary; had been a Congregational minister; had, I believe, taken orders in the Episcopal church; had swung loose from all denominations, and devoted himself to 'union' efforts; and just now was floating outside, and, as he thought, above them all.

The talk and the man seemed to me to demand, as the doctors would say, "heroic" treatment; which, I believe, means treatment of drastic doses or bold cutting. So I said something like this: "Ah! my dear fellow, I see how this is. You talk well about this throwing aside of denominational names, and fighting under the one broad name of Christian. You say that is what you have done. Now during the rebellion there was a class of men—soldiers they were—who went along with the army, sometimes in the advance and sometimes in the rear. They were usually grave, fearless fellows, and would ever fight well on occasion. They attached themselves to no regiment, were not enlisted men, but just hung around the camp and the march, wearing no uniform, and having no regular arms. They went and they fought, as they were wont to say, 'on their own hook.' You know whom I mean. They were called 'bummers.' Not a euphonic name, or particularly expressive of dignity or value, I admit; but still suggestively expressive. They were, in their way, patriotic, and fought for their country; but they merely went 'bumming around' in camp and march and field.

"Now, I know of no word—I mean no disrespect, as you see—that describes you and those that think with you so well as 'bummer.' You are an ecclesiastical bummer. You are, I am sure, loyal to the great cause of God; you wish its triumph. But you fight on your own hook. You attach yourself to no regimental organization, you march by no guidon, you wear no uniform, you are in no army corps; and I do not know where to put you, except among these extremely irregular men. You may do service in the Master's cause. I do not deny that. The bummers in the war did good service. I think that on one occasion they, bumming far in advance, even held a ford till their messengers hurried up some regiments of the army to cover it. But after all they were not the troops to be relied on; and their services do not appear largely recorded in the history of those times."

My friend smiled grimly; said my figure was good—a shrewd and taking metaphor; but it did not apply. So I added a little preachment like this: "You have withdrawn from churchly organizations; and you seem to think that the work of the Master can be done best in that way. Can you tell me of any great and permanent work done for the extension of his kingdom except through some such organization? Can you tell me of any mission established in a heathen land, any language reduced to writing, any book printed, any copy of the Bible made, any tribe elevated or civilized, except by men and women who have gone forth to the work not simply under the broad banner of the Cross, but under, at the same time, some badge of an army corps or flag of a regiment from some church organization? I can think of none. The bummers of the Church have not done much for her cause in the world."

There are a good many men in these later times—indeed, there have always been—who, like my friend, amuse themselves with high-sounding words of 'unity,' and "unsectarianism," and of being "liberal," and unbound by narrow obligations of denominations. I do not see where we can put them, or how describe them, except by the title which I have put over this article. We do not deny that they are true or loyal, or that they will work or fight for the Kingdom; but they are in no battalion or company—they are the bummers, rather than the soldiers.—W. Aikman in the Independent.

Signs and Wonders.

In every dispensation or age God has had some important truths to promulgate which have been confirmed by certain signs and wonders specially adapted to the truth they were intended to confirm. For instance: At the beginning of the Mosaic dispensation a series of signs and wonders were introduced of a character best calculated to demonstrate the essential truth of that age, namely: the existence of the great I AM and his almighty power. And these wonders were in a special manner manifested before and through Pharaoh king of Egypt, to whom God said "For this cause have I raised thee up (margin made thee to stand) for to shew in thee my power and that my name might be declared through all the earth." (Ex. 9: 16.) This having been effectually accomplished that of signs and wonders ceased.

Also at the beginning of the Christian dispensation another series of signs and wonders were introduced in confirmation of another important truth essential to their age, namely,—the theme of the gospel, Jesus and the resurrection. The Savior in commissioning his apostles to preach the gospel enumerates a series of signs which were to follow them that believe. (Mk. 16: 15–18.) And Mark bears testimony to its remarkable fulfillment in the following language: "And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following." (Mk. 16: 20.) Luke, also, bears witness to the same point, as follows: "By the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people." (Acts 5: 12.) The doctrine of Jesus and the resurrection is now no longer an unpopular truth, but a generally admitted fact, and hence needs no further confirmation; consequently those signs and wonders given to confirm that truth have passed away, and the miraculous gifts in the church through which those signs and wonders were manifested have passed away, also.

In these last times God has another special truth to be promulgated essential to this present age, which, too, is confirmed by signs and wonders, although of a different character than any formerly given, being in peculiar manner adapted to that truth they are intended to confirm; and this truth is properly called "the last message of mercy to a dying world," teaching the speedy return of our Lord to earth to judge the world, to destroy the wicked, to save his people, and introduce his glorious and eternal reign. Our Savior when asked, "What shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" thus replied—"Immediately after the tribulation of those days the sun shall be darkened and the moon shall not give her light and the stars shall fall from heaven and the powers of heaven shall be shaken, and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven, and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn when they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." And "when ye shall see all these things know that it is nigh even at the door." (Mat. 24.) Luke thus records our Savior's words: "There shall be signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken; and then shall ye see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when ye shall see these things begin to come to pass then lift up your heads for your redemption draweth nigh." (Lk. 21: 25–28.)

The darkening of the sun in 1780 and of the moon the succeeding night; the falling of the stars in 1833; the present distress and perplexity of nations; the introduction of "never-before-heard-of-tidal waves," and the general expectation of a universal crisis furnish us with an unmistakable demonstration that the end is near. Let us awake to the true sense of our responsibility in the dissemination of this solemn yet glorious truth. Finally, let us strive to prove faithful, that when Jesus shall come we may be found among that happy company that "shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." C. M. KEACH.

Aphorisms.

BY ELD. A. A. CROCKER.

Our hope is set before us, and not behind us.

We have strong consolation, not weak.

We give an answer to every man that asks us a reason of our hope, and several that don't.

Our father Abraham was humble and Isaac was a plain man; so don't get proud.

The Gentile church had a father four hundred and thirty years before the Jewish church; so we are ahead yet.

Christ has not moved away—only gone on a journey, and left us to keep house while he is gone, and wait for him to come back.

Preachers should be fired with a big fire, so their words will burn their way through.

God has joined doctrine and practice; so let no man break them asunder—Reported by F. Burr. Rochelle, Ill. Jan. 19, 1872.

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

Upon Four Propositions, Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

ELD. CLARK BRADEN'S FOURTH LETTER.

Although both Br. Himes and myself tried to learn as far as possible the position of his opponent, I see from Br. Himes' last that we were not very successful in our efforts; or else Br. Himes is hard pressed, and wishes to avoid the inevitable conclusion to which I am pressing him, by denying not only the correctness of my conclusions and the validity of my arguments, but also even my fundamental premises, although they are to most men self-evident. To lift him out of the fog in which he is wandering, or drive him out of the dust he is raising, I will again give an outline of the course of reasoning I am pursuing. I began by defining the terms man and spirit. Then I began the following chain of argument. I. There is a spirit in man. II. This spirit is an entity. III. It is a rational, conscious, thinking, moral, responsible entity. IV. It can, while in the body, act distinct from and even in opposition to the body in which it resides. V. This spirit leaves the body in death. VI. Death does not affect its consciousness. VII. It exists as a rational conscious, thinking, moral, responsible entity between death and resurrection. VIII. It will endlessly exist as a rational, conscious, thinking, moral, responsible entity.

I defined man as a being possessing a body, soul, and spirit, or a being composed of body, soul, and spirit, just as I say of a house, it has a main part, a wing and a kitchen, or is composed of a main part, a wing and a kitchen. We apply the term house to the entire building, but by synecdoche, we often call one of the parts the house, and also call the house by the name of one of the parts. In like manner we generally mean the whole being composed of body and soul, and spirit, when we use the term man; but we often apply the term man to the body alone, or to the spirit. Since the spirit is the rational, conscious, thinking, responsible, moral part of man, bearing God's image, we very often speak of the spirit as the man, by synecdoche. It is in this way that Peter and Paul speak, when they speak of 'my departure,' 'my decease.' This custom is so universal and so easily understood, that I am amazed at such puerile quibbling as we have had on this use of synecdoche. The terms soul and spirit are so often used interchangably, that we generally speak of man as dual, composed of body and spirit, or body and soul, or as having body and spirit, or body and soul.

Such a use obtains in the Scriptures. The term man is applied to the body. "If he [God] set his heart upon man [Heb. him], if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath, all flesh shall perish together, and man [Heb. Adham] shall turn again to dust." (Job 34:15.) In the second occurrence man evidently denotes the body, for God gathers the spirit to himself, and the body returns to dust. Paul says, "though our outward man perishes [body], our inward man [spirit] is renewed day by day." Moses also applies the term man to what is made of the dust: "And the Lord God made man [his body] out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of lives, and man became a living soul." Of all persons materialists should be the last to deny that the term man is applied to the body.

The term man is applied to the spirit. It was a custom among the Greeks to so use anthropos. Liddell and Scott—"Anthropos, man, both a generic term and of an individual, from Homer downward. He gives the name to those who had died and removed to the Isles of the Blessed." Od IV—565. Do the Scriptures? Eph. 3:6, Paul prays for the Ephesians that God would grant them to be "strengthened with might in the inner man" (spirit). 2 Cor. 12:2-4, "I knew a man [his spirit], whether in the body or out of the body I cannot tell, God knoweth; such an one [his spirit], caught up into the third heaven. And I knew such a man [his spirit], whether in the body or out of the body, I cannot tell, God knoweth; how he was caught up into paradise and heard words which it is not lawful for man to utter." This man or spirit has a body, and can be in the body or out of the body. This proves that the term man is applied to the spirit by synecdoche. In like manner proper names and the pronouns are applied to the spirit by synecdoche. This usage is very frequent, because the spirit is regarded in all human language and thought as the rational, moral, responsible part of man. Sometimes in the same sentence both uses of the word man occur. "And I knew a man [his spirit], whether in the body or out of the body, I cannot tell, God knoweth; how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard words which it is not lawful for man [body and spirit] to utter." This use is so common and so readily understood, that I wonder that Br. Himes stoops to such quibbling as to ask, "What is man?" in such cases. I hope we shall hear no more of it.

We will now call attention to the steps of of our argument. I. There is a spirit in man. Job 32:8, "There is a spirit in man." Zach. 12:1, "The Lord formeth the spirit of man within him." 1 Cor. 2:11, "Who knows the things of man, save the spirit of man which is in him." Dan. 7:15, "Daniel's spirit was grieved in him." Acts 17:16, "Paul's spirit was stirred in him." Hence there is a spirit in man. Does Br. Himes deny it? Will he tell what this spirit is? He dare not attempt it!

II. This spirit that is in man is an entity or an existence. It is not a function of the body or a phenomenon produced by the body. We prove this first, by consciousness. We are conscious that there is an existing independent abiding potential self or spirit, different from the organization in which it resides, and whose organs it uses. We are conscious that its properties or attributes are moral, responsible, thinking attributes and consciousness. The conscious, knowing spirit is different from the known organization in which it resides. Will Br. Himes deny this? I propose, my brother, that we be men, and have honest work. Is the spirit an entity? If not, is it a nonentity? What is said of the spirit makes it an entity. It grieves, knows, is excited by what it learns, is born of God. That of which this is said is an entity. Br. Himes, can this be predicated of a nonentity? The spirit is an entity or a nonentity. Now which? My dear brother, get out of the fog, and be honest and manly.

III. It is a rational, conscious, thinking, responsible moral entity. (1 Cor. 2:11.) It knows. (Ex. 35:21.) It wills. (See also Mat. 26:41.) It is grieved by its thoughts. (Dan. 7:15.) It is excited by what it learns. (Acts 17:16.) It is born of God, begotten by the truth, receives God's image. It is, then, a rational, conscious, thinking, responsible, moral entity; and is the rational, thinking, conscious, responsible, moral part of man. As God, the Logos, the Holy Spirit and angels are spirits, and are rational, conscious, thinking, moral entities, so is man's spirit, which possesses the same attributes, and is of like nature with them a rational, conscious, thinking, moral entity. In Acts 23 we read that the Sadducees say there is neither angel nor spirit: that is, neither angel nor spirit of man. The Pharisees confessed both: that is, that here is angel and spirit of man. Again. "If an angel or a spirit [of man] have spoken to him, let us not fight against God." Here again the spirit of man is spoken of as speaking, and as an entity. Hence both consciousness and the Scriptures most emphatically teach that the spirit which is in man is a rational, conscious, thinking, responsible, moral entity. Dare you deny it? Come, Br. Himes, get out of this mist of negations and evasions.

IV. This spirit while in the body, acts distinct from the body, and even in opposition to it. Daniel's spirit was grieved in his body. Paul's spirit was excited by what it learned. Man's spirit knows what is in him. The spirits of the disciples in Gethsemane were willing, but the flesh was weak. Paul's inner man or spirit warred against his outer man or flesh. The spirit lusts against the flesh, and the flesh against the spirit, and these are contrary, the one to the other. Hence this spirit in man, this rational, conscious, thinking, responsible, moral entity can and does act distinct from the body, or the appetites that have their origin in the body. Now, Br. Himes, what is it that was grieved, stirred, that knew, willed, and had desires in opposition to the body in which it resides? Be honest enough to tell us plainly.

V. This spirit departs from or leaves the body in death. (Eccl. 12:7.) "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." Not to God as it was; but to God who gave it. Hence it does not become as though it never had been, or as it was before it had a being. Christ commended his spirit to God. So did Stephen. Paul calls his death a departure, a putting off his tent, a leaving his house, a putting off his clothing. Peter calls it a departure, a decease, or a going away. We have already shown that the spirit is the rational, conscious, thinking, responsible, moral part of man—hence by synecdoche it is very often called the man, and is often that to which the proper name and the pronouns are applied. Such is the use of the pronouns I, me, my, and we, and our in these passages. The materialist's quibbles are puerile, and are based on an utter ignorance of one of the commonest usages of language; or are a dishonest attempt to evade the plainest teachings of God's word, by making nonsense of it.

VI. Death does not affect the conscious being of the spirit. We have already called attention to the fact that the spirit does not return to God as it was, does not become as it was, but returns to God who gave it. Now will Br. Himes tell us whether this spirit that returns to God, that Christ commended to his Father, that Stephen commended to God, be an entity or not? If not, is it a nonentity? If an entity, what sort of an entity? In short, what is this spirit? I have shown that it is a rational, conscious, thinking, moral entity, when in man. I shall show it returns to God a rational, moral, conscious, thinking entity. Such a position gives dignity and sense to Eccl. 12:7, and to our Savior's language, and to that of Stephen. I challenge Br. Himes to give a meaning to spirit in those passages that will not make nonsense of them. Paul and Peter speak of death as the departure of the rational, conscious, thinking self, or the I. I have shown that by synecdoche this means the spirit. Death is not the annihilation of this conscious, thinking I, but its departure; after which it will be with Christ. Death does not affect the consciousness of this spirit. Proof. Mat. 10:28; Lk. 12:4. We have already shown that the spirit is a rational, conscious, thinking entity. Our Savior declares death does not affect the conscious being of the spirit. The death the persecutors inflict, and that God inflicts as spoken of in this passage is the same in event as the death all men die. The killing has reference to taking away life, natural life, inflicting death on a man. Man cannot affect the spirit in death. God does not when he kills or takes away life. He afterwards casts into gehenna. Do you understand me now, Br. Himes? "Destroy" in Mat. does not mean "to extinguish the conscious being" of the spirit. Br. Himes says the equivalent of destroy is to extinguish conscious being. The Holy Spirit, in Luke, says it is cast into gehenna. Casting the conscious spirit into gehenna is then according to the Holy Spirit an equivalent of destroy.

I never said that the killing inflicted by God was performed after the resurrection. I challenge you to find words in either of my last articles that can be perverted into such an idea. I can only save your intelligence or honesty by charitably supposing that you have never read them. If repeated after this repetition of my meaning, I shall be compelled to conclude that because you cannot answer my comments on these passages, you try to make an absurdity of them by attributing to me the very opposite of what I said. I do not water down the meaning of God's word by long elaboration. I am not under the necessity of doing so to find proof of my position. I state clearly what common sense says it means. You call such statements "assumptions." I shall not "insult the intelligence of our readers" by attempting to make plainer what God has made perfectly plain. Now show that my comments, and not your perversion of them, are incorrect, or accept the conclusion that death does not affect the conscious being of the spirit, and that it is conscious after death.

You say this is not proving my proposition I rather think that if I show that the spirit does not lose its conscious being in death, there is but little left to be proved. The Gibraltar of your system, "mankind are subjected to an utter extinction of all conscious being in death," will be stormed, and the eternal consciousness of the spirit will be a short matter. Your attempted reply to my argument on Ex. 3:6 was a complete failure. You call my declaration that God would never say that he was the God of nonentities, bathos. It is just the ludicrous descent into nonsense that your system attributes to Jehovah. Does not your system declare that the patriarchs were not? That they had become as though they had never been? Does it not make them nonentities? Dare you say they were entities when God used this language? If so, what kind of entities? If not entities, were not they, according to your system, nonentities? Come now, Br. Himes, have manhood enough to answer clearly and honestly.

You attempt to evade the force of my illustration, by substituting founder for president. Then you lug in the idea of supervision, and show that in such a case the present tense could be used. But, sir, if the college "had become as though it never had been," if it "was not," if it was no longer an entity, or an existing thing, could the present tense be used? If the present tense was truthfully used in the sentence, "I am President," the college was in existence when it was so used. So when God used the present tense, truthfully, as he must have done, in saying, "I am the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob," they were in existence when he used it. Now dare you say that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were, in regard to existence, in the condition that a suspended college is, in regard to existence? What is the existence of the dead?

I object to your attempt to introduce prolepsis in this language, or to claim that God spoke in anticipation of the resurrection, for three reasons. (1) Man knew nothing of the resurrection then, and would not so understand the language, and it would be deceptive. Unless God explained his use of the present tense by prolepsis, he would be deceiving man. God, in speaking to man, uses language in no other sense than as man would understand it; or as he explains his meaning. There is no explanation here. When God said, "I am their God," man would say, He can only say so when they exist; hence they now exist. (2) While duration with God is an eternal now, it is not with men. God ever talks with men in human language, and not in the dialect of divinity. Man would understand him as saying, "I am now in fact their God," hence they exist. (3) God does speak of things that are not as though they are, in promise and prophecy, but not in historic narration, nor in declarations of existing facts. There is neither promise nor prophecy in this language. It is a declaration of a fact. I protest then against this attempt to inject a declaration of facts with prolepsis, to make it promise or prophecy to destroy its obvious and only import in regard to the existence of the patriarchs. Is there either prophecy or promise in Ex. 3:6? If not, your assumption of prolepsis is but a subterfuge to evade the force of the argument. Our position stands as immovable as the hills, that God could only say, I am the God of the patriarchs, when they were in existence. He said so five hundred years after their death. They were, then, in existence five hundred years after their death, and, as our Savior says, "alive unto God."

I will place before the eye of the reader our argument on our Savior's appeal to this passage. (Lk. 20:27.)

THE DILEMMA.

"Then came to him certain of the Sadducees who deny that there is any resurrection, and asked him, saying, Teacher, Moses wrote for us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife and raise up children for his brother. There were, therefore, seven brothers, and the first took a wife and died without children; and the second took his wife and he died without children; and the third took her, and in like manner all seven; and they left no children, and died; and last of all the woman also died. Now in the resurrection whose wife shall she be, for the seven had her as a wife."

JESUS' ANSWER TO THE DILEMMA.

"And Jesus answered and said to them, The children of this age marry and are given in marriage; but those who shall be accounted worthy to attain that age and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage. For they can die no more. For they are as the angels, and are the sons of God, being the sons of the resurrection."

HIS REFUTATION OF SADDUCEEISM.

"But that the dead are raised up even Moses showed at the bush, since he calls the Lord, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. He is not the God of the dead, but of the living, for all live unto him."

We now call the attention of our readers to these facts concerning the above Scripture. From v. 27 to v. 34, we have the dilemma of the Sadducees. From v. 34 to v. 37 we have the answer of Jesus. In these verses he completely disposes of the dilemma. What he says after that is an additional thought. It is not his purpose to answer the dilemma, but to show that the dead can be raised. The Sadducees denied that there was any spirit—that the spirits of the dead existed. Hence there could be no resurrection. Jesus proves that the dead can be resurrected by proving that the spirits of the dead exist, or are "alive to God," by his appeal to Ex. 3:6. There is no dispute that his purpose was to prove that the dead can be raised. The query is, How did he prove it? His argument is, that God's language at the bush shows that the dead can be raised. How does it do so? He said, "I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." He could only use this language when they were in existence. Hence they were in existence. He is not the God of such dead as you Sadducees would make them. "He is the God of the living, for all live unto him." The all refers to all dead. They live unto God, are conscious, though they are dead to us This last assertion of our Savior clearly shows that he deduced the consciousness of the dead from this language in Exodus, and from that showed that the dead can be raised.

Our Savior uses our argument on Ex. 3:6 to confute ancient Sadduceeism, as we do to confute modern Sadduceeism. His declaration that all the dead are alive to God is an eternal refutation of soul-sleeping. Br. Himes' attempt to set aside our arguments by showing that our Savior did not use the identical words we did, is mere jugglery. The question is, does his argument for the resurrection depend for validity upon the conscious existence of the patriarchs when God used the language referred to? Also does the declaration that all the dead live to God prove their existence—conscious existence?

I am somewhat amazed for the clamor for direct argument, while my opponent persists in denying every principle of common usage and common sense on which an argument can be based. I have in this article placed before our readers my line of argument. I believe they will be satisfied with it. In a former article I asked Br. Himes if using spirit in the sense in which it is used in 1 Thes. 5:23, man and brutes have the same spirit? He dare not answer. I asked him whether the Logos lay in the tomb of Joseph three days? Whether the conscious being of the Logos was utterly extinguished in death? He dare not answer, but tries to dodge by asking me whether the pre-existent Logos went to hades. I answer unequivocally, Yes. Now dare he answer my question? He also asks if Christ's body went to the tomb, and his spirit to hades, where did Christ go? I will not "insult the common sense of my readers," with their knowledge of the laws of language, by noticing such a paltry quibble. A College is composed of students, faculty and a building in which they meet. I say a certain college is broken up. The faculty and students have gone into other institutions. The building has been hauled away and used for other purposes. "But," says Br. Himes, "Where did the college go?" Twaddle! I pity the cause that has to be screened by such nonsense.

Br. Himes' sweeping assertion that the words of my proposition are not in the Bible—that the terms "immortal spirit," "never dying spirit," are not in the Bible is very cheap claptrap. Does he not know that the weapon cuts both ways? Are the words of his proposition in the Bible? Where does he find the words "utter extinction of conscious being," in the Bible? Does this prove that they are not true? I trust we will have no more of that stale fustian. I would remind Br. Himes that it is my province to pursue my own course, and that he had better let our readers decide what I have done. He is only the attorney in this case, and not attorney, witnesses, judge and jury. His assertion that I have presented no argument, sounds too much like a school boy's work in a back-woods debating society. So, also, I have not modified my position taken in my second article. I do not object to using the alphabet. I object to dwarfing the clear teachings of the advanced branches to alphabetic ideas. I take the words of the early books of the Bible in their obvious import, with all the increased light of the New Testament. I object to having the perfected ideas of the New Testament dwarfed down to the imperfect, partial ideas of the first books of the Old Testament. The entire subject of Christ's death will be discussed; so will also the phrases "outer man," "inner man;" and we will show in due time, who departs. I will tell him about hades and where the spirits of the righteous are now.

In our next we will resume our direct argument. I have not ransacked the Bible yet. I have advanced but three out of twenty arguments. The reason has been that my opponent has so resolutely denied almost every principle of common sense and usage in his quibbles, that we have had to stop and prove what it was "insult to the common sense of our readers to prove.

I now demand as due to me and to our readers and as demanded by common courtesy and honesty, that my opponent answer the queries I have presented in this and former articles. I have answered every one of his queries? Will he show equal courtesy and honesty? I have an utter contempt for this dodging, and this seeming to take certain positions, and then when asked whether they are taken or not, refusing to answer frankly and honorably.

Bigotry.

Bigotry does not appear to be the property of any sect or denomination; it belongs to all narrow-minded good people as well as to big-headed children of the devil. And many are brought into the light and liberty of an advanced dispensation, who run to and fro and denounce an "increase in knowledge" beyond a certain fixed point unto the comprehension of which they were born, or absolutely thrust by circumstances. I want to keep the little brain I have ready for "present truths," not spiritualistic, demoniac "developments," "progressive conceptions of the immaterial soul," etc.; but developments and conceptions that are legitimately afforded or which are commended by the Word. That in the last days we are not to be in the dark concerning some things which were "hard to be understood" aforetime, is generally conceded among Christians of culture. And a large company of the unlettered agree and rejoice in the acceptance of this proclamation.

A man may not care for the sneer of an opponent, with whose religious doctrines he has notoriously disagreed for a long time. But it is hard, sometimes, when it comes to the corner where you meet the cold looks and perhaps hear the severe words of your old friend, because you (as you honestly believe) have received, and have candidly avowed a latest "present truth." And to be called an "infidel," or to have it distinctly intimated to you before the congregation that you do not believe, that you reject, the plain teachings of the Bible,—this is an ordeal.

When a man looks at us with owl-like eyes of wisdom, or beams upon us with the shocked innocence of a rabbit, at the moment we chance to speak our respectful regard for or agreement in a new interpretation of certain passages of Scripture—if he is a stranger—we may pass the matter by with small compunction; we may not expect or dread an open robuke. But when for our inadvertent or formerly intended confession of faith in any particular "reading" of the word or of science, a friend opens and empties upon us the vials of reproach, and closes his philipic with the curse that Spurgeon is said to append to his services, then we are surely undergoing affliction.

How many have said to you and to me—"No one who believes the Bible and is familiar with its teachings can doubt the doctrine of the eternal torment of the impenitent." In one phrase or another, we have all endured this bitter private excommunication. We fancied that we should escape this trial: the test of "all men (apparently) speaking evil of us." But it was not so to be. Well: a faith that will not stand up, in all respects, in the house of one's personal friends—not for strife, but for the vindication of the right—is not of any value. And the falling away of kindred and denominational relatives and friends ought not to impair, but the rather intensify, our adherence to and zeal for that which our humble but sincere minds, after prayerful consultation with the Bible, take and approve as truth.

I have found companionship occasionally with learned men who, although they were shining lights in a sect, yet had no conceit as to their creeds or articles. They did not call me an infidel because I did not believe in many of their orthodox dogmas. And I have known it to be the case that men of such character and catholicity were denounced by persons professing the Advent Christian faith, because in the light that they had they did not receive and preach Advent truths. It don't do any good in religious controversy to call names; and truth cannot be stared out of countenance by a grave-yard full of editorial exclamation points. To club another with the term "soul-sleeper" (a misnomer, in its place) and "infidel" and "Bible-rejector" may be inflicting pain upon a friend, or exciting simple regret in a stranger. I do not like to have my friends call me a hater or spurner of God's word; and although I was once considered "first-rate" at epithet coining and flinging, I cannot see my way clear to deal in that business to-day. And as for staring a man out of all interest in the Bible, I insist the process is ridiculous; it cannot be done. If we wished to retaliate in kind—thinking that for some reason expedient and permissible—the opportunity is abundant. After all, straight talk is the best.

When we are criticised, it is of great advantage to us to have the grounds of the criticism fully set forth. Then we can judge for ourselves whether we are justly reviewed and reprimanded, or simply abused. So we like to have every preacher publicly deliver a sermon, or print a book or newspaper article, when he proposes to overthrow in one grand sweep the doctrine of eternal life only in Christ, and bring shame upon its advocates. For it may be that he (and others in similar scouting mood on other topics) quotes much Scripture only to surround it with a mass of non sequitur context.

To say merely that if such or such is not the exact case the Bible record is not true, is one of the cheap sentences of our opponents; trying to make the Bible bear the sins of their articles. When we begin to adopt this style of writing, we shall be passing into the worst offences of intellectual bigotry. The retort is almost always convenient; and then the controversy would rapidly degenerate into challenges for truth based respectively on isolated texts, or fragments of Scripture paragraphs.—Crisis.

James Fisk Jr.

No man in our country ever before amassed a colossal fortune so rapidly; but no man ever wrought so much, and such various damage to the community in so brief a space of time. The Rev. Mr. Flagg reported that Fisk once said to him, that he did not desire money for its own sake, but only for the good he could do with it! And this ironical remark (which doubtless Fisk told again as a good joke to his harlots and pimps), the Christless teacher coolly recites as an illustration of his character! But let us give Fisk the benefit of the doubt; and let us see how he did use his money.

He used it in his railroad operations, to "buy up" legislators, to corrupt judges, to defraud American shareholders, and to swindle the foreign creditors by wholesale.

He bought a theatre with it, and produced plays and dances so indecently licentious that, even in New York, which had endorsed and eulogized the "Black Crook," the entire press cried out in horror at his profanation of the drama. He drove all woman with any pretext of virtue from its walls by the unutterable foulness of his dancers and actresses. It became a resplendent vestibule of the brothel, nothing more; the sumptuous palace which led to the strange woman's doors. He probably did more to corrupt the youth of New York than all the other malign influences of that city. All this the Rev. Mr. Flagg knew, or ought to have known; indeed, he is a criminal in his ignorance if he did not know it.

Fisk's management of the Erie Railroad, seeking only to enrich himself, left its track in a criminally dangerous condition, and resulted in disasters so frequent and terrible that nothing but the prompt and general withdrawal of public patronage from it could move him to make it safe for travel. Every life lost by the disasters that were caused by his mismanagement, was as truly a murder by Fisk, as his death was a murder by Stokes.

We need not dwell on his financial exploits. Black Friday will be remembered for a generation as one of the saddest days in our commercial annals. Thousands were ruined for life by Fisk's so-called "brilliant operations" on that memorable day. It was gambling on a stupendous scale. He scattered desolation as a fool scatters firebrands. He showed himself the fiercest of petroleum throwers in his work of destruction. To us the saddest thought of that day, however, was less the ruin done, than the fact that, in the nineteenth century, in this complex and beneficent civilization of ours, the commercial system of our country is so rudimental and insecure in its organization, that it was possible for a prosperous peddler, or any combination of adventurers to accomplish such a disastrous victory over the legitimate business of the land. Have we no statesmen among us? Is there no remedy for acts like this? Or, must we wait for a cure until some other bold harlequin again rises, and fiddles, while our credit is consuming in the fire of his own setting?

The grave should throw its tender mantle over every dead man's personal vices or weaknesses, if they were not flaunted in public gaze, or unless the stern demands of public morals make it necessary to speak of them, so that his influence or example may not unduly arrest the progress of the race. When ministers of Christ invoked Webster's name to shield the crime of slavery, it was legitimate and right to tell of his personal vices, in order to break the unholy spell. But Fisk never asked charity; he never made the slightest pretext of decency in his life; he openly defied every sentiment that men of all creeds hold dear. He did not sin in secret, and seem pure in public; he was not a shamed hypocrite, but a shameless reprobate; he rioted in his lusts, and proclaimed it from the housetops. He seldom rode down Broadway, excepting in an open carriage with a bawd of the lowest moral type on either side of him On that Black Friday, even, when he knew he was to carry ruin to thousands of homes, he was escorted to his office by a brace of harlots. The story which shall truly tell of his death, must begin with his seduction of a young man from his home; his introduction of Stokes to one of his own mistresses—only one of them; and his cowardly and remorseless hounding of him, until, ruined, and stung, and maddened, his victim turned round upon him, and hurled him into a bloody grave. This Mephistopheles fell by the bullet of a Faust, for the love of a Messalina Margaret.

It would need a volume for a thorough record of Fisk's acknowledged crimes. Of course, he had some virtues. Who has not? Not men, devils only. This Dives threw crumbs to Lazarus, now and then, instead of kicking him from his door. He stole by the million, and was generous by the hundred. The moral leper had a few spots in him. Far be it from us to deny one—the least—of them. But when we pronounce a verdict on a career, we must judge it as a whole; and thus viewing the public life of Fisk, no impartial student can hesitate to rank him with the vilest criminals of history.—Redpath in Zion's Herald.

From Arkansas.

Please send in haste some more books and tracts. There is a great cry here now for Advent publications. There is a lively interest now which will increase. I preached last Sabbath at our chapel in this place, to a good audience, on the nature and destiny of man as revealed in the Bible. A number of the brethren who were very much opposed to our views, have since laid down their prejudices, and taken a stand for the truth. But the best of all is this: It being generally understood that I had "gone Advent," and that I was about to carry my church with me, some of the old brethren of our Association became alarmed for our safety at Pleasant Plains. So an old brother preacher, who is one of the strongest Baptists I ever saw, heard of my appointment to preach the sermon before mentioned, went to work earnestly, and after about two weeks preparation come up from Searcy, where he lives, a distance of twenty-five miles, to hear the sermon and reply to it. He notified me of his intentions. After I concluded I kindly invited him to improve the opportunity. But, shocking for him, his two week's preparation had vanished like vapor, and he declined. I asked him as we went home why he did not reply. He said he was "not prepared." He asked me for some Advent books and tracts; so I gave him the Advent Quarterly which I had just received, together with all the papers I had, which I think will give him all the work he can do for sometime to come.

I am making preparation for a discussion with one of the ablest Baptist preachers in our country. We shall discuss the Bible doctrine of immortality, with some other points relative to our views. Now is a good time to sell tracts while the excitement is high, and if you will send a lot of good tracts, and books I can use them to good advantage. I will also pledge $10 towards paying the debt of the Association. I long to see it disentangled, so that all its powers, in full, may be brought to bear in disseminating the truth, in the hour of theological darkness.

Pray for us, that God may give us grace sufficient for our day, and the truth still lift her shining face above the traditions and superstitions of this present evil age; and may those who have espoused her cause press nobly on to victory or to death, if need be, accounting that "our light afflictions which are but for a moment work out for us a far more exceeding and eterna weight of glory."

Yours, in hope of a better resurrection. G. W. CROSBY.

Illinois.

ANNUAL SESSION.

The Illinois Advent Christian Conference held their Annual Session at Rochelle, Ogle Co. commencing Jan. 18, closing the following Sabbath.

Members present: Elds. N. W. Spencer, F. Burr, Wm. McCullock, H. G. McCullock, M. McCullock, S. E. Mabey, C. W. Smith, A. A. Crocker, A. C. Kingsley, E. H. Burington, A. Cairns, S. B. Mabey.

Members Received: Elds. Wm. H. Kendall, Wm. L. Skeels. A. Cairns.

Church received: Mansfield, Piatt Co.

Delegates: H. Halroyd and S. Stevens of Genoa; H. Robbins and W. Watson of Afton.

Business Com. F. Burr, W. McCullock, E. H. Burington.

Com. on Nomination. Wm. McCullock, F. Burr, A. A. Crocker.

Officers for the ensuing year: N. W. Spencer, Pres't. C. W. Smith, Vice Pres't. S. B. Mabey, Sec'y. L. H. Davis Treasurer. Directors: Wm. McCullock, F. Burr, D. S. Clark.

Reports of Quarterly Conferences: District, No. 1. H. G. McCullock, Sec'y. Held four meetings: DeKalb, Rochelle, Genoa, and Afton. At the latter place an excellent interest was manifested.

District No. 2: Held three meetings. Rutland, Ottawa, and Long Point.

District No. 3. Reported by W. McCullock. Held meetings at Toulon, Neponset, and Ionia, with good success.

District No. 4, by S. E. Mabey. Held meetings at Yorktown, also two grove meetings. Interest good, and the field large.

Report of ministers and churches:

Afton. C. W. Smith reports good state of feeling and good meetings, Sunday school, etc. Elds. H. G. McCullock and Smith labor with them.

Beemerville. Church small and new, somewhat tried of late yet are holding on to the faith of the gospel.

Genoa. Generally prosperous. M. McCullock resigned pastorate, and E. H. Burington is now pastor. Interesting S. S. and Bible Class. Membership about twenty active workers.

Aurora. Church firm amid discouragements. C. W. Smith pastor. Wish preachers to call.

Milroy. C. W. Smith preaches once in four weeks. Good interest to hear, and hope for better days.

Yorktown. No great change. Some conversions. Forty members. Good interest, S. E. Mabey pastor, who labors near Amboy and in Mineral.

Amboy. C. C. Marston pastor. Thirty-eight members. Preaching once in two weeks. Prayer meetings, good attendence, and interest to hear the word.

E. H. Burington. No regular appointments until last Aug. Now with church at Genoa. Am fully in the work, and expect to give my whole time to the ministry.

A. A. Crocker. Got the harness on anew, and feel like w[illegible] and mean to be more active in th[illegible]

Mayfield. Reported by A. C. Kingsley. Two additions. Twenty members. Preaching once in four weeks by H. G. McCullock. Hold Union S. S. with the Disciples. Good substantial membership but somewhat scattered, one baptised. A. C. Kingsley preaches only occasionally, being aged and infirm. Has done some missionary work, and the Lord blessed.

J. Drain, reported by S. E. Mabey as good and faithful in the work, though aged and infirm.

DeKalb. About thirty-five members. S. B. Mabey pastor. Preaching every Sabbath. Growing interest manifest. Several tried, but surmounting the trials in a measure. Eight or ten have desired to renew their covenants with the Lord, and some have requested the the prayers of God's people in our late meetings.

Ionia, by H. G. McCullock. Good interest, with S. S. and prayer meetings. Eighty-five members. Looking for a pastor to settle among them. Need a faithful man of God.

H. G. McCulloch preached regularly the past year at Ionia, Rochelle, Afton, and Mayfield. Traveled 4,500 miles to get to my appointments, and what I have done I have done for Jesus. My health will not permit me to hold protracted meetings.

New Rutland. Wm. McCulloch, pastor. Think the interest is on the rise. Eld. Lothrop also preaches about one-half the time. Thirty members. Good Sabbath school. A cloud of mercy seems to hang over them, ready to break. One converted lately.

Osage. A few holding fast. Eight or ten members. W. McCulloch labors with them to good acceptance.

Chicago. F. Burr, pastor. One hundred and fifty good reliable members. Twenty-two new members since June. Baptized eight, and several others ready to go forward. Some trials by the fire, but all things seem to work for good. Good prayer meetings; Sabbath school of fifty members and Bible class. Prospect good.

Hampshire. M. McCulloch, pastor. Eighteen members. Added during the year eight, and eight baptized. Preaching once in two weeks. Prayer meeting with good attendance, and interest to hear.

M. McCulloch. Trying to love Jesus with all my heart. Labored in in Genoa, Hampshire and Coral in McHenry Co. The Lord is working in the last place mightily, and sinners are coming to Christ. Four or five have made a start of late for the kingdom.

Shabona, by N. W. Spencer. Stands about the same as last year; scattered over two townships, and not many meetings. Br. Spencer has preached in Afton, Clinton and Genoa.

Rochelle, by H. F. DeWolf. Interest very good, and somewhat on the increase. Nineteen members. Four prayer meetings per week. Elds. McCullock and Marston preach for them.

C. C. Marston, (by letter). I have devoted myself during the year entirely to the gospel. I have preached nearly two hundred times, visited the Iowa camp meeting, also Jackson Co. Iowa; Pratt Co. Yorktown, Ancona, Rutland, St. Charles, Rochelle, Farmer City, Chicago and other places in Illinois. In Amboy a few have been added to our number. Organized a church at Mansfield. Have had more real peace and blessedness in the past year than in all my life before. I speak this in honor of my Master. I have found the Lord a good paymaster. If a man works faithfully for him he will be paid and have a part in greenbacks, too, enough at least to supply his temporal needs. The field is ripe to the harvest all about us. Shall we not embrace these favorable opportunities and by united effort of all, the workmen spread wide, and send far the glorious message of our soon coming King.

Some ministers and churches are omitted, who failed to report.

MISCELLANEOUS RESOLUTIONS.

Resolution on the name Advent.

WHEREAS, much is said by persons evil disposed, toward this Conference, concerning the sectarian use of the name "Advent," as though we made it a test of fellowship and membership, therefore

Resolved, that while most of us regard the name "Advent," as peculiarly applicable in its connections to our organization, for the promotion of the Bible doctrine concerning the Second Advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, yet we do not, and never have in any way made its individual adoption or reception a test of fellowship or membership among us.

VOTED that Eld. H. G. McCullock be authorized to write an address for the next annual Conference.

C. C. MARSTON.

Change of Constitution: Resolved, That Art. 6 be changed to "Miscellaneous Business."

Art. 10. All churches, shall give an annual report by letter of their membership and condition, signed by clerk of church and sent by delegate or otherwise to each Annual Conference.

Voted, That Eld's. F. Burr, and S. B. Mabey be authorized to revise the constitution and write an address to be printed in tract form, to be distributed to the churches.

Voted, That money be raised by the Conference to print 500 copies of the Constitution (with the Address) in the revised form

Reading sermons. WHEREAS, We as a Conference do believe that reading sermons in pulpit ministration is in a measure, subversive of the Spirit and power of the gospel, and contrary to the example, set us by Christ and the early church, therefore,

Resolved, That we advise our preaching brethren to avoid as much as possible the growing practice of reading sermons in their ministrations to the church.

WHEREAS, Eld. J. W. Buroughs, of the Northern Illinois A. C. Conference in letters written to the Secretary of said Conference, has declared himself withdrawn from membership and requests a dismission from the same unless said Conference retract terms of settlement as stated in the Secretary's report of the last Annual Conference, which report it as follows:

Resolved, That if Br. Buroughs will state that he is in full sympathy with the Northern Illinois Advent Christian Conference in constitutional arrangement and work, we hereby agree to withdraw the charges preferred by the Board.

Br. Buroughs in open Conference declared his sympathy with the objects of the Conference, and that he would heartily co-operate with his brethren in its constitutional order and work; and that he would also use his influence to unite the churches, he has organized and may build up, with the Conference of which he himself is a member.

And which report is fully endorsed by this Conference as correct in every particular; and

WHEREAS, Eld. J. W. Buroughs persists, in affirming said published statement, to be false and has thereby forfeited his pledge to this Conference, and disregarded his own acknowledgements; and

WHEREAS, said Eld. Burroughs both publicly and privately declared, and published that he is excluded from the columns of the Advent papers because of a difference of opinion, which declaration is known to us to be untrue; and

WHEREAS, Said Eld. Burroughs persists in his spirit of opposition and slander of the Advent Christian body at large, and after due notice has refused to attend this Annual Meeting, for adjustment of these difficulties, therefore

Resolved, That said Eld. J. W. Buroughs according to his own request be and is hereby dismissed from membership of the Northern Illinois A. C. Conference.

A Vote of thanks was tendered to the brethren and friends of Rochelle for their kind entertainment and hospitality.

To show our sympathy and regard for the spiritual and financial trial of our brother, Wm. H. Kendall who has lately came among us, the sum of $25.25 was raised (including $5 paid by the friends of Rochelle) for him.

Voted, To send Eld's W. W. Spann, J. S. Lawyer, and F. S. Thomson, a letter to show our confidence, sympathy, and desire to heartily co-operate with them in their field of labor, and their new conference arrangements in Southern Illinois.

The preaching during Conference was excellent. Unity and harmony prevailed in all the deliberations. We part with a determination to try to stand firm, united in heart amid the perils of these times, and heartily co-operate with each other and with the great Head of the church in laboring for the salvation of the precious perishing souls out of Christ all about us.

S. B. MABEY, Sec'y.

Advent Christian Times.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 6, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - EDITOR

To THE Advent churches in Michigan, I have to say on account of domestic afflictions and some special engagements, I cannot visit you so soon as I had promised. I trust the Lord will yet open the way, and that too in good time. The Lord bless you more and more.

I begin an engagement to help Br. Whitmore, Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 11, and continue one or two weeks.

THE DISCUSSION.

Our reply to Eld. Braden's Fourth Letter will appear next week. After that we expect to resume publishing an article for each of us each week.

PERSONAL.

We find it impossible to reply to all the letters addressed to us by sympathising friends concerning our bereavement in the loss of Edwin. These communications have been a great help and comfort to us all; and we trust the writers will feel that they are appreciated if not answered directly.

ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., of Newton, promises the Watchman and Reflector a series of articles on the condition of man in death. We shall keep our readers posted as to their progress, especially if he should bring out any thoughts in addition to those expressed in his published work on the subject. We fear, however, it will only be a rehash.

THE Unitarians have just lost two of their prominent preachers—Mr. Hepworth of New York, who has gone over to orthodoxy, and Mr. Dall whom they sent to India as a missionary to convert the heathen, who was instead converted by them, and has joined the Brahmo Somaj. It is understood that Mr. Dall is the only missionary the Unitarians have ever sent to the heathen; and the fact that they have converted him is not encouraging.

DR. LITCH, in the Advent Herald, is reviewing a writer in The Crisis on the Penalty of Sin. The Doctor declares his subject guilty of willful falsehood and deception. We have not read the articles in The Crisis; but we observe that Dr. Litch uses the unrevised and ignores the revised edition of Webster. If he will beg or borrow or buy a copy of the latest editions he will find that some of the definitions on which he lays so much stress have been quietly ignored by the standard Lexicon. It no longer declares the immortality of the soul "a fundamental doctrine of Christianity."

THE Advent Herald says "the question of man's nature and destiny is awaking no small interest." So we judge from the demand for our paper, books and tracts. The Herald adds: "It is well know that there are several papers published in this country which are very largely devoted to the advocacy of materialistic views, while there is none in which the opposite views are made equally prominent. Occasionally however other papers besides the Advent Herald have an article bearing on the same question." Zion's Herald lately asked some questions concerning a certain exegesis of the parable of Dives and Lazarus; but very wisely abstaine[illegible] any notice of Eld. Collins' wo[illegible] on the subject, though we sent a copy immediately after its publication.

OF all the curiosities of paganism there is nothing more inexplicable than the superstition which turns tombs into well-stocked larders. In the funeral procession of Wong-Hang-Soon, a wealthy Chinaman of San Francisco, there were five express wagons full of roasted pigs and chickens, to be deposited with the corpse in the sepulcher. Now, the mourners know very well that ghosts do not eat pig; they know equally well that their gods do not eat it; they do not eat it themselves; they at least do not expect the priests to eat it. Then why, in the name of common sense, do they decorate the cold and silent grave with roast pig? We understand flowers well enough; there is a sentiment in the floral and funereal deposits; but why pig? However, let us not laugh. Why did the well-cultured Greek provide the corpse with a bit of money, to discharge Charon's ferriage withal?—N. Y. Tribune.

—The Tribune seeing the absurdities and vagaries of immaterialism so clearly should abandon the system. Its fruits generally testify against it.

HELP WANTED.

We have a large and growing interest in N. W. Missouri, especially in DeKalb, and also Clinton county. Would like some good brother to come and locate with the church three miles west of Stewartsville. Any one who will come properly recommended can do well here. I am laboring constantly, and cannot attend to one third of the calls. Why do not some of our ministers in the East come West, where they can find something to do? I do hope the Lord will direct the footsteps of some this way to assist in the proclamation of the great truths of the kingdom; which many would gladly receive if they could but hear. If any wish to locate with the brethren they will please correspond with Eld. J. F. Nicholson, Stewartsville, Mo.

Crisis please copy. A. F. DUGGER.

A BRIEF RECOLLECTION OF REV. J. V. HIMES.

[The following sketch of my life appeared in the Christian Standard of Dec. 28, '71. I have been requested to republish it in THE TIMES with some comments. I touch a few points only for brevity's sake, though much more might justly be said. J. V. H.]

BRO. ERRETT:—I perceive by your last issue that one of your correspondents is anxious to know something more of the gentleman whose name heads this communication, and who is announced as one of the chief parties in a discussion soon to commence in the Standard. Believing that the memoirs of disputants, constantly before the reader's mind, increase the interest felt in their efforts, I venture to give you a few of my recollections of the history, ministerial character and labors of Mr. Himes.

I do this that I may add my mite to to the interest of the anticipated discussion. I hope that it will be thorough; for the religious minds of both the East and the West have for some time been agitated on the Materialistic and the Spiritualistic phases of these themes. A thorough discussion of all questions clustering around the ultimate disposal of the body, soul and spirit in the light of Divine Revelation, is for the present speculative age a desideratum.

Although for years personally intimate with Mr. Himes, I do not profess to know anything of his early life, education, moral and religious, by "interviewing" him or by questioning those better acquainted with his history than myself. I have learned what I write from his open, public, out-spoken and written words and actions—known, heard and read by his associates and contemporaries.

Joshua Vaughan Him[illegible] is a native of the good old [illegible] His early scholastic training could not have extended far beyond that of a good common New England school, for he served a full apprenticeship as a cabinet-maker, and received, at its conclusion, a certificate that he had proved a good boy, a faithful workman, and had mastered the arts and mysteries of that useful and honorable employment. If my memory is not at fault, this apprenticeship terminated in New Bedford, Mass. In this city and vicinity, from 1810 to 1840, the "Christian Connection" were a zealous, active, flourishing people. They were then known, not as "Chrystians" or "New Lights," but simply as a people that wished to wear a New Testament name and to revive New Testament spirituality, life, liberty and zeal. Joshua became one of their number. Every convert in these days "spoke in meeting." To speak in meeting was one of the best evidences to the masses that the speaker had really been "born again," and was in reality a living child of God. Joshua's gifts soon brought him into notice, and the older and discerning members privately expressed their conviction that "our young brother has a call to preach." He was encouraged to "exercise his gifts." He did so, and about the time he attained his majority he was publicly ordained as a minister of the gospel.

About this time a few members of the "Christian Church" in Boston, built a plain, but very good house of worship, on the corner of Summer and Sea streets. The senior leading members had long been admirers of Elias Smith, who for many years had been one of the most useful preachers in New England. His influence and usefulness increased until he tumbled into the materialistic pit. So soon as the absolutely "literal" interpretation of the prophecies, and the annihilation of the wicked became the chief themes of his sermons, and the productions of his pen, his influence for good began to wane. Converts to Christ became less numerous—divisions and contentions followed, and he landed in Universalism, and at last even lectured for an Atheistic club of the Abner Kneeland stamp!

The church in Boston ran down very low. One of its most wealthy members, Jacob Tedd—who made his money by manufacturing New England rum—wrote and published a pamphlet to prove that when wicked men die, that is the last of them. The righteous only would be raised up to enjoy another life. The church was in a fearfully low condition—well nigh to dissolution. To prevent this catastrophe, the few who loved the original ground on which Smith and Jones stood twenty-five years previously invited young Himes to settle in Boston. He was young but zealous. His hair was then very dark, strongly contrasting with its present appearance. His eyes, very black and sharp, glistened as though an ardent zeal was burning within him. His face was round and ruddy. His dress was always neat and clean, and his entire manner and bearing were those of a very honest, sincere, earnest young man.'

Through his influence many of the scattered flock were again collected and the church soon gained a prominence and an influence not enjoyed for many previous years. During 1834 "Elder" Himes—as his brethren then designated him—made no secret of his convictions that the doctrines of "soul sleeping," and the "destruction of the wicked" had been the canker-worms that had gnawed the spirit, life, zeal and good works out of not only the Boston "Christian Church," but every other where it had been made prominent. So much was he opposed to materialism in those days, that he carefully used all his influence to prevent the settlement, over the neighboring churches, of any preacher avowedly a materialist.

Elder Himes was not in those days disputatious. He rather avoided debate—even in private. He had then never engaged in public discussions of any kind; but I well remember hearing him often questioning those who leaned towards "soul sleeping:" "Do you believe matter can think? Is it possible for your hand or foot to think or reason? The spirit that came from God, and which goes to God, 'when the dust returns to the earth as it was,' can not be material and mortal!" This last affirmation was uttered with a solemnity and earnestness that proved a "nail in a sure place" on more than one occasion, as the writer can gratefully testify. That Bro. Himes should now be the champion of a doctrine that proved the germ of infidelity in some of the finest minds in New England, seems to me scarcely credible. Every Christian preacher in New England, who made his materialism prominent, ended in Universalism, skepticism or something worse.'

During Elder Himes' ministry in Boston, he became influential in all the New England churches, and his influence fostered education and the distribution of tracts and periodicals. He readily became the agent for the works and publications of Alexander Campbell, and so much was he pleased with a sermon on Christian Union, delivered in Boston, by Elder T. Fanning—now President of Franklin College, Tenn.—that he printed and published it, and gave it a very wide circulation.

When Bro. Campbell visited the East in 1836, Elder Himes was the first to take him by the hand to introduce him to a Boston audience, as well as to accompany him to Lynn and Salem. That Bro. Campbell's influence was increased by Elder Himes' volunteer officiousness is not certain. But that it prevented any members of his flock investigating the differences between the doctrine and worship in which their pastor was training them and those advocated by Brother Campbell and his associates is very probable.'

Elder Himes was at that time favorably disposed toward the leading principles of the "Reformation." The pugilistic disposition, the anti-ministerial spirit, and the popularity among a certain class of our ministers of denouncing "hirelings," did more to prevent the full co-operation of Elder Himes with the "Disciples" at this time, than the doctrine they taught or the order of worship that obtained among them. However, this is but my private opinion. But certain it is that Elder Himes, during 1835, adopted our manner of receiving candidates for immersion, and in the act emphasized the formula, "I baptize you into the name," etc. Of this I was a delighted witness in Lynn, on a memorable occasion. At the same time to those who made a specialty of the primitive gospel as taught on the day of Pentecost, he kindly said, "Bro. ——— you cannot succeed with that doctrine yet in New England." And yet he opened his pulpit to those who made it prominent, and co-operated with others in their ordination. The question of success seemed to be the engrossing one with him for several years. [In the meantime he was active and popular among Abolitionists, Unitarians and moral and political reformers in general.]

In this state of mind, the opposition of abolitionists to Church and State disgusted him, and the want of faith in revivals among the Unitarians made him less willing to court their influence; he wanted faith in the success of the apostolic gospel, but he was resistless and active, and developed so much of "progress," that the "old fogies of his congregation became more or less dissatisfied, and the result was that his special friends and admirers formed a second congre[illegible]ion. He was now in the energy [illegible] prime. And just then the lectures [illegible] William Miller began to attract attention. Elder Himes invited Miller to Boston—the grand center of all things new and radical. Miller's lectures were a success. Himes published them. In a word, from that day he became the great leader of Millerism. Without his life, energy, industry and indomitable perseverance, William Miller would never have been known beyond the boundaries of Low Hampton, N. Y.

Millerism was a success. Elder Himes' instrumentality in disseminating the doctrine of the Lord's personal appearance in 1842 was everywhere apparent. Even our Bro. Walter Scott—then of Carthage, Ohio—pronounced Joshua V. Himes the Napoleon of the press! and when Himes returned to New England, after one of his Western tours, he boasted that even Scott's converts to the ancient gospel came forward to the anxious-seat for prayers at the conclusion of some of his lectures on the Lord's appearance in 1842.

But the Lord did not return that year nor the next. It was then discovered that there was some chronological mistake, but on the 23d day of October, 1844, he would certainly return. Himes was then publishing the Midnight Cry. The millions of sheets issued by him of this publication certainly entitled him to great praise for energy and activity. The issue of the last day—expressing the most confident faith and hope that he should never issue another—was truly marvelous. But the final morning opened with a beautiful October sun; a more delightful day never dawned on old Massachusetts. It passed serenely, but the leaders had a prophecy to quiet even the myri[illegible] of their enthusiasts. It was "If we [illegible]ry, wait!" The leaders soon resumed their position and influence, and Elder Himes perpetuated his increasing notoriety by the publication of the Advent Herald, which paper he continued for many years. Its specialty was that the coming of the Lord was to be the next great event in the Divine programme—all other previous prophecies having been fulfilled.'

But he and his co-workers had established a mass of excitable material around them that would not be satisfied with anything so tame as uncertainty, and hence, every few years since, a party or schism has been formed to fix on a certain time. Even Elder Himes himself, during 1860, made an impression by a carefully written lecture, that he confidently looked for the Lord in 1868. He thought chronology and prophecy pointed in that direction. I allude to this fact merely to show that the storm of enthusiasm that he had aided in raising was not easily controlled, and that even he was not beyond its influence.

But during nearly all this time Elder Himes retained his faith in the spiritual nature of man. I have been unable to ascertain when he embraced his present views. None of his changes have been to me more surprising. He had witnessed their blight and curse. They had destroyed the life and power of so many good men and so many flourishing and useful congregations; their influence had been evil, and only evil, and that continually. I cannot imagine the influence that could be brought to bear upon his mind and heart that could make of him an advocate and a defender of materialism.

His associate in the Herald, a Mr. Bliss, was a clear-headed, good writer, and for a long time the blows he struck against the materialism of many of the Adventists were strong and telling; but their modes of interpreting prophecy were all so gross and material that the results could not be otherwise than they have been.

I remember one instance of the want of strict honesty on the part of an Advent lecturer, narrated by Mr. Bliss, that it may be proper here to repeat: This lecturer had got up a sermon to show that a large proportion of the great and distinguished men of the world, disbelieved the doctrine of eternal punishment. Among the celebrated names collected was that of Dr. Sam. Johnson. The lecturer had made garbled, or, more likely, second hand quotations from his works, to array his influence and learning against the doctrine. Mr. Bliss heard him, and being more familiar with Dr. Johnson's works than the speaker—on the supposition that he was an honest man—corrected his mistakes, and showed so clearly and distinctly from the Doctor's works that the speaker had misrepresented him, that the lecturer was completely silenced. He could make no response.' He did not attempt it. And yet, in an adjoining town, at his very next lecture, he made the very same assertions, and used the garbled extracts from Dr. Johnson, for the same purpose. Then Mr. Bliss published this statement in the Herald. I refer to these facts, not to charge Adventist lecturers with a want of integrity, but to show that fifteen years ago, the Advent Herald was not the organ of materialism.

When, then, I saw a paper from Michigan with Elder Himes as its editor, with a standing announcement of materialism as one of its cardinal doctrines, I was filled with wonder and astonishment that a man could once be so near the truth and then lend his influence to the propagation of that which has proved to so many the halfway house to atheism.'

Joshua V. Himes is not an original thinker. He never discovered a mine of thought; but he has been a diligent worker, and has collected with great care and much good judgment the best thoughts and discoveries of others. His editorials were always brief, some striking lecture, exposition, or effort of another furnishing the thought and the mode of treatment. This too has characterized all his sermons and addresses which I have heard or read. I presume therefore, such will be the character of the anticipated discussion. This will make it more valuable; for e has the ability, the industry, and he energy to collect the best arguments and the most precious facts and easonings yet published on his side of he question. I hope that Bro. Braden will find him a pleasant, agreeable disputant, and that he will prove himself equally urbane, patient and industrious. Of Bro. B.'s history I know nothing. Will you favor us with a history of it?

Pardon my prolixity. Anxious that truth may be elicited, and that many may be willing to receive it in the love of it, I remain, yours in the Lord.

JOHN GALE.

NOTES.

There are a few no doubt unintentional errors in the above "sketch" which I briefly correct in the following notes.

1. I was not born in the "Old Bay State," but in North Kingston, R. I. I attended the primary department of Master Chapel's school, Wickford until 1811. Then for two years I had three months schooling each year, which was all I ever enjoyed; for I was then taken by my father to New Bedford Mass., and "bound out" to Wm Knights to learn the Cabinet maker's trade. My father intended to send all his sons to Brown University; but failing in business, he concluded that as he could not give them an education he would give them a good trade, as the next best thing. I followed my occupation faithfully until I received another and higher calling.

2. Jacob Tidd was not an active member in the church. He was a materialist; and in a discussion with the celebrated Hosea Ballou upon the destiny of the wicked obtained decidedly the advantage over that able debater.

Br. Gale says of Eld. Elias Smith, that he was one of the most useful preachers in New England until he tumbled into the materialistic pit. Now Mr. Gale should have known that when Elias Smith left the Baptists he then embraced his "materialistic views," and held them, together with the literal view of the prophecies, all the time of his "great usefulness," and until he fell into Universalism. For a short time he was a deist, and as is said, spoke in Abner Kneeland's hall. But he soon left these errors, and returned to his first love, and was blessed in preaching the gospel again. In his last days he attended our meetings in Chardon St. chapel in Boston, and died in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ. His record is far better than that of the many *im*materialistic backslider, whose names fill the roster of Spiritists, Free Religious and Infidel advocates of this day. Mr. Gale's fling at materialism is not only out of character, but not even well founded on facts.

Jacob Tidd, who has been referred to, was a wealthy distiller, a business not then considered immoral. He built the Sea St. Chapel, and gave it to the First Christian church of Boston. But he seldom attended worship with us, and was not a member while I was pastor. I began with seven families, and built up the society until the chapel was well filled.

3. It is true in 1834 I held erroneous views, though I then believed I was right; and consequently I opposed the "materialist" views I now maintain But this fact proves nothing. The fact that some who then applauded when I asked, "Can your hand think, or your foot reason?" still think that a very smart saying and an unanswerable objection to "materialism" does not prove that it was or is so. I have since learned better than to urge so silly an objection. One might as well ask—Can we breathe with the stomach, digest food in our lungs, or hear with our eyes? Thought is not an essential quality inherent in all matter; but is a result of the Almighty's handwork in organized material designed for that purpose. Dr. Emmons said God could not make matter think. Those who choose can with him limit the power of the Almighty, and flatter themselves they have thus established their theory. I prefer to believe the testimony of God's book supported, so far as I can learn by "the facts" of consciousness and science.

If my brother will look into this subject as I did, he will no longer esteem it such an incredible thing that I should have changed my views. Let him take the words involved in the controversy—soul, spirit, hades, etc., and go through the Scriptures carefully in search of the sense attached to them by the Holy Spirit. He will learn then that immaterialism is not only extra-scriptural but un-scriptural.

4. "Officiousness" is not a fair word to use of my relations to Alex. Campbell. I invited him to visit my charge. Some others came uninvited. He was well liked, and if he had come alone the results of his visit might have been very different. The attempt to shoulder his failure upon me probably arises from ignorance of some of the facts in the case.

5. The Advent Herald, originally the Signs of the Times was the first Advent paper published. The first number was issued in 1840. The Midnight cry, was started in 1842 and continued until 1848. I published the Herald some seventeen years; then transferred it to others. In 1864 I commenced the publication of a weekly paper in Buchanan, Mich, which is still continued and is known as the Advent Christian Times. As Br. Gale remarks, one of its cardinal doctrines is the so-called "materialism."

6. The party referred to though a believer that death is not life was not then and has not since been personally identified with the Adventists, although laboring among them. We denounce all such unfairness as severely as our opposers can. We only remark that *im*materialists have no clubs to throw in this matter. The candid readers of that school of controversial literature understand this fact.

7. Calling materialism "the half-way house to atheism" is, to say the least, disengenuous. I cannot help thinking that this "biography" was designed to prejudice the readers of the Standard against my position and arguments, by getting them thoroughly associated in their minds with infidelity and atheism. I would prefer to let the debate rest upon its own merit, and let the arguments decide the question. The fact that some materialists have become infidels is no more against materialism than the fact that many immaterialists haveing renounced the Bible, in itstself proves immaterialism wrong. What are the great infidels of the day? whose names fill the lists of Spiritists and Free Religious and anti-religious teachers and preachers? Backslidden immaterialists, I answer. If our opponents wish to settle the merits of this question by an appeal to the character of the fruit borne on the two trees, we are ready to meet them on that issue.

A Misapplied Text.

"Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3: 4).

A few days since I head a minister (said to be orthodox) refer to the above text as the foundation of Universalism. Blind guide, thought I; your own fondly cherished immortal-soulists and claimed-to-be orthodoxy finds its foundation in the same text. I do not believe Universalism is founded upon Bible truth any more than orthodoxy; but of the two Universalism is the most consistent with Scripture; if the soul is the real man, and is a part o God himself, and must exist a conscious entity as long as God exists. Is it consistent to affirm that God will punish a part of himself in eternal torment? Is it consistent with the attributes of the God of the Bible—which are justice, mercy and truth—in any act of justice to torment the sinner in eternal flames, when neither the sinner nor any other person is benefited by it? Is it consistent that the God of love should hold hold a sinner in eternal conscious suffering that he might glory in the groans and curses of the damned, who still increases his guilt? Is it consistent that this infernal region with all its writhings, anguish, agonies, groans, curses, blasphemies and heilish yells is in sight and hearing of heaven and will add to the joys and glory of the saved? Is it consistent with justice, mercy and truth, that such a state should exist as long as those attributes exist? Is it consistent with any use of language, English or any other, that anything that is immortal can suffer eternal pain? There must be a consuming, a wasting in order to suffering. Immortality cannot waste nor consume, therefore cannot suffer pain. If the soul is immortal, it is fire proof. There is no element that can effect it, or power that can hurt or destroy it. It could be just as happy in the fire as any where else. Is it consistent with truth that such a state of things should exist to all eternity? Says Jesus of the Father, "Thy Word is truth." (Jno. 17: 17). Is such doctrine found in the Bible? If so, where? Do we find it in Gen. 2: 17—the penalty of God's law—"Thou shalt surely die?" Universalism says this means that his sins would die with the body, while the soul would go to heaven, to God's right hand, where are pleasures forevermore. Orthodoxy says this means a threefold death. (1) Spiritual death; (2) temporal death; which is defined to be the death of the house (body) in which the man lives,, while he, the soul escapes out of his prison and goes to God who gave it; (3) death eternal; which is defined to be a death that never dies. Say which savors most of God's truth. Do they not both alike make death meaningless, dishonor God, and favor the serpent's lie to the woman? If men have any right to say that the terms used in God's word do not mean what they do in any other book—that death means life; destroy means preserve in hell torments; perish means to save; and corruption, consume, waste away, be no more, be as though they had not been, burnt up like chaff, like stubble, root and branch, to be ashes, all mean eternal suffering in the flames of hell,—then Universalists have an equal right to say that sin only will be destroyed, while the sinner will be saved through the merits of Christ, who tasted death for every man.

Oh! immortalsoulism, what hast thou done? Robbed us of life and dominion, and power, and brought upon our race pain and sorrow, crying, tears, and death, because our first parents believed thee to be true, when the serpent said, "Ye shall not surely die." Thy fruit has filled the earth with evil, and we have it ripened into Paganism, Mohammedanism, Mormonism, Shakerism, Spiritism, and that God-dishonoring doctrine of eternal torments. Truly darkness covers the earth, and men love darkness rather than light.

JOHN BOWER.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Br. P. Foulks writes that there "is a good prospect of success if some Advent preacher would come to Corry, Pa. Can any one go? ——Sr. Lansing, of New York writes: "My husband, deaf and dumb like myself, and entirely blind, is greatly interested in my reading THE TIMES to him, which I do, of course, by his sense of feeling. He sends one dollar with mine, to help pay the debt."——We understand that some of the Swede brethren are trying to make arrangements to publish Br. Whitmore's work in their language. It is to be hoped that they will succeed.——We understand that Br. Farrow dedicated a new chapel at Carrollton, Ill., in December. His proposal that it be open to the gospel and closed to church frolics and gambling caused some feeling among those committed to latter-day religions.——Br. Albert Farrow baptized nine recently, and six more were pledged for the ordinance. His two children were among those immersed. This prevented his going to Auburn.——A Methodist local preacher in Tennessee writes us that he expects are long to be 'turned out' of that society on account of his Adventism. We shall be glad to receive you, Br. Barr.——Up to Jan. 16, thirty had been united with the church at Arbor Hill, Iowa, under Br. Clark's labors.——Br. G. W. Hurd reports a grand interest where he is laboring. Sr. Rathbun is laboring with him.——Five souls were added to the Chicago church during the month of January, and several were baptised last Sunday.——We learn that there is a good interest in Clinton, Mass., and nine to be baptised. Sr. Barnes is working faithfully there. The church have hired a hall, which is filled to overflowing.——Brn. Burington and Hoge are holding meetings at Sparland, Ill. Good prospects.——A Baptist minister writes: "It is strange; but I cannot speak of the second coming of Christ in my public discourses without being called a 'soul-sleeper.' But nick-names don't change the faith of the gospel."——A Kansas P. M. writing on P. O. business, adds: "Adventists are heretics here. But I give some of their opposers a mighty bother with a work I have. I am not a professor, but can see truth as clearly as any body. How I like to see your opposers 'squirm' when you press Bible truth upon them Push it upon them." We hope our friend will soon enjoy a saving interest in the truth.——Thirty-two have embraced the faith under Br. Hink's labors near Quitman, Mo.

The Times.

AT HOME.

- - - Three Chicago aldermen are in jail for taking bribes.

- - - The great robbers of the late New York city government have been indicted by the Grand Jury.

- - - Severe snow storms continue at both the East and the West. The Mississippi is gorged with ice as far down as Belmont, Mo.

- - - There was a magnificent display of the Aurora at the East last Sunday evening, chiefly in the South and West. The crimson, blood-red and green hues are described as gorgeous.

- - - We observe that other printing offices beside our own are suffering from the difficulty of procuring good paper promptly. We have not been able to get a good article in good time for a month or more.

- - - Postmaster General Creswell has directed the new regulations on newspapers sent by mail to be strictly enforced. No name or memorandum can be made on a newspaper inside of the wrapper on which the address is written. It is barely permissible to mark an article with pen or pencil. More than this subjects the paper to letter postage, and the violater of this law to a fine. No printed card, handbill, or advertisement, no written notice, letter or slip of any kind whatsoever must be folded in the paper. To do any of these things is to violate the law. Printed slips pasted on the outside, or folded in papers or periodicals, soliciting notices, are also violations of the law. Senders of transient papers can send bundles of printed matter by weight or transient postage charges, but must not send any written matter in such bundles.

ABROAD.

- - - Emigration from Great Britain to this country is on the increase.

- - - France must increase her taxes 30 per cent. to meet her expenses.

- - - The French Protestants will hold a synod this year, the first time since 1660.

- - - Thiers is reported to have said he has no hope of a republic in France. But this is rumor. Bourbon, and Napoleonist and republican intrigues appear to abound, and the future is all uncertain.

- - - England is really very much excited over true and false reports about the American claims under the Alabama treaty, and a good deal of bad feeling has been developed. Some papers advise that the treaty be repudiated.

- - - Victor Hugo predicts another military despotism in France within six months: thinks Bonapartists will have control An indefinite continuation of the present chaotic condition is more probable.

- - - Serious naval disasters are again multiplying. A dreadful steamship wreck and loss of near a hundred lives, is supplemented by the burning of a St. John (N. B.) ship with all on board.

- - - A definition of the difference between "Old School" and "New School," has been given thus:—"The children of Old School Presbyterians sin as soon as they are born, and the children of the New School Presbyterians as soon as they know how!"

- - - Count de Chambord has issued a manifesto claiming the French crown and throne. He will probably not get it. France—like most Romanist countries—seems greatly in want of a man. At present the country is a political chaos. There are plenty of rumors but little that is reliable.

- - - "The Romanists of France are exerting all their powers of organization and priestly influence to keep their people, and regain those who are lost to them. They are now forming a League of God. The Roman liturgy is restored in the Paris churches, and the Gallican ejected. But the infidel power, bold and subtle, is increasing in influence daily.

- - - The Alabama treaty, announced as the beginning of a new era in national relations, when nations would arbitrate and make war no more, seems like to give rise to more bitter feelings than have yet existed between England and the United States. The English press were never so bitter as now, and propose to repudiate the treaty and refuse to submit to the proposed arbitration. The occasion for this feeling is the real or supposed demand of "consequential" as well as actual damages by the Alabama and other privateers. The millennium will have to be postponed, we fear.

- - - This passion for revenge is very ominous for the peace of Europe. It constantly presents France as the ready ally of any power that will attack Germany. Weak as the former country seems, she appears no weaker than Prussia after Jena, and Austria after Austerlitz. Yet, in less than ten years after Jena and Austerlitz, the Prussians and Austrians were in Paris. France may hope for the alliance of Russia, whose present disposition is uncertain, and her future course still more so. There are endless possibilities for collision, among the complicated interests of the Continent, when there is ever present that fact of a bitter hatred of one nation for another. The senseless, evil fashion of national hatreds and revenges seemed to get a new lease of life, when Germany used to the utmost her advantage over her fallen foe.—Chris. Union.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

- - - The London Lancet thinks that during the coming spring, or early in the summer, cholera will reappear in Western Europe.

- - - The Jews appear to be gathering in North Africa instead of Palestine. Their number in that country is rapidly increasing. In China there are black Jews—probably descendants of proselytes.

- - - A case was being tried before a Presbytery not long ago, when the counsel for the defendent urged the plea of moral insanity. A venerable Presbyter said: "Mr. Moderator, this disease of moral insanity seems to me to be identical with what the older theologians in their unscientific way call total depravity."

- - - Almost everywhere we see an alarming tendency in the church to coalesce with the world in its haste to be rich; to seek popularity; to engage in its light and airy amusements; to substitute outward ceremony for heart work: to ignore the injunctions of the great apostle of the Gentiles.

- - - The example of the Waldenses should have the effect to stimulate American Christians to greater efforts in mission work. With only nineteen churches and a membership of about twenty thousand, they have established thirty-seven mission churches, and are at work in all parts of Italy with great zeal and energy.

- - - Of religion in Paris a writer there says: There is very little aggressive action. One asks right and left what are church-members doing to bring souls to God? and the almost universal reply is 'Nothing Collectively.' Faith has been stunned, and has not yet revived." Yet there are some who boldly proclaim the simple gospel, and under their preaching inquirers begin to appear. No country is more in need of a revival of the true gospel in its genuine power than France.

- - - In Cincinnati last week a convention was held with the object of taking measures to insert a religious clause—a recognition of the God of the Bible—into the constitution of the United States. It is said that the convention on the whole was a failure, because the elements could neither heartily unite nor compromise. The whole movement is only a sort of religio-political "splurge," and will amount to nothing. The idea of making a nation Christian by putting it in the constitution, savors of the ancient national conversions by Roman priests—a forced submission, followed by a sprinkle en masse.

- - - Attention is called to a card from the Chicago Aid and Relief Society, published in another part of this paper. It will be seen that, owing to building operations being retarded by the inclemency of the weather, there is at present a surplus of labor in the city; and, as workingmen are coming here in numbers, many of them being unable to get employment and being without funds, find it necessary to apply to the Society for assistance (there were eighty such cases we are informed last Saturday),—thus throwing upon it quite an addition to the heavy burden it is legitimately bearing. When spring opens, there will undoubtedly be a different state of things, and employment for all who come.—Chi. Tribune.

- - - A band of religious enthusiasts, of which one J. T. Curry (a monomaniac) is the Prophet, has purchased 200 acres of land near Augusta, Ga. The new home of the colony is called the Land of Canaan, and the members expect to be supplied by the Lord with all the necessaries of life. The foundation of Curry's doctrine is, that the Chaldean word Cyrus translated is the root of Curry, and that, as a matter of fact, the building of the temple was really given to Elder Curry instead of the great Persian monarch. By a curious concatenation of events the Elder is also the Elijah to prepare the world for the judgment day. All proselytes are promised that they shall not die for forty years, and at the expiration of that time they shall be made immortal.

- - - A queer instance of ecclesiastical arrogance comes to us from across the ocean. A few days ago, the Scotch Free Presbytery of Forfar was holding its annual meeting, and the Moderator became incensed at some charges brought against him by one of the clergy. He threatened if the offender did not at once retract them, to "deliver him over to utter condemnation." No answer was made, and this humble follower of God proceeded: "Though I be the least of saints, I don't see that you can afford to treat me with contempt. It would have given me satisfaction to keep you out of the hands of the God of Judgment, but you have rendered this impossible. I therefore deliver you over finally and irrevocably to him." With such examples as this set her by her ministry, it is not surprising that Scotland prefers the Old Testament to the New.

The Call.

The following hymn, by S. L. Conde, of the class of '72, was sung at the last Commencement of Auburn Theological Seminary, and has been adopted as the Seminary Hymn.

Brothers, hark! the Lord is calling,
He has work for us to do;
Long our comrades have been toiling,
Shall we prove to them untrue?
See! the distant light is breaking,
Let us put our armor on;
When the Master calls for waking,
Should we tarry for the morn?

'Tis no time for us to slumber,
For the precious moments fly;
Hear those voices without number,
Crying, "Save us ere we die!"
We can lead them to the fountain,
Where the healing waters flow;
We can point them to the mountain,
Where a refuge they may know.

Shall we shrink from toil or danger,
Fearing that we'll faint or die;
It is God who gives our armor,
Then there's naught can terrify.
God our guide! and God our giver!
Need we lay our banners down?
Surely he will strengthen ever,
And at last will give a crown.

Holy Father, be thou near us,
Here we pledge to thee our all;
Take us, use us, blessed Jesus,
We will follow at Thy call.
May the presence of the Spirit,
With all grace our bosoms fill;
Thine the glory, thine the merit,
Ours the love to do Thy will.

Communications.

Life and Death.

What is life? This is a question which cannot be answered as yet. But while we cannot give a positive definition telling what life is we can to a certain extent give a negative definition, telling what life is not. At present I will say that life is not death. This seems to be a needless statement as no one would be foolish enough to think life was death. But wait a moment and consider the millions of people in this country professing to believe that "everlasting death" rightly interpreted, means everlasting life in misery, and you will see that there are some who can claim that life and death are synonymous terms. Who a few centuries since would have dreamed that in this nineteenth century of wide spread enlightenment, one need argue that life did not mean death or vice versa. But such is the ridiculous fact.

The reason for this is obvious. Popular Christianity has forsaken the Bible as the foundation of its belief and has gone over to the dogmas of Plato. It has left the early faith of the church such as Paul trusted in, and has adapted the inconsistent, undemonstrable dogmas of immaterialism. Yet for sake of show it keeps the Bible chained to its pulpits, and reads out of it occasionally; yet the sermons that follow savor not of its sacred truths, but of the vain philosophy of man. This teaches the inherent immortality of the soul. In order to embrace this gilded deception the Scriptures must be twisted and contorted, and whenever the Bible in plain unequivocal language says, "The soul that sinneth it shall die," it must be understood, "The soul that sinneth it shall live eternally in misery."

Now I am well aware that this same thing has been noticed by other persons, but it should be repeated and re-repeated, until those who are trying to believe God and his word, and at the same time lend a credulous ear to the opposite teachings of heathen philosophers, are made to see their inconsistent position, and either openly deny faith in the Scriptures and yield their souls to the evil influences of immaterialism, or come out squarely and boldly on the platform of God's truth. There is no such thing as serving God and Mammon; and there is no such thing as believing in the Scriptures and also in a philosophy which is at war with them. I have often said that I respect more the honest consistent materialistic doubter, than the inconsistent immaterialistic professed Christian, who knows the ground he stands on. For the former is consistent and true as far as he goes. The only fault with him is, that he does not go far enough to believe in God, which though reprimandable is not so much so as the attempt to maintain that death means life; as to profess to believe in Christ, yet refuse faith in what he says he will do; to pretend to believe God, yet when through Paul he plainly tells us he alone is immortal, refuse to believe God. Give me candor, in preference to profession; consistency to inconsistency.

I wish to press home this truth that life cannot be justly substituted for death, in places where the term death is used in the Bible. Between no two words is there any more of a difference either in our own thoughts or in the words of Scripture. We cling to life; we shun death. We hail one as the greatest blessing. We hate the other as the greatest curse. The former gives us the communion of dear friends, their sympathies, love and assistance. The latter snatches them from us, often without a moment's warning. What fills us with more joy than to see a little one whom we love and cherish as the apple of our eye, full of life and happiness? What makes our hearts heavier, the whole world dark and lonely more than to see that dear one snatched by the icy hand of death and placed in the cold cruel grave? What in the Bible gives us more comfort in this sad affliction than that promise that our dear one shall live again? That we may also, if we so choose, live to enjoy the companionship of our heart's affection? What sends a deeper thrill of fear and sorrow to our hearts than that perchance we may fail to meet the requirements of a just God, and be among that sad multitude who are subject to a second death.

In the one case it is life, desirable, lovely. In the other case death, feared and unwished for. No two words could have a wider difference. Can this wide chasm in their meanings be bridged by mere assumption, and life brought over as an equivalent of death? No, thank God! Not as long as logic finds a place in men's thoughts. For if death in one place meant life, with equal consistency could life in some places be rendered death, and our promise of eternal life easily be changed in its meaning. Would it not be well for all to let God do his own talking to his people in the Bible, and when he threatens the sinner with death, would it not be well to believe God meant what he said, and that he knew as much about the being he himself created, as the poor creature did of God and himself? If God declares us mortal, if we cannot prove him mistaken, and unenlightened, had we not better believe him?

Brother Adventists, let us din this truth in the ears of those who profess to believe it, yet advocate the cause of its opposite, until their inconsistency so plainly stares them in the face that they will either forsake the Bible openly or give up their foolish notion of inherent immortality. It is often asked, why the Adventists make such a hobby of materialism, and if that is necessary to salvation? It lies at the very foundation of faith in Christ: and if you destroy it, the Bible must fall with it, as its golden truths are based upon it. What use of a resurrection if man is immortal; if the all-essential part is already basking in the rays of heaven's splendor? Why need Christ to have died to have saved us from the curse of death if we were not under that curse, but were instead immortal? Or if we all became immortal by the death of Christ? Why should he say unless "ye repent, believe, and be baptised," ye cannot be saved? Why should God have guarded the tree of life in the Garden of Eden if man was already immortal? Cannot a blind man see that this much of the Bible is obsolete if immaterialism is true? Is materialism of no importance then? When upholding it against the popular tide of demonology are we not also upholding the Bible? Cannot all then see why Adventists as well as all who believe in the Bible should be so alive on this subject? It is God's central truth, and never can be effaced, should the whole world believe differently. It does not claim imagination nor mental philosophy (as commonly understood) as its supporter, but it has reason and God's word as its advocates.

The time is near at hand when Christ will come to demonstrate its verity in the glorious resurrection. Till then let the faithful few strive on.

J. D. JONES.

A Correction.

In the Review of Dec. 5, 1871, Eld. J. N. Andrews, in his "Examination" of my work, The First-Day Sabbath, appears to think he has found me "guilty of manifest wrong"—"remarkable absurdity"—"fraud"—and "contradictions" of myself, etc. And Uriah Smith, also, in the same paper, unites with his brother Andrews in a short article headed—Fraud, Fraud, more Fraud! and says: "Such is the exclamation which will involuntarily come to the lips of those who read Br. Andrews' exposure of Eld. Preble. Don't fail to read the articles. The revelations made in this number concerning the course of this man are perfectly astounding......No one can rise from the perusal of these articles devoid of the conviction that when a man has a huge system of assumption to sustain, and nothing but perversion, deception, and fraud with which to sustain it, he will find at last, though the exposure be long in coming, that he would have been better employed at something else. But these articles not only expose the wicked course of Eld. P.," etc. (The reader will presently see on which side of the house these words of Uriah Smith belong.) It is somewhat amusing, but painful withal, to see how some folks will try to fix "fraud" and a "very wicked course" upon others, when the guilt is wholly with them! The mistake (?) which Eld. A. made by his carelessness of reading or something worse, was this: instead of taking my quotations which I made from Dr. Whitby and others, as simply referring to a single Greek word—metaxu; he says: "Eld. P. quotes six translations of Acts, 13:42, to prove," etc. And then, after he quotes this entire verse, the Eld. says: "On this text Eld. P. remarks," etc. Thus Eld. A. by his peculiar ingenuity manufactures a single word into a "text," by taking a verse of twenty-four words, instead of one word as I had it. And after this deceptive shift on his part, he makes the attempt to force the authors, which I had called to my aid in regard to the meaning of one word only, to his side, to aid him in forcing into my mouth his "text!" And not content with this, he also calls to his aid some twenty-five other learned authorities to assist him in compelling me to swallow his "text!" And by such a process as this, he and his friend Smith appear to be quite jubilant over the idea that I have thus been made to contradict myself, and found to be guilty of "fraud," and a very "wicked" man!

I will give the quotation from my book (p.99) where will be found all the evidence which I gave for the signification of the word metaxu;—"This word occurs nine times in the New Testament. We will give them all, and then the reader can see for himself how this word is used:

Matthew 18:15—"Tell him his fault between thee and him alone."
Mathew 23:35—"Between the temple and the altar."
Luke 11:51—"Between the altar and the temple."
Luke 16:26—"Between us and you there is a great gulf."
John 4:31—"In the meanwhile his disciples."
Acts 12:6—"Sleeping between two soldiers."
Acts 13:42—"He preached to them the next Sabbath."
Acts 15:9—"No difference between us and them."
Romans 2:15—"And [their] thoughts the meanwhile accusing."
Parkhurst defines metaxu: "1. Between. Mat. 18:15; 23:35; Rom. 2:15."
Robinson: "Adv. and prep. in the midst, between."
Tyndale: "When they were come out of the synagogue of the Jews, the Gentiles besought that they would preach the word to them between the Sabbath-days."
Wesley: "And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought them, that these words might be spoken to them on the Sabbath between."
Coverdale: "When the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the heathen besought them, that they would speak the word unto them between the Sabbath-days."
Thompson: "And on their going out of the synagogue of the Jews, the Gentiles entreated that these things might be spoken to them, in the interim—till the next Sabbath."
Sharpe: "And when they were gone out, they begged that these words might be preached to them in the week between."
Whitby: "In the week between—or in the Sabbath between."

The reader will notice from the foregoing quotations from my book, that the words in italics are the only words which are to be taken as the signification of this word metaxu, as given by me. Now let us see what Eld. A. himself was compelled to admit in regard to the above quotations, or rather a part of it. He says: "He (Preble) has correctly cited from the Greek concordance, the several instances in which metaxu, the Greek word rendered next in Acts 13:42, is found in the New Testament, and shown how it is rendered each time. That its general signification is that of 'between,' is freely admitted." Thank him for this. But let the reader mark this particular point of the Elder's admission: "That its general signification is that of 'between' is freely admitted." This is all I claimed on this word, and it is all I quoted my authors for. Then how could Eld. Andrews change the issue by calling a single word a "text!" and, also, say that, "Eld. P. quotes six translations of Acts 13:42!" when all I did was to give my authorities for the signification of the single word metaxu. I did not bring in Dr. Whitby or either of my other authors to prove that my conclusions were correct on the whole verse (Acts 13:42), as the reader will see. How, then, could Eld. Andrews change my position, so as to make it appear to his readers that—"Dr. Whitby affirms just the opposite of the statement which Eld. P. has put into his mouth!" And also say of Parkhurst and Robinson, that I caused "these men to cast their influence against what they plainly assert to be the truth," when I did not call either of these men to sustain my views, only so far as to give their first, or primary signification of metaxu. And this my accuser has not and cannot show to the contrary. Eld. A. says in concluding "I know not what words will fitly characterize such an act as this of Eld. P.'s whereby Dr. Whitby is made to state the very reverse of that which he actually published to the world." I also, in concluding, will use the language of Eld. A., with the alteration of a few words, and say of Eld. Andrews, I know not what words will fitly characterize such an act as this of Eld. A.'s, whereby Eld. Preble is made to state things which he never published to the world! But men who are wedded to "the law of sin and death," like Saul of Tarsus before he was converted, appear to feel justified in doing "many things contrary to the name of Jesus," and in defence of their religion, can say, or do almost anything to one who stands in their way. But "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

T. M. PREBLE.

N. CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 13, 1871.

P. S. As an item of news, I will add the following from the pen of Eld. James White, as found in the Review Nov. 21, 1871. He says;

"God has blessed our publishing interests far beyond our expectations. The Association has at least twelve tons of publications on hand, all paid for, and fifteen tons of white paper on hand to print, and every sheet of it paid for. We are about to print ten thousand copies, in pamphlet form, of of Eld. Andrews' faithful exposure of T. M. Preble, and five hundred missionary agents are wanted to put this work into the hands of every first-day and no-day Adventist."

The foregoing will give the reader some idea of the power which the "Association" are bringing to bear upon one man, in order to crush him, because he stands in the way of their Saturday-Sabbath. But the God of Daniel lives still.

Perhaps it might be well for those interested, to preserve these facts, as they may wish to refer to them at some future time.

T. M. P.

The Support of the Ministry.

Should the ministry be supported or should it support itself? Has God imposed any obligations upon the people in regard to this matter, or are we left to do, or not to do just as it may suit our feelings? There exists in certain quarters great prejudice against the idea of "paying the preacher," as it is called. It is supposed by some that it has the appearance of paying a man for doing what God calls him to do. This, however, is a mistaken view of the subject. Properly supplying a minister in his temporal needs that he may devote himself exclusively to the work of the Master, is not paying him for doing what the Lord requires him to do, by any means; it is simply helping him to do it—not paying for doing it, but simply helping him to do it. It is simply helping him to bear his burden. This we are commanded to do. Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. (Gal. 6:2.) Other some think, "if we have to pay for preaching, its not a free gospel." I suppose that brother thought the gospel was free, who congratulated himself on living a Christian (?) twenty-five years with an expense for religious enterprises of the paltry sum of twenty-five cents. The reply of the Bishop was quite reasonable. "God have mercy on your poor, stingy soul." Such a gospel would be free to you, no doubt, so far as dollars and cents are concerned; And this is about as far as many look. You find a man who has a great bundle of grave and solemn scruples about paying a cent for the support of the gospel, and almost always—some exceptions of course—his pocket book is the root of the whole trouble. He is so penurious and tight-fisted that he will not let a cent go unless compelled to. But to whip the devil around the stump a little, he says the trouble is, he has conscientious scruples about paying preachers for preaching! But some in this class are honest; they are really troubled with this objection.

All such I would treat candidly. I will answer this objection by making a few quotations from an ancient book the authority of which none of us will question. Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel. (1 Cor. 9:14). Mark! "The Lord hath ordained" this thing. Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses, nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, nor yet a staff: (why not do this? for the reason that follows,) for the workman is worthy of his meat. (Mat. 10:9, 10.) Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things. (Gal. 6:6). Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And the laborer is worthy of his reward. (1 Tim. 5:18). Much more might be added to the same effect, but enough has been produced to settle the controversy. If the Bible is to be our guide, it is the duty of the church to support the ministry. The gospel is free, but its freeness does not consist in having a half-starved, half clad, poverty-stricken preacher to deliver it. It is not the duty of the church to pay their pastor an extravagant salary. It is simply a livelihood that he deserves. He is to "live of the gospel." If he ministers to you in sacred things, you are to minister to him in temporal things. You are to see that his temporal wants are supplied so that he may give his undivided attention to his special work. This is God's order. And really is not this as it should be? How can a man preach, and at the same time have his mind and body engaged with the cares and labors of a secular calling? In what kind of a plight is a man for preaching twice or thrice on Sunday, after having followed the plow six preceding days? Let those who have had experience answer. It is not necessary that the minister should become a loafer, if he severs himself entirely from manual labor. If he is faithful he will have enough to do. So much has he to do that he has no time to spare for farming or other earthly employment. It will require every moment of his time to discharge faithfully his duty as a minister. If his time and energies are monopolized by other interests it will necessarily detract from his usefulness as a preacher, and thus the cause will be injured. In supporting the ministry it is necessary to have some system. It should be attended to on the plan hinted at by Paul—"not slothful in business." Let there be unity of action on the part of all. Let all give as the Lord prospers them. Let it be understood that an obligation in this matter is a "vow to the Lord."

C. C. MARSTON.

Eternal Misery.

The tree of the knowledge of good and evil grew out of the ground. The fruit therefore was material. There were also other trees caused to grow out of the ground which bore fruit. It was said to Adam, "Of every tree of the garden 'thou' mayest eat, but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, 'thou' shalt not eat of it, for in the day that 'thou' eatest thereof 'thou' shalt surely die." There seems to be a great difficulty as to the pronoun 'thou.' The question is, is it a material man, or an immaterial and immortal man? I judge the man by the fruit he eats. What need have immaterial men of material fruits? None whatever. Only material men eat material fruit. God said, 'thou' mayest freely eat of every tree of the garden, save one. Is it not clear enough that the 'thou' stands for a material man that had desires to eat, and did eat material food? Now what did God say would befall this material 'thou' in case he should eat of this material tree of the knowledge of good and evil? Answer: 'Thou' shalt surely die. Physical death then was the great evil brought upon man through disobedience. What now? The man has eaten. Death has followed. The man that ate is unconscious, is dead. He returns to the ground from whence he was taken. We now see the material man, 'thou' just as though he had not been, and here I add, had not a Savior been provided, this would have been the history of man complete. Without a Redeemer from this death there could be no eternal conscious suffering for the man that died, nor eternal conscious happiness—there could be neither without a resurrection. What, then, was the Redeemer provided for? Was he provided to redeem man from eternal conscious suffering? No. Man was not doomed to that. Man, without a resurrection could not have consciousness of any kind, even for a moment. Then it is certain that a redeemer was not provided to redeem man from a certain state of consciousness, but rather from an unconscious state.

I think that the reader will see from the above that man was not subjected to an eternal state of conscious suffering before the plan of redemption was laid, and consequently the plan of redemption was not a plan to redeem from eternal conscious suffering. Blot out the plan of redemption, and where is the eternal conscious suffering of the man that eats material food, that dies, that goes to the grave where there is no work nor knowledge. Now if orthodox opinion in regard to eternal suffering be true, will its advocates tell when and how man became subjected to eternal conscious suffering, and when was there a plan laid to redeem man therefrom? If the doctrine of eternal conscious suffering for material man be true, it must have been brought about through the plan of redemption, because the resurrection is the redemption, and without this eternal conscious suffering could not possibly exist; and if any plan of redemption from eternal suffering has been made, it must have been made after the resurrection of Christ, because man could not have been subjected to an eternal conscious state of any kind before that. It seems to me that it cannot be shown when or how man was ever subjected to eternal misery outside of Christ's atonement; and who will dare to say that it is an offspring of that atonement. Just as eternal life and happiness are dependent on the resurrection, so is eternal conscious suffering, if there is to be any such thing.

S. MORRETT.

One of the Lessons of the Year.

The year 1871 is about to close, and a most memorable year it has been. Before it passes away let us seek to mark and learn some of the prominent lessons which it so emphatically teaches. It is only a few of these lessons upon which we can ever touch, and even in that case we can touch them but slightly.

The great Continental war between France and Prussia, whose termination the present year has witnessed, was one of those remarkable events which startled the world from its easy security. Whilst some men were fondly concluding that great wars had ceased, we were called to witness one of the most bloody recorded in the annals of time. Whilst some were imagining that the growth of civilization would allay the more violent of human passions, and that men were now too wise to go to war, the most furious elements of strife were suddenly let loose, and the very civilization in whose progress we had boasted was only found to be instrumental in promoting widespread ruin and more wholesale destruction of life. More civilization, as we might all have learned from the Word of God, does not touch the innate depravity of man's heart, and wars will never cease until that heart is changed, and we shall never "hang the trumpet in the hall and study war no more" until we welcome the reign of the Prince of Peace. Even now there is, apparently, in the case of these two mighty powers, only a suspension of hostilities, whilst the indications of dissatisfaction and danger, threatening further convulsions come from other nations also. So no doubt, it is destined to be. The most important aspect of the recent struggle, however, is in its bearings on the Papacy. Had the triumph of the war in which France was the challenger, been on her side instead of that of Germany, the most serious consequences might have been anticipated to human liberty and even to ourselves. This was, no doubt, anticipated by the whole Jesuits of Europe, as a becoming sequel to the degree of Infallibility. Ireland was also on the tiptoe of expectation. But the cup apparently so near their eager lips was suddenly dashed to the ground in the adorable Providence of God, and not only was a virtually Protestant power placed at the head of central Europe, but Spain, Austria, Bavaria, and Italy, have all been set free, and disabled, as well as France, from acting aggressively on the side of the Vatican. The temporal power of the Pope has ceased. These striking events are no doubt, connected with the final overthrow of the mystic Babylon, whose fixed period of continuance as a scourge to the church and the world must now be drawing to a close. For all this we cannot be too thankful. These are the Lord's doings, and they ought to be marvelous in our eyes.—Rock.

What's The Matter?

I have heard several ask this question. "What's the matter with our prayer meetings?" Some say "they can't tell, they don't know." While others give their reason for the low state in which we are in. Now I do not propose to write a long article in answering this question; but I want to tell what I believe the matter is: that we have so dull, so cold, and lifeless prayer meetings. It is the lack of faith, and the lack of prayer, also. I think I am right. Let us see. I go to meeting very often, and there I find many of my brethren and sisters convened for a prayer meeting. But do we have one? I answer no. Why? Because there is no praying as it were. That is, there is offered as a general thing but one or two prayers, and this out of a number of thirty, forty, and sometimes a hundred persons who are there. Is not this lamentable? And is it any wonder that we have poor meetings, and many times are led to inquire, "What's the matter?" I have been in the service of the Lord about fourteen years, and I have always noticed that the more prayers that we offer, mixed with faith, in our meetings, the better meetings we have.

Now I go in for reversing the order of exercises—instead of all talk, telling what others have said to us, and the conversation we have with them on some point of doctrines, let us talk with the Lord by the way of prayer. We have the assurance in God's word that if we abide in him, and his word abides in us, ask what we will and it will be given to us. Blessed promise is this! Why not claim it? And pray more in our prayer meetings.

What is a prayer meeting? It is a place for social and religious worship. It is not for preaching. It is a place where Christians meet for prayer (or ought to) and to "exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching." But, how few there are that appreciate and wisely improve this important means of grace. Many seem to think they can go into the kingdom," as the poet has it—

> "On flowery beds of ease,
> While others fought to gain the prize,
> And sailed through bloody seas."

Every Christian should feel it his duty to help sustain the prayer meeting by taking part in the exercises. It may not be duty for all to speak or pray in every meeting; but all should hold themselves in readiness to do what the Master requireth. In so doing we shall have joy and comfort. If there is a willing mind, it is accepted of God. If we stop to confer with flesh and blood, we shall lose the blessing we otherwise might enjoy.

In order to have a successful prayer meeting, we should go in the spirit of earnest prayer. Go asking—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" If all will with one accord join in praising God, the blessing of heaven will descend, and none will have occasion to ask, "what the matter is," but will feel that God does manifest himself in the assembling together of his people. Who goes in for good prayer meetings? Let all that do, go to them in the spirit of earnest prayer for the salvation of souls and God will bless us and pour out his spirit upon us till there is not room to contain it.

While I feel that public prayer is good and the life of a prayer meeting if offered in faith, I also believe in secret prayer. Jesus says: "Enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret will reward the openly." Yes, it is good to go to the Lord in secret, where none but God can see or hear. There we can tell him all our wants, and have them all supplied. If we do not ask we cannot expect to receive. The promise is—"Ask and it shall be given!" Nothing hard in this, is there? No. The terms are easy that the weakest can come and ask, and receive and our joy will be full. Therefore let us come boldly unto the throne of grace, and we shall obtain mercy, and find grace to help in every time of need.

"Pray without ceasing." Let this be our motto, and peace and happiness will be ours to enjoy. Those of us who have families, should have the family altar erected, and pray with and for them. It will prove a blessing, not only to the suppliant, but to all the family. Let us then "watch unto prayer," live a good and practical life. Prayer then will be a delight. Now let me sum up: 1. Pray in secret. 2. Pray with and for our families. 3. Pray in public. I am sure if we do the first two, we will the last one, and if we carry them all out, I do not believe we shall have an occasion to ask, "What's the matter?" But the question will be answered thus—it's the lack of faith and prayer.

G. E. M.

Worcester, Mass.

The Event of 1871.

For Europe and for Christendom the occupation of Rome as the capital of Italy is the great event of the year. As the year nears the end let us think it over. But a little while ago the Roman Papacy, backed by the imperial power of France, occupied most vauntingly its old position as an armed guard for Europe against the spread of the gospel, sounding out by public proclamations, in tones more wrathful than ever, its war-cry against the freedom of the press, free preaching, free reading, against the advances of the "so-called modern civilization." Those great swelling words jarred against the spirit of the century. To us who believed in the divine prophecy it did seem a marvel of "judicial blindness" that the mitred priest should venture to take upon his lips those "charmed words" in scornful hate and set up an issue so direct! But then, behind the dazzling imperialism of France and the mighty array of ecclesiastical forces represented in the Œcumenical Council that worshipped "His Infallibility," he was assured of security.

Never did the condition of Europe seem so adverse to all the hope of progress that our faith in God's oracles had nourished. Never since that dark time of mediæval night, that seemed darkest just before the dawn of the reformation under Luther, was there an hour when the moral firmament of the Old World was blacker than in that which witnessed the seeming triumph of Pius IX. in the declaration of infallibility.

And from such a height never was there a fall so quick and deep!

The throne of French imperialism, that supported the throne of the temporal power, was suddenly smitten by that sceptre of iron whereof the prophet sang in the second Psalm, and down they went together. How the crash of their fall reverberated over the earth! Then, as they went down,—is it not a wonder?—at once spontaneously there came up into the streets of the old capital the free press, the open Bible, free preaching and free worship. Here they are, the representatives of the church of the first century, "the old Gospellers," long repressed, re-appearing and treading the streets of the old city with an air of ease and freedom, as if reclaiming their own heritage. Whence come these "hidden ones?" Antonelli is puzzled.—Cor. Watchman and Reflector.

Our Book and Tract Column

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 60c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE. For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—[illegible] pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—72 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—[illegible] pp. The Reign of Messiah—[illegible] pp. [illegible]—[illegible] pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,[illegible] pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. [illegible] pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 109 pp. 20c.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons; an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c. post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant, in one vol. 40c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—25c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 24c

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth $1.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp, 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 18mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 19c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 120 pp. 20c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 217 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Weddell. 48 pp. 10c.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $4 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 35c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. M. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 5c.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 40c, post-paid.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, ... MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb 6, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand," his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed, the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead, their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
L. P. FOX, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.
A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.
N. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS, } Editorial Com.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, Business Agent, To whom all communications should be addressed

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 30 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

That Reaper.

Will not the ministry call the attention of farmers to the fine chance we offer them to obtain a good Reaper at a low price? Help us sell this machine, and you will help the cause in so doing.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

Wanted.

We will be obliged to any one who will give us the following P. O. Addresses.

W. R. Howe, Kansas. tf

Field's Discussion.

For some time this desirable work has been out of print. The main topic is the Intermediate State, or Condition of the Dead. When a new edition was announced, some of the Doctor's old Disciple friends announced that they would buy and circulate it as soon as ready, because they thought it would help their side—that Mr Connolly had the best of the argument. We shall soon know whether they really so felt, or were indulging mere bragadocio. The book has not yet made any converts to immaterialism that we have heard of; but we have learned of its bringing not a few to adopt the Bible theory.

The book has heretofore been sold at one dollar. The present edition is in paper covers (pp 318), and will be sent post paid for 50c. We hope for liberal orders.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawyer, M. B. Geer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O Hink, I. C. Wellcome, J. F. Huber, Grand St. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. E. Brown, M F Wistrom, R W Wilson, H. M. Lampard, M. E. Derham, Lapeer Church.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand-raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $120. See advertisement.

To Correspondents.

EM. L. MARSH. "Laws" was ordered to you Jan. 6. Is now ordered again. If it does not come, let us know.

By Express.

C C Marston B J Goodwin.

Fifty Cents Extra.

M J Houghton 50c.

New Press.

W A B Ryan 50c.

Communications.

A F Dugger W J Cady F H Burbank S C Welcome.

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged			$490.74
E Churchill	1 00	L Darwin	$ 10
J G Kelley	1 00	J Graves	1 00
J Prosser	1 00	P Wright	1 00

Our Debt—Pledges.

J Myers	pd	$1 00	W G Houtze	pd	1 00
J H Lansing	"	2 25	S H Bush	"	3 00
E D Holmes	"	1 00	T H Rapel	"	2 00
J Prosser	"	5 00	C Wilson	"	6 00
Ines	"	1 00

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, JAN. 20.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

J H Whitmore
A C Greene
F S Morgan
G W Miller
A F Dugger (3)
D D Reese
A M B Graham

S Baldwin
B F Mikesell
P W Hough
E Temple
J Plowman
M J Houghton
C C Ramsey

V Porter
J G Jank
M A Cox
W L
W C Irish
G W Bush
C Connell

C E Barnes
F Foulke
W J Cody
F H Burbank
H F Bolles
F Burr
G W Miller
S C Wellcome
R M Rowell
E B Holmes
J A Lawrence
W A B Ryan
H Champion
L C Collins
J Massey
L Darwin
C C Marston
Hopkins Mo
S S Owen
J Mires
E S Jennings
L M Stoddard
C S Hall
G Wright
R H Dutton
H Lansing
S Maris
A A Lotzenhiser
A F Dugger
R P Hoge
O Arthur

E D Holmes
J Graves
E H Skinner
A Bradt
M King
A Farrow
E J Mott
W H Booker
A C Hueston
F Hitchcock
C M Richmond
M Chandler
P Wright
E Churchill
F Burr
J S Lawyer
J Bower
E Stevens
J Prosser
T Rosebury
R R Hollister
J H Paton
A M B Graham
R Spotswood
P Sawyer
L G Hiscox
Ines
W L Reddington
D O Hink
S A Alley
H J Sweetland

J Roberts
W G Houtze
J W Ballantine
J Oliver
J W Cowles
M Brodbent
C Wilson
V Hunt
M Mohr
E A Marsh
N Wheeler
J T Townsend
J Bower
J H Nafe
M Hammack
J A Oldfather
J Hammond
T H Rapel
L L Ames
G N Wald
C G Wiley
S C Wellcome
J Palin
A H Clark
J C Mann
S F Bush
G W Hurd
J W Pack
L C Smith
J H Deering
R P Hoge

Books and Tracts by Mail.

S M Wellings
E A Clapp
W T Fahnestock
J Newman
C S Sherman
H A Frank
J E Sayler
P A Smith (2)
J H Parsons
J P Doan
J E Derham
A Stoneberg
H McKinley
E H Scott
J H Stannard
J Smith
A M B Graham
R Spotswood
D A Bradley
C P Dow (2)
J F Huber
W W Smith

G W Miller
H Willett
D S Palgrove
A W Potter
E Temple
E H Durand (2)
J Mitchell
E P Goff
E G Lyman
M Smith
S F Bush
J H Deering
J S Lawyer
W H Brown
J H Whitmore
S C Raymond
W G Houtz (2)
D Hastings
Rev Wm Sewell
W C Irish
W McKinzie
J H Nafe (2)

L L Ames
Geo Wright jr
A H Clark
E Scott
E A Marsh
Miss J P Hartshorn
Miss P Hartshorn
F H Davis
L P Berry
S Baldwin
J H Patton
W Thomson
J Metcalf
S Maris
J Massey
S A Muchmore
W M Booher
M Chandler
E Churchill
J M Stouffer
J H Gallup

Book Notices, Etc.

WE observe in the Boston Journal for Jan. 13, a record of the wars, battles, and military movements of 1871. In the number for Jan. 27 is a still more interesting diary of "the black year," including all its terrible disasters in a compact form, yet in clear definite statement. We do not know the price, but presume two three cent stamps would bring a copy of either paper, or ten cents one of each. Address: Journal, Boston, Mass.

FRIENDS of the American Tract Society of New York, impressed with the value of the Illustrated Christian Weekly, have authorized them to offer to the individual who sends the largest number of yearly subscribers to that paper obtained within three months from Feb. 1, a cash premium of $100; for the second highest list, $50; for the third highest list, $30; for the fourth highest list, $20. These are in addition to all other premiums or commissions.

THE NURSERY. A monthly magazine for the youngest readers. Superbly illustrated. Send a stamp for a sample number. ADDRESS: Jno. L. Shorey, 36 Bromfield St. Boston, Mass.

Marriages.

SPERRY—INGALLS. In Fairfield, Iowa, Dec. 21, 1871, by Eld. C. C. Ramsay, Mr. John Sperry and Miss Eliza A. Ingalls, both of Fairfield.

Obituary.

Note By the Editor.

Our obituary department is very much crowded, and some notices are necessarily delayed.

WATSON. In Ancona, Ill. Jan. 23, Sr. Watson, wife of Dr. Watson: aged 29 years.

She suffered long and patiently with her disease, consumption. She looked for reward at Jesus' coming. A husband, parents, and two children mourn, not without hope. I spoke on the funeral occasion from Job 14: 14. R. P. HOGE.

SCOTT. Elvaretta Jane, daughter of Wm. and Eliza Jane McJunkin, and wife of Wm. Scott, of Nevada, Ohio, was born April 28, 1847, married in 1866, and died Jan. 13, 1872, after a short illness, of Typhoid Pneumonia.

She professed faith in Christ in the winter of 1867 and in March of that year was immersed into his name for the remission of sins that were in the past, and for the hope of the resurrection of the just unto eternal life. She sleeps in Jesus, leaving a husband, a little son and two daughters (one an infant of seven months) with numerous relatives and friends to mourn her early death. They sorrow not as those who mourn without hope. Her funeral was attended by a very numerous concourse, in Nevada, Jan. 16, when words of comfort and admonition were spoken by the writer from Rev. 14: 13. G. W. STETSON.

WITHINGTON. In Springwater N. Y. Dec. 12, 1871, of consumption, Sr. Susan J. Withington; aged 21 years, 9 months and 16 days.

Sr. W. was baptized and joined the A. C. Church of Springwater in July 1870. She was soon smitten by the destroyer and her opportunities for meeting with the church for worship were cut off. The writer who has visited her often during the summer has seen the truth of this passage illustrated—"My grace is sufficient."

Our Sr. was pleasantly situated, and being young and having bright prospects before her in this life it was quite a struggle for her to give up her husband and little child; but God gave her grace for every trial, and the last time the writer visited her she was feeling perfectly resigned and willing to trust her husband and child in the same hand that was sustaining her in her hour of trial, feeling that after a moment's sleep, to her, she should meet them where death and parting are unknown.

The writer spoke from Acts 2: 38 to a very large audience of relations and acquaintances at her funeral, and we laid her to rest until the chief Shepherd shall appear. Then we hope to meet her with the immortal ones who are to die no more. May her prayers for her husband and child be answered, and they meet an unbroken family in the kingdom of God.

W. J. HOBBS.

BERRY. At Grand Lodge, Mich. Dec. 26, 1872, Gardner Berry; in the 71st year of his age.

Mr. Berry was on a visit to his daughter, Mrs. R. E. Wickham and his last illness was at her house. He had been for nearly half a century a resident of Shelby N. Y. where he was well and favorably known. An obliging neighbor, a generous patron of the poor, a public-spirited citizen, a reliable friend, and withal a most modest man, he was ever ready to show his faith by his works. He had long entertained a Christian's hope, and a little more that two years ago he made a public profession of his faith and was baptized. The funeral took place at East Shelby, N. Y. Dec. 28, and was largely attended by mourning friends and sympathizing neighbors. His death is an irreparable loss to the church and the neighborhood. He selected the 37th Psalm, and the first four verses of the 41st Psalm to be read at the funeral. These passages served admirably to illustrate his faith and in some degree his character.

His favorite subject had been "the gospel preached to Abraham," and it furnished to the writer an appropriate theme for the occasion. Text Rom. 4: 20-24.

J. H. WHITMORE.

ROBERTS. At his residence near East Henrietta, N. Jan. 10, from injuries which he received on Christmas day, Martin Roberts: in the 65th year of his age.

Mr. Roberts was born in Eaton, Madison Co. N. Y. Sept. 10, 1807. He came to Monroe Co. when he was but seven years old, and has since resided in the town of Henrietta. He was esteemed most highly by those who knew him best, and though ever unassuming and modest, his force of character, and executive ability were recognized by his fellow-citizens, and by their suffrages he occupied many positions of public trust and usefulness. In 1866 he was elected to the Assembly, by the largest majority ever given an Assembly candidate in that district. Amiable and genial in all his relations whether public or private, "few knew him but to love him, or named him but to praise." He leaves a wife and three children—two sons, M. Henry and Geo. M. C. Roberts, and a daughter, Mrs. M. D. Phillips of Henrietta. While they greatly mourn his loss, they do not sorrow as those who have no hope in the world. He left them an untarnished name, a legacy of more value than silver or gold—and showed in his life the power of religion pure and undefiled.

The funeral took place from his late residence on Saturday, Jan. 13, and was numerously attended. Sermon by the writer. Text, Ps. 90: 12; Heb. 9: 27.

J. H. WHITMORE.

Notices, Etc.

Overcoat.

I have an overcoat that was left in my charge at Hornellsville, Dec. 21, '71, by an Advent brother who lives near Buchanan. He left the cars to get breakfast, and was, I think, left. I do not recall his name. ADDRESS, H. F. Bolles, West Salem, Wis.

Michigan Tent.

Will the Brn. in the Eastern District of Mich. please remember the proposition about putting a new top to "Antioch" tent, to be acted on at next Q. M. at Lapeer, and come prepared to say and do? Br. Snook proposes to give the tent to the Conference if the brethren will put a new top to it, as it cannot be used any more without one. Come brethren! The churches and many school houses are closed against us. With the tent we are independent, and can do much good. We wish there were a dozen in this State.

Attention!

Three years ago this winter, some brother or friend, whose name I have forgotten, living in the State of New York, wrote to me concerning 160 acres of land, which he owned on the Mississippi River bottoms in Ill. near Kinderhook, in either Adams or Pike Cos. If this should meet the eye of that person, and if he still owns the land, and will drop a letter in the P. O., to S. C. Raymond, 300 W. Van Buren St. Chicago, Ill. he will hear of something to his advantage.

Minnesota Tent.

Notice is hereby given to those brethren and sisters of the State of Minn. who have subscribed for the purchasing of a new tent for the State, that the business of collecting and purchasing the tent in time for the summer campaign, has been committed to the undersigned, by a vote of the Annual Conference at its last session. All such as have not paid their subscriptions will please remit to me as soon as possible, that I may have time to make the purchase, before it will be actually needed. ADDRESS: GEO. W. MILLER, Millersburg, Rice Co. Minn.

Debate.

There will be a debate in S. H. No. 7, Hackberry, Labette Co. Kas. commencing Wednesday eve, Feb. 14.

PROPOSITION: Resolved, That man is immortal.

F. Abell, affirms; W. C. Irish denies. Each will choose an assistant. The public in the region invited to attend.

Notice.

Notice to all interested in the truths belonging to this age, in the several Quarterly Districts of the state of Minnesota, to meet at the time and place appointed by the state evangelist,—in each Quarterly District, as business of importance will be brought before each District meeting. Preachers are especially invited to be present. GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

To Advent Christians.

We are happy to recommend to you our brother Eld. P. S. Burk, as a faithful servant of the Lord Jesus Christ. He has been a faithful minister in this church for the last two years, and has been the means of doing great good here and elsewhere; and it is with sadness and regret that we part with him. As he goes forth to labor in other fields he has the prayers and best wishes of the church. And we ask of all Christians that they extend to him a welcome hand, and aid him in the cause by their prayers.

By order of the Advent Christian church of Toronto, Iowa. B. T. MILLER, Deacon.

Jan. 22, 1872.

Appointments.

CONFERENCE REGISTER.

Iowa A. C. C. Q. M., Manchester, Feb. 23-25

MICHIGAN.

Marlette, Presbyterian chapel, Monday and Tuesday evenings, Feb. 12, 14.

North Branch, Union S. H. Wednesday evening, Feb. 14.

Brockway Center, Friday evening, Feb. 16.

Advent chapel, Lake Shore, three miles north of Lexington, Sunday, 10½ a. m. Feb. 18.

GEO. WRIGHT, JR.

The third Q. M. of the Northern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the church in Millbrook, commencing Thursday eve. Feb. 22. We hope to have a full representation at this meeting. Come, brethren, let us rally for the Lord. A general invitation is extended to all. JOHN BOWEN, Chairman.

The third Q. M. for the Eastern District of Michigan will be held at Lapeer, commencing Wednesday eve. Feb. 21, and hold over Lord's day. The Rail Road is now in running order from Port Huron to Flint. The Brn. have a pleasant and commodious chapel and plenty of accommodations, with large hearts, and hope to see a large attendance. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

The third Q. M. for the Southren District of Mich. will be held at the Munger S. H. five miles north of Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co. commencing Wednesday eve. March 20, and hold over Lord's day. Teams will be at the station at Eaton Rapids on the arrival of the p. m. trains from Grand Rapids and Jackson. Eaton Rapids is on the Grand River Valley R. R. Let there be a full attendance.

J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y. pro tem.

ILLINOIS.

Amboy, Feb. 11, morning and evening.

Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Feb. 13-25, as Br. Wheeler and others may arrange. Let the friends round about rally and come to this meeting to work for God and his cause. C. C. MARSTON.

Eld. Wm. McCulloch will preach in our vicinity (Cobden) on the third Sunday in February, continuing a few days; and in the vicinity of Anna the fourth Sunday, continuing a few days, as Br. Childs may arrange. J. S. LAWYER.

Milroy, Feb. 11. C. W. SMITH.

IOWA.

The second Q. M. of the A. C. C. of Manchester District commences Thursday, Feb. 22, with the Elk Valley church, at the Otisville S. H. continuing over the Sabbath.

This is comparatively a new field. Let every lover of Jesus and his cause be there. Come, brethren, laden with the Spirit of Jesus, praying in the Holy Ghost. Come, to work for God and his cause. M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

The second Q. M. of the Mo. and S. W. Iowa Conference will convene with Empire church, Friday evening, March 1, and continue over Sunday. Let all the churches in the District be represented. Let none of the ministry fail to be there. JAMES FINDERS, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

Coon Slough, Vernon Co. Feb. 10, 11.

JOB BROWN.

MINNESOTA.

Utica Station 10½ a. m. and eve. Sunday Feb. 11.

Vowel S H. 2 p. m. same day.

S. C. WELLCOME.

The next Q. M. for the Ottawa District will be held at Ottawa, Feb. 16, and holding over Sunday. Let the lovers of Jesus rally.

E. BACON, Sec'y.

NEW YORK.

Regular meetings are held by the church at 128 West 24th St., New York city: three times on Sunday, and Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings. T. J. COX.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Special Conference will be held in the Second Advent Chapel on Central St., Worcester, Mass., to commence on Tuesday, Feb. 6, at two o'clock P. M., and continue every day and evening through the week and over the following Sunday. The special object of this conference will be to examine the evidences relating to the time of the Lord's coming; to get more fully prepared for that event, and to lead sinners to Christ before he comes to close up the scenes of probation. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and especially to all the preaching brethren.

"The more that come with free good will,
Will make the banquet sweeter still."

By unanimous vote of the church.

H. W. BUXTON,
W. F. COLLIER,
E. G. HIGGINS. } Committee.

Advertisements.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper of 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Women's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4. Fifty copies, $25. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

FREE. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee-keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage. H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

THRESHING MACHINE.

FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $600. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $250. Warranted as represented.

N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure. (tf) Address, A. J. STONE, Hesperia, Mich.

FANNING MILL. I make an excellent machine for cleaning wheat. It will take out all cheat and oats, and leave the wheat clean and fit for seed. I will ship one of these machines to the first brother who will send $25 to the office of THE TIMES. They are well worth $35. H. M. Wheeler, Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Ill.

THE CLOW REAPER.

This celebrated piece of farm machinery, by Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., was tested with sixteen other Reapers at Ripon, Wis., in July, 1870, and received the highest encomiums of them all. The standard of perfection for quality of work was forty. The Clow Reaper was marked forty, or perfect, by the committee. The other machines ranged from 34½ down to 21½. This machine is specially admirable for its light draught—which saves horseflesh; it can be drawn all day by a pair of light horses. For its simplicity—which decreases liability to breakage or derangement. It has only one hundred pieces, where other machines have three times that number. For the arrangement for lowering and raising the cutters. For the facilities for turning and backing. It can be used as a mower as well as a reaper. No cog-wheels are used to drive the sickle. It has had fewer accidents from breakage than any other machine.

USUAL PRICE, $160.00;

but the machine presented to THE TIMES office will be

SOLD FOR ONE HUNDRED & TWENTY DOLLARS!

If taken soon.

For any further information, address

J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich.

"HOW TO GO WEST."

Forty years ago, Illinois was as far West as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of Progress and Improvement, the word West has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid Line of Railroad.

This Line of Railroad is the Burlington Route, which starts from Chicago by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and, running through Burlington, reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific, and other railroads running from these cities.

People going to Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, California, or any point in the Territories, will study their own interests by going "By way of Burlington," for the rates of that Line are always as low as any other, and it is the best Route in the West, therefore you are more sure of your safety and comfort.

The Burlington Route has admirably answered the question "How to go West?" by the publication of an excellent pamphlet, containing a large, truthful map of the Great West, and much interesting and valuable information, which can be obtained free of charge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.

This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

VICK'S
FLORAL GUIDE
For 1872.

The First Edition of Two Hundred Thousand copies just published. It is elegantly printed on fine tinted paper, in two colors, and illustrated with over 300 engravings of Flowers and Vegetables, and

TWO COLORED PLATES.

The most beautiful and instructive Catalogue and Floral Guide in the world—112 pages, giving thorough directions for the culture of flowers and vegetables, ornamenting grounds, making walks, &c.

A Christmas present for my customers, but forwarded to any who apply by mail, for ten cents, only one-quarter the cost. Address, JAMES VICK, Rochester, New York.

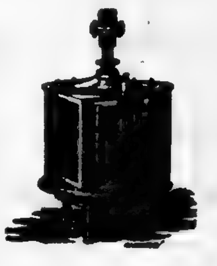
WAIT'S

TURBINE WATER WHEEL.



HUDSON RIVER CHAMPION

A WORD TO MILL MEN.

I have been building the Jonval Turbine for the past eight years. Have built some seven or eight different kinds of wheels. Am acquainted with nearly all the first class wheels in the country, and am fully persuaded that the Champion stands alone without a rival. Early I discovered that the tangential and centrifugal forces of the water, exerted a tremendous power which is expended against the outer rims of those wheels, which discharge vertically and against the scrolls and curbs of most other kinds, which is lost to all useful effect.

For a long time I studied and experimented carefully, to bring this wasted power into use without injuring the other high qualities of the Wheels.

My efforts have been crowned with success, and I can now offer you a Turbine which can compete successfully with all others in the economical use of the water, while for simplicity of construction, strength and durability, it is the champion of the world.

It has no complication of gates, with their multitude of Levers no cranks, pis, segments no pinions to get out of order. No series of leaky joints; no rubbing surface to wear away, to waste the water; nothing touches the wheel but water; hence it will never wear out. There is no lateral motion, nor do their steps wear out like other wheels.

The Jonval Turbine has given the highest percentage of power ever attained in any public test. Several of these Jonvals have been taken out which were in perfect order (having run but a short time), and the Champion placed in the same curbs, venting the same amount of water, and have obtained from six to eight per cent. more power in every instance than the Jonvals gave.

These wheels are perfectly proof against injury from flood-wood. Should any pieces get into the curb which could not pass through the wheel, you have simply to open a door (like a safe or cupboard), enter the curb, and remove the obstruction, and it is all ready for work again. This can be done in five minutes.

They are now in operation in every section of the country, giving unbounded satisfaction and taking the places of all other wheels. The extreme low price for which they are sold astonishes everybody.

Circulars sent free. Address

P. H. WAIT, Sandy Hill, N. Y.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 10c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 15c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.---NO. 29. BUCHANAN, FEBRUARY 13, 1872. W[illegible]OLE NO. 409.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Contents.

The Bondage of the Pulpit vs. the Tyranny of the Pew; Queries; No Drunkard Shall Inherit the Kingdom of God....225

Poetry; A Doctrinal Letter; Will the Ten Tribes of Israel be Restored? Eld. Wm. H. Kendall....226

An Experience—Theological and Religious; Notes on an Impromptu Sermon; Destroy—Gehenna; Religious Triumphs of Murderers; The Acts of the Apostles....227

Mission; Editor's Journal; A Discussion between Eld. Clark Braden and Eld. Himes, Continued 228

The Times: At Home and Abroad....229

Correspondence; From C. C. Marston....230

More Laborers; or Thoughts on Supporting the Gospel Ministry; Conference Minutes; Our Book and Tract Column....231

Business Agent's Department; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements....232

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 13, 1872.

The Bondage of the Pulpit, vs. The Tyranny of the Pew.

Some time since Mr. Wilkinson had an article in Scribner's Monthly, entitled "The Bondage of the Pulpit." His main thought was that the pulpit was fettered by the pew, and that the average clergyman was only the representative echo of the opinions of his congregation. The bondage of the pulpit then, is but the logical result of the tyranny of the pew. The liberty of the pulpit, a thing so much to be desired, must necessarily exist only in connection with the toleration of the pew. If the hearers intimidate the speaker by the threat that if he dare utter sentiments unpalatable to them, he will, as a penalty, lose his place and influence, they cannot, with very good grace complain of the bondage of the pulpit—a bondage which they themselves create. While, then, a compromising ministry cannot be held blameless, it must ever remain true, that the offense in its inception belongs rather to the pew than to the pulpit. I grant that few sights are more pitiable, than to see a minister in the pulpit, catering to the passions and prejudices of his listeners, and flattering their pride merely for personal praise and popularity. But in such cases the blame neither begins nor ends on the speaker. They are only illustrations of the law of demand and supply. The hearers virtually say to the speaker, "Prophesy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things, prophesy unto us deceits." "We did not hire you to expose or denounce our personal sins. Preach the gospel and let us alone. Your plain style will never fill our house with attentive listeners. It is offensive to the masses. Let us have something light, sparkling and original. Select some popular topic of the hour and handle it in a racy style and you will be sure to draw. If you don't do this, if you continue in the old fashioned way, on such old topics as faith, love and repentance, and persist in saying that if men do not repent they will be damned, you will soon lose your influence, and—and we shall be compelled to get another man who will speak more in accordance with our views." It is all very well to say that a minister ought not to submit to such restrictions of his freedom and Christian liberty. Unfortunately, all ministers are not perfect. They are not heroes, nor are they willing to become martyrs. In general, they are very much like other men. They have their faults and their foibles, their peculiar temptations and strong aversions. They like influence, and power, and popularity, and a competence. They know very well that if they do not trim their sails to catch the popular breeze, they will lose all these prizes. They conclude therefore that it is better to compromise a little, and thus retain their place, power and influence. "And the people love to have it so." Yes, the people demand that it shall be so. We need not go far to find examples. In pro-slavery times the slave-holders dictated the sentiments that were to be uttered in the pulpit. However much the minister might, in his heart, detest slavery, as an institution inconsistent with the spirit of Christianity, he was constrained, by the overawing influence of his hearers, to apologize for, if he did openly commend "the sum of all villianies."

Why is it that from many city pulpits one never hears intemperance denounced as an unmitigated evil? The reason in many cases is obvious. A few rich distillers and influential liquor dealers sit in the pews, and contribute largely of their ill-gotten gains to the expenses of the church. It will not do to offend the pew-holders, by stigmatizing their trade as immoral, for they contribute very largely to the preacher's salary. Thus, truth is allowed to fall in the streets. It is certain that all right-minded men will detest such bread-and-butter policy in a minister, but will they any the less detest the selfish intolerance of the pew that alone makes such a policy possible. Let it be understood, that exacting pews and compromising pulpits go together. If we would have more Nathans in our pulpits, we must have more Davids in our pews. It was a most stinging and pointed rebuke that the prophet gave, yet the king not only received it without anger, but confessed his great sin at once. We admire the courage of Nathan, and applaud the fearlessness with which he uttered the accusing words, "Thou art the man!" But is there nothing admirable in the manner in which David received this cutting rebuke? Instead of getting angry and crushing his accuser, as he had ample power to do, he acknowledged the truth of the accusation by the most public response, "I have sinned against the Lord." The beautiful Bible story, with all its instructive teachings, would have been lost to us had king David been a selfish, intolerant and vindictive hearer. So, then, if Nathan is the model preacher, David is the model hearer. But here, as elsewhere, the virtue of the first depended upon the virtue of the second. If hearers of the gospel will be kind, patient, just, they may reasonably expect to receive present truth and seasonable instruction from the pulpit. There is little plain preaching, because there is little candid hearing. Men want to be caressed and flattered. They do not want their sins or shortcomings mentioned. They like the preacher best who speaks to them smooth things. They will not endure the preacher, who, like Nathan, enumerates their sins, and then pointedly says, "You are the very men I mean." Thus, "The bondage of the pulpit," is a very natural result of "The tyranny of the pew." The only cure for the estrangement of feeling and interest between pulpit and pew, is that sovereign remedy—love. "Love suffereth long, and is kind, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil." Let the minister consider that,

He preacheth best, who loveth best,
All men, both great and small.

If his heart be filled with love he will not wantonly wound the feelings of his hearers. He will speak the truth, but he will speak it in love. The hearer, too, if he have love in his heart, will receive the truth however pointed it may be, and profit by it. What is most wanted is candid, patient, loving hearers. There will be bold speakers enough then. Let the pews furnish the Davids, and the pulpits will not lack for Nathans.

J. H. WHITMORE.

QUERIES.

W. H. S. We know of no place in the Scriptures where there is any prayer to be delivered from future eternal conscious punishment. There are exhortations to flee from the wrath to come, and the like. Whenever the nature of future punishment is definitely stated it is invariably by death, destroy, kill, or some equivalent term.

> "And thou shalt be called by a new name which the mouth of the Lord shall name." (Is. 62: 2.)
> This text refers to Jerusalem. (1) What was the new name? (2) When was it given? (3) Who gave the name? (4) How often does the new name occur in the Scriptures? F. W. H.

—We will answer the queries in their order. (1) The new name is found in v. 4. "Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken, neither shall thy land any more be termed Desolate: but thou shalt be called Hephzibah, and thy land Beulah." Read the connection. (2) It was given when Isaiah received this revelation, (3) and by the Lord. (4) It is only found in 2 Ki. 21: 1; Is. 62: 4. It is probably a prophecy of the new earth state.

C. P. D. We think there is no definite statement of just what "the lake of fire" is to be; but the argument that it refers to the final conflagration of this earth is to our minds irresistible. Peter tells us that the earth is reserved unto fire with relation to perdition of ungodly men. (2 Pet. ch. 3.) In the Revelation the ungodly are cast into the lake of fire. Hence we conclude that the melting elements, of which Peter speaks, will form "the lake of fire."

R. R. Rev. 14: 11 and 20: 10 are in apparent and not real conflict with our doctrine. Even the apparent conflict grows out of the bias given to most minds by early education: for they do not relate to the future punishment. Analyze the first passage. We read first of an angel, in the midst of heaven—a symbol. The beast, his image, his mark in hand or forehead, wine of wrath of God, the cup of his indignation—all confessedly and indisputably figurative. But, it is contended, the only remaining item is literal—torment forever with fire and brimstone in the presence of the Lamb. Thus a highly figurative passage is made to over-ride about two hundred other passages whose plain sense is that the wages of sin is death. But this passage undoubtedly refers to the papal nations, as Spain, Portugal, Austria, France, and is fulfilled in the national afflictions they have endured while adhering to the corrupt Papacy. But even should this be denied, it is easy to show the results of drinking "the wine of the wrath of God." See ch. 16: 19, where to Babylon is given a portion of this wine. Now turn to ch. 18; and while we read of "her torment and sorrow," it is also said that she shall "be found no more at all"—equivalent to annihilation. Rev. 20: 10—if the devil be literal it refers only to him. His followers were "devoured" in fire. But the passage is highly dramatic and figurative. Similar language is employed in Is. 34. See vv. 9 and 10 particularly. It is certain that "forever" or "eternal," (translated from the same word) is frequently used as expressive of intensity, or completeness or finality. "Guilty of eternal sin." The author of "eternal salvation." The doctrine of "eternal judgment." This question will doubtless be thoroughly ventilated in the pending discussion in our columns.

D. Q. K. It seems to us that Is. 13, is its own interpreter. If the prophet had not explained it, we might have thought it referred to the same events prophesied in Mat. 24. As it must refer to the fall of Babylon, and very likely to wonderful phenomena exhibited in that day. The same is true of Is. 34: 4. The language is highly dramatic; but the utter desolation and destruction of the land justified the intensity of the figures. Nor because such expressions are figurative here, it by no means follows that they may not be literal in other connections.

A. F. You will find some clear thoughts on that topic in the articles by O. D. Gibson, lately published in THE TIMES.

"No Drunkard Shall Inherit the Kingdom of God."

This is a positive declaration of the Bible. Is it true? It certainly is. Not only is it true as to the teaching of the Bible, but also true as to the nature of the case. The kingdom of God is a pure and righteous kingdom calculated for a people bearing the same blessed character. Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God. 1 Cor. 6: 9. If this is true, surely there is no room in the glorious kingdom to come for the filthy, unholy drunkard.

Who is the most guilty the man, who sells intoxicating drinks, or the man who drinks and becomes drunk? Not stopping to argue this point, suffice it to say that there is deep criminality attaching to "saloon-keeping." A divine wo is pronounced upon all who are engaged in the trafic of selling intoxicating liquors in the following forcible words of Holy Writ: Wo unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness. Let whisky dealers consider this and take warning!

Can a Christian be a "saloon-keeper?" This is tantamount to asking, can a Christian deliberately make use of appliances by which the peace, prosperity, health and life of his neighbor are ruined and destroyed. The cases are parallel. If a follower of Christ can do the one he can do the other. Look at the showers of bitter tears; see the thousands of desolated hearth-stones; hear those groans and sighs, outgushing from a heart that is broken and full of grief. See the millions of dollars that are squandered for naught, and the thousands of graves that are annually filled by the unfortunate subjects of King Alchohol. Then to fill the list look at that long train of poor friendless, homeless, pennyless orphans thrown out upon the cold charities of a heartless world, who, but for whisky, might have had cheerful homes, happy and prosperous parents, warm clothes and a plenty to eat. Do you ask me if a man that is as actively engaged in bringing about this state of things as is the "saloon-keeper," can be a Christian? My feelings beggar description at the idea. I can find no language strong enough to express my indignation at the thought of a saloon-keeper claiming to be a Christian. I have known saloon-keepers to be converted, but in each case the business was abandoned. This is always the result. Religion and the whisky traffic will not go together.

These thoughts with many others were suggested to my mind while considering certain things that have occured in this place in the past few weeks.

On New Year's day one of our pastors visited all the saloons in Amboy, which by the way was no small job considering the number. The following Sabbath he preached on "the sights and scenes of Amboy-saloondom." Many of those intimately associated with the traffic were out to hear. But what did they hear. A miserable, sickly, milk and water compromise! Intemperance with all of its teeming and overwhelming evils was ingloriously bowed to as a very meek and withal quite inoffensive institution. The preacher said he expected to meet some whisky men in heaven (?) He thought the saloons of Amboy were conducted in a very gentlemanly manner. All was quite and pleasant during his visit at each, and the proprietors treated him with the greatest of courtesy etc., etc. So that the impression left by that sermon was that saloon-keeping was not an unenviable position, especially in Amboy as it forms no small part of the respectability and gentility of the place. With this much sanction and approval from one of the leading churches of the city no marvel if our community is drenched with an unusual flood of drunkenness, debauchery and crime.

Feeling impressed with the duty and necessity of agitating the temperance question a little, I announced that our regular service in the eve of Jan. 28, in our rented chapel would be occupied by a lecture on temperance. But alas! about twenty-four hours before the time appointed for its delivery we were positively assured that no meeting o that kind would be allowed in the house. A body of Christian people not willing to allow a temperance lecture delivered in their house of worship!!! Such a case never occurred before to my knowledge! Upon inquiry it was found out that a number of the members of the church are actual saloon-keepers, and many who do not sell to others, are moderate topers themselves. No wonder that such a community would not allow a temperance lecture delivered in their "house of God!!" Is this the kind of Christianity that purposes to convert the world and bring in the peace and quiet of millennial glory?

If "like begets like," what would a Millennium be brought about by such appliances? God grant us deliverance from the corruptions of modern Christianity and give us more of the pure principles and tendencies of Bible Christianity in its ancient and unadulterated form.

C. C. MARSTON.

Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth: much more the wicked and the sinner.—Solomon.

Backbone.

When you see a little fellow mortal
Without fixed and fearless views,
Hanging on the skirts of others,
Walking in their cast-off shoes—
Bowing low to wealth or favor,
With uncovered, abject head,
Ready to retreat or waver,
Willing to be drawn or led;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing—
Throw your moral shoulders back.
Show your spine has nerve and marrow,
Just the thing which he must lack.

Daybreak.

We are waiting for the clouds to break,
We are watching for the dawn,
For the first faint flush of the rosy light,
For the first soft flood of the sunbeams bright,
For the sweet long-tarrying morn.

There are shadows now on heath and hill,
And the drifting clouds look grey,
And the stars still linger, and still the gleam
Of the moonlight silvers the meadow stream,
As it glides along its way.

There will soon be slender lines of gold
In the dim, dark eastern sky,
And above the mountain a crimson streak,
And a purple tint on each pine-crowned peak,
That will bid the night gloom fly.

Communications.

A[illegible]al Letter.

We fin[illegible] Times much sound wholesome [illegible]ng; and am glad it is speaking out boldly against such gross errors as a probationary age after the Lord comes! This seems the most unscriptural of all hobbies. Dr. Field truly said—"This is a fast age. All sorts of things taught by all sorts of people. Nothing settled. Lo here! Lo there! Anarchy, confusion in church and state. Build up one day and pull down next. Day of extreme views in religion; ultraism, hobbies, speculations, notions and opinions, insisted on as 'meat in due season' and to be believed." When ministers undertake to make out that language spoken from the mouth of God's inspired men and Christ himself has not as much force as when spoken by the mouth of God himself; it has a very strong tendency to undermine all faith in the word of God.—I wonder there are not more infidels, when they see talented teachers laboring with all their energies for years to show the Bible teaches, "if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you" (Rom. 8: 10), and then turn right about and say all the heathen must be raised and put on probation to have an equal chance with us, because God promised to Abraham—"In thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." They say this blessing must mean the gospel, because the commission was—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." And Jesus adds: "Lo I am with you always; even unto the end of the world." Then their commission closes. Not an intimation or a passage to be found anywhere for the gospel to be carried into the next world or age.

I have studied, read and re-read all I have received upon the subject and I cannot find that testimony is brought forward to show there is a probationary age after the Lord comes. If every family is to be blest, that must take all individuals: it takes the whole to constitute the family: and if they are blest all must be saved, of course. Far more consistent to believe in the world's convertion before the advent of our blessed Lord.

But their bulwark texts are those in which the world all is used—"Gave himself a ransom for all;" "Should taste death for every man;" "For the sins of the whole world;" "Tidings of great joy which shall be to all people;" "The true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world;" "As in Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive;" "And will draw all men unto me;" "As a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth," and other similar texts. Without the context of these Scriptures we should think all men would be saved, sure. They say it makes God partial to condemn a man without his hearing the gospel. But the apostle says—"For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law," (Rom. 2: 12.) God's word will be true even though men think it unfair and not giving all men equal chances.

How many care to listen and believe the gospel in these days, when the pure gospel is in every man's hand, almost? The sad answer comes back, But few; making the Scriptures true, "Many called, but few chosen." And "it shall be as it was in the days of Noah and Lot." Would they be any more likely to believe in the next age? Now they must not have more than an equal chance; if they did that would not be fair for us. Then what blessing in raising men and women to hear the gospel to spurn and ridicule it, as they do here, go on in sin, filling the new earth with misery, crime, lust, murder, sickness, pain and death. Not a very desirable home for the toiling, weary, sin-sick follower of Jesus, whose daily prayer is,—"Thy kingdom come!"

But God showed Daniel that kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens, should be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and all dominions shall serve and obey him. (ch. 7: 27.) I see no shadow of a chance for probationary beings there.

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing and honor, and glory, and power unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever." (Rev. 5.) I cannot see but this takes in the whole—quite as many as are included in "the promise and oath to Abraham." It finds all praising and blessing God.

It is said there will be infallible teachers. I see this is much more than an equal chance: for we begin to find out we have been following very fallible, changeable teachers. We had better "cease from man whose breath is in his nostrils," and stick to the word, which is so simple "that a wayfaring man though a fool need not err therein."

But they say "not one in a thousand have ever heard the gospel,—it is not the gospel we have been hearing all our lives, but the fables of men." Now this probationary age to come is the pure gospel!! "Alas how have the mighty fallen." "But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty." (1 Cor. 1: 27.) "Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God stronger than men." If there was not another text to show the gospel closed up with this age, (Rev. 10: 7) would do it—"In the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished." By reading Mk. 4: 11; Rom. 11: 25; 1 Cor. 2: 7; Eph. 1: 9; 3: 3; 5: 32; 6: 19; we cannot fail to see the gospel is meant. And if it is finished when the angel begins to sound, where is it coming in in the probationary, future age? This theory sets aside the teachings of Christ and his apostles and introduces sin and sinners; wheat and tares good; and bad; pain, sickness and dying, in the world to come, with God's declaration staring them in the face, that he will wipe away all tears from their eyes and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. "Behold I make all things new." (Rev. 21.) In winding up the revelation God gave to man (Rev. 22: 7.) he says of that period—"He that is unjust let him be unjust still—and he that is righteous let him be righteous still;.... And behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give EVERY MAN according as his work shall be."

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. And before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them one from another as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats" (Mat. 25: 31.)

They say the Lord "will take time to do his work." True. But he has said, "A short work will the Lord make upon the earth." (Rom. 9: 28.) We have samples of how he will accomplish the work. We have but to go back to his dealings with men in the past. When he brought the flood upon the ungodly world, (and there might have been many who never heard the gospel in that day) he just broke the fountain of the great deep up; and opened the windows of heaven and it took but forty days to overflow every high mountain and swallow up every man, women and child who had not found refuge in the ark of safety; the wicked and unjust found a common grave. And in such haste was God to destroy the cities of the plain, that an angel must be sent to "hasten Lot out of the city." When Lot was safely out, his love did not spare the doomed city or the innocent children. We had better believe God if "his ways are past finding out." It amounts to but little to say, God will do thus and so, because he is a God of love. Let the fires of the last day be kindled all over the earth, Peter's burning day, when the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also: and the works that are therein shall be burnt up," and the hay, wood, and stubble might go as quick as the doomed village of Peshtigo. It took but an hour to wipe out that busy thriving town, sweeping every thing in its course. Men women and children fell before the devouring fire. So the Scriptures nowhere teach us it will take a long time (a thousand years or so) for the fires of the last day to cleanse the earth and fit it for the abode of the pure in heart, when the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of God; all creatures praising and blessing God.

M. M. EASTMAN.

Will the Ten Tribes of Israel be Restored?

It is known to sacred historians, that in the reign of Rehoboam, successor of Solomon, ten of the tribes of Israel under the lead of Jereboam, revolted from the house of David and formed a second kingdom, known thereafter as the kingdom of Israel. The capital of this kingdom was Samaria, whilst that of the kingdom of Judah was Jerusalem. These kingdoms existed contemporaneously for 254 years, when the kingdom of Israel was destroyed by Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, and the Israelites carried away into captivity.

It is contended by the Millennarians that these tribes never have been heard of since their captivity. That they are somewhere on the face of the earth concealed from the knowledge of the rest of mankind, but will finally be found and restored to the land of Canaan in the Age to Come, and together with the other two tribes, Benjamin and Judah, form one kingdom under the government of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, thus fulfilling the 26th and 27th chapters of Ezekiel. Now if it can be shown that they were never lost in the sense supposed by the Judaizers, and that they returned to their land under the decree of Cyrus, or so many of each tribe as to have fulfilled the prophecy, then the whole superstructure of a future kingdom of fleshly Israelites under the reign of Christ, falls to the ground. Here let it be remembered, that Isaiah predicted the return of only a remnant of Israel and Judah, not the whole of any tribe. See ch. 10: 20-23. What, it may be asked, became of those who remained in Assyria or Babylon? I answer, they were merged into the Gentile nations and thereby lost their distinctive nationality, just as the various European nations, immigrating to this country melt away in our native population.

It will be admitted that Jeremiah predicted the return of both Israel and Judah. And Ezra says, that in order to fulfill Jeremiah's prophecy, the decree of Cyrus was issued and proclaimed throughout all the kingdoms of the earth. Ez. 1: 1-4.

If the reader will consult the 20 ch. of Jeremiah, he will see that they did return, and at the dedication of the second temple, offered sacrifices, and a sin-offering for all Israel, twelve he-goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel. If none but the tribes of Judah and Benjamin returned, why did they offer sacrifices and a sin-offering for a people they knew nothing about, and a people too, who had once existed as a distinct nation having no fellowship with the kingdom of Judah? This incident shows that the ten tribes were not lost in the sense of being unknown to mankind.

In the commission given to the seventy evangelists, they were prohibited from going among the Gentiles or Samaritans; but were told to go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. These lost sheep were in the land of Canaan, where all the tribes had lived as one kingdom and nation from their return from captivity.

Again, Josephus informs us that more than two hundred years after their restoration from Babylon, the Sanhedrim, at the request of Ptolomy Philadelphus, king of Egypt, appointed six learned men of each of the twelve tribes to translate the Hebrew Scriptures into the Greek language, for the Alexandrian library. How could the selection have been made if all the tribes were not there at the time? And how did Luke know that Anna was of the tribe of Asher, if her tribe was not in the land? Asher was one of the ten tribes. see Luke, 2: 36. In Paul's speech before Agrippa, he stated that the twelve tribes were at that time serving God day and night; meaning of course, the converts to Christianity out of all the tribes. If ten of the tribes were lost and unknown to him, how could he thus speak of them truthfully? James also speaks of these tribes, or so many of the individuals composing them as were Christians, and addresses them as brethren in the faith. It is evident from these facts and considerations, that the restoration of ten tribes as an essential element in the "Age to Come" theory is without any foundation. No such tribes now exist. After the destruction of the kingdom of Judah by the Romans, the tribal character of Israel ceased. Hence, the Jews, now scattered over the earth, are all that remain of the fleshly seed of Abraham. Their genealogies were lost eighteen centuries ago, and the families and tribes amalgamated and became one. If they were restored to-day, they could not place a lineal descendant of David upon his throne. Jesus of Nazareth is the only living heir to that honor.

N. FIELD.

Faith.

Faith is a power. It is a mighty power. 'Tis the mighty power of God. The world is filled with the fame of its achievements. Behold a summary record of its wonders in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews; and this is but a brief epitome of what faith has done and can do. It makes a paradise of dungeons, man a conqueror, triumphant over all his foes, and converts a vale of tears into a vast orchestra of praise.

Oh! for a faith like this! Well, such a faith we may have and enjoy through life's pilgrimage. A faith that will shine with a most radiant light around our pathway through all seasons and amid every tempest. A weak and wavering faith in God's promises will catch only now and then a glimpse of the better country. But a meridian faith, bold and ardent, mature and fixed, will continually behold that heavenly Jerusalem here, and claim its glorious mansion in the skies. Remember, then, child of doubt, that faith perfected like this, is the gift of God and to merit its bestowal the Christian's will must be in harmony with God's will. For God imparts faith to his children as they merit it, only as they give undoubted credence to his word, and in proportion to their holiness and conformity to his divine will. What has God not done for and promised us? This should inspire our constant gratitude, and strengthen our boundless faith in his goodness and eternal faithfulness. What has God in his graciousness promised us? Surely he has promised all things. Both grace and glory shall be ours—all good here and hereafter—if we always show true fidelity to God. Let all his "exceeding great and precious promises" enlarge and stimulate our unbounded faith in God's great mercy and salvation.—Sel. by G. E. M.

ELD. WM. H. KENDALL.

Those who read the minutes of the late sessions of the Illinois Conference will have observed that Wm. H. Kendall was added to the membership of that body. The following correspondence concerning his present and former relations has been placed in our hands. Having become an Adventist in September last, he felt bound to inform the Christian Conference of which he was a member, of that fact, and request from them a letter of dimission. His letter elicited the following response:

ELD. WATSON'S LETTER.

Troy, O. Oct. 14, 1871.

My dear Br. Kendall: Your letter requesting dismission from Conference, etc., came to my hand yesterday. I was not present at Conference and hence (and I trust providentially) it did not come before that body. Now Br. Kendall, the letter fills me with sadness, and I do wish from you a word of explanation. I did not know that there existed a difference between yourself and the members of the Christian church. There cannot in point of character surely, for in purity, integrity and honor, no man stands better than you with us. And in the direction of doctrine, without you have renounced the general doctrines of Christianity, we give you the fullest, freest liberty as a Christian man. You are my dear Br., tenderly loved by our people, and if you can possibly stay with us, consent so to do. Please write me a letter of general information, and meantime consent to continue squarely with us on the "broad basis of the Bible." You have been greatly blessed certainly in your labors since coming to us, and may God ever bless you and your dear family. Very devotedly your brother,

J. P. WATSON.

REPLY.

Amboy, Ill. Oct. 31, '71.

My dear Br. Watson: Your very welcome letter breathing much love and kindness, is at hand, and in reply I would say that the Bible is still my chart, Christ the foundation of my hope, the gospel ministry my one work, the world my parish, the numbers of the true vine my spiritual relatives, the Bible my creed, Christian character the only grounds of fellowship with me, the Holy Spirit my sanctifier, immersion my only mode of baptism, the Christian church my home, Christ my elder brother, God is my Father, whom I delight to serve in the gospel of his Son.

I believe in the mortality of man; the sleep of the dead, the utter destruction of the wicked, the resurrection of all who die, the change of the righteous living, the reward of the righteous (immortality), and the earthly inheritance of the righteous, the speedy coming of Christ to punish the wicked and reward the saints.

I do not believe these things because I desire to, or sought or studied that I might; but because to me they seem to be the plain teaching of the Bible.

Last but not least I farther believe in a change of heart, reformation of life, or character, repentance for and forsaking of sin, faith (the gift of God) and medium of acceptance to the beliver. I believe in one God, the eternal Father and his Son the divine Savior, that he is a willing, full, perfect and complete Savior of all men, "and especially of them that believe."

Now my very dear and much loved brother Watson do you see I have not changed much in my views? I do not hold to the natural immortality of man; I do not believe in the unending punishment of the wicked in conscious misery, or an etherial inheritance. Perhaps you are ready to say I am an Adventist. Yes, a Christian Adventist, or perhaps in other words, an improved Christian, for if I am or ever was worthy of the name, I feel I am even more worthy of the name Christian now; for I think when I was among the Methodists, where I was converted, I then embraced the principles of Christianity and lived them. And when I left them I brought all along with me I considered good, to the Baptists: and all I considered worth bringing I brought from both to the Christian church. So if I was a Christian at first I am an improved one now. I wish it understood that I have no sympathy with the "Age-to-come" view. You are at liberty to correspond and ask any questions, and you are solicited so to do. Write soon. I am in belief now where the Christians were when first organized; and I would to God they had never changed. I say this in all humility and love. Show me where you consider me wrong. I am sincerely yours,

WM. H. KENDALL.

An Experience—Theological and Religious.

I take this method to inform you and the readers of THE TIMES as to my whereabouts, and I will begin by telling my religious experience. I was converted to God on the night of Sept. 2, 1850, at a camp meeting held by the churches of God in East Ohio, in the neighborhood of Reedsburgh. I was but a bit of a white-headed boy. Oh! how happy I was in the full enjoyment of pardoning love and grace. I was soon afterward deeply impressed that I should preach the gospel; but being quite young I put off the conviction until I was twenty-one years of age. I received a license in Oct. 1854, from the East Ohio Eldership of churches God. I commenced to itinerate the following spring, and have devoted my time and talents to the ministry ever since. I have filled every office of trust and honor in the denomination mentioned, except one, Speaker of the General Eldership. Of late I have held the office of Chief Clerk. All has gone on well with me, until last fall. Our Eldership, [you would call it Conference] convened to transact its annual business in Greenburg, Summit Co. Ohio. I attended its sessions as usual. After I gave in my report, one of the members rose, and asked me a question relative to my preaching on Man's nature, the state of the dead, and doom of the ungodly. I replied, "Privately I have taught nothing; in public I have said all things. Don't ask me; ask the people. They heard me." This was not deemed a satisfactory answer. The reason I did not tell them all they wanted to know about my preaching was because the doctrine in question is (1), said they, "Infidelity, a dangerous heresy," (2) "M. Beck is guilty of preaching it contrary to the usage and practice of the church." I replied that they had licensed me to preach the gospel, not church tradition. Finally, after much talk and debate on the subject, they handed me over to the tender mercies of the "Standing Committee." I met them finally at Smithville, Wayne Co. where they withheld my license and struck my name from the list of ministers. In their dealings with me they have violated every law and principle of church discipline heretofore preached and practiced among them. But I do not complain. I shall, by God's grace assisting me, pursue the onward and even tenor of my way.

In my next I will tell you how I came to change my views in relation to the subjects named. M. BECK.

Wayne Co. Ohio.

Notes on an Impromptu Sermon.

PREACHED BY ELD. A. C. KINGSLY (ABOUT EIGHTY YEARS OF AGE), AT THE CONFERENCE AT ROCHELLE ILL. JAN. 18, 1872.

TEXT. Jude 20, 21.

1. "Keep yourselves in the love o God." Not try to keep God loving us, but keep in the love of God. God always manifests love to us. Keep in it.

2. God's love is very important for several reasons. It "casts out fear." Some say "all fear." This is a mistake. It only casts out slavish fear. It introduces filial fear which is the beginning of wisdom. Love makes service easy.

3. God's love is important to enable us to bear trials and make sacrifices. God's love must be supreme in us to make these a pleasure, but it will do it.

4. God's love is very important to hold the church in unity. In New York they build cobble stone houses and they must use cement to make them stand. The church is a cobble stone house, and God's love is the cement. Then, the more trials the more strength.

God's love is lowly, and we must be owly to keep in it. The ox will get upon his knees for a drink when the water is low. God's love runs in the vale of humility, and we must be willing like the ox to stoop oftimes to drink. Ministers must keep in child-like simplicity to do good. Some ministers fire too high. We must keep down and speak to the people plainly.

5. God's love is important to make men liberal, and to destroy covetousness. Some men begin well in giving but do not hold out. They have lost their love. Liberality in Christ's cause is guaged by love. The more a man loves the more he will give in proportion to his means, and vice versa.

6. Love makes it sweet to pray. Also to read the Bible. The more of God's love a person feels, the more of a Bible Christian he will be. Creed love, and party love make sectarian Christians, God's love makes Bible Christians.

7. Love is important for peace and comfort in a family. It also fills up the prayer meeting.

8. It also brings a love for the second advent of Jesus Christ. They that love Jesus, love to see him, and hence love his appearing. Some say, "so many would be lost if he should come now that might be saved if he should wait." How many less would be lost if he should tarry one hundred years? Love says, "Come quickly!"

9. How can we keep in this love? Answer: By "building yourselves up in your most holy faith." The more we understand the gospel plan of salvation, the more will the Holy Spirit shed abroad God's love in us. Also in studying prophecy there is great help. Also in much prayer. Prayer is too apt to be formal. It is not words but feelings that make prayer. God's love brings prayer—prayer brings God's love. Amen!—Reported by F. Burr.

Destroy—Gohenna.

Mat. 18: 28, Lk. 12: 5. To destroy, here, does NOT mean to cast into Gehenna. The cause is not to be interpreted as the effect. First, cast in; next, and consequently, destroyed there. But does this passage teach that God will destroy soul and body in Gehenna? Yes, this is plainly implied, otherwise the words "in Gehenna" have no meaning. God is able to destroy man, soul and body, in any place, and at any time. God's power is not, cannot be greater, or less, according to circumstance of time. So far as power alone is concerned, the statement, "He is able to destroy both soul and body" is perfect. Why add in "Gehenna"? Because it is God's purpose thus to destroy in Gehenna. In a sense God's power is limited, by his purpose. In this sense his ability to destroy soul and body is limited to Gehenna, as in this passage. Being thus limited, the purpose which limits exists, and alone constitutes the specialty of Gehenna as the theatre of God's ability to destroy both soul and body, the impenitent man. God is no more able to destroy soul and body in Gehenna than anywhere else, only as it is his purpose to destroy there, and not elsewhere. Gehenna is "the Gehenna of fire." Fire is a destroyer. We know nothing that can live in fire. We know few things that can resist it. Its tendency is always to destroy. Metaphorically it must represent an agent of destruction. It purifies by destroying. So will it purify the universe, by destroying the wicked out of it.

A. ARMOUR.

Religious Triumphs of Murderers.

A more unseemly exhibition of the profane treatment of sacred subjects has rarely been afforded than in the case of the murderer Botts, who recently expiated his crime upon the gallows, and who has been canonized since his death by various Eastern journals. According to these papers, this miserable man died in the full odor of sanctity. The last moments of his life were crowned with beatific visions, among them one of heaven, which appeared to him as a gorgeously illuminated theatre, filled with beautiful women, clad in bright garments, one of whom took him by the hand and led him into Paradise. If we are to believe all that is said of Botts, he is a full-fledged saint, purged of all earthly dross. He had reached that degree of perfection which is usually considered to be the result of heavenly influences which only operate beyond our earthly life. He had attained, at a single step, a pitch of godliness which cannot fail to be discouraging to unhanged beings, who have to bear innumerable crosses in their daily lives, and leave this world with only a hope born of unwearied effort in well-doing, and patient endurance of sore tribulations. If the murderer died with the assurance that he was going straight to heaven, after the manner of the impenitent thief, no one would certainly be cruel enough to dispute him; but we at least may claim that his canonization shall be mainly of his own making, and stop there; that the pious men who accomplished this remarkable miracle shall not trumpet it abroad; and that the daily press shall not hold out inducements for other men to earn a hanging as a means of grace. Botts was a notorious debauchee through his whole life, and in the course of his amours killed a man whom he suspected of intimacy with his mistress. Had he died a natural death, in the midst of his profligate career, we should have heard nothing of this instantaneous change from badness to goodness. He would have departed this life without any other visions than those which the remorse of a life of sin usually paints before a dying man's eyes. If, therefore, a person who commits no crime, but leads a life at peace with himself, his neighbors, and his God, dies without any other heavenly certainty than that which grows out of hope; if a man who has committed crime every day of his worthless life dies a natural death without any hope of heaven, we protest that the criminal who dies an unnatural death shall not advertise the gallows as a stepping-stone into heaven. Perfect indulgence of every passion while living, the enjoyment of heavenly blessings after death, with the additional comforting assurance of a splendid funeral, are more than enough to satisfy the most fastidious of sinners, and offer a special inducement to every cut-throat and thief who is satiated with his pleasures to take his pistol or knife, and, with their help, set off on his departure to the regions of the blest.

We are not protesting against these sudden conversions of notorious criminals while on their way to the gallows, as facts. We do insist that the ministers of religion shall not invest crime with any factitious glamour, or with borrowed hues of sentiment, but that they shall picture it in all its atrocious deformity. It is not one of the triumphs of religion to prove that crime is the path to heaven, and that the man who dies with the blood of his fellow-man still red upon his hands goes to his reward with the same certainty as the martyr who dies at the stake for the cause of God's truth, or the good man who has lived up to his convictions of what is right to the best of his ability. If we believed in such an apotheosis of crime, we should certainly urge a more general application of the efficacy of the gallows to the punishment of other crimes. It is sadly enough needed. We have great faith in the gallows as a preventive of crime, but not as a religious persuader.—Chicago Tribune.

The Acts of The Apostles.

Clearly it is not the vocation of a daily newspaper [to sustain the tenets or the proselytism of any sect. But the annual reports of the various Missionary Associations may incline even a secular editor to a moment's consideration of the worldly value of missions, outside their peculiar claim to other-worldliness.

It is plain, we think, that the Missionary spirit in the Protestant church is the only element which answers to the ardor of the church of Rome. Long ago, Dr. Newman declared that "In the present day mistiness "is the mother of wisdom. The hope of the "Church is said to be he who can guide it through the channel of no-meaning, between the Scylla and Charybdis of Ay and No." And Robertson, who was certainly as orthodox as he was sweet, found popular Christianity to be "at once devotional, slanderous, timid, gossiping, narrow, shrieking, and prudish." But the solitary men and woman who, with a courage above that of armies, penetrate foreign and hostile lands, there to live or to die for an idea, recall the apostolic days and the dauntless faith of the primitive Christians. Their work is either Quixotic or inspired, as one looks at it. But their attempt is sublime.

They plant the outposts of civilization. Doctrines send them where dollars could not, and commerce and the arts follow in the track they have cleared. They carry with them that vast engine of progress, the English language. In Asia and Africa, alone, they have reduced to written characters nineteen barbarous tongues which must give place to English speech. They have built school houses. They have taught habits of decency, order, sobriety.

We observe, with some surprise, that the good fathers in Israel speak deprecatingly of educational and civilizing agencies, and exhort the missionaries to remember nothing save Christ and him crucified. Schools, farms, and saw-mills are well enough, but church-membership is prerequisite, they believe. In their order, baptism precedes civilization. But all history shows that neither men nor nations can long hold to a faith which is higher than their intelligence. They will observe rites and ceremonies, they will repeat formulas, they will offer lip-service. But their hearts are where their civilization holds them. The Christianity of the year 1500 had no claim to the name of its founder. With fourteen centuries in which to ripen, it had rotted because of the ignorant superstitions of men. Mr. Moffat found among the Bechuanas, that an eagerness to understand the mysteries of the white man's dress-making, tailoring, cooking in pots, preceded any eagerness to divine the mysteries of the white man's religion. He observed, also, that they discovered candle-making to be a bewitching employment, and that after they had run numberless candles it occurred to them that books to read by candle-light and capacity to spell out the books would be excellent acquisitions. On which revelation they acted. The explanation of the prosperity of the South African mission at Genadenthal is not far to seek. There the missionaries have established a grist-mill, a smithy, a drug store, a printing office whence issue two monthly periodicals, and in the tidy chapel a Hottentot plays the organ on Sundays. It is, however, the negro cousins of these converts, across the straits in Madagascar, who have fought their good fight and finished the faith. Holding already a rude and partial civilization, these Madagassy gave ready welcome to the new doctrines and new industries of the missionaries, the king himself laying the corner-stone of the first school-house. Five years of royal protection developed thousands of nominal Christians, overflowing schools, trained carpenters, weavers, artisans of all trades. The king dying, there followed twenty-seven years of such persecution as Rome decreed in the first century. The victims were tortured, maimed, flung from precipices, tossed to wild beasts, chained to the dead, loaded with fetters and thrust into caverns to starve, boiled in oil, sawn asunder, burned alive. And they neither flinched nor recanted. Yet these later Latimers and Ridleys owned the black skins, the flattened features, the thick lips, the curly hair which conservatism pronounces incapable of civilization. Their ancestors were sold in our slave markets. Their kindred fought under our flag. And the most enlightened nation of Christendom debated for years the fitness of such blood for freedom and the franchise.

But if the missonaries had not hastened civilization, and if the converts had all backslidden, we should still hold the value of missions to be incalculable; for unselfishness keeps the world sweet. "Grandeur of character," says Emerson, "acts in the dark, and succors those who never saw it." Were a new Acta Sanctorum to be written, there would be set within it the name of John Elliot, who gave seventeen years to making an Indian Bible. It would tell the story of sad David Brainard, wearing out his feeble life among the savages, alone, sick, in peril, torn with morbid doubts, but exalting with his latest breath the Christ in whom he believed. It would add that of Hans Egede, who gave up father and mother and people and home, to spend his days in desolate Greenland, beseeching the dull natives to be saved from their sins. It would name the sweet Moravians, who, following the heroic Swede, worked and prayed in willing banishment through one hundred and fifty years to plant four missions on those icy shores. It would honor Allen Gardiner, and Martyn, and Vinton, and the learned Vanderkemp. It would illumine its pages with the name of Adoniram Judson, of whom Theodore Parker said, with wet eyes, that all the treasure spent on missions was not too much for one such life. It would enshrine the Kusters and Father Taylor, who, elected to serve in the leper hospital on Robben Island, and there lived amid such horrors as our small-pox lazarettos do not know, nursing, comforting, praying; on three days of the week holding school for lepers and the chronic sick and blind; on two days soothing, helping, and reading to the lunatics.

Humanity might better lose the whole history of Napoleon than the story of such deeds, not wrought in the heroic heat of a high moment, but the slow fruit of every day of painful years. They make contemptible the luxurious life of worldly men and women. They render despicable that piety which calls itself Christian only because it utters long prayers on Sunday and pays tithes in anise and cumin. They drive thoughtful people without the church to the conclusion of the Pike County philosopher, that loving service to God's helpless children, the "bringing them to their own, is "a sight better business than loafin' around the throne."—N. Y. Tribune.

Advent Christian Times.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 13, 1877.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - - EDITOR

MISSIONS.

A writer in Zion's Herald has some plain talk on missionary enterprise and success. He says:

> A preacher who succeeds in saving souls in America, comes to India, and preaches the same gospel, with the same earnestness and faith, and yet sees scarcely any fruit. He is startled by his want of success, searches his heart, prays, consecrates himself anew, and waits before the mercy-seat until he is sure that he enjoys as much of the Spirit's presence as he has ever felt in America, and then tries once more. The result is the same. The natives are wholly unmoved by preaching, which would almost inevitably send conviction to many hearts in an American congregation. How is he to account for the difference? Is the gospel less suited to the natives of one country than of another? Many good, and some very wise men are sorely puzzled over this question.
>
> One of our Bishops who visited India was much troubled about it, and frankly confessed that he could not understand a fact which seemed contrary to all his convictions with reference to the methods of grace, and the power of the gospel. Too many settle the question by referring it to God's sovereignty, and excuse their failure by assuming that the present is not the time which God has fixed for the conversion of the people. Others have much to say about preparatory work, education, etc., but the discouraging fact remains, that the Word preached in India usually fails to accomplish as much as in Christian lands.
>
> Some readers who have read of our revivals in India, may be surprised at this statement, but I am speaking of the Hindoos and Mohammedans, the two great divisions into which the people of North India are divided. Among these there has never yet been any movement of a general character. Now and then a straggler is picked off, but not a gap has yet been opened in their ranks. The mass of our converts have been from small communities of low caste people, who are not reckoned as Hindoos proper, and whose conversion does not greatly affect the solid ranks standing behind them. Scattered converts are picked up, and slowly a Christian community is being formed; but anything like a revival, the conversion of two or three dozen families, has never yet been witnessed.

—Now this is a sad story. It throws a dark cloud over the bright prospects we have been taught to entertain of the progress of the gospel among the heathen. True, the writer says he does not speak despondingly, but it strikes us that the hope he indulges of better things in the future is not well grounded. He says:

> The reader will probably say that the missionaries have the remedy in their own hands, and need only wrestle, like Jacob of old, till the power from on high comes upon them. This is, in a measure, true; but we missionaries have not this work in our own hands. The church is carrying on this work, and we are but agents for her. With a doubting, hesitating church behind us, our hands are not stayed up for the strife, but dragged down rather. The church must be taught to pray, to believe, to feel an interest in her distant laborers. She cannot do this work by proxy, cannot escape the responsibility by simply paying for "substitutes" to go to the front. According to her faith, so will it be unto her in this great work.

—The success of the missionary, then, depends upon the spirituality of the church that sends him out. By looking at the spiritual thermometer at home we can tell about how it registers abroad. We have no doubt the test is a fair one. What is the almost universal testimony as to the indications of that thermometer? In very few places does it register many degrees above "luke-warm," and often is below the freezing point. Even home missions depend upon "fairs" for support. The ministry is paid by the gains of gambling and the sales of pleasures. Instead of the prayer and conference meetings, we have "the social;" for self-denial, we have self-indulgence; instead of separation from, we have conformity to the world. And this is not alone the testimony of outsiders, but of the best minds within the church's pale.

We speak of these facts sorrowfully. They are a just occasion of the deepest distress. But they are facts. They teach us the truth of the Scriptures, which affirm that just such a state of things shall exist. Let the missionaries go on in their noble work, and do all that they can to save some; but let them not delude themselves and others with the false hope that all the world shall be converted. If they go to work understandingly, they will look for some "out of" every nation to which they go, and will not be disappointed. But the idea of a temporal millennium, a triumph of the gospel in the regeneration of the mass of mankind, is a delusion and a snare.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

CASTLETON, VT.

On my return to Castleton from Canada I found a telegram saying that my son Edwin was dying, and that I must return immediately. But it came too late for me to get the train, and I was compelled to wait until Monday. I spoke in the evening from Ps. 51: 10–13—"Create within me a clean heart," &c. The audience was good, giving the best attention to the word, and our soul was blessed.

SABBATH, Jan. 21. The subjects today were the Beatitudes, Mat. 5: 1–14, and the kingdom, Mat. 6: 10. While I portrayed it from the divine word I could almost see it in vision, in the glory with which it is soon to come. The kingdom will come soon, and then we shall have joy forever in the Lord. No more death, but immortality—the kingdom of God.

At night I spoke from Ezk. 33: 7–11, on the duties of the watchmen, to warn the wicked and press them to come to Christ. A goodly number came out, and some spoke of being blessed. There seems to be deep conviction, and many ready to break down and come to the Lord. May he continue to be with Br. Mathewson and his people, and give them great success. I leave with regret; but must hasten home, to bear with my household the sorrows which seem to be upon us.

I have now spent almost three weeks in Castleton, though when I came did not think to tarry but a day or so. The hand of Providence seems to be in my detention. I have been so warmly welcomed, and heartily received by Br. and Sr. Mathewson, the church and the community, that I have had free access to the people, and the word of the Lord has had free intercourse and has been glorified. Souls have been convicted, and converted. The church has been greatly cheered, and helped in the way of the Lord.

This is my first visit of any length with Br. Mathewson. It has been both pleasant and profitable to me, and I hope to him and his people. I have seldom worked with a brother in a revival where there was a more perfect sympathy or unity in labor. We worked together as a charm, and God was with us indeed, which was the best of all.

MONDAY, Jan. 22. On my way home I had opportunity this evening to spend a little time in Rochester. I found Br. P. A. Smith's family well, and learned that his health is now restored, and he is continuing his good work in Florida. I was glad to learn what I expected would be the fact, that Br. J. H. Whitmore is very much liked here, and the church is prospering under his labors. He, with them, desires to make a special effort in a protracted meeting, and wishes me to aid them, which I will do if possible.

TUESDAY, Jan. 23. I reached home at 7 p. m. The first sad word from a friend at the depot, as I got out of the car, was, "Your son Edwin is dead, and the funeral is to be at 10 o'clock to-morrow." My suspense of mind for days was now settled. My dear son, on whom, I with others depended so much in carrying forward our mission in the West, is dead. He sleeps in Jesus. He was faithful to the last, and died in the harness, and at his post. I thank God that he gave me such a son; and now he has taken him away we cannot, as a family, find it in our hearts to murmur. But our meeting to-night has been a sad one. Midst the weeping of mother and children and kind friends, I have felt the blessed support of the hand of God. And I am thankful that God has permitted me to reach home to help bear my part in this affliction, and administer comfort to them.

Edwin has now been dead one week, but his features were natural and pleasant as in life. Dear saint! He sleeps sweetly in Christ, and only awaits the sound of the last trump to come forth to everlasting life.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 14. At 10 a. m. our friends gathered at our residence to attend the funeral services, conducted by Elds. D. Mathewson, Ferriss and Mansfield. Several clergymen of the town were also kindly present to sympathize with us: Eld's. Collins, Sickafoose, Deering, and Bartmess. It is the second scene of the kind we have passed through since we came West. The first was in the death of my son John.

THURSDAY, Jan. 25. The church in Buchanan invited me to speak to them while I am detained at home with office and domestic duties. I gave the first lecture this evening on the outpouring of the Spirit. (Is. 44: 3–5.) Good audience, and many spoke at the close of the discourse.

SATURDAY, Jan. 27. We had a copy of THE TIMES returned to-day from a Catholic priest, who filled the margin with the following remarks:

> "What is the Bible? What are the Scriptures? Please read Sir Edmund Burke on the petition of the non-conformists, and reflect on the folly and wicked bablings of all those who have left the one Catholic and Apostolic church. You will never be happy till you turn back to its fold. You have no guide. You are not infallible; then you may be in error. All the heretics are howling against the true church of Christ, you think it is all up with the Pope. Read history and see if he has not been in just as tight a corner thirty-two times already and got out of it. He will get out again. You will do as Herod did, you will unite with Pontius Pilate. You cry, 'Anti-christ! He hath a devil! Crucify him!' The servant is not better than his master. The world persecuted his master, it must persecute him. If there were no men like you to cry out 'Crucify him!' the prophecy would not be fulfilled. The world hates the Catholic church, and always will hate it, and persecute so long as there is a devil, and so long as the devil has his followers. Had you not better make up your mind and return to the one fold. This is a serious matter think well on it. Good bye!"

In another part of the paper, he says of the account of M. Pieranda's conversion from papacy, to protestantism, "A lie!" Under the request for prayer for Edwin, he says, "Could not the saints in heaven pray for us as well as you?"

Spoke at night on the three parables of Mat. 25. Eld. Collins, the Disciple minister, was in, and followed me in interesting remarks, as did Br. Mansfield and others. Thus the work of the sad and weary week was closed. We have had a mingled cup. Sickness and death, with care, and hard work. But God helps, and we are therefore sustained.

SABBATH, Jan. 28. Extremely cold, but a good gathering at the house of God. I spoke in the a. m. from Is. 64: 6. "And we all do fade as a leaf." I showed the fading nature of all terrene things. All is fading and dying. Nothing can be relied upon but the unfading and eternal things of the world to come, where there shall be no more death. At noon I attended the funeral of Br. John Perrott's son, a boy of nine years. A sad affliction. At night I spoke from Ps. 51: 10–13. "Create in me a clean heart, and renew a right spirit within me." A searching time.

MONDAY, Jan. 29. After taking care for my afflicted ones at home, and laboring in the meantime for the church, the past week, I took the cars for Chicago. On the way Br. F. B. Streeter, introduced himself as an old acquaintance. I found he was the son of Sr. N. Streeter, Vernon, Vt., one of the most active and faithful of the Adventists there. He is now settled in Kalamazoo Mich., a music teacher in the city schools.

At 10 p. m. I was walking by moonlight amid the ruins, not of an ancient city but the late proud and beautiful Chicago, which had hardly been built, ere it vanished in flames of fire, leaving only the debris, with here and there the walls of the palaces and immense structures of her merchant princes, which looks as desolate as "Tadmor of the wilderness." I was soon welcomed by Br. Burr. I found Br. and Sr. Kessler with him. I found deep sympathy for my late affliction. How sweet is the kindly attentions of friends in the hour of bereavement and sorrow. The church are holding interesting meetings here. They are real workers, and God is with them, prospering them.

TUESDAY, Jan. 30. Called upon J. E. G. Scott formerly of Vernon, Vt. now established in business here. He is in a wholesale establishment dealing in men's furnishing goods, at 61 West Washington St. And dealers will do well to trade with him. Years ago I used to visit Vernon and put up at his father's house. He was but a lad. Little did I then expect this meeting in this Western metropolis. I rejoiced to find him an Adventist, not ashamed of the faith and hope of his parents. I also had an interview with Br. A. M. Billings. He is President of the Gas Company on the West Side, and is crowded with business and care; but a man of great natural powers, both physical and mental, and quite unrivalled as a business man. In the early history of the Advent movement he was an Advent preacher; but for many years he has not been connected with the Advent church. He has shown hospitality to his old Advent friends, and helped the church in Chicago, though not a member of it. I am not a favorite of his. He does not like or believe in my course or policy in carrying forward the Advent cause in the West, and of course would not be expected to aid me in my work. This is all right. Every man has his own convictions of what is right and should carry them out honestly. I am doing what I think is right. And I have to do the work to which Providence has called me, according to the best wisdom which God gives me, and my faithful brethren in the West and elsewhere.. Two cannot walk together except they are agreed. I think no cause can live and prosper without organization and law. And And then the best organization will fail, unless there is integrity in its members. Each one must enjoy their rights and be respected in the positions they occupy by the expressed will of the body. Then there will not only be peace, but growth, and prosperity. I am happy to know that the Western Advent interest has been prospered more or less in every department, and that the prospect before us was never brighter, both as to our work and in doing good, and the prospect of nearing deliverance for the saints. But since the beginning of the world no cause has ever flourished without its dangers. Either its members backslide and lose the life of God, or "offences come," and then strife or division. Generally those that stand most prominent are marked for opposition. They are assailed in various forms, and the more they prosper, the more bitter will be the assults upon them. In the West for the last eight or ten years there has been but little for any one to envy in the position of the workers in the cause. We have all been poor, our laborers have received but little, and with the necessary sacrifice and hardships there was little motive for jealousy, in any department. Naturally we have had much peace. But now that we have gained so good a position, and are succeeding so well it would not be strange if we should have trials like all before us. The Savior says "offences must needs come;" but adds a wo upon those by whom they come.

In the p. m. I called on Judge Ayres in Harvard, Ill. The church are without a preacher, except Br. Reed's occasional supply.

I spent the night at Janesville, Wis. with Br. Clow. He is deeply interested in the time of the Savior's coming, looking to 1873 and 1875 for the consummation of our hope. He has an active mind and is quite a thinker. He is also a genius and an inventor. His Reaper, is looked upon as one of the best in the world. Our farmers have no doubt seen his liberal offer for the sale of one of them to help the Western office. Any one in the want of a Reaper will do well to close with this bargain.

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

Upon Four Propositions, Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

ELD. HIMES' FOURTH REPLY.

It is said that a certain lawyer advised his pupil, when the law and evidence were both against him, to resort to abuse. Those who have read my brother's "Fourth Letter" will see the point. He may think to gain his audience by such language as he uses; but I have a better opinion of them. I trust I am addressing candid hearers, who will weigh argument and give diatribe the go by. They understand that abuse and appeals to prejudice are the weapons of those short of argument. One who feels safe upon the foundation of his logic will disdain a resort so degrading. Does my brother prove anything by the use of such phrases as these?—"Dare you deny? Get out of this mist; Be honest; Dare you answer? Puerile quibbles; Utter ignorance or dishonest attempt; Have manhood enough to answer; Modern Sadduceeism; Mere jugglery: Twaddle; Paltry quibble; Clap-trap; Stale fustian." He forgets that hard words are not arguments.

My brother attempts to hold his argument from Ex. 3: 6. He has labeled my reply a "complete failure:" but the amount of space he devotes to it shows that at heart he holds a different opinion. I now purpose to show how he has exploded his own reasoning. He says of the expression, "I am the God of Abraham,"—"God uses language in no other sense than as man would understand it.... When God said, 'I am their God,' man would say, 'He can only so say when they exist: hence they now exist.'" And to show that this is no slip of the pen, he repeats—"Man would understand him as saying, 'I am now in fact their God:' hence they exist."

But he forgot that when he introduced this argument he said, emphatically, "Mark! I do not say this was the intended meaning of the passage, nor even that Moses so understood it. This is no part of the argument!" Thus after calling special attention to his doubt that Moses understood the passage as he explains it, he repeats and re-repeats the assertion that God used the "language in no other sense than as man would understand it." Now if this means anything, it means that the words had but one obvious sense, which was that Abraham is conscious in death. Yet he says, "I do not say that this was the intended meaning, nor even that Moses so understood it." He has a poorer opinion of Moses' intelligence than I have. But let me set my brother's dilemma fairly before our readers, that we may all understand

HIS POSITION.

Mark! I do not say this was the intended meaning of the passage, nor even that Moses so understood it. This is no part of the argument! (Third letter.)	God uses language in no other sense than man would understand it. Man would understand him as saying, I am now, in fact, their God: hence, they exist. (Fourth letter.)

Nor is this the only place where my rother's unfortunate appeal to this assage has led him into self-contradicion. He asserts that when God says, I am the God of Abraham," he uses he "language in no other sense than nan would understand it," and that ense he with equal confidence affirms be that Abraham has a conscious xistence in death. Mark this! By urning to Gen. 26:24 we find that God aid to Isaac, "I am the God of Abraam thy father." Now according to ld. Braden, Isaac must understand is as meaning, "I am now, in fact, his od: hence, Abraham exists." Consequently Isaac was informed as to the conition of the dead. But in his second letr Eld. B. said, "Before the flood we do ot find any distinction between the fe-principle or soul of man and that of e brute. This holds true all through e books of Moses, except that Jacob d the patriarchs began to have ideas f the soul as a phantom, wandering in heol or the underworld." We are, erefore, forced to the conclusion that Isaac knew no distinction between he soul of man and of the brute; and he is informed in terms whose ense was unmistakable that the soul f man survives, he must also have beeved that the souls of beasts survive— e knew no distinction between them. nd further: why use such indefinite nguage concerning Jacob's faith, hen God had said plainly to him, "I n the God of Abraham and Isaac?" Gen. 28:13.) If the clear import of is language is what my brother afrms, Jacob's ideas of the soul as a andering phantom ought to have asumed more definite shape. The imaterialist who compares the benightd condition of these "pastoral barbaans" with the light enjoyed by the gyptians upon the condition of man death and the future life, can but reret that they did not procure theology well as their corn from that more ivilized people.

Finally if my brother will kindly tell s what was the intended meaning of x. 3:6, and how Moses understood , and then endorse that as the true ense of the passage, he will doubtless o quote his own terms) get out of the mist" of self-contradiction and "the ust" of incorrect reasoning. Meanhile I refer my readers to my arguents on this point in a previous letr. My brother says they are judge nd jury. I freely leave the case in eir hands.

A few words on Christ's argument om Ex. 3:6. I am glad he has said, The question is, Does his argument r the resurrection depend for validity pon the conscious existence of the atriarchs, when God used the language ferred to?" This brings the matter to a few words. My brother takes e position, squarely, that Jesus only tempted to prove that there could be resurrection; that he showed that the ad are conscious, and thus proved the surrection possible. He maintains this sition by substituting other words r the language of Christ. It would well if he would remember the prinple he himself has insisted on: "Our ctrine must be in the words of the pirit, or we must take the Scriptures. e must call Bible things by Bible ames." He would not then reply, ugglery," when I show that he inlges changes of Bible language that volutionize the sense of the passage. ow innocent his remark, "Br. Himes' tempt to set aside our arguments by owing that our Savior did not use the entical words we did, is mere jugery." (Italics mine.) "Identical ords," indeed! We should think t. If Christ had said white, and Mr. raden had written black, the difference could hardly be greater. With hat an air of injured innocence my other says—"the identical words!" if the difference between his words d those of Christ was merely in oice of terms, and not, as it really is, in the sense of the terms employed. Mr. Braden says, touching the present state of the dead, while Christ says "Touching the resurrection of the dead." He says, touching the dead that they are conscious, where Jesus says, "touching the dead that they rise." He says, Now that the dead can be raised, while Christ said, Now that the dead ARE raised. What I showed up was not a dissimilarity of terms, but an absolute conflict of ideas. And the rebutting argument is—"mere jugglery!"

There can be only two senses of the expression in Lk. 32:37. It either means that the resurrection has occurred, or that it will certainly occur. It cannot by any fair exegesis be made to mean merely that it can be or is possible. Some argue, and this passage and 2 Cor. 5:1-10 are the pillars of their theory, that the dead "are raised" when they die. But my brother has not reached that advanced stage of immaterialism, so I have no need to argue the point. It remains that the passage is a prolepsis. It is admitted that the resurrection is in the future; but Jesus says, "Now that the dead are raised:" hence he spoke prophetically, and proleptically; and his point is that the Lord is the God of Abraham, not because Abraham is alive, but because Abraham will live again.

My brother says "there is no dispute that his purpose was to prove that the dead can be raised." I disputed this very point in my last article. To assert it is to emasculate the Savior's argument. "Then came to him the Sadducees which say there is no resurrection." How tame to read—And Jesus proved to them that a resurrection was possible, because the dead are conscious. And how absurd the conclusion that the Sadducees were thus put to silence. We leave it to the candid reader whether the record does not imply that Jesus demonstrated the certainty of the resurrection beyond cavil. "As touching the dead that they rise .... God said, I am the God of Abraham."

Again. God is not the God of the dead. But Abraham is dead. (Gen. 25:8.) But my brother says, his body died. His spirit is alive. Very well. God is not the God of the dead; and if it is the body that is dead, God is not the God of the dead [body], therefore it will never have a resurrection. The spirit of the "pastoral barbarian" is alive, and needs no resurrection, indeed is incapable of it, because only the dead can be raised to life. The Sadducees were right after all on one point. Such are the inevitable conclusions from my brother's premises.

As to Lk. 12:4, I tried hard to find some argument in my brother's use of it. I could see none, unless it was in the direction I indicated. He now denies that he meant that, and this leaves his "argument" from Mat. 10:28 and Lk. 12:4 simply a bundle of bare assertions. Let me show an instance as a sample of the whole—the most palpable non sequitur one could conceive. He quotes the texts, and then without a shadow of argument gives us his eight "conclusions," and forthwith speaks of them as if his ipse dixit were the standard of appeal. "Conclusion 4" is—"After God kills he punishes by casting into gehenna." And "Conclusion 5," deduced from No. 4, is—"Death, then, does not extinguish that conscious being that the spirit possesses before death." Which is as legitimate as it would be for me to say—'Death, then, does not extinguish the conscious being or life of the body:' for he casts soul and body into gehenna. Observe, Eld. Braden says: "After killing, the spirit has conscious existence, or what does God cast into gehenna?" entirely forgetting that "the killing" is before the resurrection, and that when it occurs soul and body will be present at the judgment in the person of the man to receive the awful doom.

Having forced my brother to tell as plainly what man is, he seeks a refuge, and thinks he has found it in—Synecdoche! But he has quite forgotten that figures of speech are subject to law. If he affirms that a word is used figuratively in any given passage, we have a right to a reason for his opinion. He knows perfectly well that a figure is inadmissible wherever the natural sense of the word agrees with the context. "Words must be taken in their primary and commonly accepted meaning, unless we are compelled by the context to give other meanings." A figure or secondary sense is not allowable unless clearly demanded. Now the simple fact is, there is not a synecdoche in a single passage he cites. It will be time enough to talk of a figure in those passages when he shows the natural sense of the term man to be inadmissible. As I cannot follow him through, let me puncture his theory at a point or two. Moses uses the synecdoche in Gen. 2:7, he says, "God made man [his body] out of the dust." We will admit the synecdoche for the argument's sake. Let us read on. "And breathed into his nostrils the breath of lives, and man ['s body] became a living soul." A decidedly unwelcome conclusion for the immaterialist. Again he says, the image of God pertains to the spirit. So we must read Gen. 1:26-28—minding the synecdoches—"God said, Let us make man ['s spirit] in our image, after our likeness.... So God created man['s spirit] in his own image: in the image of God created he [man's spirit]: male and female created he them [their spirits!]. In synecdocheing 2 Cor. 12:2-4, he happened to see the inconsistency he failed to note in Gen. 2:7, so he throws in the remark, that sometimes the synecdoche and the natural sense; "both occur in the same sentence." My brother accused me of paltry quibbling. I hope never to be guilty of such tampering with the fundamental laws of language as this. In passing I wish to inquire how my brother learned that Paul's spirit was caught away to heaven. Paul himself says he could not tell whether he went "in the body or out." Br. Braden seems to have found out. How and where? I don't dare him to tell, but will he please inform us.

A little space is left for comments. Spirit is a term that has several senses. My brother assembles a number of texts in which it occurs in a variety of meanings, or does not occur at all, and then deduces arguments as if his premises were indisputable. He thinks strange I should deny his premises, or expect him to prove them; appeals to common sense. Unfortunately he has defined common sense to be "public opinion"—not a standard authority. He says my observations on the fact that the terms of his proposition are not in the Bible, are "clap-trap," and quotes a phrase from my first affirmative proposition, and asks if I can find it in the Scriptures. When I presented him the blade of this weapon, I hardly hoped he would grasp it: but he has done so. What I said was, "He may search the Bible in vain for immortal soul, or any equivalent expression." When I come to affirm my proposition to which he refers, it will be time enough to decide whether I can find equivalent expressions for it in God's Book.

My brother brings in a college again, this time to illustrate where a dead man goes. "The faculty and students have gone to other institutions; the building has been hauled away, and used for other purposes." And he adds contemptuously, "but, says brother Himes, where did the college go?" The comparison, for once, is apt. In such case the college is EXTINCT, just as a man is, when dead. It has ceased to exist as a college. So when a man dies, and his "breath of lives" goes to "God who gave it," and the man returns to the dust from whence he was taken' though the material is not annihilated, the man has ceased to exist.

I am sorry that I have not space to consider some other points. Still, I have not felt bound to pay any attention to questions asked in a manner calculated to impugn my moral courage or candor. If Mr. Braden when he wrote to me before the debate concerning my views had dared me to answer, or challenged me as an honest man to reply, the correspondence would have suddenly ceased. I have no objections to being pressed as hard as he can push me. But when dared, or denounced as dishonest, I shall use my own judgment about replying. I hope the debate may now return to the spirit of the first articles.

The Times.

AT HOME.

∼ ∼ ∼ Illinois had a slight earthquake last week.

∼ ∼ ∼ We have entered on another series of railway accidents. Recently, near Alton, Ill., the horror of burning living passengers, held fast by the ruins, was re-enacted. One man was held by his foot only, but could not be extricated in time to save him from the flames. The accident was the result of culpable, yes, reckless carelessness on the part of a conductor. Other accidents have resulted more or less favorably.

∼ ∼ ∼ The Boston Journal, Jan. 27, says:

A YEAR TO BE REMEMBERED. We give in to-day's supplement a summary, more full and elaborate than ever presented in a news paper, of the remarkable disasters and calamities which made the year 1871 noteworthy in the calendar of the century, together with an account of the peculiar natural phenomena of the year. The list is a melancholy one. Hardly a conceivable calamity which did not at some time during the year fall upon some portion of the globe. Gales and shipwrecks at sea, floods, storms, earthquakes, tornadoes and conflagrations on land; famine, pestilence and epidemic; collisions on railroads, steamboat explosions, mining accidents, explosions of fire damp, added to the array of suicides, murders and violent deaths, make a long list of horrors, hardly equaled in any preceding year of the century, and it is to be hoped, not to be equaled in any year to come. The leading disasters of the year, such as the Westfield explosion, the collision at Revere, the conflagrations in Chicago and the Northwest, and the famine and pestilence in Persia, are familiar to the public mind, but the list presents in chronological order calamities hardly less serious, which were crowded out of general recollection by succeeding horrors. The record of any single month is sufficient to awaken serious reflection, and show us the multitudinous possibilities of danger and death which encompass all our lives.

∼ ∼ ∼ Another New York writer says: "I do not remember the time when crime stalked so fearlessly in the streets of New York as now. The last week has witnessed two cold-blooded murders, half a dozen brutal assaults, burglaries unlimited, and highway robberies without number. Add to these the embezzling bank officers and defaulting clerks, and the schedule presents an array of criminal acts scarcely ever paralleled. For this our present police force is in a great measure responsible. Since Tammany took control of the police, the officers of the force have been selected more to a view with carrying primary elections than to preventing or punishing crime. Policemen consort with thieves and rowdies, and it has been proven in more than one instance that the three callings are combined in the same person. When poor Panormo, the music teacher, was being beaten to death and robbed by ruffians, in the public streets of Brooklyn, last week, twenty four policemen of the same precinct were attending a primary meeting within two blocks of the bloody scene. While they were "stuffing the boxes" for one of the "Ring" candidates whose nomination to office had been agreed upon, ruffians were beating out the brains of the poor music teacher, almost under their noses. In New York, the same condition of things exists. Even the most frequented thoroughfares are unsafe after midnight; for thieves abound, who will assault any one for the purpose of robbery, caring nothing if murder be the result of their work. A friend of mine, living up town, heard voices under his window late at night, and, on looking out, saw three men talking together. Presently one said, "Here comes a feller; let's go for him." And they did "go for" a lone pedestrian to the extennt of knocking him down, and leaving him senseless on the sidewalk. As they turned coolly to a convenient street-lamp to see the amount of booty they had achieved, one said, "How much did you get, Bill?" Bill replied: "Only nineteen cents, but that will buy the beer! Come along, boys!" And so they went their way. The hospitals are full of beaten and wounded persons, who have received their injuries either at the hands of such ruffians, or in some drunken street or bar-room brawl, and the list of violent deaths upon which the coroners are called to hold inquest will amount to at least a dozen per day. Intelligent persons attribute this lawlessness to the corruption of the Judiciary and the governing authorities.

∼ ∼ ∼ The carnival of crime, robberies, burglaries, deadly assaults, and murders continue, and indeed, increase in this city and vicinity. Rampant ruffianism is now so recognized as the inevitable condition here that with the perusal of the details of some daring outrage the interest felt by many ceases. So much has it become a matter of fact that criminals of the worst class, those most dangerous and daring, have, if not protected and encouraged, at least been so tolerated in the pursuit of plunder and commission of crime, by the worthless police, that again and again it is said, "An honest man has not half the protection afforded to a thief." Men guilty of daring crimes, well known to be criminals, walk the streets with perfect immunity, and at night waylay, rob, beat, and murder honest men with impunity. The robbers of the Grafton Bank, of Massachusetts, though well known, and disbursing plunder lavishly in the face of the city police, were not brought to justice until a Massachusetts detective, alone and unaided, came here, boarded in the den of one of the burglars, gained the confidence of the mob, and finally trapped all the principal robbers. Other cases of a similar character are continually occurring. Dutch Heinrich holds the confidence of the detectives, and is on terms of intimacy with them. There are several indictments against him on which he has never been been tried. The man arrested in Washington the other day with Blatchford's stolen bonds in his possession, and who gave the name of Horace Corpe, is understood to be an old hand at bank robbing who has done considerable business in the Southern States, and of whose character and career Glover, the bond smasher now on trial in Boston, could give an interesting history, and yet none of the principal detective officers seem aware of his antecedents; and Judge Hogan, who, after examination, had judgment enough to hold him for trial is now ignorant of the fellow's real name and character. The brutel outrage upon Albert Bornowsky, a well known merchant, on Sunday morning at the Mansion House, by Dennis Brady, Thomas Cummings, and Michael Donovan, three well known desperadoes, is still fresh in the minds of the public. It is now certain that Brady, dressed in the garb of a Philadelphia policeman was the leading spirit in the most daringly planned and most cunningly executed bank burglary ever perpetrated in this country. Officers of the Kensington Park Bank, Philadelphia, were surprised by a member of the police to all appearance walking into the bank, and informing them that the captain had heard that an attempt would be made to rob the bank that night, and that a force of police would be sent to take up their quarters in the building and protect it. The officers felt very much gratified; informed the watchman that the police would come, and ordered him to admit them. These are a few of the many instances of daring crimes which the police seem powerless or unwilling to prevent. The thieves and robbers have such a thorough organization that they swear an alibi when any of their number is arrested, or fall upon citizens or policemen who seize the scoundrels and effect release. Vigilance committees are seriously talked of, and may be formed at any time. People seem prepared for meting out summary justice to hordes of villains in and about the city.—Cor. Chicago Tribune.

ABROAD.

∼ ∼ ∼ A hint of coming change is afforded in the fact that the Assembly, on Monday week, was tumultuously discussing a motion for the establishment of a Provincial Commission, to govern the country in case the Assembly is illegally dissolved; and that an attempt to assassinate M. Thiers on the evening of the same dry.

∼ ∼ ∼ The most prominent topic in foreign affairs, the past week, has been the discussion of the Alabama claims in England. The tone of the most of the English press has been fairly intemperate, and a feeling of bitterness exceeding anything displayed during the war, has been developed. The exciting cause has been a claim put in before the Geneva Arbitrators by the American Consul for indirect damages on the ground that by the putting out the Alabama and other vessels the war was greatly prolonged. When the Alabama treaty was first published, and the fact announced that two great nations had appealed to arbitration instead of arms in settlement of a difficulty, a new era of good feeling between nations was announced—arbitration was to take the place of war: but from present appearances the experiment of arbitration is like to leave a worse feeling between England and the United States than has ever existed before. At any rate, our great government will not withdraw the claim, but will abide the decree of the arbitrators. Whether England will even come before the court, remains to be seen. An adverse decision she would in no case abide.

Says the German correspondent of the London Standard: "In any case the Convention of Geneva will sow the seeds of a deeper and more lasting animosity between the two nations than has at any time existed."

∼ ∼ ∼ NAPOLEONIC STRAWS. Few people who have accurately followed the somewhat erratic course of French politics for the last eight or ten years will discover a "straw" in the recent refusal of the French Assembly to confiscate the Napoleonic property. Some astute critics have fancied that the Assembly men, tired of the dogmatic qualities of Thiers, and the indecent haste of the Orleanists to reduce France again to servility, had resolved to show that they could still keep a corner of their hearts open for the blear-eyed monarch, who ruled over them so effectually for twenty one years, and that they eagerly profited by the occasion of dwarf Naguet's proposition the other day to attest their love for the Emperor. No conclusion was ever more hasty. The members of the Assembly have shown on divers occasions that they nourish the most thorough contempt for Napoleon, and all his admirers, and that the only reason why they do not confiscate his property is that they fear it might render him in a measure a martyr in the eyes of the ignorant peasantry, or be made the pretext of a quarrel. They openly scorn and defy the members of the next Assembly, who have been elected from Corsica, and from one or two departments in France on Napoleonic platforms, and laugh at the idea of any possible conspiracy. No! when Louis Bonaparte fell, he fell utterly, and he never can hope to

"Regain that bright hour"

when the forty millions of ignorant Frenchmen were at his feet, regardless of '89 and other bloody conflicts. What the intoxication of the moment caused them to forget, they remembered anew after '48 and '51, and Sedan, and '71; and they want no such mischief-mover among them again.—Boston Journal.

Correspondence.

From Br. R. B. Dutton, Center Point, Iowa.

We are having a good time here. Br. Pitcher has been laboring with us, and the Lord is blessing the people. The school-director that I mentioned in my last letter is a noble, good man, and I am glad to say he loves Jesus. He has a blessed family, too, and they love the Lord. They help me to furnish wood and lights liberally. In this country it is customary, I believe, for meetings to furnish their own fuel. I must say that I never saw a neighborhood of kinder or more hospitable people in all my life. There is quite a number of good Christians, and they take right hold and work in our meetings as though they all belonged to one church. Praise the Lord! Three have risen for prayers already.

I must say I am feeling more at home here than I did when I last wrote. By the by, I intended to say in my last letter not to publish it; it was, perhaps, too rough. But I felt as though I was being toughened almost too fast for a boy only four years old in the gospel. But the Lord is good to his children; and I feel like a child of God. Brethren and sisters, all pray for me, that I may be more childlike, and Christlike, too.

From Mary A. Tibbetts, Volga, Ind.

Br. Himes: As drops make the mighty ocean, so dollars enough will make up the six hundred of your indebtedness at the office. And while others have done nobly in their reponses to your call for aid, perhaps you will not "despise the day of small things," and will accept from us even a trifle as a token of what we would do if we had the means. On Saturday evening as The Times was read aloud, not only your very interesting debate with Eld Braden, but the rest of the paper, not omitting the notice that six hundred dollars would liquidate your debt, we at once thought if all your readers would send one dollar, you could not only pay the debt but have something left to "send out the precious ships, laden with their sacred cargo of eternal truth," according to Br. Crosby's request, whose good letter we read with so much interest. I will here enclose one dollar with many regrets that we can not send more at this time to aid you in making your last payment. But if you could see the neat little house of worship in sight of where I am writing, with its beautiful white front, emblematic of the precious Bible truths soon to emanate from its pulpit, you would know more fully the reason why we can at this time contribute no more. For the last three months our hearts and hands have been full of labor and anxiety for the completion of this cherished object of our life, that of proclaiming the glad tidings of our coming Lord and this "gospel of the kingdom" that must be the witness to all the world before the end shall come. We have recieved many tokens of the divine favor since we commenced this "work of faith and labor of love," which have greatly strengthened our hands and encouraged our hearts. And while we praise and adore the name of our blessed Redeemer for these manifestations of his mercy toward us, we also present our public thanks to all who have in any way helped us in the erection of this house so soon to be consecrated to the service of the Lord. Oh! what joy it brings to our hearts as we hear of so many coming out on the side of Bible truth; taking Christ as the Life-giver, instead of Adam; the resurrection from the dead as the time of reward and punishment, instead of death, as is the constant teaching of the day. An individual said to me the other day, "Christ comes every time one dies; and that was the day of judgment to them, as one went to heaven, the other to hell, according to their merits." Oh! how I rejoiced in the knowledge of God's Holy Word, that it was my guide instead of such human dogmas. May our blessed Savior soon come and give his saints the kingdom "under the whole heavens," is the daily prayer of your sister in "the blessed hope."

From Nathan Wheeler, Sug ill, N. H.

It is always encouraging to know that our labors are appreciated, and our efforts for good are having a salutary influence upon those around us. The Times comes to us as a herald of plain, gospel truth, imbued with the spirit of the divine Master; strengthening the weak ones, instructing the ignorant, stirring up the lukewarm, warning the careless, faithfully admonishing the superstitious and those who oppose themselves; while it comforts the dear people of God with assurance that their redemption draweth very nigh. May the God of peace who hath called you to publish abroad his glorious truth, preserve you to the end. It may encourage you, and the brethren that are scattered abroad, to hear that there is some prosperity in the old fields where once you sowed the good seed. Although we have the superstitions of the people of the last days to meet, yet God does bless us in believing and proclaiming the truth, and many in this vicinity can rejoice with Dr. Charles L. Ives, having got their eyes open, not only to the errors of their past theology, but to the light of truth which is so clearly shining in their pathway. It is not unfrequently that we hear our brethren say, "The Bible reads to me like a new book; I never saw such harmony before; God's way seems to be equal and his purposes right and just." Several have been recently converted to God and his truth at this place, and also at Whitefield. May the Lord still gather in the gleanings of the gospel harvest, and soon gather us safely home to his people's rest.

From Br. Albert Farrow, Carrolton, Ill.

Last Monday, I closed a series of meetings with Providence church, Green Co. which had been continued about five weeks, the first two weeks, at night only. Had the help of Br. A. Hawkins, minister of said church, all the time, and that of Eld. S. F. Rice, of Medora, about two weeks in the midst of the meeting. The church, which for years had been in a very low state, and almost without a house of worship (their old one being unfit for use), was much revived; and are now enjoying brighter prospects than for many years before. Our protracted meeting commenced the third Sabbath in December, with the services of the dedication of a new and very neat house of worship, which they had just completed. And to their honor, I must say, that though comparatively poor, they built their house without even taking up a public collection, or resorting to any of the popular entertainments to "raise funds for the Lord!" Let others go and do likewise.

Our meetings were largely attended. We had faithful, gospel preaching, presenting the hope of immortality as the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord; warning and beseeching all by the coming of our Lord to judge the world, to lay hold on eternal life, and to do it now. The happy results were fourteen additions by public professions of faith in Christ; six by letter; with some five or six other conversions, who will, on account of family ties, go to other churches. Among those converted were the two youngest of my children, for which help me to praise the Lord.

May our renewed church grow in grace and knowledge, till our Lord shall come again to take his waiting Bride to himself, where they may shine as stars in the royal diadem of the King of glory forever. Even so, let "thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

From Thos. Raymond, North Bergen.

The word of truth as it is in the Bible is being distributed in this community. I have given away most all of the tracts you sent. People begin to study their Bibles to see what they teach as to the nature of man. They are astonished when I tell of the great truths of God's Holy Word. One of the deacons of the Presbyterian church came to my shop. We talked about the nature of man. He was surprised when I told him that man had not an immortal soul. I told him that there was no such doctrine in the Bible. He said to me, you do not mean to say there is nothing in the Bible of such reading as this! I told him that I did, and gave him a tract of each kind. He said he would take the tracts and his Bible, and see if this was so. He is honest and sincere, and will be profited by the tracts. I am sending them far and near. The same deacon in his prayer meeting exhorted them all to put their house in order and get ready for the Master; for he thought the time near at hand. He told me it was strange if such passages as I had told of were not in the Bible, for, said he, you can hear them from ten to twelve times repeated in almost every sermon, and as many times in every exhortation. And he is willing to take the Bible for what it reads. I told him if the Bible did not mean what it said, God will not hold him, or any one accountable for what he has not revealed to us so we can understand it.

From R. M. Lampard, Appleton.

I suppose as a stranger I now address you; but near thirty years ago, I had some correspondence with you, in subscribing for, and reading what I think I remember as The Midnight Cry. At that time I fully embraced the doctrine held by the Adventists. I was then a member of the M. E. church, being a local preacher. I was tried and expelled for holding such views. As there were no Adventists near, I had no home, and wandered for years without church fellowship, until 1854. My son and daughter, being located here, I removed from Mendon, Ill., to this place. And as there were no Adventists here, I finally joined the M. E. church again, resolved not to preach as I could not conscientiously preach orthodoxy, and I remained in the church, and was a class leader many years, but my doctrine was so much savored with earnest Christianity and Adventism, that one of my class, (and a local preacher withal) told our preacher in charge, to remove his and his wife's name from my class book. Consequently the preacher came and demanded my class book, and knowing as I did what was the matter, I made the demand for my letter. This was about fourteen months since. I feel thankful for the release from such fellowship. I have never lived near an Advent society, nor been acquainted with any until within a year or two, when I found Br. and Sr. Wistrom of this place, whom I esteem very highly. I heartily wish we might have an organization in this city; but there is much to contend with. Here we have D. D's, A. M's and Professors to contend with, with all their theology, etc., etc., I think more to be dreaded than a backwood's settlement. We have between five and six thousand inhabitants, and Methodist, Congregationalist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Episcopalian, Universalist, Catholic, both German and Irish, churches, and some Spiritualists. And I think Paul's declaration on Mars Hill—"Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship," etc., appropriate.

Dear brother, if you possibly can, do come. We are poor. I am a poor man. I know of no more than Br. and Sr. Wistrom that will do anything to support; but God's eternal truth may open a Lydia's heart and purse too, and there may be a part of seven thousand that have not bowed the knee to Baal.

I am an old man, nearly 79 years. I enjoy good health, but better than that I enjoy a glorious hope beyond this present life, a life hid with Christ in God, that when he who is our life shall appear, I also shall appear with him in glory. If we shall not tarry till he he comes, we shall hear his voice and come forth in the life resurrection. Then death will be swallowed up in victory. Till then, dear brother, let us be looking for the blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ. Amen, and amen.

[Such appeals as this, and we receive not a few of them, are very touching, and we hardly know how to reply. Only one course remains for Adventists, ministers and all, to pursue—the old Jerusalem plan of every man building over against his own house. Get all the help you can—and when you can't get any, do what you can without help. "Lord, send forth laborers into the harvest!"—Ed.]

From S. C. Wellcome, St. Charles, Minn.

I have just returned from a trip to the western part of this State. Visited many of the brethren, traveled 300 miles, attended two funerals and preached eight times. Visited at Wasioga, Havana, Medo, Garden City, and Shelbyville. At Medo found a little band hungry for the bread of life, waiting for the coming of the Master. Meetings a number of evenings and one Sabbath. A glorious time. The Lord was with us in power. Organized an A. C. church of faithful ones; a number of others who love the cause of truth will soon unite, some of whom could not be present at this time. A more earnest and intelligent people I have not found than at Medo. They came in from four to six miles around. Many covenanted anew with God and each other to seek for a greater fullness of the love of God and to be faithful till Jesus comes.

The United Brethren preacher, Eld. Randall was in Sunday with many of his church, listening attentively to the truth. When I was through he arose and testified to having heard the truth, and gave his opinion that Jesus was soon coming, and was coming literally, the same Jesus that went up. Many earnest testimones were then given by members of his church as well as our own. He gave way in the evening for me to speak on his appointment; came himself, and again witnessed to the truth, thus showing a Christ-like spirit and example that many other preachers would do well to imitate.

From Medo I went west to Garden City, and then to Shelbyville to visit my father, who is very sick, suffering extremely, and for two months has had to have watchers. His sufferings are almost over. He is calm and submissive, and says he is ready to go at any time. He is eighty-two years of age. Was for many years a Universalist, but the Advent doctrine a few years ago gave new light to his heart, and now nothing suits him better than praying and singing in his presence. God has spared my dear mother to watch over him in his last sickness, with other kind friends. We are in a land of disease and death. Oh! how often our hearts are make sad at the thoughts of parting with loved ones. While at Shelbyville I was called upon to attend the funeral of a woman who had suddenly died leaving a large family of little ones, in a cold world.

On my return at Eyota I first heard of the death of our beloved brother E. T. Himes. I had strange forebodings after leaving him at Winona that we were to lose him from our midst, and while west, every where I went the inquiry was, "How is Br. Himes?" They have the sad news ere this. Thank God for our blessed hope, which gives our loved ones back again in the morning. I dearly loved Br. Edwin, and shall miss him much. But I will remember his counsels, and try to redouble my diligence and battle more earnestly for the truth. As brave soldiers fall at our side, God help me, and you my dear brethren and sisters, to have on the whole armor. Our victory is sure. If we die, let us die at our post as our dear brother did. But while we live let us live for God, and his truth, having our tongues touched with live coals from God's altar, and our hearts burning with his love. Let us go forth, cry aloud and spare not, "till we see the salvation of our God!"

From C. C. Marston.

The Lord was with us in a special manner at Foreston. The second night some of the other churches which were holding protracted meetings, suspended their meetings and came out to hear. The opposition was great. A "Rev." gentleman the first night gave in a few brief words a telling resume of the most powerful arguments that are drawn from the Bible in support of immaterialism. He spoke with the utmost confidence, and closed by modestly challenging me for a regular discussion. It required only a few words, however, to show that his whole argument was founded in unwarrantable inference, and that the Scripture he produced when taken in literal and connected sense did not teach what he claimed for it. While explaining one of the points the argument was so plainly developed that a man spoke out in the audience and said: "There, Br. Johnston, you have learned something." The opportunity for remarks was extended, and this gentleman again took the floor, but oh! how changed! He is nearly dead with the asthma. Nothing is said about asthma in his first speech. He speaks almost in a whisper. The first time he could halloo as loud as any one. The audience saw the case and appreciated it. The only argument attempted in his second speech was one founded on my youth and his age.

Another tried to destroy the Bible argument that I had presented, by referring to Plato. He said Plato believed and taught that man was immortal. This is true, and no one pretends to deny it. But are we to go by Plato or the Bible? The idea that man has an immortal soul is founded in Platonic philosophy, and those who believe in the doctrine, of couse, feel very partial to Plato. It is perfectly natural that they should. But I think Christians should give Paul the preference. He represents immortality as something for which men are to "seek." (Rom. 2: 7.) Also that it is to be "put on" at the resurrection. (1 Cor. 15: 50–55.) If Paul is right in these things, then Plato is wrong in saying that we possess it by nature. Paul wouldn't advise us to "seek for" a thing that we already possess.

Br. M. B. Geer and his father are old and tried Adventists, and have lived in this place long years in the hope of seeing an interest awakened on the great subject of the Second Advent and its associate doctrines. This day they see beginning to dawn. Br. Smith, a deacon in the Lutheran church, has embraced fully the blessed hope, and as boldly maintains it. May the Lord bless him, and make him very useful in spreading the "present truth." Others, whose names I do not recall, are fully out of the mists of immaterialism, and giving their influence to the cause of truth. Still others are convicted and examining for themselves. Could we have continued the meetings over the Sabbath a great work would have been the result, no doubt. But my appointments are out, and I must go on.

Coming to Elida, I found Br. Spotswood, who, like a faithful sentinel, has been standing up for the truth here several years [illegible] alone. We have the use of the M. E. [illegible]hapel. The people are anxious to [illegible], and come from ten miles around. [illegible]though there are several protract[illegible] [illegible]etings within a few miles, yet our h[illegible]e is crowded to its utmost capacit[illegible] A deep solemnity rests upon th[illegible]ce, the efforts of our o[illegible]posers [illegible] [illegible]e levity to the contrary no[illegible] [illegible]ling.

More Lat[illegible] [illegible] Thoughts on Supporting [illegible]ospel Ministry.

If what we have said in No. 1 and 2 on this subject be true, viz., that God calls and sends the minister to proclaim the gospel free, trusting in his promise for support (Mk. 10: 30), at the same time holding them that hear responsible for his support, it follows that some rule must be revealed by which each should understand the amount demanded; otherwise some would be burdened and others exempted, producing confusion in the house of God, which is contrary to the Scriptures; for they say, God is not the author of confusion, but of peace; as in the churches of the saints. (1 Cor. 14: 33.) (1) Then do the Scriptures teach it to to be the duty of all believers to contribute of their means for the support of his cause? (2) Is the amount specified?

1. "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn." (Deut. 25: 4; Cor. 9: 9.) "Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple; and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." Any amount of evidence on this point might be produced, if needed. But this will suffice, for the point is generally conceded that the gospel should be supported. But the great point to be reached is contained in the second proposition—How much each one should give.

It will be noticed that Paul, in all his citations on this point, appeals to the law for two purposes: to establish the fact, and to determine the amount, (so it seems to me); and in his refer- to this matter in his letter to the Corinthians, he seems to appeal directly to the usages under the law, saying, "As God has prospered him." Again: "For I mean not that other men shall be eased and ye burdened, but by an equality."

That these proofs are to be respected and counted reliable, I think the reader will not deny. For what purpose else would Paul appeal to the usages of the law, and state, "as God hath prospered," and, also, state the object of so doing was to make this burden of equal weight upon all. In no other way would this matter be settled. For this matter of leaving each to determine without any rule, how much to give, has been and ever must be a fruitful source of discord and jealousy in the church. If every tenth is that rule, how perfectly would it produce equality and order in the house of God touching this point. God has ever reproved with severity any failure in tithes and offerings, and called it "robbing him;" and promised a rich blessing upon those that brought their offerings into his house; even that there would "not be room enough to contain it." (Mat. 3: 10).

It is worthy of note that Jesus never warned us against giving too much, but often warned us against giving too little. When Zaccheus gave half of all he had to the poor, Jesus commended and blessed him; and when the disciples left all to follow him, he immediately promised them a seat with him in the "regeneration, as judges of the twelve tribes of Israel." And when the poor widow who had no tithes to pay, cast in all her living, Jesus commended her. May God lead us to a more enlarged view of these things. For I think I can say from my past experience, that the poorest are comparatively the most liberal. For I have known young men who worked out by the month at low wages, to give from two to eight dollars to the laborers of the gospel, while their employers, worth from three to ten thousand dollars, gave nothing; and also young women, at service for one dollar a week, to give from two to five dollars a year, while their employers, worth from three to five thousand dollars, make no offering, yet profess to be looking for Jesus soon to come.

Dear Brethren and Sisters: Let us love Jesus and his cause in deed and in truth. P. W. Hough.

Conference Minutes

Minnesota.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The tenth session of the Annual Conference of the Advent Christian church of Minn. convened at Winona, Wednesday, Jan. 10, 1872. The Pres't, G. W. Miller in the chair. The Sec'y. E. T. Himes being absent on a bed of sickness, S. C. Wellcome was elected Sec'y pro tem.

Delegates: Winona church: Stephen Ramer, E. Slade, J B. Jeffery, and Br. Demming. Utica: D. Cheatham, John Rowell, and Wm. Baker. High Prairie: J. E. Wright. Ministers; F. K. Allen, Ruth M. Rowell, Philip Ramer, Wm. J. Bursell, G. W. Miller, Peter Mitson, Job Brown, Jedediah Raymond, L. C. Collins, S. C. Wellcome.

Eld. S. W. Thurber, Sparta, Wis. was invited to participate with us, also Br. Charles Smith.

The chair appointed the following committees: To receive and arrange business: L. C. Collins, Philip Ramer and Job Brown. Finance: Peter Mitson, T. K. Allen, J. E. Wright. Ordination: J. Raymond, Wm. J. Bursell, J. B. Jeffrey.

The president's address was read and approved.

Treasurer's report approved.

The Sec'y. Br. E. T. Himes, having been sick for the past two months and new lying in a critical condition no report could be made by him of the affairs of the Conference in his hands; but it was well known that his manner of doing business had been like clock work in the past, as in all his reports, and his arrangements for the past year for the cause, in having system in all our churches throughout the State; which if he could have been able to have carried them out, would have been a perfect success. And a sad feeling came over all our members at the thought of losing so efficient a laborer at a time when he was needed so much.

The following ministers passed examination: T. K. Allen, Ruth M. Rowell, Wm. J. Bursell, Philip Ramer, Garwood Bursell, Geo. W. Miller, Peter Mitson, A. G. Lombard, N. H. Manning, O. R. Fassett, L. E. Fassett, Michael Wellcome, L. C. Collins, S. C. Wellcome, Job Brown, Jedediah Raymond, E. T. Himes, Hannah M. Duby.

The following were referred to a committee: C. D. W. Scott, Ezra Bacon, Wm. Parsons, Ed. F. Moore. The committee reported as follows: We the undersigned, a committee appointed by this Conference to examine certain reports with regard to the action of Brn. Scott, Bacon, Parsons, and Moore, having investigated these reports find that they have during the past year been re-organizing several churches that have heretofore been connected with this Conference and were reported under the name of Advent Christian churches, their names have been changed and now hold the name of "Church of God," discarding the name of Advent-Christian, making this a test of fellowship. We think those brethren have acted very unwisely and would admonish them to desist from this work of scattering and dividing the churches, and work in harmony with the Conference in spreading the great truths that belong to this age; and let the churches retain the name that expresses our faith and hope.

We regret that such worthy brethren as Scott, Bacon, and Parsons should be thus engaged. We feel that we cannot spare them from our ranks. But we also feel the necessity of their worshipping in harmony with the body. We therefore recommend that these brethren have their license renewed, but let their license be held by the President; and if during the year they desist from their course, and work in harmony with the Conference, such license be forwarded to them any time during the year. But if they should persist in their former course, their license should be withheld. We also recommend that Br. Moore's name be dropped. Also that the reports of the churches called the "Church of God" be declined for this reason: By the re-organization of the churches under the new name we consider they have withdrawn from us. We wish them well in every good work, and hope they may yet see the evil in their course of discarding their former name and making it a test.

L. C. Collins,
(Signed) Wm. Bursell, } Com.
T. K. Allen,

The following names were dropped in accordance with a resolution passed at the Conference of 1871, viz: John Walker, T. Corliss, George Wilcox, John Small.

Reports from ministers were very interesting, coming as they did both personally and by letter. A number of the brethren and sisters had been spending all their time in the work and had seen it prosper in their hands. Others were obliged to labor a part of the time with their hands to support their families, but labored what they could in the blessed cause. God had blessed the labors of all while they had been striving to declare the whole counsel of God. They all reported an earnest desire in their hearts to live near to God, where they could feel that God was with them in power to bless the people. New fields had been opened the past year in different parts of the State and constantly were heard new calls for preaching the soon coming of Jesus. A cheering letter was sent in by Br. and Sr. Fassett, from California, showing their sympathy with us in the work, although absent to work for God in "the regions beyond." Our dear Br. E. T. Himes could not report for himself, but many volunteered to report for him. He had not only had charge of the Winona church, but had traveled through the State, west and north several times, preaching wherever he went and not only sowing the seeds of truth by preaching, but by practice, laboring to introduce system and order into all the churches: and he is beloved by all both in and out of the church.

Reports from churches show quite an interest in all, and an increase in many. There seems to be an earnest desire among the brethren an sisters to live near to God, enjoy more of his love and let their light shine for the benefit of others; and a getting ready for the coming of the Master, not feeling ashamed of our name as Adventists—the sect in this day so often spoken against.

The following resolution was passed.

Resolved, That we recommend to every preacher in this Conference the importance of urging the churches where they may labor to raise money to assist our Publishing Association, located at Buchanan, Mich.

Officers for the State Conference, for the ensuing year, were elected as follows: Pres't, G. W. Miller, Millersburg; Treas'r, L. C. Collins, Monticello; Sec'y, S. C. Wellcome, St. Charles. Mission Board, members beside the Conference officers, Wm. J. Bursell, Elliota; D. Cheatham, Utica.

The following resolution was introduced by Br. Collins, and passed:

Resolved, That the President of the State Conference be elected as an evangelist to take the oversight of the four quarterly Conference districts, and arrange the time and manner of holding meetings in each district, and see to the collection of the Conference fund; the several districts to arrange as to the place where meetings shall be held, and provide means whereby he shall be supported in his labors. Said Evangelist to counsel and advise with the preacher of the Conference.

On motion,

Voted, That each member of the Conference for the ensuing year keep an account of debt and credit, with each society, of service rendered, and expenses incurred in such service, and of renumeration received in return, and report in writing at our next session.

A vote of thanks was given to the people of Winona for their generosity in providing for those in attendance at this meeting.

Voted, That our next annual meeting be held at Monticello.

Voted, That G. W. Miller, as State Evangelist, have charge of the tent matters the ensuing year, receive money for new tent, etc.

Voted, To grant license to Br. Rima, of Cass Co. Iowa, to improve on his gift.

Our devotional meetings were seasons of deep interest, love and power. All seemed to realize that we were living in perilous times, and that we needed to have on the whole armor to stand in the evil day, and moral courage to work for God and defend his truth.

Eleven discourses were preached during the session, by Elds. J. Raymond, Peter Mitson, G. W. Miller, Job Brown, L. C. Collins, S. W. Thurber, W. J. Bursell, S. C. Wellcome and Wm. L. Himes. The preaching seemed to be in power, and the demonstration of the Spirit, well calculated to elevate the minds of the hearers, lead Christians to a greater degree of faith and holiness and preparation to work for Christ and his cause and meet him when he shall come to reign; to stir up backsliders, and awaken sinners and bring them to Christ. We had all the different phases of truth presented, repentance and faith, a living and abiding faith, entire consecration, an earnest, holy ministry, endowed with power from on high, a zealous, praying church, willing to sacrifice and be sacrificed for the blessed hope, the prospect of the speedy coming of Christ and our renewal when he comes, immortality to be sought and not inherent, the fulfillment of prophecy, the signs of the times and the everlasting kingdom soon to be established on the new earth, the resurrection, the judgment and the doom of the ungodly. Christ was presented as our only hope, and example, our sacrifice, our life-giver, our advocate, our redeemer and final deliverer. On Sunday morning we had a blessed love-feast, after which Br. Miller gave as a good discourse. At 2 1-2 p. m., Br. Collins gave an able discourse, dedicating the Advent chapel to the worship of God. A large congregation listened to his lengthy discourse with profound interest. In the evening we listened to a searching and stirring discourse from Br. Wm. L. Himes, on the subject of faith, and then sat down to the table of the Lord, and had a solemn but precious time. Our meeting closed with a feeling sense of divine power resting upon us, as it had not through the meeting, having the best of the wine at the last of the feast: and as the several ministers covenanted anew that evening to seek for the greater power, an unction from the Holy One to present the glorious truth to a dying world, it seemed that God was well pleased, and sanctioned their covenant, and breathed in upon us the Holy Spirit, which caused some to shout aloud, while many in the assembly were in tears of joy. And as we go out into the world to battle for the truth, may God help us to present it in love, in power, in boldness and with faith to believe that Israel's God will go with us to the end.

S. C. Wellcome, Sec'y.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath. Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—30 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—42 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,800 pp. for $1 by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth $1; paper, 50c

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single, $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 171 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment, By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 118 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 35c.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 10c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 231 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1; postage, 16c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament. by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid.

*THE NEW T[illegible]T. Amer*ican Bible Union [illegible] 12mo. 75.

THE JUBIL[illegible] A choice collection of P[illegible], A[illegible] and Modern, designed for use i[illegible] [illegible] and social worship. The best hymn and tu[illegible] book ever introduced among the Adventists. Sin[illegible] copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail [illegible] 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MA[illegible] A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 60 a dozen.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.— An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $5, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

*DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Des*truction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post-paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

*THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; be*ing a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 25c. post-paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, [illegible]lennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and [illegible] 400 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository, Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 20c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 8c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

*ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Con*cordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 180 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 315 pp. Paper covers, 5[illegible]c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 48 pp. 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c, post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant, in one vol. 40c. post-paid. The first four in one vol. large type—25c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 25c

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising several hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $1.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment, By Henry Constable. Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, ... MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 13, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed, the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead, their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil, the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
L. P. FOX, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.

A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.

N. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS, } Editorial Com.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, Business Agent, To whom all communications should be addressed

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post paid, 10c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

Harps Etc

We are out of Harps, and of Eld. Grant's works bound in one volume. New editions are preparing. When copies of them are received we will fill orders immediately. Our friends will be patient until then.

Wanted.

We will be obliged to any one who will give us the following P. O. Addresses.

W. R. Howe, Kansas. tf

Field's Discussion.

For some time this desirable work has been out of print. The main topic is the Intermediate State, or Condition of the Dead. When a new edition was announced, some of the Doctor's old Disciple friends announced that they would buy and circulate it as soon as ready, because they thought it would help their side—that Mr Connolly had the best of the argument. We shall soon know whether they really so felt, or were indulging mere bragadocio. The book has not yet made any converts to immaterialism that we have heard of; but we have learned of its bringing not a few to adopt the Bible theory.

The book has heretofore been sold at one dollar. The present edition is in paper covers (pp 315), and will be sent post paid for 50c. We hope for liberal orders.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawver, M. B. Geer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Hink, I. C. Wellcome, J. F. Huber, Grand St. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. K. Brown, M F Wistrom, R W Wilson, R. M. Lampard, Clinton (Io) Church, Lapeer Church.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Jadesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $120. See advertisement.

To Correspondents.

S. H. HUTCHINSON. You are Correct ...N. BLAIR. J. R. Preston's P. O. Address is East Gilead, Mich.... J. H. ANDERSON. Br. Rosbraugh's Address is Batesville, Izard Co., Ark. WAUPUN, WIS. We have a letter from this place with $1 30 and no name signed to it. Who is it?

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, JAN. 20.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. * See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

C E Barnes
V Seaton
S F Dimock
S E Conner
T Clark
C W Johnson
E H Bennett
K Pike
John Ruddell
G Gray
R R Wilson
P Foulke
S P Geehr
S Rogers
J G Massey
H Austin
M S Bates
S S Forney
J G W Lapeus
A M Taylor
W E Storms
R C Railsback
C A Hayke
M Walton
R Patten
E P Goff
J H Depoy
W H Benjamin
J S Squires
N W Spencer
R Visser
F M Mills
J E Davidson
Clark Braden
R McDerment
S K Gibson
D Coons
E Danham
I Boddy
J S Hastings
Wm Shapeley
F M Gove (2)
C H Marcellus
S A Bailey
W Roworth
R J Arnot
W Hobbs
F S Morgan
J Sloan
Chas Beany
Robt Spotswood
W Kile
J Wendall
J R S Mowrey
J C Thayer
J Campbell
R Mann
J B Randolph
S McBratney
S Dutcher
F Reynolds
O S Rollins
M B Hubbell
W L Winslow
B J Goodwin
V J Matthews
J N Washburn
G Shurtliff
B F Wilkins
J H Parsons
J M Bowling
S O Wellcome
S H Vorman
W R Allen
T Dudley
J B Gowers
A M Gladding
J Brown
J H Anderson
J M S
J arr
L Pierce
G W Lawson
E L DeLano
M A Tibbetts
J C Stoddard
D Burkholder
A Jennings
R A Keating
R E Hull
A M B Graham
J W Corder
E B Monroe
D Weaver
H H Davis
J M Wyman
E B Scott
F K Davis
S Kennedy
J Andrew
J West
F H Burbank
G w Hurd
S C Wellcome
J A Smith
S Cronce
S Woese
N C Miller
E M Boyd
N C McDowell
E F Houghton
B Fink
T F Milier
A J Tuttle
A Nickerson
G C Meigs
R Turner

N F Loomis
L O Sawin
C C Lindbeck
J M Deitzler
S M Talbott
S E Mayby
E A Penwell
D Conklin
P Alling
J Wallace
John Sadler
M Lansing
D W Smith
A M Sidwell
C M Gifford
C Beagle
C R Stouffer
R W Converse
N A Hitchcock
A Brown
J Shafer
T R Weaver
W Crapo
K K Tibbetts
R P Freeman
J G Holland
J North
W Johnson
H B Chapman
M W Kingsbury
L S Conner
T J Morgan
J L Small
W McMurray
P Francis
H Tanner
E B Owen
J Lowry
C K Mitchell
F Pelton
O Hart
J Smith
J W Ostrum
M E Allen
J W Rice
A Anderson
D Clark
W H Hacking
W N Pile
J Gregg
G W Crawford
A B Cushing
S A B Shores
W Ingmire
S A Younglove
A P Johnson
C H Cole
A Sheldon
A C Hueston
M E Derham
T Ellasaser
L C McKinstry
A W Tucker
G L Teeple
E O King
J C Bernham
J Beech
R H Bateman
S H Hutchinson
W Welty
N J Jones
J Fox
V R Fenn
H G Smiley
N Blair
S P Braley
H W Delley
M E Howe
N Field
J H Whitmore
P H Wait
A Armour
F H Kenny
D S Clark
E Wolcott
P S Buck
D W Smith
W Ackerson
E McCulloch
A P Moore
R Willard

Books and Tracts by Mail.

D W Smith
D H Warren
W R Allen
T N Morgan
J S Hastings
H F Moore
J C Bateson
W Ingmire
D O Hink (2)
J Dingee
I Boddy
S E Mabey
S K Gibson
F Shapely
D C John
J Sloan
D Dixon
W H Hacking (2)
Eld Gower
C A Hayke
R C Railsback
A Anderson
J M Deitzler
B J Goodwin (2)
D Conklin
J Summers
J W Ostrum
S Bragg
M E Derham
M H Hubbell
S McBratney
J N Washburn
R McDermet
J Lowrey
J H Parsons
H Ingmire
Eld G W Crosby
A J Young
L Stacher
A Wilbur
J H Brown
J Eaton
J Chaiser
J Griffith
P Thurtle
J H Mills
G C Stephenson
L A Gilpin
L H Little
J W Farrow
Rev Mr Baker
C P Shepherd
John Eshleman
M Pieranda
M Anderson
Saml Eshleman
G Kline
C Palmer
R M Lampard
H Zader
J Loukes
J S Englerth
J Shrock
W Long
C Warren
B F Mikesell
P Hammer
F McLane
H Davidson
D Herr
G W Prime
F W Matts
J McMichael
A Farrow
R Visser
M S L Mills
J Roach
D O Hink
H Welty
M H Sayres
J W Graham
T J Williams
V Beeley
C M Keeve
T Virgin
J Meehan
M L Turner
W H Mosley
J N Porter
S Morrett
G W Rouise
S A Muchmore
W Reed
N F Loomis
J Shoemaker
N McCue
D A Bradley
E Orr
G E Whipple
M B Hubbell
R Mann
W F Talley
C C Marston
J W Weltner
T Newman
W Thorby
J Garver
W Spangler
J Eshleman
A P Dugger
S Marts
M Smith
J Neil
H A King (2)
A W Tucker
S C Raymond
S Kenedy
D Weaver
D Burkholder
J C Knott
S W Hurl
O R Fassett
L C Collins (2)

Our Debt—Pledges.

S A Younglove pd	63	J Campbell pd	3 00
A Brown "	5 00	R Visser "	1 00

G. W. Crosby's pledge two weeks since of $10. was marked "pd" by mistake.

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged....................$305.94

H Tanner........$	3 70	J Cochrane........	$20 00
E B Owen	1 00	R P Freeman........	1 00
J C Thayer	1 00	S P Geehr..........	50
W Roworth	1 00	J Ruddell..........	2 50
J S Hastings.....	1 75	N J Jones..........	10
S Horsecroft.....	1 00	R Turner...........	5 00
J Templeton......	5 00

Communications.

N Field J H Whitmore J S Hastings F H Burbank O D Gibson N Field G H A.

Fifty Cents Extra.

J Sadler $1 00

Tract Fund.

C S Wentworth 50c E Edenburg 50c Thos Nyberg 25c Jonas Nesland 50c S Little 25c A Warberg 25c R Christian 25c Miss C Peterson 25c A S Johnson 25c.

Obituary.

Note By the Editor.

Our obituary department is very much crowded, and some notices are necessarily delayed.

WAIT. In Sandy Hill, N. Y. at the residence of her son, Nelson W. Wait, Jan. 28, 1872, Pamela Wait: aged 80 years.

She was born in Dutchess Co. N. Y. With her husband she helped organize the first Christian church in Galway, Saratoga, Co. in 1814, where they kept a "pilgrim's home" until his death in 1841. In 1856 she removed to Sandy Hill, where she lived with her daughter, Mrs. D. Mathewson, until their removal to the West. She embraced the Advent faith in 1843 under the preaching of Wm. Miller: and she died as she had lived in the blessed hope of the speedy return of Jesus and of life and immortality through him.

Her heart was devoted to God. She loved him, his word, his cause, and his people. I can never forget the interest she took in myself when, as a young minister, I first visited Br. Mathewson, with whom she then resided. She could hardly have taken more interest if I had been her own son. She was very deaf of late years, and could only hear by aid of an ear trumpet. But she attended church regularly when able; and nothing delighted her more than to have the minister call on Monday and give her a synopsis of the Sunday discourses.

Her long, well-spent life is now closed, and she rests quietly in Jesus. Many mourn, but as the Christian mourns, and not as those without hope. God bless them, every one. W. L. H.

FINCH. Died, at Eagle Harbor, New York, Jan. 17, 1872, of Consumption, Seth S. Finch: aged 31 years.

Mr. Finch had a brief but most glorious Christian experience. He loved and trusted his Savior, and fell asleep in Jesus, with no cloud of doubt, but in the full persuasion of a happy immortality beyond the grave. The funeral services were held at the M. E. church, and were attended by a numerous concourse of sympathizing friends.

Sermon by the writer, from Heb. 9: 27.

J. H. WHITMORE.

HARRINGTON. At Brockport, N. Y. Jan. 18, 1872, of Asthma, Martha Harrington: aged 76 years.

The funeral took place on Saturday, Jan. 20, from her late residence in Brockport.

Sermon by the writer, from Ps. 90: 12.

J. H. WHITMORE.

BARNUM. At her father's residence, in Brighton, near Rochester, Jan. 19, 1872, of Typhoid Pneumonia, Jennie, youngest daughter of H. O. Barnum: aged 5 years and 6 months.

"Death loves a shining mark, a signal blow," and so he has taken little Jennie and closed her beautiful eyes in a dreamless sleep, and shut her up in his dark domain. But his dominion over her is but for a time appointed. She will come again from the land of the enemy. The blessed Savior will gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

It was the sad privilege of the writer to speak words of comfort to a large circle of relatives and friends, at the house, on Sunday, Jan. 21.

J. H. WHITMORE.

Crisis please copy.

Notices, Etc.

Michigan Tent.

Will the Brn. in the Eastern District of Mich. please remember the proposition about putting a new top to "Antioch" tent, to be acted on at next Q. M. at Lapeer, and come prepared to say and do? Br. Snook proposes to give the tent to the Conference if the brethren will put a new top to it, as it cannot be used any more without one. Come brethren! The churches and many school houses are closed against us. With the tent we are independent, and can do much good. We wish there were a dozen in this State.

Attention!

Three years ago this winter, some brother or friend, whose name I have forgotten, living in the State of New York, wrote to me concerning 160 acres of land, which he owned on the Mississippi River bottoms in Ill. near Kinderhook, in either Adams or Pike Cos. If this should meet the eye of that person, and if he still owns the land, and will drop a letter in the P. O., to S. C. Raymond, 200 W. Van Buren St, Chicago, Ill. he will hear of something to his advantage.

Minnesota Tent.

Notice is hereby given to those brethren and sisters of the State of Minn. who have subscribed for the purchasing of a new tent for the State, that the business of collecting and purchasing the tent in time for the summer campaign, has been committed to the undersigned, by a vote of the Annual Conference at its last session. All such as have not paid their subscriptions will please remit to me as soon as possible, that I may have time to make the purchase, before it will be actually needed. ADDRESS: GEO. W. MILLER, Millersburg, Rice Co. Minn.

To Advent Christians.

We are happy to recommend to you our brother Eld. P. S. Buck, as a faithful servant of the Lord Jesus Christ. He has been a faithful minister in this church for the last two years, and has been the means of doing great good here and elsewhere; and it is with sadness and regret that we part with him. As he goes forth to labor in other fields he has the prayers and best wishes of the church. And we ask of all Christians that they extend to him a welcome hand, and aid him in the cause by their prayers.

By order of the Advent Christian church of Toronto, Iowa. B. T. MILLER, Deacon.

Appointments.

CONFERENCE REGISTER.

Iowa A. C. C. Q. M., Manchester, Feb. 22-25

MICHIGAN.

North Branch, Union S. H. Wednesday evening, Feb. 14.

Brockway Center, Friday evening, Feb. 16.

Advent chapel, Lake Shore, three miles north of Lexington, Sunday, 10½ a. m. Feb. 18.

GEO. WRIGHT, JR.

The third Q. M. of the Northern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the church in Millbrook, commencing Thursday eve Feb. 22. We hope to have a full representation at this meeting. Come, brethren, let us rally for the Lord. A general invitation is extended to all. JOHN BOWER, Chairman.

The third Q. M. for the Eastern District of Michigan will be held at Lapeer, commencing Wednesday eve. Feb. 21, and hold over Lord's day. The Rail Road is now in running order from Port Huron to Flint. The Brn. have a pleasant and commodious chapel and plenty of accommodations, with large hearts, and hope to see a large attendance. J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y.

The third Q. M. for the Southren District of Mich. will be held at the Munger S. H. five miles north of Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co. commencing Wednesday eve. March 20, and hold over Lord's day. Teams will be at the station at Eaton Rapids on the arrival of the p. m. trains from Grand Rapids and Jackson. Eaton Rapids is on the Grand River Valley R. R. Let there be a full attendance.

J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y. pro tem.

ILLINOIS.

Lovejoy S. H. Feb. 18, and continue some evenings, if desired. S. E. MABRY.

Boomerville, 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Feb. 18.

N. W. SPENCER.

Amboy, Feb. 11, morning and evening.

Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Feb. 18-23, as Br. Wheeler and others may arrange. Let the friends round about rally and come to this meeting to work for God and his cause. C. C. MARSTON.

Eld. Wm. McCulloch will preach in our vicinity (Cobden) on the third Sunday in February, continuing a few days; and in the vicinity of Anna the fourth Sunday, continuing a few days, as Br. Childs may arrange. J. S. LAWVER.

IOWA.

The second Q. M. of the A. C. C. of Manchester District commences Thursday, Feb. 22, with the Elk Valley church, at the Otisville S. H. continuing over the Sabbath.

This is comparatively a new field. Let every lover of Jesus and his cause be there. Come, brethren, laden with the Spirit of Jesus, praying in the Holy Ghost. Come, to work for God and his cause. M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

Near Valparaiso, Feb. 14. A discussion. Subject: Is Man Immortal?

Corporon's, East Unionville, Feb. 19.

McVinley's S. H. 11 a. m. Feb. 20.

Abbott S. H. 7 p. m. Feb. 20.

Milan, March 21, and over Sunday.

South Milan, April 7.

West Unionville, 8 miles, May 4, 5.

N. C. MILLER

The second Q. M. of the Mo. and S. W. Iowa Conference will convene with Empire church, Friday evening, March 1, and continue over Sunday. Let all the churches in the District be represented. Let none of the ministry fail to be there. JAMES FINDREE, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

The next Q. M. for the Ottawa District will be held at Ottawa, Feb. 16, and holding over Sunday. Let the lovers of Jesus rally.

E. BACON, Sec'y.

NEW YORK.

Regular meetings are held by the church at 128 West 24th St., New York city: three times on Sunday, and Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings. T. J. COX.

Advertisements.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper of 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 30c. a year. Ten copies, $4. Fifty copies, $28. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

FREE. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee-keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage. H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

THRESHING MACHINE.

FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $600. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $330. Warranted as represented.

N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure. (tf) Address, A. J. STONE, Hesperia, Mich.

FANNING MILL. I make an excellent machine for cleaning wheat. It will take out all cheat and oats, and leave the wheat clean and fit for seed. I will ship one of these machines to the first brother who will send $25 to the office of THE TIMES. They are well worth $30. M. M. Wheeler, Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Ill.

HOW TO GO WEST.

Forty years ago, Illinois was as far West as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of Progress and Improvement, the word West has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid Line of Railroad.

This Line of Railroad is the Burlington Route, which starts from Chicago by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and, running through Burlington, reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific, and other railroads running from these cities.

People going to Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, California, or any point in the Territories, will study their own interests by going "By way of Burlington," for the rates of that Line are always as low as any other, and it is the best Route in the West, therefore you are more sure of your safety and comfort.

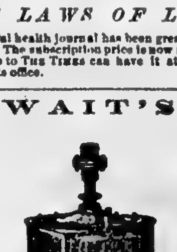
The Burlington Route has admirably answered the question "How to go West?" by the publication of an excellent pamphlet, containing a large, truthful map of the Great West, and much interesting and valuable information, which can be obtained free of charge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.

This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

WAIT'S

TURBINE WATER WHEEL.



HUDSON RIVER CHAMPION

A WORD TO MILL MEN.

I have been building the Jonval Turbine for the past eight years. Have built some seven or eight different kinds of wheels. Am acquainted with nearly all the first class wheels in the country, and am fully persuaded that the Champion stands alone without a rival. Early I discovered that the tangential and centrifugal forces of the water, exerted a tremendous power which is expended against the outer rims of those wheels, which discharge vertically and against the scrolls and curbs of most other kinds, which is lost to all useful effect.

For a long time I studied and experimented carefully, to bring this wasted power into use without injuring the other high qualities of the Wheels.

My efforts have been crowned with success, and I can now offer you a Turbine which can compete successfully with all others in the economical use of the water, while for simplicity of construction, strength and durability, it is the champion of the world.

It has no complication of gates, with their multitude of Levers: no cranks, pin, segments nor pinions to get out of order. No series of leaky joints; no rubbing surface to wear away, to waste the water; nothing touches the wheel but water; hence it will never wear out. There is no lateral motion, nor do their steps wear out like other wheels.

The Jonval Turbine has given the highest percentage of power ever attained in any public test. Several of these Jonvals have been taken out which were in perfect order (having run but a short time), and the Champion placed in the same curbs, venting the same amount of water, and have obtained from six to eight per cent. more power in every instance than the Jonvals gave.

These wheels are perfectly proof against injury from flood-wood. Should any pieces get into the case which could not pass through the wheel, you have simply to open a door (like a safe or cupboard), enter the curb, and remove the obstruction, and it is all ready for work again. This can be done in five minutes.

They are now in operation in every section of the country, giving unbounded satisfaction and taking the places of all other wheels. The extreme low price for which they are sold astonishes everybody.

Circulars sent free. Address

P. H. WAIT, Sandy Hill, N. Y.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin. Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent: The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—20 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—32 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,500 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,300 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single, $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 35c.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 10c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 16c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 12c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 18 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 15c: $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $5, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 6c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 120 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 317 pp. Paper covers, 30c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 48 pp. 10c.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

G. G. Godfrey

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 30. BUCHANAN, FEBRUARY 20, 1872. WHOLE NO. 410.

Contents.

The Thief on the Cross, J. W. Taylor; The Resurrection, J. M. Groce; Did Man spring from a Monkey, C. C. Marston; Heel Bruisers, F. Burr; From Arkansas, M. Judge; The Idle Christian..233
A Discussion Between Eld. Clark Braden, and Eld. Himes Continued......234
Have Religion for Yourselves, Fanny Reynolds; The Promise and Oath To Abraham, N. Field....235
Brief Editorials; Editor's Journal; A Paraphrase; Union; A Doubtful Case......236
Resurrection; How it Looks to Others; Mission among the Dutch; Remember the Poor; Shotgun Preachers, D. Cogswell; Editorial Gleanings; The Times, At Home and Abroad; Religious Items......237
Dying Four Deaths, G. W. Sutton; The Spirit and the Heart; Think Now; A Defense; Correspondence......238
Brief Extracts; Conference Minutes; Our Book and Tract Column......239
Business Agent's Department; Book Notices; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements; Book and Tract Column......240

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, ... MICHIGAN

Tuesday Afternoon, Feb. 20, 1872.

The Thief on the Cross.

It is claimed that the "soul" or "spirit" of the thief went with Christ's "soul" or "spirit" to paradise "that day." Let us look at it a moment.

1. It is assumed that the "spirit" is referred to by the personal pronouns "me," and "thee," and hence is the "real man."

2. Admitting this to be a fact, Solomon says, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." (Eccl. 12: 7.) This is an established principle; when the body of man returns to dust his spirit returns to God; and if the spirit is an entity, and is in fact the man proper, then the man returns to God.

3. The Savior, three days subsequent to the time the promise was made uses the same personal pronoun, and says, "Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended to my Father."

4. Therefore paradise, where Christ and the thief went "that day," could not be heaven where God is.

5. Hence, one branch of modern orthodoxy informs us that paradise is an intermediate place, or "half-way-house," where the spirits of good men wait for the judgment. But Paul informs us that paradise is in the "third heaven;" and if Paul's "third heaven" is orthodoxy's "half-way-house," surely orthodoxy is quite analogous to Mohammedanism on this point, which teaches "seven heaven a-top of each other;" only orthodoxy, instead of "stringing them along," some in each, passes them all up to the "third," where they wait till the judgment, then are sent on through to their final place of destruction, which is quite "beyond the bounds of time and space," and I have not "space" here to describe it.

6 But now comes the difficulty: If the spirit is referred to by the personal pronouns "me," and "thee," inasmuch as the spirit ascends to God, when the body dies, according to Solomon, how could Christ say three days after his body died, that he had not ascended to God? For surely he had ascended to God, if he went as a disembodied "spirit" with the thief "that day" to paradise, or else the wise man was mistaken in saying the spirit returns to God. Either Solomon was wrong, or else the wise men of modern times are mistaken—one or the other. Let the advocates of immortal-soulism extricate themselves from these difficulties before urging this text as positive proof of their position.

J. W. Taylor.

The Resurrection.

What a glorious hope gathers around the idea of a resurrection to those who attach any importance to that event as a matter of faith. Take, for example, Job, away back three thousand years ago, suffering under a peculiar infliction, and at the same time outraged in his patience by those who should have comforted him in his distress. Hear him, as he rises superior to his calamities, exclaiming, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Why did he not take hold by faith on a nearer prospect of happiness? Why did he not exclaim, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that while after my skin, worms destroy this body, already made loathsome by disease, my soul shall be enjoying the full fruition of the kingdom of heaven?" Why, I ask, did he not lay hold of any hope of escaping a life in the flesh? His experience in the flesh ought surely to have furnished a very strong motive to change off into some other kind of existence. Why, I ask, did he not thus exclaim? Because he had not so learned. Because it was no part of his faith, and therefore no part of his hope. Methinks I see the grand old man, as he makes this declaration of his faith, turn to his philosophical friends, and exclaim—"Miserable comforters are ye all." What I desire, is to feel the consolation that though I am now suffering in body and in mind, yet, at the time of the end, this body of mine that now shows evident signs of corruption, shall put on incorruption, and this mortal mind depending for its feverish and anxious existence on this diseased body, and its diseased functions, shall put on immortality. This, my friends, is what most concerns me."

And so he evidently thought. Job no doubt understood that homely philosophy subsequently used by the apostle to explain the nature of the resurrection to the church at Corinth, which is that, if a seed be cast into the ground it would produce its like, or secure and continue the identity of that which was sown, and while he does not say, and does not expect, that the loathsome body which the worms would destroy, would rise again, yet he does say, and does expect that in his flesh he shall see God: and his eyes shall behold and not another. Yes, it will be Job, the Idumean patriarch;—his flesh and his eyes. God having taken care of his identity, will bring him up at the last day through Jesus Christ, who is the resurrection and the life.

But let us introduce another personage to Job and his friends. Let us introduce an orthodox divine, of our day, and see him as he casts a look of pity on Job; and hear him say—"My dear friend, you are mistaken. You are a materialist. You are heterodox, sir! My dear friend, if you are faithful till the end you shall see God then, or in a few moments at least; just so soon as a heavenly escort can take you to the presence of God!" Just imagine Job turning to this orthodox divine, and asking, "Who are you, and what kind of theology, is this you would teach?"

"Sir, I am an orthodox divine, born out of due time, and properly belong to the nineteenth century after Christ; and as I am over three thousand years in advance of you, more than the half of which his been gospel times, I must be right!"

But Job being fully persuaded in his own mind, turns again to his friends and exclaims, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that in my flesh I shall see God. Therefore, all the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come."

J. M. Groce.

Shousetown, Pa.

Did Man spring from a Monkey?

"Strange question" says one. But stranger still is it, that any man should candidly believe such a monstrous notion. This is truly an age of "shift" and inventiveness. But certainly, infidelity is pretty hardly pushed for argument, when it resorts to such vain and fanciful theories to overturn the Bible. If man came from a monkey in th first place, why are not monkeys turning into men now? If this had been the order, it would have continued. Monkeys would have been turning into men all the time. This is certainly a fair and legitimate conclusion. None can avert its force. But what are the facts in the case? Why, every one must admit, that there is not only no case on record, but also, that there are no indications or symptoms of any such cases, as a monkey turning into a man. There is just as great difference between a monkey and a man to-day, as there ever was. He does not look nor act any more like a man to-day, in his rational state, than he did a thousand years ago. But if the monkey is man in embryo, then it would inevitably follow that the monkeys of our day, as well as any other, would be constantly changing from monkeydom to manhood. The simple fact that this is not the case is proof positive and sufficient against the theory. If the monkey can turn into a man, it seems to me on the same principle man might turn back into a monkey again. The fact is, the monkey is a monkey; and the man is a man. They were made so from the begining. They came from the hand of the Creator just as they are now, so far as order is concerned. This is the only rational view that can be taken of the matter. And this is the explanation the Bible gives, which is in harmony with native and common sense.

The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God, and has resorted in one instance to the monkey theory of man's origin to prove it. But futile and vain is the attempt. God's word still stands; and its simple, plain and beautiful narrative of man's origin remains unsullied. All the Scientists in existence cannot destroy the blessed Bible. God's word has stood the test of ages, and still it stands.

C. C. Marston.

Heel Bruisers.

Did you ever hear of a class of people called Heel-bruisers? Perhaps not, as I never saw the word in print before. But there are plenty of such in the world, and every Christian has to meet them. I give them that name because their work is so identical with that of the serpent that bruised the heel of the "seed of the woman."

They are generally very humble crawling on their bellies, and ready to eat dust in their humility while you look upon them, but they would prefer to have you pass on a little that they may get a mouthful out of your heel. They like flesh meat.

The young convert finds them in his pathway, and they come to him with much confidence because they can very likely pass for angels of light in his presence. They bite him not particularly to get a morsel of flesh, but more to inject poison from their fangs. They tell him of this or that doctrine, speaking against public prayer, or praying for sinners, or the work of the Holy Spirit; or they talk learnedly of the age to come, or the Sabbath, or non-resurrection of the wicked, or some point in some sermon that was not correct, and they do all they can to make a sore, and put in poison there.

Others work among older Christians, biting at the heel of some one who is trying to do something in the Master's cause. They will be pleasant to such a one's face, shaking hands long and lovingly, and perhaps greet with a kiss, but wait till he passes on and then see them strike for the heel. They will follow in his trail for months, watching an opportunity to strike. They want a piece of his flesh. They mean to poison him, kill him if they can. They find some part that lies nearest the earth like the heel; some propensity, real or imaginary, no matter which, if so be it is a weak spot and most like the world, and there they bite and suck blood.

Cannot such heel-bruisers be done away with? Not until Jesus comes. Were all the serpents ever killed? Is not Satan still living? Who has not felt their bite? Who has no scar to show where malice struck? Happy such an one. Aye, but more happy he who has like Paul received the answer to his prayer for deliverance, "My grace shall be sufficient for thee."

But, says one, you must keep your feet shod with the "preparation of the gospel of peace," and then there is no danger. Aye, but was not Jesus thus shod, and yet they bruised his heel. They bite clear through, leather and all. The shoes above mentioned are for protection against the roughness of the way. These heel-bruisers are very smooth. The only way is to pass on and seek grace to "endure unto the end."

F. Burr.

From Arkansas.

I received The Times—a welcome visitor indeed to me. It seems to speak glad tidings to a lost and guilty world. Your tracts and The Times have opened upon us a flood of light and Bible truth such as never shined in the hearts of this people before. I thought I knew my Bible very well, until I begun to read The Times and tracts. I find I was far worse than the wayfaring man. I, of course was brought up under the heathen traditions of my fathers. But I thank God I have lived to see the day when the full light of Jesus Christ has shone forth. I was as greatly incensed against the Advent doctrine when I first heard of it as any body could be. But when I come to examine the Advent works, I found them to be stricly Bible and nothing else. Oh! may all men search the Scriptures, and find for themselves the truth of Christ Jesus.

I think we will have an Advent church in this part of the country this year. The Baptists here are turning Adventists very fast. Eld. G. W. Crosby is doing a great work. He has accepted a challenge for a debate with Eld. Hamby of the M. E. church, which will come off in April. There are a great many here that can't give up their traditions. When an Adventist approaches them on the subject of immortal-soulism they will say, "men do have immortal souls!" But they can't prove it by the Bible. May The Times find its way into every family, and cause "knowledge to be increased. May men think for themselves. May God bless you in your efforts to spread the truth throughout the land, and many hear it before the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

H. M. Judge.

The Idle Christian.

Many a person thinks himself a pretty good Christian, because he cannot, as he supposes, be charged with doing anything inconsistent with his profession. He is guilty of no immorality, and is attentive to the means of grace. These are good things, and all that can be said against them is, that they do not go far enough. The command is, to work in the Lord's vineyard; and this man does not work. In order to enable him to judge himself truly, let us see what is implied in not working as a Christian.

To be idle is to be— not like Christ. —"Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

To be idle is to neglect to glorify God.—"In this is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit."

To be idle is to be false to the church.—She needs help. She is entitled to the service of all sons. "Here am I, send me."

To be idle is to be cruel to dying souls—as cruel as one who would leave a wounded man to perish by the wayside when he might save him. "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death."

To be idle shows a lack of love. "For the love of Christ constraineth us, because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead."

To be spiritually idle, is to be spiritually poor. "The hand of the diligent maketh rich."

To be idle is to hinder a blessing. "Bring all the tithes into the storehouse."

To be idle is to be weak. "But exercise thyself rather unto godliness."

Idleness hinders assurance. "Make your calling and election sure."

Idleness has no promise. "So run that ye may obtain." "Let no man take your crown."

Idleness brings a curse. "Curse ye, Meroz; curse bitterly; because they came not up to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

The idle is liable to a disastrous end—"Cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness."

Is it true, then, that the idle Christian doeth nothing inconsistent with his profession? Is not doing nothing almost as bad a thing as he can do?

"Any want of conformity to the law of God" is sin as much as a transgression of it.—Sel.

A little girl who was watching the balloon ascension at Lewiston, Me., suddenly exclaimed: "Mamma, I shouldn't think God would like to have that man go up to heaven alive."

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

G. G. Godfrey

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.---NO. 30. BUCHANAN, FEBRUARY 20, 1872. WHOLE NO. 410.

Contents.

The Thief on the Cross, J. W. Taylor; The Resurrection, J. M. Groce; Did Man spring from a Monkey, C. C. Marston; Heel Bruisers, F. Burr; From Arkansas, H. Judge; The Idle Christian..333
A Discussion Between Eld. Clark Braden, and Eld. Himes Continued..........334
Have Religion for Yourselves, Fanny Reynolds; The Promise and Oath To Abraham, N. Field....335
Brief Editorials; Editor's Journal; A Paraphrase; Union; A Doubtful Case..........336
Resurrection; How it Looks to Others; Mission among the Dutch; Remember the Poor; Shotgun Preachers, D. Cogswell; Editorial Gleanings; The Times, At Home and Abroad; Religious Items..........337
Dying Four Deaths, G. W. Sutton; The Spirit and the Heart; Think Now; A Defense; Correspondence..........338
Brief Extracts; Conference Minutes; Our Book and Tract Column..........339
Business Agent's Department; Book Notices; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements; Book and Tract Column..........340

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 20, 1872.

The Thief on the Cross.

It is claimed that the "soul" or "spirit" of the thief went with Christ's "soul" or "spirit" to paradise "that day." Let us look at it a moment.

1. It is assumed that the "spirit" is referred to by the personal pronouns "me," and "thee," and hence is the "real man."

2. Admitting this to be a fact, Solomon says, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." (Eccl. 12: 7.) This is an established principle; when the body of man returns to dust his spirit returns to God; and if the spirit is an entity, and is in fact the man proper, then the man returns to God.

3. The Savior, three days subsequent to the time the promise was made uses the same personal pronoun, and says, "Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended to my Father."

4. Therefore paradise, where Christ and the thief went "that day," could not be heaven where God is.

5. Hence, one branch of modern orthodoxy informs us that paradise is an intermediate place, or "half-way-house," where the spirits of good men wait for the judgment. But Paul informs us that paradise is in the "third heaven;" and if Paul's "third heaven" is orthodoxy's "half-way-house," surely orthodoxy is quite analogous to Mohammedanism on this point, which teaches "seven heaven a-top of each other;" only orthodoxy, instead of "stringing them along," some in each, passes them all up to the "third," where they wait till the judgment, then are sent on through to their final place of destruction, which is quite "beyond the bounds of time and space," and I have not "space" here to describe it.

6 But now comes the difficulty: If the spirit is referred to by the personal pronouns "me," and "thee," inasmuch as the spirit ascends to God, when the body dies, according to Solomon, how could Christ say three days after his body died, that he had not ascended to God? For surely he had ascended to God, if he went as a disembodied "spirit" with the thief "that day" to paradise, or else the wise man was mistaken in saying the spirit returns to God. Either Solomon was wrong, or else the wise men of modern times are mistaken—one or the other. Let the advocates of immortal-soulism extricate themselves from these difficulties before urging this text as positive proof of their position. J. W. TAYLOR.

The Resurrection.

What a glorious hope gathers around the idea of a resurrection to those who attach any importance to that event as a matter of faith. Take, for example, Job, away back three thousand years ago, suffering under a peculiar infliction, and at the same time outraged in his patience by those who should have comforted him in his distress. Hear him, as he rises superior to his calamities, exclaiming, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Why did he not take hold by faith on a nearer prospect of happiness? Why did he not exclaim, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that while after my skin, worms destroy this body, already made loathsome by disease, my soul shall be enjoying the full fruition of the kingdom of heaven?" Why, I ask, did he not lay hold of any hope of escaping a life in the flesh? His experience in the flesh ought surely to have furnishd a very strong motive to change off into some other kind of existence. Why, I ask, did he not thus exclaim? Because he had not so learned. Because it was no part of his faith, and therefore no part of his hope. Methinks I see the grand old man, as he makes this declaration of his faith, turn to his philosophical friends, and exclaim—"Miserable comforters are ye all." What I desire, is to feel the consolation that though I am now suffering in body and in mind, yet, at the time of the end, this body of mine that now shows evident signs of corruption, shall put on incorruption, and this mortal mind depending for its feverish and anxious existence on this diseased body, and its diseased functions, shall put on immortality. This, my friends, is what most concerns me."

And so he evidently thought. Job no doubt understood that homely philosophy subsequently used by the apostle to explain the nature of the resurrection to the church at Corinth, which is that, if a seed be cast into the ground it would produce its like, or secure and continue the identity of that which was sown, and while he does not say, and does not expect, that the loathsome body which the worms would destroy, would rise again, yet he does say, and does expect that in his flesh he shall see God: and his eyes shall behold and not another. Yes, it will be Job, the Idumean patriarch;—his flesh and his eyes. God having taken care of his identity, will bring him up at the last day through Jesus Christ, who is the resurrection and the life.

But let us introduce another personage to Job and his friends. Let us introduce an orthodox divine, of our day, and see him as he casts a look of pity on Job; and hear him say—"My dear friend, you are mistaken. You are a materialist. You are heterodox, sir! My dear friend, if you are faithful till the end you shall see God then, or in a few moments at least; just so soon as a heavenly escort can take you to the presence of God!" Just imagine Job turning to this orthodox divine, and asking, "Who are you, and what kind of theology, is this you would teach?"

"Sir, I am an orthodox divine, born out of due time, and properly belong to the nineteenth century after Christ; and as I am over three thousand years in advance of you, more than the half of which his been gospel times, I must be right!"

But Job being fully persuaded in his own mind, turns again to his friends and exclaims, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that in my flesh I shall see God. Therefore, all the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come." J. M. GROCE.

Shousetown, Pa.

Did Man spring from a Monkey?

"Strange question" says one. But stranger still is it, that any man should candidly believe such a monstrous notion. This is truly an age of "shift" and inventiveness. But certainly, infidelity is pretty hardly pushed for argument, when it resorts to such vain and fanciful theories to overturn the Bible. If man came from a monkey in th first place, why are not monkeys turning into men now? If this had been the order, it would have continued. Monkeys would have been turning into men all the time. This is certainly a fair and legitimate conclusion. None can avert its force. But what are the facts in the case? Why, every one must admit, that there is not only no case on record, but also, that there are no indications or symptoms of any such cases, as a monkey turning into a man. There is just as great difference between a monkey and a man to-day, as there ever was. He does not look nor act any more like a man to-day, in his rational state, than he did a thousand years ago. But if the monkey is man in embryo, then it would inevitably follow that the monkeys of our day, as well as any other, would be constantly changing from monkeydom to manhood. The simple fact that this is not the case is proof positive and sufficient against the theory. If the monkey can turn into a man, it seems to me on the same principle man might turn back into a monkey again. The fact is, the monkey is a monkey; and the man is a man. They were made so from the begining. They came from the hand of the Creator just as they are now, so far as order is concerned. This is the only rational view that can be taken of the matter. And this is the explanation the Bible gives, which is in harmony with native and common sense.

The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God, and has resorted in one instance to the monkey theory of man's origin to prove it. But futile and vain is the attempt. God's word still stands; and its simple, plain and beautiful narrative of man's origin remains unsullied. All the Scientists in existence cannot destroy the blessed Bible. God's word has stood the test of ages, and still it stands.

C. C. MARSTON.

Heel Bruisers.

Did you ever hear of a class of people called Heel-bruisers? Perhaps not, as I never saw the word in print before. But there are plenty of such in the world, and every Christian has to meet them. I give them that name because their work is so identical with that of the serpent that bruised the heel of the "seed of the woman."

They are generally very humble crawling on their bellies, and ready to eat dust in their humility while you look upon them, but they would prefer to have you pass on a little that they may get a mouthful out of your heel. They like flesh meat.

The young convert finds them in his pathway, and they come to him with much confidence because they can very likely pass for angels of light in his presence. They bite him not particularly to get a morsel of flesh, but more to inject poison from their fangs. They tell him of this or that doctrine, speaking against public prayer, or praying for sinners, or the work of the Holy Spirit; or they talk learnedly of the age to come, or the Sabbath, or non-resurrection of the wicked, or some point in some sermon that was not correct, and they do all they can to make a sore, and put in poison there.

Others work among older Christians, biting at the heel of some one who is trying to do something in the Master's cause. They will be pleasant to such a one's face, shaking hands long and lovingly, and perhaps greet with a kiss, but wait till he passes on and then see them strike for the heel. They will follow in his trail for months, watching an opportunity to strike. They want a piece of his flesh. They mean to poison him, kill him if they can. They find some part that lies nearest the earth like the heel; some propensity, real or imaginary, no matter which, if so be it is a weak spot and most like the world, and there they bite and suck blood.

Cannot such heel-bruisers be done away with? Not until Jesus comes. Were all the serpents ever killed? Is not Satan still living? Who has not felt their bite? Who has no scar to show where malice struck? Happy such an one. Aye, but more happy he who has like Paul received the answer to his prayer for deliverance, "My grace shall be sufficient for thee."

But, says one, you must keep your feet shod with the "preparation of the gospel of peace," and then there is no danger. Aye, but was not Jesus thus shod, and yet they bruised his heel. They bite clear through, leather and all. The shoes above mentioned are for protection against the roughness of the way. These heel-bruisers are very smooth. The only way is to pass on and seek grace to "endure unto the end." F. BURR.

From Arkansas.

I received THE TIMES—a welcome visitor indeed to me. It seems to speak glad tidings to a lost and guilty world. Your tracts and THE TIMES have opened upon us a flood of light and Bible truth such as never shined in the hearts of this people before. I thought I knew my Bible very well, until I begun to read THE TIMES and tracts. I find I was far worse than the wayfaring man. I, of course was brought up under the heathen traditions of my fathers. But I thank God I have lived to see the day when the full light of Jesus Christ has shone forth. I was as greatly incensed against the Advent doctrine when I first heard of it as any body could be. But when I come to examine the Advent works, I found them to be stricly Bible and nothing else. Oh! may all men search the Scriptures, and find for themselves the truth of Christ Jesus.

I think we will have an Advent church in this part of the country this year. The Baptists here are turning Adventists very fast. Eld. G. W. Crosby is doing a great work. He has accepted a challenge for a debate with Eld. Hamby of the M. E. church, which will come off in April. There are a great many here that can't give up their traditions. When an Adventist approaches them on the subject of immortal-soulism they will say, "men do have immortal souls!" But they can't prove it by the Bible. May THE TIMES find its way into every family, and cause "knowledge to be increased. May men think for themselves. May God bless you in your efforts to spread the truth throughout the land, and many hear it before the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. H. M. JUDGE.

The Idle Christian.

Many a person thinks himself a pretty good Christian, because he cannot, as he supposes, be charged with doing anything inconsistent with his profession. He is guilty of no immorality, and is attentive to the means of grace. These are good things, and all that can be said against them is, that they do not go far enough. The command is, to work in the Lord's vineyard; and this man does not work. In order to enable him to judge himself truly, let us see what is implied in not working as a Christian.

To be idle is to be— not like Christ. —"Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

To be idle is to neglect to glorify God.—"In this is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit."

To be idle is to be false to the church.—She needs help. She is entitled to the service of all sons. "Here am I, send me."

To be idle is to be cruel to dying souls—as cruel as one who would leave a wounded man to perish by the wayside when he might save him. "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death."

To be idle shows a lack of love. "For the love of Christ constraineth us, because we thus judge, that it one died for all, then were all dead."

To be spiritually idle, is to be spiritually poor. "The hand of the diligent maketh rich."

To be idle is to hinder a blessing. "Bring all the tithes into the storehouse."

To be idle is to be weak. "But exercise thyself rather unto godliness."

Idleness hinders assurance. "Make your calling and election sure."

Idleness has no promise. "So run that ye may obtain." "Let no man take your crown."

Ideness brings a curse. "Curse ye, Meroz; curse bitterly; because they came not up to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

The idle is liable to a disastrous end—"Cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness."

Is it true, then, that the idle Christian doeth nothing inconsistent with his profession? Is not doing nothing almost as bad a thing as he can do?

"Any want of conformity to the law of God" is sin as much as a transgression of it.—Sel.

A little girl who was watching the balloon ascension at Lewiston, Me., suddenly exclaimed: "Mamma, I shouldn't think God would like to have that man go up to heaven alive."

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

Upon Four Propositions, Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

ELD. BRADEN'S FIFTH LETTER.

We have established the following positions (1) There is a spirit in man. (2) This spirit is an entity. (3) It is a rational, thinking, conscious, responsible entity—the rational, thinking, conscious, moral part of man. (4) It can, while in the body, act distinct from and even in opposition to the body. (5) It leaves the body in death. Since our opponent has not even challenged these positions in his last reply, we shall regard them as conceded and proved. If we do him injustice, let him state what he denies, and prove that we have not established it. We shall now continue our arguments to establish: (6) Death does not affect the conscious being of the human spirit. (7) It is conscious between death and resurrection. For brevity we shall combine these two propositions and establish them by the same arguments.

Our first argument was based on Mat. 10: 28; Lk. 12: 4. Our comments on these passages were: (1) Soul here meant spirit. It can mean nothing else. It was to be cast into gehenna. Our Savior uses the common idiom which often uses soul as a synonym of spirit; and he regards man as dual, or consisting of body and soul, or body and spirit. (3) The death inflicted by either God or the persecutors does not affect the conscious being of the spirit. Kill in both cases means to take natural life. The death produced is the same in event, as all men die. Hence death does not affect the conscious being of the spirit. God does not affect this conscious being of the spirit. God does not affect this conscious being when he kills. He can do so, but he does not, our Savior declares. After he kills he casts into gehenna. If death extinguishes the conscious being of the spirit, then the death inflicted by the persecutors and all that God does would be equally terrible. If both extinguish the conscious being in inflicting death there would be no difference. Not only so, but God would cast a nonentity, or unconscious nonentity into gehenna, and therefore we should fear him! What an awful thought! What a terrible difference between the death inflicted by the persecutors, and the consequences after death that God inflicts on this nonentity!

Our Savior makes his whole argument or appeal hinge on what God does after death. The conscious existence of the spirit is absolutely necessary to this difference between what he can do and what the persecutor can do. If death extinguishes the conscious being of the spirit, God does no more than the persecutor. Our brother attempts to make a great deal out of "destroy" in gehenna, assuming it means utter extinction of conscious being, and that, too, without a shadow of proof. But unfortunately for him the Holy Spirit in Luke gives the equivalent expression, "Cast into gehenna." Now does God cast a nonentity into gehenna? He does, unless the spirit retains existence. Does he cast an unconscious thing into gehenna? What a farce! Yet he does, unless the spirit retains its conscious existence. But our Savior declares that death does not extinguish the spirit's conscious being. Hence casting a conscious spirit into gehenna is a destruction of that spirit. As in 1 Thes. 1: 6, we have "tribulation"—"recompensing tribulation" as the equivalent of the "everlasting destruction" of the eighth verse; so we have 'casting into gehenna' as the equivalent of 'destruction' in this warning of our Savior. That death does not extinguish the spirit's conscious being our Savior declares as clearly as human language can declare it. The spirit retains its conscious existence, or God can do no more than the persecutor. He casts the spirit into gehenna—the conscious spirit. This passage storms the very Gibralter of soul-extinctionism.

We will now for the last time notice our brother's rejoinders. (1) He attempts to evade the issue by calling the above exegesis all assumption. Would it not have been well for him to have showed that it was an assumption. Now I have stated several times that the above is the palpable meaning of these passages—their only meaning. Has he showed that it is not? The above, Br. Himes, are our arguments on this passage, our exegesis, our exposition, our explanation of the passage, by which we sustain our position. Do you comprehend now? (2) He evades the issue I present that death does not extinguish the conscious being of the spirit. He virtually concedes it when he speaks of casting the spirit into gehenna after death; for unless the spirit be conscious, such an act would be a silly farce. True, he asks if the body's being cast into gehenna proves its conscious existence. No; for the body had no conscious existence before death. Consciousness inheres in the spirit. It has this consciousness before death. Death does not destroy it, or God does no more than the persecutor. Then he casts the conscious spirit into gehenna. This is the very gist of the warning.

(3) He then tries to deny that soul means spirit. It can mean nothing else. Cast body and soul into gehenna, can only mean cast body and spirit into gehenna. (4) He then attempts by a course of special pleading to inject the term 'soul' with the meaning "life hid with Christ in God." Now we deny that soul or psyche has that meaning in a single instance in sacred or classic Greek, even by metonymy. Dare he say psyche ever means "life hid with Christ in God?" Let us try. "Fear him who is able after he has killed to cast both the body and 'the life hid with Christ in God' into gehenna." To what will not men resort to bolster up a sinking cause! Again, he strips the language of all warning to the wicked. Have they any life hid with Christ in God? Are not they to fear God for the same reason that the disciples were to fear him? The passage means all were to fear God, who after death can and will punish the conscious spirit that sins against him. Finally he yields the whole question. He has given the spirit life after death. The spirit returns to God who gave it. It has life in him, or it is as conscious as it ever will be. He concedes that the dead have life. He modifies it by the expression, "hid with Christ in God," but this has no effect on the consciousness of this life or existence. Hence they have life, or are alive in God.

Next we appealed to the fact that God, in Gen. 3: 6, in a plain declaration of facts, says, "I am the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob." As they had been dead five hundred years, he never could have used the present tense unless they were in actual conscious existence. If they were then nonentities, as soul-extinctionism assumes, he was guilty of the nonsense of saying, "I am the God of three nonentities." They were then conscious between death and resurrection.

Our college illustration riveted that conclusion so fast, that our brother after a few attempted evasions, has virtually conceded it, and now attempts to befog the issue by raising side issues. He attempts to show a contradiction in my language. Suppose there is a contradiction; does that show that my argument on Ex. 3: 6 was not correct and valid? as the contradiction does not affect the argument in any way. But there is no contradiction at all. I said God always talks to men in language that they can understand; and he always intends the plain obvious meaning of his language. I say further that the intention of the language in Ex. 3: 6 was not to affirm that the patriarchs were conscious then; but to inform Moses, who was then speaking to him. I said I did not claim that Moses understood or apprehended the argument for the consciousness of the dead, that is implied in the form of the language that God used. I said also that God could only have used that form of language in the case that the dead were conscious when he used it: hence they were conscious. In 1869 I wrote to a friend, "I am teaching a normal class of 165 pupils." Now the affirmation of that sentence is the truth of my teaching a normal class at that time. It does not affirm that there was a normal class then in Southern Illinois College; but mark you, it could only be true if then there was a normal class in the school there. Suppose the question should now arise as to whether there were any normal classes in Southern Illinois College, while in existence. Would not my language in my letters be conclusive evidence? True, I did not affirm there were such classes, but what I did affirm could only be true if there were such classes. Nor would the fact that my readers did not see this point or apprehend it then, and only apprehended the fact of my teaching, affect the argument one way or the other. That, I hope, now is plain. God said, "I am the God" of these patriarchs, five hundred years after their death. He could only say "I am" when they were in existence—conscious existence—just as I could only say "I am teaching normal classes" when they were in actual existence, and the pupils had a conscious existence. Hence they had a conscious existence five hundred years after death just, as my scholars had a conscious existence when I said "I am their teacher," or "am teaching them."

My opponent dares not to say whether the language in Ex. 3: 6 be prophecy or not. He knows it is not prophecy, but a statement of facts. He dares not answer my question, whether God ever uses prolepsis in statements of facts. He knows he does not. He does so in promise and prophecy, but not in statements of fact. Ex. 3: 6 is a statement of an existing fact. There is no prolepsis in it. He says "I am their God," not "I will be," as he must have said, had he had reference to to the resurrection. This is equally true of his language to Isaac, whether Isaac apprehended this incidental thought or not. The same remark applies to God's language to Jacob. In those declarations of fact, he could only use the present tense when the persons whose God he said "I am," were consciously existing; hence when he used it, they consciously existed, or were consciously alive after death. The argument is not affected by the lack of his hearers to apprehend this identical thought. Nor is its strength affected by the fact that it is an incidental thought. The language does not affirm the consciousness of the dead, but it is utterly impossible that the form of language could have been used, if the dead were not then conscious: hence they were conscious. Does my brother now see the point of the argument? If not, I will leave it to the reader who can see it.

Next we showed that our Savior used precisely the same argument in refuting the Sadducees' denial of the resurrection. The Sadducees denied the conscious existence of the spirits of the dead. They denied that there were any spirits of the dead, and, more consistent than modern Sadduceeism, they denied the resurrection. If there was no spirit to be raised, if it was utterly extinguished in death, there could be no resurrection. They presented to our Savior a dilemma that they thought would show the utter absurdity of such an idea as a resurrection. He showed them there was no dilemma in the case—no absurdity involved. He then did more. He overturned Sadduceeism by refuting its fundamental idea: there are no spirits of the dead. In doing this he showed that the dead can be raised up; and as God has promises their resurrection in Daniel, they will be raised.

He appealed to Ex. 3: 6 to show this. We prove this by his appeal to the use of the present tense there, and his additional affirmation, "He is not the God of the dead, but of the living, for all live unto him." Now with Br. Himes' idea that he refers to resurrection directly, he should have said, "He is not the God of those who never will live for all will live unto him." He said, "He is not the God of the dead, (those whose being is utterly extinguished, as you Sadducees say,) he is the God of the living—those who have a conscious existence. He said, I am the God of the patriarchs: hence they were then alive to him. All live to him, though dead to us. Syllogistically stated, the Sadducees' argument would stand, "If the spirits of the dead have no existence, if there be no spirits of the dead, there can be no resurrection. The spirits of the dead have no existence, there are no spirits of the dead therefore there can be and will be no resurrection." Our Savior's reply expanded into a series of propositions would be, "God could only say, 'I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob,' when they were in conscious existence, for he is not the God of those who have no conscious existence, but of those who are alive, or consciously alive to him." He said, "I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob," five hundred years after their death. Therefore they were consciously alive unto him, or in their spirits that returned to him: and all the dead thus live to him. If the spirits of the dead are thus consciously alive to God, he can raise the dead, and will do as he has declared. God's language to Moses shows that the dead are thus alive to God. Therefore the dead can and will be raised. This makes sense of our Savior's appeal to the present tense in Ex. 3: 6, and his declaration, "He is not the God of the dead" (such dead as you Sadducees make the patriarchs,) "but the God of the living, for all live unto him." Our Savior forever annihilates Sadduceeism, ancient and modern, by saying, "God is not the God of such dead as you Sadducees would make the patriarchs. He is the God of the living—those who have a conscious existence." He could only say, "I am the God" of those who are consciously alive. All the dead thus "live unto him." This forever overturns soul-extinctionism.

I will now advance my fourth argument. It is based on the Scriptural prohibition of necromancy, or divining by the spirits of the dead, or obtaining knowledge by consulting the spirits of the dead. I expect to meet scepticism and virtual infidelity when I advance this argument. There is an alarming prevalence of infidelity to the plainest teachings of the Scriptures among professed Christians. We have teaching which denies miracles, special providences, answers to prayer, the reality of demoniacal possessions of the New Testament, the reality and personality of Satan, devils and the angels who kept not their first estate, and also the reality of necromancy, or consulting the spirits of the dead. All these are accommodations to the ignorance of those ages; and when necromancy was forbidden, it was forbidden and punished with death, not as a real crime, but as something the people supposed they could do!

The Bible teaches that there is a spirit called Satan and evil spirits, devils, angels who kept not their estate. That men had and consulted familiar spirits. There were prophets of unclean spirits, prophets of lying spirits. It warns the people against them. Moses gives the rule by which they can be detected. God, in his prophets, challenges such lying spirits to a test. There were demoniacal possessions in the days of miraculous phenomena narrated in the the Scriptures. The demons in our Savior's time, and in the woman with the spirit of Pytho, and the man who assaulted the sons of Sceva were not mere delusions. The apostles warn against demons and seducing spirits. The Bible is as clear concerning the existence of these things as concerning the existence of angels and pure spirits. I would as soon think of explaining the existence of God and angels out of the Bible, as these facts. So, too, the Bible teaches the reality of necromancy, and the conscious existence of the spirits of the dead as a necessary consequence. Lev. 20: 27, "A man or a woman that hath a familiar spirit, or is a wizard, shall surely be put to death." 6th verse, "The soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits and after wizards to go whoring after them, I will surely set my face against that soul and cut him off from his people." Deut. 18: 9, "When thou art come into the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations. There shall not be found among you one that maketh his son or daughter to pass through the fire unto Moloch, or that useth divination, nor an astrologer, or an enchanter, or a witch, or a charmer, or a consulter of familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer."

In 1 Sam. 28, we learn that Saul did go to one who had a familiar spirit, and that certain supernatural phenomena there transpired. 1 Chron. 10:13 declares "Saul died because of his transgression against the word of the Lord which he kept not, and also for seeking a familiar spirit to inquire of it; and inquired not of the Lord, therefore the Lord slew him." Is. 8: 19, "And when they shall say unto you, 'Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and to them that peep and mutter;' should not a people seek unto their God? Should they seek for the living unto the dead? To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this there is no truth in them." On these Scriptures we base these arguments. (1) Consulting familiar spirits was forbidden. The case of Saul in 1 Sam. 28, shows that it was real—that men did such things. So does the language in 1 Chron. 10: 13. (2) Necromancy, or consulting the spirits of the dead, was forbidden, and was as real as the other. The language of Is. 8: 19 shows that they did consult spirits that peep and mutter; did seek for the living unto the dead in violation of God's law. Hence consulting the spirits of the dead was a reality;—and they had a conscious existence.

I have not appealed to the case of Samuel's supposed appearance, because, to my mind, there are insuperable objections to the idea that Samuel really appeared there. I can not believe that after God had refused him (Saul) through prophet and Urim and Thummim, he would send Samuel in violation of his own law to answer him. I do not believe that Samuel would violate God's law against necromancy; nor that that wicked woman could call up the spirit of the sainted prophet. The passage in Chronicles says it was a familiar spirit. It was a wicked spirit of either a wicked dead person or devil who was her familiar spirit. It assumed the appearance of Samuel and answered Saul. Again, the language would prove that the apostate suicide, Saul, went to the abode of the good spirits,—to the spirit of Samuel, for he declared, "You shall be with me to-morrow." Nor have I used the argument sometimes attempted on the assumption that the demons of the New Testament possessions, were always the spirits of the wicked dead. The word demon did generally mean the spirit of a dead person, but not invariably. There are indications that the demons of the New Testament had once been embodied spirits. Their actions seem to be such as would be natural to such spirits, but it can not be made to be absolutely certain. A strong probability can be established, but not a certainty. Hence I shall not use this argument.

My fifth argument is based on the appearance of Moses to our Savior on the mount. We will make no use of the case of Elijah, because he was translated and never saw death. From Deut. 34, we learn that Moses died and was buried in the valley of Moab. Materialists make a great ado over the expressions in Eccl. 3, and Ps. 49, "Man dies as the beast dies." From Is. 65: 14 we learn that Moses died as a beast dies. Hence we have here the strongest possible case of death. Moses had not been resurrected for Christ was the first-fruits of those that slept. 1 Cor. 15, Rev. 1, Col. 1. As Christ had not been resurrected, for he had not died, as he was the first one who was resurrected, Moses was not resurrected. The reader will now turn and read carefully Mat. 17, Mk. 9, and Lk. 9, the accounts of the transfiguration. On these accounts we make these points: (1) Christ was there and was seen by the apostles. (2) The apostles saw each other. (3) They as certainly saw Moses as they saw Christ and each other, for the account is as clear concerning one as the other. (4) God was heard by the apostles. So was Christ. So did they hear each other. (5) They as certainly heard Moses as they heard God, or Christ, or each other; for the account is as strong concerning one as the other. (6) The body of Moses yet lay in the land of Moab; for he had not been resurrected. His spirit that had returned to God who gave it, as a rational, conscious, thinking entity, was here present, and was heard and seen. Paul's language here applies; so does Peter's, and those Scriptures that speak of such departure. The rational, thinking, conscious I of Paul and Peter, or that they refer to in such expressions, or the spirit of Moses was present, or was seen by them in vision, as Elisha's servant saw in vision the angels around Samaria. It was a vision, but they as certainly heard and saw the spirit of Moses as they saw our Savior, Elias, or each other. As certainly heard the spirit Moses, as they heard the spirit God, or heard Christ, Elias, or each other.

So Peter declares in his second letter, 1: 16, "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables (or imaginary phantoms, or imaginary scenes, as materialists claim,) when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty; For he received from God the Father, honor and glory when there came such a voice from the most excellent glory, 'This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased.' And this voice which came from heaven we heard when we were with him in the holy mount." Peter says they have not followed imaginary scenes, but were eye witnesses—that they heard. Hence they saw and heard the spirit of Moses as they heard the spirit God. He was conscious thirteen hundred years after death.

To place before my opponent what I wish him to meet I will present these questions: Was Christ on the mount? Did the disciples see him? Did they see each other? How did they see Christ and each other, and not see Moses? How was Christ there, and how were they there, and Moses not there? Its being a vision cuts no figure in the case. The account is as clear for one as the other. Did they hear Christ? Did they hear God? Did they hear each other? How could they hear God, Christ, and each other and not hear Moses, when the account is as clear for one as the other? Could they see and hear Moses in vision, or otherwise, if he was not there? Did not they hear the spirit Moses as certainly as they heard the spirit God? If Moses was not resurrected, was it not his spirit that was there, a conscious, talking entity?

My opponent says something about want of room. If the reader will count the columns of his first three articles, he will find Br. Himes occupied over ten and a half columns to my six and a half. When he finished his fourth reply he had occupied thirteen to my ten and a half. The heading has to be taken out of my space, and also my first article was merely all preliminary to the argument, and contained but one short argument. If he, in reply to this, will occupy but two columns we will be even in space, and then out of that space should be taken the heading five times inserted, and the space I devoted to preliminaries, still giving him two columns in argument the advantage. I shall insist hereafter on equal space. It is but fair, and it is all I ask.

There are a few ideas in his reply that I will reserve to another article. I have woven my reply to most of them in my argument on the various points I have presented in this article. Then, insisting that my opponent in his reply, reduce his articles to such space as will at least make the space devoted to our articles equal, I will not prolong this article further.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION BY ELD. HIMES.

Eld. Braden's remarks upon the subject of space are calculated to place me in an unfair light before our audience, though, probably, he did not intend they should do so. As the editor of the Standard has remarked, the disparity was the result of a misunderstanding for which I was not to blame. I wish this distinctly understood.

ELD. HIMES' FIFTH RESPONSE.

My brother may well mourn over the infidelity his principles of exegesis have induced—denial of miracles, of special providences, answers to prayer, demoniac possession, the personality of devils—all of which, it is claimed, almost in Eld. Braden's precise words, "are accommodations to the ignorance of those ages." These "virtual infidels," whom the Elder rebukes will doubtless respond, "Physician, heal thyself! These are the legitimate offspring of your own principle of interpretation: you should not disown but adopt them."

My brother's attempt to associate denial of actual communication with the dead with the errors he has cited, is well put and creditable to his ingenuity. The argument needs some support badly: left alone, it would not bear its own weight. One might as well affirm that Moses believed future events could be "divined" by a sheep's liver or a bird's entrails, because he forbade "divining," as that he believed the dead can really communicate with the living, because he forbade necromancy. The inference is entirely unwarrantable.

It will not be denied that there has been in every age a great deal of imposture connected with these practices; that whether or not there have really been spirits in the case, all forms of divination have been fruitful of superstition and idolatry: and that they have flourished best among such ignorant barbarians as my brother describes the Hebrews to have been. Hence every form of witchcraft was forbidden, whether by dexterous impostors, or those who really had familiar spirits. And it is worthy of note that in the only case of necromancy recorded in Scripture my brother concedes that the "spirit" may have been a demon and not human. I am not sure there was any spirit at all in that case; but allowing there was, we have an example of the work of demons in personating the spirits of the dead. All real "spirit manifestations" in every age have been by this class of beings. I agree with my brother that they exist, and doubt not they are of various orders. They are referred to when it is said the Sadducees deny that there is angel or spirit, and not disembodied human souls, as he has asserted. Necromancy then was a profession known by that name. It is admitted that much called necromancy was imposture; that often demons simulated human spirits; in the only definite case in Scripture it is conceded that a demon might have made the manifestation. Is it anything less than absurd, then, to insist that a law against necromancy necessarily implies actual communication with the dead? Moses simply calls an offense by its popular name. The implication essential to the argument does not exist.

I cannot repress my surprise that my brother should go to "the alphabet of revelation," which he has declared can not be relied on for teaching concerning man's nature for two of his first four arguments, and then lay so much stress upon them. In one breath he says the Jews, even down to Hezekiah's day, believed the dead to be "in a dreamy phantom state," "without much activity or knowledge;" and in the next he advances an argument, which, if worth anything, shows that every Jew had a standing advertisement before his eyes, that the spirits of the dead were both conscious and active, "going to and fro in the world," and communicating with the living. I confess this looks to me like blowing both hot and cold. If his idea concerning the alphabet of revelation is sound, his arguments are worthless. If his arguments are reliable, then the notion of "accommodation to the ignorance of those ages," which he has advocated, is false. However, my brother thinks his self-contradictions do not affect the validity of his arguments. But I fail to see how statements directly opposed to each other in terms and sense can both be correct. Either "the alphabet of revelation" clearly reveals man's condition in death, or it does not. I affirm that it does. My brother affirms that it does not, and then, by citing it as proof positive, affirms that it does. I convicted him of a contradiction concerning Ex. 3:6. He now denies the contradiction, and defines his position in an illustration. I suppose the point of his illustration lies in the use of the word am. There is certainly no other analogy. But God did not use that word in Ex. 3:6. It is supplied by the translators. The tense is an inference. If the reader will look up all the passages containing the expression, "I am the God of Abraham" (Gen. 26:24; 28:13; Ex. 3:6; Acts 7:32), they will find that it always occurs with direct reference to certain promises made to the father of the faithful; and except in Mat. 22 the word am is "supplied" in every case. The emphasis is not upon the tense; but in the recognition of an existing relation, or covenant obligation. "All these died in faith, not having received the promise," says Paul. But God's word cannot fail; he is still their God; hence they will rise and receive the promise. So we read (Ex. 2:24), "God remembered his covenant with Abraham;" and (Ex. 3:6), "I am the God of Abraham;" and (vv. 16, 17), say to Israel, "The Lord God of Abraham....appeared to me saying ...I will bring you up out of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanites." Please read the context, and then turn to Gen. 15:18-21, and you will find the covenant here referred to.

Luke says: "Now that the dead are raised even Moses showed at the bush when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham." True, he implies that he is the God of Abraham, but the argument is not from the tense, but from the relation implied. What this relation is Stephen clearly shows (Acts 7:5): "He gave him none inheritance in it, no not so much as to set his foot on. Yet he promised that he would give it to him." Abraham is dead. But God's word cannot fail. Hence Abraham will live again. This is the force of the Savior's argument. "God is not the God of the dead [in either the Sadducean sense of final extinction, or the Pharisaic notion, obtained from the heathen, of a spirit existence] but of the living." How "living?" Let the Savior explain himself: "For all live to him." Not all are actually alive, but all live in his purpose of a resurrection: else there is no force in the argument. The actually alive cannot be raised from the dead. But the God of Abraham is he "who quickeneth [raiseth] the dead, and calleth those things which be not [promised but not fulfilled], as though they were." (Rom. 4:17.)

My brother denies that he contradicted himself on Ex. 3:6. Did he not object to a prolepsis in that passage on the ground "that man knew nothing of the resurrection THEN, and would not so understand the language, and it would be deceptive?" That, "unless he explained his use of the present tense by prolepsis, he would be deceiving man," "then?" Now he asserts, "Man would say, 'He can only say so, when they exist; hence, they now exist;" and then, "I do not claim that Moses apprehended the argument." One of two things is certain: either the argument is not there, or Moses lacked an average amount of sense. But see this. "I wrote to a friend," says my brother in his attempt to clear himself of contradiction, "'I am teaching a Normal class of 165 pupils' ....this sentence does not affirm that there was a Normal class then!" I hope my brother will not risk his reputation as a logician upon that assertion. It is so absurdly ludicrous that it must have been a slip of the pen. Affirm "I am teaching a class," and yet not affirm the existence of the class taught! My brother is not happy in his illustrations. He says: God cannot be the God of Abraham unless Abraham is alive But when God says, "I am the God of Abraham," he does not affirm that he is alive, but only implies it. Is the implication essential, or merely inferential? My brother has affirmed that it is absolutely essential. Will my brother define the difference between an absolutely essential implication and an affirmation?

Concerning the transfiguration there are three opinions: that Moses was present as a disembodied spirit; that he was resurrected; that he was seen in vision. The last is the correct view, and is sanctioned by inspiration. It was necessarily a vision, being the fulfillment of a promise that certain persons should not see death until they first saw "the Son of man coming in his kingdom." Mark! some, not all of them. They all lived into "the kingdom of grace," so called. But as none of them have lived to see the second advent, it follows that they saw the "kingdom of glory" "in vision." In vision, they saw a miniature likeness of the reality. This is clear from Peter's expression in 2 Pet. 1:16—"We have not followed cunningly devised fables when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord." His proposition is—The coming of Christ in power and glory is not a fable. The proof is—"We were eye-witnesses of his majesty." Where? When God "honored him in the holy mount." The transfiguration was not "the appearing and kingdom of Jesus" (2 Tim. 4:1) in reality, but a likeness, or shadow of it. It was not necessary that Jesus should be literally glorified, the texture and hue of his garments actually changed, or that Moses and Elijah should be personally present) and the word used shows they were not. The habitual use of a word in a particular sense by any writer is the best possible authority as to its meaning in a given instance. The word horama occurs in the N. T. as follows:

Mat. 17:9. Tell the vision to no man.
Acts, 7:3. He wondered at the sight.
" 9:10. Said the Lord in a vision.
" 9:12. Hath seen in a vision a man.
" 10:13. He saw in a vision.
" 10:17 This vision which he had.
" 10:19. Peter thought on the vision.
" 11:5. In a trance I saw a vision.
" 12:9. Thought he saw a vision.
" 16:9. A vision appeared to Paul.
" 16:10. After he had seen the vision.
" 18:9. To Paul in the night by vision.

What reason is there for attaching to horama in Mat. 17, a different sense than we do in the other instances of its occurrence? I know of none except the necessities of a theory. No one contends that Paul literally saw Ananias in vision; or that Peter beheld a sheet full of beasts, birds and reptiles. Yet they saw these things. Why then ask if the disciples could see Moses if he was not there? John saw the souls under the altar centuries before they were born—unless they were killed in a pre-existent state. A person or thing that has no existence whatever can be seen in vision. It is true that Peter, James and John with Jesus were literally "in the mount;" but a literally glorified Jesus was not there. In the vision he "appeared in glory;" but who imagines that the style, texture and hue of his clothing was actually changed into some other material—say for an hour, and then restored back again? "There appeared two men." Not a man and a spirit. There is no ghost in the case, but "two men who were Moses and Elias," who were present actually or in vision. When the record says "two men," what right has my brother to say "a man and a spirit?" He cannot bring a single instance in Scripture where a spirit is called a man. I know he asserts it is so; but his assertion is not proof. Of Mat. 10:28 he says soul means spirit "because it cannot mean anything else"—an argument decidedly ad arbitrium. Our readers will notice that his argument from Mat. 10:28 rests upon this naked arbitrary assertion. But as soul in Mat. 10:28 does not mean spirit, but means just what it does in v. 39, his argument falls to the ground.

So of the transfiguration. His argument rests on the words heard and saw; and the vision, he says, "cuts no figure in the case." But the fact that they heard and saw is everything, and proves the same thing, vision or no vision. But is this clear reasoning? Have not actually non-existent beings been seen and heard in vision? Forcing the terms heard and saw proves nothing. If it was a vision the terms are accommodated to the fact according to Scriptural and common usage. If it was not a vision the argument from these words is tautological. The only question is: Was it a vision? Jesus says it was.

I am surprised that my acute opponent should deny that Moses might have been resurrected. Was not Jairus' daughter, the widow's son, and Lazarus raised? He admits that Moses died, as the beast dies, and was buried. But, he thinks he has proved that Moses survived his body as a rational spirit. But, according to his own showing, the brute dies as Moses died. Hence the brute survives the death of its body as a rational spirit. Moses' death was premature, and a punishment. The Moses that sinned was punished. It went "ill with him"—the rational conscious Moses—his spirit, my brother says, because no other part of him could sin. This died; this was buried; and if on the mount, was a resurrected, not a disembodied Moses.

My brother says he shall assume certain points as conceded by me, because I did not challenge them in my last reply. He has never "challenged" my my argument from Mat. 10:28, that God can and will do the very thing man cannot do—literally destroy soul and body. He no doubt has reasons for passing it by, but I should be ashamed to assert that he has conceded it. I know by the scope of his argument that he has not. So he knows by the scope of my fourth response that I conceded nothing. I do not think every repetition of a string of assertions with no new argument needs an answer. My brother seems to think if he repeats an assertion times enough it will thus become true. He says my answers are all futile. He had better hasten on then and give us more of the "twenty arguments" he has, and not devote so much space to replies to me.

I wish to emphatically challenge one assertion my brother has repeated without proof after my protest. I deny definitely that the Sadducees denied the resurrection on the ground that there was no survival of a rational, conscious spirit. They denied it, because Moses did not teach it, as they affirmed—just as my brother has said (Hughey Debate p. 521.) "We affirm that there is not a single promise in the books of the Mosaic law and commands that reaches beyond this life. The later prophets unfolded the future world to some extent, but its existence is not suggested in the commands, rewards, threats and punishments of the Mosaic law."

A word concerning the spirit, and I have done, though I would like to meet many other points had I space to do so. He says: "Is it (the spirit) an entity? If not is it a non-entity?" My dear brother, you have appealed for honest work. Paul says, "Their thoughts meanwhile accusing or else excusing." Were the thoughts entities or non-entities? If non-entities did they exist? Are thoughts existences? Man is an entity. While animated by the spirit and his organs in a natural condition he can think, feel and know. His faculty for knowledge or his mind is sometimes called soul, sometimes spirit, sometimes heart, and by other terms. But these are all secondary or figurative senses of the words, soul and spirit in themselves have no more intelligence than the heart or the reins. It is the man that knows, feels, thinks: and a dead man knows nothing. The Scriptures my brother cites containing the word spirit are predicated of the mind of man, not as an entity, but as an attribute of his being.

Have Religion for Yourselves.

How important it is that we should have religion for ourselves. Only by doing this can we be assured of its reality. How often during the sixteen years of my Christian experience I have heard professors say—"I am just about sick of religion." Why? "Well, look at so and so—how they live. They call themselves Christians. In fact look at most all your Christians. The world is far better to deal with. If you want justice in any business transaction, always go to people of the world, for if you get Christians you'll surely get beat every time." I have often heard these, with many like expressions, and admit some truth in these statements as far as my observation has gone with regard to professors of religion. It is a lamentable fact, there are scores and hundreds of such in the various denominations, all over the land. I have heard some of them say in the meetings, "I love my enemies;" and yet, I have seen them repeatedly dodge around the aisle, and go home in a different direction from what they were accustomed to, rather than come in contact with men who differ with them even in non-essential points. But, dear friends, these facts are no arguments whatever against the reality of the blessed religion of Jesus. Do bad greenbacks prove there are none genuine? No, but the contrary. Adverse circumstances and other people's faults, are always stumbling blocks to professors; never to God's children. Many do great works in his name, but it is only his children that know him, or desire to be conformed to his image. To me there is a real conviction about Christ and his cross, which makes me exclaim from the depths of my soul, "I know in whom I have believed."

I find so many people who are very pretty professors, and have such an easy-going, convenient religion, they can get out of Christ, and into Christ; and into Christ, and out of Christ, and continually repeat the same performance. It is a religion which they can leave off just when they please, because they got it themselves. They have not been begotten by the Spirit of God. I have had a great deal of conversation with such lately, and find they utterly deny the Spirit's work upon the heart in conversion. They saw the word said so and so, took hold of it with their hands and heads, went and taught it just as they understood it. My heart was filled with Bible knowledge from my earliest childhood, but it had no effect on my heart or life; it remained dead until the life-giving power of the Spirit came into my soul, took the things of Christ and showed them unto me. Oh! how slight and beautiful the precious word has looked to me since, where all before was dark and misty. These things are worse than Latin grammar to the world and "professors." May the Lord open the eyes of their understanding; may his dear children get into Christ's company more by pondering on his precious words, following him on his weary pilgrimage to and fro among those who rejected him; then remember it is the very same Jesus, who says to his pilgrim children now, "Lo! I am with you always!" FANNY REYNOLDS.

The Promise and Oath to Abraham.

It is a remarkable fact that the writers who have very recently discovered a new theory of God's promise to Abraham, and are making it a subject of special discussion, do not give us a clear and distinct definition of its terms. They do not tell us what they understand the blessing to be, who is the seed, and in what sense we are to understand the word "all." Yet they ask with an air of seeming triumph—"Does God mean what he says?" And, "Has the promise been fulfilled."

To the first I answer in the affirmative, and to the second question, the answer will depend upon their definitions—let them explain themselves and I am ready to answer.

It appears to me that they sometimes understand the blessing to be the salvation of all the families of the earth, with a few exceptions—which they have no right to make if the word "all" is to be understood in its most comprehensive sense;—sometimes the preaching of the gospel to all the families of the earth, in its purity;—and sometimes the possession of the earth, seems to be their meaning. Let it be borne in mind that whatever the blessing is, every son and daughter of Adam—antediluvian, post-diluvian, Jew and Gentile—is to enjoy it. Every human being, who has never heard of the Savior of the world, must hear of him, and, therefore, all mankind, who have died in ignorance of him, will be raised from the dead, and have an offer of salvation, and that by the immortal saints in the ages to come. But they are not only to have the offer of a blessing, but the blessing itself. They are to have what God promised to Abraham. It would be no blessing to a dead sinner to restore him to life, and then offer him eternal life if he did not accept it. The blessing, whatever it is, must come upon all the families of the earth, a real and substantial blessing. Light is wanted on this point; we want definitions, precise and intelligible, so that we can argue understandingly, and come to correct conclusions. The reader is referred to the following paragraph in the last number of the Bible Examiner, for some little information on the subject of promises and oaths.

"Now if the Lord gave unto Israel all the land which he sware to give unto their fathers," Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, "and they dwelt therein," it was not the fancy "new earth;" the land was the veritable earth as it is; and "the fathers," Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, will yet literally dwell therein, as God's oath cannot fail—it is impossible for God to lie. When that promise and oath of God is fulfilled to "the fathers"—as it will be—the promise and oath of "all families of the earth" being "blessed" in Abraham and his seed, will have just as literal a fulfillment, whether sleeping now in the dust of the earth, or living on the earth. "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" (Gen. 18:14). Sarah may laugh at the apparent impossibility, but God will make it manifest to the laughing Sarahs, and they will give up their unbelief."

Here it is implied that there is to be no new earth, which the Examiner calls a "fancy earth." And that Abraham and his seed, and all the families of the earth both dead and living, will come into possession of the earth just as it is. This, it may be inferred, is his idea of the blessing. But as I am charged with continual misrepresentation, no matter how copious the extracts from the publications of the votaries of the new theory, I invoke more light on their views of the promise. N. FIELD.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection. These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents. It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 2 for 10 cents. 30 copies for $1

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c. Every one should have a copy.

Good Tidings. By Couch, Sheldon, Grant and Himes. Prophecy and theology. A valuable book. Paper, 50c. Cloth, $1.

Advent Christian Times.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 20, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, ... EDITOR

THE Liberal Christian avows that it never knew a minister who did not, in proportion to his means, give more money every year for religious purposes than was given by the wealthiest of his parishioners. If this is'nt exactly true, it is very near the truth.

SOME one wants to know if Mrs. H. B. Stowe is a Spiritist. She does not belong with the people who bear that name: but she teaches that the spirits of the dead are all about us, and that they "commune" with the living; guide and influence them. And this is very nearly Spiritism.

"IT is terrible to think of the social corruption of which these things are the symptom; but we cannot mend matters by shutting our eyes," says the New York Tribune, speaking of some of the criminal developments of the past year. But too many do just this thing: shut their eyes, and cry—The world is growing better!

IN the Herald of Gospel Liberty for Sept. 15, 1808, the second number of that journal we find this passage. "Christ mentions signs in the stars. Whether there have been any particular signs in the stars, I am not able to determine, but while there are so many signs we may expect them soon." In 1833 this sign came, a wonderful accomplishment of the prophetic declaration that "the stars of heaven should fall" like figs from a tree shaken of a mighty wind. This sign surely is in the past.

A MISSIONARY in Wyoming remarks: Various families were visited. Among others was a young man, whom a pious mother, in far-off New Jersey, keeps well supplied with church papers. If Christian parents only realized the extent to which religious papers are a safeguard, they would oftener subscribe for one or more to be sent to their absent children.

—Take that home to yourself, parent. See that your children when they go away from home have a good Advent paper sent to them regularly. It will do them good. They will at first perhaps receive it for your sake; but in time will come to love it for the truth's sake.

ZION'S Herald says—"It is hardly necessary to say that Jesus Christ teaches the doctrine of endless hell. No scholar denies it." Was Bp. Newton a scholar? Dr. Whately, or Priestley (one of the most learned men of his age)? Are Constable and Leask, and White, and Young, and Judson, and Dobney, and Barlow, and Litton, and Ives none of them entitled to be named among scholars? But allowing they and others are not scholars; have the Methodists taken the ground that "the scholars" are to be the standards of belief; and "the common people" must bow to their decisions in matters of doctrine? The Bible is the people's book more than any other. Let none sign away their right to think for themselves.

CONCENTRATION of aim and close union are qualities which produce great results in every field of life. But the union must be in heart, a unity of idea and purpose in order to insure the results. Two cannot walk together unless they be agreed. If their ideas lead in different directions, sooner or later the latent antagonism will be developed. Oil and water won't mix as oil and water. True you can make soap of them by adding potash. So you can mix truth and error by using the potash of compromise: but you get a new compound, and instead of plain truth have—soft soap.

SOME astute critic asks: 1. Did not the Pharisees believe that the unrighteous dead were consciously suffering in hades, and that the heirs of the promise were as consciously happy?,

2. Did they not call the home of the departed righteous, 'Abraham's bosom?'

3. Did not Christ apparently endorse their faith, and if it were not true, was he not guilty of 'deceiving the people?'

—Did not the Pharisees believe "Abraham's bosom" was inside the earth?

If Christ "apparently endorsed" their notion of a conscious intermediate state, did he not endorse as fully their notion of the place of their confinement?

Will those who endorse the Pharisaic doctrine please come out and preach it in its purity, and not, (pardon the expression, it is so apt in the connection,) "whip the devil around the stump"—preach so much as suits their theory and suppress the remainder?

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 31. On my way to Monticello, I called on Br. Daniel Warren at Brodhead, Wis. Here I found a protracted meeting in progress. Br. G. G. Godfrey commenced a meeting here some two weeks since which proved a success. Six heads of families had come out for God and truth. Br. Howard of Magnolia is present and helping. He was converted from infidelity three years ago under the labors of Eld. Adrian. He is a clear-headed, logical, and sound preacher, and God is with him. The cause in this neighborhood is prospering. At 6 p. m. by request of Brn. Howard, and Warren, I preached in the Advent Hall, which was filled, from Is. 44: 5. "One shall say I am the Lord's." Deep solemnity pervaded the audience. The interest was such, that I was solicited to remain and speak another night.

THURSDAY, Feb. 1. Visited and prayed with many families to-day, and find a good state of things. Among the rest I called on Sr. Sheldon who with her family, is in health. I have been very warmly greeted here, and my call is esteemed to be providential. I may remark in this place that the brethren here speak in high terms of Br. Geo. Thompson of Arena. He has with all his infirmity caused by chronic rheumatism, been doing a great work in this section. The Lord continue to prosper him. In attending to a batch of letters to-day, a dear brother who lately came into the faith writes: "It does seem to me that I have had to press my way to the gospel of the kingdom through more obstacles than any man I ever saw. No sooner had my first letter reached the readers of THE TIMES than letters came in from every direction. I got one from —— I suppose you know him. It did not have just the right ring, and so I did not answer it. Next comes the Seventh day Adventists. I thought their main question, the Jewish Sabbath, all foolishness, because "we are not under the law, but grace." Then came the "Latter-day Saints," or Mormons. And last the "Age to Come," and the advocates of the Jew's return to Palestine, and another day of probation after Christ comes. Well, suffice it to say that I found in THE TIMES the truth, as I understand it; and so I take my stand with the Adventists." Friends who get light on the Lord's coming and kingdom, will meet with many attempts to draw them away. We can only say to them—"Think for yourself!"

FRIDAY, Feb. 2. Visited Br. Button, out in the country, with Brn. Howard and Warren, Sr. Tepple and others. We enjoyed a pleasant and profitable time. Br. Button and his family are real Adventists, and take a great interest in all that concerns the church here, and the cause in general. They feel the great value of "the blessed hope."

At night I spoke from Ezk. 33: 9–11. "Why will ye die?" Deep feeling for sinners, and much earnest entreaty by new converts and older believers for souls to come to Jesus. I learn that the Baptists, Methodists, and Congregationalists, are holding a Union meeting here with success. They invited the Adventists, to unite with them, which was kindly appreciated; but as their own meetings were in progress with good results it was not thought best to make a change.

SATURDAY, Feb. 3. Full audience and deep feeling. The Baptist minister was in and took part, also some from the Methodists and Congregationalists. They seemed to be filled with the spirit and love of Jesus, and in earnest for the salvation of souls. On Sunday we had a good day in considering the signs of the times and the advent.

I have had the pleasure of spending several days with Eld. G. G. Godfrey. He has done a good work here. He has the right spirit, and is a plain common sense Scriptural preacher. He sees fruit wherever he labors, and he is an example to the believers, and to all. He is much esteemed in the Wisconsin Conference, and in the churches. But his health in this climate is poor, and he thinks of a removal to California. He possesses the means of living, and desires to locate in some part of that State, where he can have health and do the most good. He will make a true yoke-fellow for Brn. Reed, Fassett, and Wilson. He is an Adventist, and our brethren in California may rely upon him not only as a true and faithful brother, but a healthful and successful worker. Any who wish to communicate with him may address him at Evansville, Wis.

My attention was called to the late decease of Mrs. Malinda Hitchcock. She died at Exeter, Wis. Jan. 9, 1872, age 85 years and four months. She died at the residence of her son Eld. N. A. Hitchcock. Sr. Cline, her oldest daughter living, said to me, "She died in the full faith of the Lord's soon coming." Near the close of her life being asked by Sr. Cline, if she felt peace and assurance—"Oh! yes!" said she: "My life is hid with Christ in God." She then requested that the preacher should speak from 1 Cor. 15: 49: "And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." This is sensible, and real hope. She said, "I shall not sleep long!" And so another dear mother in Israel sleeps in Jesus.

MONDAY, Feb. 5. Left Brodhead in company with Br. Geo. M. Button, who is on his way to Milton College, where he is prosecuting his studies. He is a promising young man with good natural endowments, and best of all is consecrated to God. He is looking to the ministry, and has already spoken with acceptance. I encouraged him to prosecute his studies for the present.

Returned home at night mid a heavy snow storm, finding all well.

TUESDAY, Feb. 6. Br. Peter Vos returned to-day from Kalamazoo, with a good report of the commencement of his mission among his countrymen, (the Dutch). There are some two thousand of this people in the vicinity of Kalamazoo, Mich. Br. Vos, will labor among them as a missionary. He is also translating some tracts to circulate among them. This is our first effort to help the Dutch people. Br. Vos, being of that nation, and deeply interested for his people is laboring to give them light on the coming of Jesus.

A PARAPHRASE.

Now if Christ be preached that his body rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the body. But if there be no resurrection of dead bodies, then is Christ's body not risen: and if Christ's body be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain: yea, and we are also found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ's body, which (Paul inadvertently (?) said, "whom,") he raised not up if so be that the dead bodies rise not. For if the dead bodies do not rise, then is not Christ's body raised: and if Christ's body be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then the bodies which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ concerning our bodies, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ's body risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of the bodies that slept. For since by man came death of the body, by man came also the resurrection of the body. For as in Adam all bodies die, so in Christ shall all bodies be made alive. But every man's body in its own order: Christ's body the first fruits; afterward the bodies of those that are Christ's, at his coming. . . . Else what shall they do that are baptised for the dead bodies, if the body rises not at all? Why then are they baptised for the dead body? . . . If after the manner of men I have fought with wild beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead body rises not? Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow our bodies die. . . . But some man will say, How are the bodies raised up, and with what body do they come?

This is a sample of the nonsense immaterialism would make of the Scriptures. Paul is represented as fully believing that at death he would go to be with Christ, and at the same time made to say that all his sufferings are lost if "the body" is not raised: if the body rises not all hope is gone; let us adopt the Epicurean philosophy: eat and drink, for to-morrow we die. If the soul is immortal how absurd to reason that if the body is not raised our faith is vain and we are of all men most miserable. Why, most immaterialists, heathen and Christian, believe the soul to be better off without the body. There is no way to make sense of Paul's argument upon the resurrection except upon the premise that it is man that dies, and man that is raised from the dead.

UNION.

In these days of superabundant talk about Christian union, it is well enough to look a few plain facts in the face. Says an exchange:

A writer in the Standard recalls a conversation between a Baptist and a Pedobaptist minister: the latter was urging union; "they must all come together and be one. In order to do this we must all give up something." The Baptist pastor said to him: "My brother, I will tell you what I will do. You say we must all give up something. I will give up my my communion, if you will give up your baptism." The Pedobaptist brother thought for a moment and then said; "I'll tell you what it is, Br. B. I can't give up anything!" This is about a fair specimen of all the men and papers that I have known that have so much to say about Christian union and the bigotry of their neighbors. When brought to the real point of decision, they cannot give up anything themselves; but their neighbors, the poor, ignorant, benighted and bigoted ones who differ from them, can give up everything. It is very easy to make change, if it is made with other people's money.

We are for peace with all men; but we are for purity more than peace. We have no idea of giving up a single item of the grand principles that made us Adventists for the sake of union with anybody. If Adventism can be given up, compromised for the sake of union, then it had better be dispensed with altogether, and we go back en masse to the churches we came from, or where our predilections would carry us. If Adventism is true, it is our duty to contend earnestly—but courteously, in a Christian manner—for it. If it is not true, we should abandon it altogether. We quite agree with the Christian Radical in its notice of a religious journal that announced that it would "have no controversy with any one."

"A religion that has not in it the militant element is an exotic in this sphere. Christ and Paul and Luther, and all the martyrs did flame in battle. We advise Mr. —— to have the —— published on the other side of Jordan, 'where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.'"

The Radical is not very apt in its citation, but it means all right, supposing the above words to refer to heaven, though Job speaks of the grave. But the intended sentiment is good. If good wholesome truth is preached, it will stir up opposition; and the opposition must be met, or we must stop preaching the truth. It has always been so, and always will be so to the end of the world. Let us accept the situation and be faithful to duty as the soldiers of Jesus, as in every other respect.

A DOUBTFUL CASE.

Earthly affairs are speedily to be wound up, if The World's Crisis newspaper is to be believed. Peruse this, oh, careless reader, and shake:

> "The cup of iniquity is about full; the harvest is nearly ripe; and soon the heavenly reapers will descend to begin their great work of separating the wheat from the tares. It is a solemn hour in which we are living; yet but few realize how near we are living to the end of the present dispensation. It is time to be wide awake, gazing from the watch-towers for the first glimmer of light from the dawn of the eternal morning. Let us be all ready to depart at a moment's warning."

We do not believe one word of this. We have not the slightest idea that the world is about to be destroyed or made over; that the wheat and tares are about to be separated. Those who do so believe, we have observed, never have the least doubt of the branch of the cereal family to which they belong; we never knew a millennarian who thought himself one of the tares. We affirm that one who is working well to-day may calmly trust the hidden season of to-morrow, and that one who passes his time in scaring nervous people out of their senses may be grievously mistaken as to the quantity of treasures which he is laying up in heaven.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Now we suggest, in all kindness, that the Tribune's view of the case is a mistaken one. No doubt there are a great many theoretical Adventists who are among the tares; but one is not likely to say much about the separation as an event at hand unless he is convinced that he at least is ready for it. Hence it may be true that all the Millennarians the Tribune has known were in their own opinion ready. They ought to be if they are not. But in its last sentence the incongruity of the Tribune's ideas is most apparent. "One who is working well to-day may calmly trust the hidden season of to-morrow." Very good. Now what? "One that passes his time in scaring nervous people out of their senses," etc. Now it appears to us that if said "nervous people" are of the class "working well to-day," they will not be scared at the prospect of a better world. And, on the other hand, that if they are not "working well to-day" they ought to be scared, not out of their senses, but into the good sense of living for God, and "waiting for his Son from heaven." Don't be alarmed, neighbor, about people losing their senses. There's a good deal of clap-trap in that kind of talk. True, some have lost their wits investigating the question of the end of the world. But so have some in every religion, and in business, and politics, and love. But that proves nothing. If talking of the Judgment scares nervous people out of their wits, it may be set down as certain that said persons have been using their wits for very poor purposes.

RESURRECTION.

The body, once buried, shall rise again. That is, it shall decompose in the earth; it shall mingle with the soil; it shall become part of nature's mold; it shall receive the rain from heaven; it shall quicken and revive, atom by atom; it shall struggle up regerminant to the surface; and finally it shall appear again to human eyes,—here in a blade of grass, there in a head of clover; here in a trailing vine, there in a spreading oak. This is the only resurrection of the body in which we have any faith.—Golden Age.

—And a great many professed Christians agree with the Age in its theory of a vegetable resurrection. Men rise as wheat, squashes, corn, potatoes, roses, turnips and the like. And this is the glorious doctrine of 1 Cor. 15. And the only future life is as an intangible spirit, wandering through the spheres. Death is the gate to life; the resurrection a delusion; the judgment a farce; and the saints' song, "We shall live and reign on the earth," mere fustian. This is the new wine;—give us the old: "Thy dead men shall live again,"—a very different idea from the notion, "Their spirits shall never d[illegible]o; the dead, once alive, shall "li[illegible]gain." This will be the resurrection

HOW IT LOOKS TO OTHERS.

A Disciple writes to the Christian Standard concerning the sketch of our life published in that journal just prior to the commencement of the discussion, in the following candid fashion:

Supposing that the object of publishing the discussion is to present the great and important truths of "the gospel of the grace of God" in contrast with the soulless, Christless dogma of materialism, to numerous readers—inaccessible by any other means, we are constrained to look upon the publication of Br. G's "Recollection" just at this time as most inopportune. If J. V. H. possesses a moity of the shrewdness requisite to success as a debater, he certainly will make use of the circumstances to convince his friends that we, as a people, are unwilling to have the discussion go before our brethren on its own merits, and such a plea, with many, particularly with those already prejudiced in H's favor, will have the merit of plausibility.

In the latter part of Br. G's "Recollection," he commences a paragraph with, "I remember one instance of the want of strict honesty on the part of an Advent lecturer." Said lecturer is accused of having garbled extracts from an author, and persisted in doing so even after he had been convicted of his wrong. The paragraph winds up with, "I refer to these facts not to charge Adventist lecturers with a want of integrity," etc. etc.

Now several questions force themselves on the mind in reference to this lecturer—accused of want of strict honesty, who persistently made use of garbled extracts from authors, but whom Br. G. would not charge with a want of integrity.

Now was this conglomerate character, this bundle of contradictions, was he endorsed by Eld. Himes? If not why make Eld. H. a scape-goat for the vagaries of another?

MISSION AMONG THE DUTCH.

Br. Peter Vos, formerly of Amsterdam, educated a Papist, having embraced the Advent doctrine, is desirous of preaching it to his countrymen. He will locate for the present at Kalamazoo, Mich., and work among his people in that city and vicinity, there being something like 2000 of them. Br. Vos is translating some of our best tracts into Dutch for their use, and is going to preach among them from house to house, and otherwise as the door may open.

For a time Br. Vos will need some help. He only asks for his expenses or enough to pay his board. We therefore appeal for aid in this matter. Send to Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover St. Boston, Mass., who is Treasurer of the Mission Society. And those who wish to help us print the tracts can send direct to us.

REMEMBER THE POOR.

We have received a circular from Br. E. P. Woodward, in behalf of Sr Mary I. Herron, widow of the late Br. Wm. B. Herron, who was the friend of our little ones, as the editor of the Young Pilgrim. Sr. Herron is sick, in need of help, and is worthy. Send to E. P. Woodward, Maplewood, Mass.

Shot-gun Preachers.

I have no wish to put a hook in the jaw of any man that God wants as a preacher; but I do object to these everlasting shot-gun preachers who aim everywhere but hit nowhere. If such preachers would omit all their prefaces, preliminaries, prefatory remarks, apologies and excuses, and begin their subject at once, keep to the subject while they talk, and when they get through would sit down, they would add very greatly to their effectiveness as gospel teachers. While there is so much truth to spread, there is no need of spreading it so thin that it will not be felt; nor while it is so plentiful is there any use of dealing it out in homeopathic doses, and sugar-coated at that. The shot-gun preacher aims in a single discourse to meet and refute the errors of Judaism, Mohammedanism, Spiritualism, Swedenborgianism, and every erroneous ism that he can think of. But in doing this he wastes his ammunition and kills no game. This scattering style of preaching is more apt to scatter errors than to kill them. They who preach thus should remember, too, that the gift of continuance is not the highest gift of a successful ministry. Let them exchange their scattering shot-gun style for the minie rifle style, which aims to hit, and hits to kill.

D. COGSWELL.

A Sermon for the Times.

The trouble lies back of all theories, all talk of reform and liberty and law, and what not. The advocacy of free divorce, or whatever form this horror of the day assumes, is only possible when one's apprehension of life is false from the beginning. They talk about one's life being blasted by an uncongenial union; of failing thus to accomplish the purposes of life; of an empty existence—as if a life teeming with duty could be, by any means, called vacant; as if a career could be blasted by infelicity, or an existence fail of its true purposes because of the burden laid upon it! Who shall limit the purposes of his existence? Who shall flee, a coward, from the cross laid upon him, and declare that he does well? Surely not he who believes that giving is gaining; that only he finds his life who loses it.

The modern world is coming back to the first principles in the means of attack, the art of defense, in the building of ships, bolts, earthworks, fish-shaped hulls, and in many other things;—the newest is the oldest. So in religion, the "reformers" are preaching the ancient worship of that of self and sense; and the unselfish Christ, as of old, puts these false prophets to shame.—From the "Old Cabinet," Scribner's, for March.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Our gleanings last week were crowded out.——Br. John North will welcome any Advent preacher passing through Mechanicsburg, Ill.——The new chapel at Volga, Ind. was dedicated last Sunday. Brn. Field, Cass and Green were expected to be present.——A Waterbury (Ct.) paper, noticing Mr. Constable's work on the future punishment, says: "This book has unsettled one half of the orthodox clergymen in the State of Connecticut on this subject." We hope this is literally true, and that they may soon be settled on the truth.——Br. Mackie has been with the church at Lapeer, Mich. some two weeks. Good interest. Six or more converted.——Br. Koney and Br. and Sr. Janes have been preaching at Elkport, Iowa. Fourteen have confessed Christ.——Br. D. S. Clark baptised twelve on Sunday week, at Earlham, Io. Strong opposition to the truth there.——Br. E. McCullock thinks of giving up his charge at Nevada, O. soon. He is an effective worker. We trust he will be kept West.——Wayne Co. Iowa seems to be "good ground" for the seed of Adventism. It springs up and bears fruit. Br. S. K. Gibson has been holding two and three meetings a day for some time. Some forty have made a good profession, and twenty-seven united with the church.——There is some revival interest at Sandy Hill, N. Y.——Br. G. W. Hurd, and his niece Sr. A. E. Rathbun have just closed a series of meetings in Hancock Co, Ill. Over forty have been added to the church. The interest was wide and deep, and many pronounced it the best meeting ever held in that region.——Br. A. A. Wilbur, Iowa, we regret to learn, is in feeble health. Pray for him. Sickness and death are making sad inroads among our workers.——Sr. Fuller of De-Kalb, one of the choice ones of earth, died quite suddenly last week. She had so lived that she was ready at any moment.——Br. Stephenson and others at Columbus, Mich., are talking of putting up a chapel. Other churches won't allow our views presented in their buildings. We trust the talk will soon culminate in doing.——The interest at Brodhead, Wis. continues, and the meetings are full of life and power.——Br. D. Mathewson is preaching "all about" in LaPorte Co. Ind.—four times a week besides Sundays. Good interest. We hear the people at Stillwell have shown their gratitude in a tangible shape by a liberal and hearty donation.——We are glad to hear Br. Peter Mitson of Minn. is to devote most of his time to the ministry of the word. All the laborers are needed all the time. See notice.——The Swede brethren of Illinois have commenced the publication of Whitmore's work in their own language—an important and laudable enterprise.——We learn with deep sorrow that Br. Thomas Davidson, one of our most esteemed correspondents has been called to mourn the loss of his lovely little daughter. Death was never busier among us as a people. May the chastening we are undergoing make us all better, and lead to deeper consecration.——Br. Benj. Butler, formerly of Mass. is now preaching in Pennsylvania and New York. His P. O. is Westfield, Pa.——Br. J. W. Taylor is engaged in a discussion through the columns of the Hornellsville (N. Y.) Tribune with Judge Barlow, upon the nature of the soul. We hear he is to discuss the authenticity of the Scriptures in Westfield, Pa. next month, commencing the 4th. His opponent is Mr. Underwood.——Br. A. E. Babcock has just closed an excellent meeting at Millville, O. Ten baptised and fifteen added to the church. A former Lutheran minister was convicted of and converted to the truth. Br. Babcock is now at Nevada.——Br. and Sr. Seymour are at New Hartford, Iowa, holding a protracted meeting.——Sr. Mansfield is in feeble health: has not preached for two months, and been confined to her couch much of the time. Pray for her.——The snow blockade interrupts our California correspondence. A single letter has got through—a month old. Br. Grant had just got to work. A tremendous opposition was forming, which we take to be a good sign.——Br. G. W. Crosby of Arkansas is to have a discussion with Eld. Hamby, a Methodist minister, in April. Arkansas is waking up to "present truth."——Br. Sheldon, in the Banner reports good success in the Southern field. At Cartersville, Ga. he obtained fifteen subscribers for the Banner at the close of his meetings.——The Advance says of Constable's work: "It presents, perhaps, as strong an argument as can be made in favor of the doctrine of annihilation, and to which no abler reply has probably been drawn out, than the paper on that subject, by Prof. S. C. Bartlett, D. D."—A very safe saying in view of the fact that no other reply has been attempted, at least in this country.——The ministers meeting of the Eastern Pennsylvania Winebrennarians will discuss among others the following [illegible]tions at their next meeting: "Is the [illegible] theory of the resurrection sustained by the Scriptures? Is materialism without sin to be the future home of the saints? Does the expression, 'Eternal life,' describe the nature or condition of an entity or thing?" The two last topics are not over clear in statement, but the point is clear: these things must be met.——Br. Ongley baptised four at Buffalo, N. Y. not long since.

The Times.

AT HOME.

" " " Chicago spent more than $300 in postage on Valentines this year. No credit to her, though it helps pay the expenses of carrying the mails.

" " " We may have another Mexican war, or else more peaceful "annexation," as the stealing of territory is called. The troubles on the Mexican frontier still continue, and matters there seem to be drifting into a border warfare as the only way of repressing the Mexican raids of armed men which have of late become so frequent. The Governor of Sonora, whence the marauding parties come, having been appealed to in vain, our Minister in Mexico has been directed to call the attention of that Government to the facts; but, in the disordered state of the country, it is doubtful whether it is powerful enough to put down these distant irregularities.

" " " There was a most remarkable display of aurora, or northern lights, says a late N. Y. Times, last night, attracting universal attention from those who happened to be abroad. The north-western quarter of the heavens was, about 7 o'clock, overspread with a delicate emerald light, disposed in one great band of color, with the edges gradually softened down until merged in the surrounding atmosphere. The most striking portion of the display was, however, found in the south-eastern quarter, which was magnificently illumed by heavy masses of red and crimson color, enlivened at short intervals by brief glints of yellowish light. So intense was this illumination that many persons supposed that a great fire was raging back of Brooklyn. Indeed the brilliancy of the display in that quarter had the appearance of a vivid reflection from a conflagration, only deeper, thus misleading the casual observer, though the frequent lifting of the light and the remarkable changes soon indicated its precise character. Viewed from the deck of an East River ferry-boat, the aurora afforded a rare spectacle, the dark masses of shipping and storehouses lending additional effect to the display.

ABROAD.

" " " Dispatches from Teheran state that the famine in Persia continues unabated, many persons dying daily.

" " " In France—intrigues, plots and political schemings. Bourbons, Bonapartists and Republicans, besides others, do the work. An order has been passed fixing upon all tax bills the phrase—Caused by the war of 1870, commenced by a Bonaparte, or words to that effect. The design is doubtless to foster hatred of the Prussians and the Imperialists.

" " " The Russian national party will not make friends with Germany. They are not hostile to Western civilization, for Katkoff, for instance, is in the habit of highly recommending English political institutions; but their feelings toward the German nation have been embittered by the rule to which the Russians were subjected, during a long period, by the predominance of German civilization in the Baltic Provinces, and it will be a long time before these feelings will vanish. So says the Tribune Berlin correspondent.

" " " Prussia is out of sorts with Sweden. A Stockholm paper published some innuendoes to the effect that neighbors of the new empire who didn't want to be slaves would do well to exercise that "eternal vigilance" which "is the price of liberty." The imperial minister of Sweden was the writer of the articles in question, and the charge is not very definitely denied. Hence, thoughts arise in the German heart; and a grudge will be laid up for future use. Bye and bye, when Denmark shall have been absorbed, Sweden's turn to defend herself may come.

" " " There is an immense amount of talk and great display of bad temper in England over the claim presented by the United States, before the Geneva Board of Arbitration for indirect damages. As yet the American press show but little ill feeling; but the continued exhibition of feeling on the other side of the water cannot fail, sooner or later, to beget a like spirit here. Present indications are, that the United States government will not retract its claim, but announce a determination to abide the decision of the arbitrators, while England will repudiate the treaty under which the arbitrators were appointed; and thus the old sore will be opened again, none the less sore for the treatment received. The world is evidently not yet ready to settle its little difficulties by Boards of Arbitration. Those who have cried "Peace! peace!" may yet see war instead.

" " " The late gale in England exceeded in violence any tempest known there since 1842. One of the tall pinnacles of the buttress of the central tower of Westminster was blown down. The mass, weighing over two tons, fell into the street, and smashed stonework and massive iron girders in its descent. The South-western railway was choked by the crumbling embankments, and travel entirely stopped. Many of the villages near the Severn were almost submerged. The flood in the Vale of Glamorganshire is greater than has been experienced for forty years. Trees were torn up by the roots in various places, and carried considerable distances. Many vessels on the coast were sunk at their moorings, and great damage was apprehended in the North Sea. Telegraph poles went down in all directions, and the reading of the barometer when the gale was at its hight marked 28.30—lower than has been recorded for [illegible] a long day. The destruction of chi[illegible] pots and tiled roofs in London and [illegible] towns is described as prodigous, and many buildings, public and private, were seriously injured.

" " " A few months ago, the Chief Justice of India, Norman, was assassinated by a Mohammedan fanatic named Abdallah. The murderer was caught, tried, and sentenced to expatiate his crime by death on the gallows. He seemed ready to meet his doom calmly and bravely; and British ingenuity, longing to terrify the apparently dauntless mind, hit on the cold-blooded expedient of burning the body after life had fled. According to Abdallah's views, this killed soul as well as body, and he died in abject terror, to the delight of his executioners. The English press upheld the deed. "We have found the Achilles' heel in the panoply of fanaticism," said a leading journal; "we have put an end to the assassin's trade forever. No bigot will imagine it to be his duty to slay an Englishman, when destruction, not only of the body, but, (as he thinks,) of the soul, is sure to follow the crime." The prophet was short-sighted. The burning of Abdallah may have terrified him, but not his fellows. His death has been speedily and terribly avenged. The Governor General of India, Lord Mayo, was stabbed on the 8th inst., by a Mohammedan, and died almost instantly. The criminal is in the hands of the authorities. The next question will be, of course, his punishment. Will they make a new attempt to find the Achilles' heel, in the panoply of fanaticism? One man has been hanged, and the body burnt; within a week, fifty others have been blown to the four winds from cannon mouths; if these plans have failed, the auto-da-fe of Spain yet remains. It is only a step farther. The plea of necessity, which has excused all judicial barbarism hitherto, may be used to justify this also.—Chi. Tribune.

" " " If a writer in the English periodical, Nature, is correct in his views, the open Polar Sea, unless discovered soon, will exist no more. Land is said to be rising everywhere between the Pole and the 57th parallel, and the greatest movement is at the Pole itself. Some interesting facts are quoted in support of this theory. Pliny says that Scandinavia is an archipelago, and speaks of bold seamen who had circumnavigated the group of islands. Ptolemy confirms him. Celcius said, in the seventeenth century, that Norway was rising at the rate of forty inches a year. Sir Charles Lyell endorses the theory. The water level in the Gulf of Bothnia falls one foot every fifteen years. Near Gefle there are low pastures where old men remember seeing boats afloat. Near Stockholm, 70 feet above the level of the sea, the remains of shell-fish, identical with the present coast species are found. At Sodulelge, 90 feet above high water, there is a bed of sand which contains some wrecked boats and an old anchor. In the interior of Spitzbergen skeletons of whales have been unearthed 40 feet above the sea-level. The fishermen say that the land has risen so much that the shallowness of the water has driven away the right whale, which, once abundant, is now rarely seen. On the Pacific, the shores around Behring's straits are low and flat; but, a mile or two back, there are ranges of bluffs, parallel with the coast, and containing innumerable shells of littoral species. If the theory is true it offers us a curious case of compensation. While the ocean is washing away Great Britain, and France, and Holland, and New England, way to the north the continents are encroaching on the sea. The only pity is that the process cannot be reversed, and Neptune enriched at the expense of the frozen north, and to the gain of the more habitable south.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS

" " " Mervin Lutz, now doing missionary work in New Hampshire, was once known as the wickedest man in Philadelphia. He has spent half his life in State Prisons, and was a Tom Paine infidel, but was converted under John G. Hook.—News Items.

—Now John G. Hook is an Adventist; and it is common among professed Christians to denounce Adventists as infidels. How, then, do they convert infidels?

" " " The revelations which come through the "mediums" are of the earth, earthy. The average of culture among "spirits" is precisely the average of culture in this world of mortals; and of progress and advancement there is no evidence whatever. Hence, we are not surprised to find a New Church writer, Mr. Theo. Parsons, saying of what he calls "Spiritism:" "It is the most purely natural belief that has ever been held among men, and its quick and wide reception is cogent proof of the present feebleness and inaction of the spiritual faculties."—N. Y. Tribune.

" " " Now that Prince Bismarck has got rid of the last of his obstructive colleagues—Herr Von Muhler—he seems to be determined to give the Catholic party no quarter on the question of education. The Polish schools, which have been hitherto exclusively in the hands of the priests, are to be placed under the same mixed jurisdiction as those of the rest of Prussia. Even Prince Bismarck would hardly venture to pursue his present vigorous policy in regard to the Church of Rome and its time-honored privileges, were he not assured that he has the support of the liberal men within the Church itself. The fact that German Catholics are showing a strong tendency to place the ties of nationality above those which bind them to the Holy See, is a fact of immense significance for the future of Catholicism in Europe, and indeed the world over.

" " " The Tribune's late Rome correspondent has this significant paragraph concerning the further spoliation of the Roman church.

"The priests and monks of old, indeed, until a year and a half ago, not only ruled the intellects and souls of the Romans, but they were supreme over all the possessions in the city. By violence and fraud they individually, and the religious orders to which they belong collectively, managed to secure in their own keeping all the valuables of the city, enriching certain aristocratic families and reducing the people to a mere pittance in return for their work. Through persuasion or fright many on their death beds were induced by the servants of the church, to hand over all their worldly goods to the Card'nal V[illegible] the benefit of the Holy See. It [illegible] common thing to hear, under the [illegible]gime of an old bare footed monk—he and his like had the best of the pavement in those days, and wo to those who did not take off the hat to them—that he owned one or two palaces, or whole blocks of houses. To-day it is estimated, on competent authority, that between the Cardinals, the priests, and the religious orders, the church actually owns half the city of Rome as its property. Not only the Romans, but all Italians are thinking over the best way to get back their own property." Thus the words of prophecy are fulfilling.

Communications.

Dying Four Deaths.

I have just returned from the last meeting of a series that has been in progress in our village at the M. E. church for five weeks, with the visible results of one joining by letter (or "certificate"). The spiritual state of the church has, unquestionably, been improved. For the entire summer and fall months two faithful souls have kept up the Thursday evening prayer meeting. Occasionally this number has been increased by a few sisters who seemed to partake of the same "gift of continuance." Under these circumstances perhaps it is not strange that a spasmodic effort is not attended with different results, and the truly zealous efforts of the minister in charge rewarded with better results. Oh! when will all churches, all professors, learn that God demands of his people a perfect, complete, and entire consecration; that in this warfare there is neither discharge, nor furlough granted, but in summer as well as winter, in evil as well as good report, God demands our service. This evening the text was "Why will ye die?" (Ezk. 18: 31). With the exceptions of the theological definition of death, the discourse was one that greatly moved my own heart, and I wondered that men and women would, with such ample provisions for life, be guilty of suicide, and die because they would not come to Christ that they might have LIFE. The speaker enumerated four deaths; spiritual, temporal, eternal, to sin. The first and third I need only refer to, as we agree on the others. Death spiritual he defined as "a separation of the soul from God." Death eternal [which he clearly showed was refered to in the text] he defined to be "a continuation of the first, death spiritual, for time without end, or an eternal separation of the soul from God." Now accepting the four, what do we find? (1.) When the man is "spiritually dead," no spiritual life remains; and when he is temporally (or physically) dead, no natural or temporal life remains. When "dead to sin," no life or power of sin remains; and when eternal death shall have supervened he will have no eternal life. By sin (transgression) man lost his temporal, natural, or animal life and had to "return to the ground." From the time that he lost his "spiritual life," until he returned to the ground, by physical death, he could live only by animal life, having no other from the time of transgression to the day of execution of sentence; and by continuing all the days of his life in unbelief and in sin, he fails to get, obtain, or "lay hold of eternal life," and so loses ETERNAL LIFE. Now having lost three of the four, and having no part in the fourth by which he can make claim to either of the three, I would like to have these dear, good, but (it seems to me,) mistaken brethren whom I cannot help but love still, tell me how MAN is going to LIVE in misery or in any other condition eternally, without spiritual life, without temporal life, and without eternal life—without any kind of life whatever. But bad as this may be, it is not the worst of the dilemma; for by this definition of eternal death, we have the sinner already suffering the penalty of sin, as inflicted subsequently to final impenitence; already a partaker of the doom of the damned to be a partaker of eternal death (which is only spiritual death perpetuated); [illegible] what results? Why they [illegible] they choose it; they rejoice in it. Such a penalty for sin is their glory, notwithstanding their glory is their shame; and five weeks of steady labor, with all the persuasive eloquence of a Boanerges and the melting zeal of an apostle was insufficient to wean them from it. Oh! when will these erring brethren in the gospel answer that life and death are terms of relative and opposite conditions; that life and death are literalities; are facts. That Christ did not come into the world to destroy men's lives, but to save them (men's LIVES); and that himself answered the question in the text of this evening when he said—"I am come into the world that ye might have life and have it more abundantly, and ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." This question of life and death has been so thoroughly canvassed in this field, that the present generation will not accept, believe, or be moved by the preaching of eternal torment. Nothing but the goodness of God, in offering them life from the dead as a boon of his rich grace in Christ, through faith, repentance, and obedience, will touch them: and I do not know as that will. May the Lord in his infinite goodness and wisdom save the people. G. W. STETSON.

The Spirit And The Heart.

Pastor. Come in, I am glad to see you again. It was with you, I think, I had a conversation lately on the work of the Spirit.

Inquirer. Yes, sir, and I am just come to have another on the same subject. I learned somewhat from the last, but only so much as has made me desirous for more instruction. My mind is not so clear on it as I could wish.

P. Perhaps you could give me an idea of what part of the subject gives you the greatest difficulty.

I. Well, you spoke last time of thoughts coming into the mind, even when we were doing all we could to keep them away. The thoughts of eternity or God, for example, will rise in one's mind, when he is bent on other things. I am aware of this, and I can see that some one must put such thoughts into the mind—this, it would appear, is done by the divine Spirit, and so far the matter seems clear enough; but is this all the Spirit does?

P. What do you imagine he does more?

I. Does he not touch the heart so as to change it by his influence?

P. It is impossible to answer that question satisfactorily without knowing what is meant by the heart. Could you tell me what you think that heart is which you imagine the Holy Spirit touches?

I. Oh, you know, just the heart that needs to be changed.

P. But what do you mean by the heart that needs to be changed? Do you mean the material heart through which the blood circulates?

I. No; I just mean the heart of the mind—you know what I mean well enough.

P. My fear is, that you do not know yourself what you mean. That is the reason I am asking you so perseveringly. Your habit of using words without duly thinking of what they mean, is one cause of the indefiniteness of your views. Now, try to tell me what that is which you think the Holy Spirit changes by a touch of his influences.

I. Well, I really cannot tell you any thing more about it, than just that it is the heart of a man—not of course the muscular heart in his breast, but the heart of his mind.

P. Then, what is there in the mind which you call its heart?

I. Really I do not know. I own I have thought loosely on the matter, and when you come to it in that way I am nonplussed.

P. I am desirous you should understand this point clearly, for if you do not know what the heart is which needs to be touched, you can have no clear idea of what it is to touch it so that it may be changed.

I. You are quite right. I see you are right. I am quite conscious I have thought vaguely on the matter.

P. Suppose the case of a man who desires and loves vice with all the power of his mind, you admit that that man needs a change of heart?

I. Certainly.

P. Suppose he is brought to desire and love God and virtue with all the power of his mind, what would you say of him?

I. I would say his heart is changed.

P. And would anything more be meant than just this—his desires had been changed; from desiring sin, he had changed to desire God and holiness?

I. Well, I cannot see that there would be anything more meant.

P. You mean, then, you see, by the heart of the man, just the desires or affections of the man. By a change of heart you really intend a change of his desires and affections. From supremely desiring sin, he comes supremely to desire God and holiness—that is a change in his desirings, or, as we may say, and do say, a change in his heart.

I. That is evident.

P. Now, can you tell me what you mean by touching the desires or affections of the man? It is not at all a wrong expression, but we must try to get at its meaning.

I. I really cannot tell you. I begin to see that I have not been thinking of mind in my ideas of man's heart. I have been thinking of the material heart after all. I had an idea of some warm, genial influence, like sunshine, or something like that, which, of course, could only affect a material heart.

P. But the affections of the mind can be touched, and moved, and changed, as truly as the material heart can be touched or wounded according to its proper nature. You have only to keep in mind what that nature is.

I. That is what I have not done, and hence when you ask how desires can be touched, I am at sea.

P. Yes, but you may soon get to terra firma, if you look a little to the simple truth of the case. Suppose, for example, that you pass a poor child on the roadside. It stands silent, pale, and shivering, and you are full of some personal business, so that you turn merely a vacant look upon the child—you feel nothing, and hasten on. In a little, the image of that shivering child comes up in your mind, but you banish it in a second or two. It starts again, and you cannot get it shaken—you can see its pale, despairing look, and the tear as it frozen under its eye—your heart is touched, and you cannot help turning right back, and inquiring after the child. Is not that a case of real touching of the heart?

I. No doubt of it.

P. But is not the touching of the heart by means of a thought in the mind?

I. I never saw that before. That throws a world of light on the subject in my mind.

P. But let us take an example that comes closer to our subject. There is a boy crossing a field. He has left the Sabbath school, light-hearted and careless. The teacher, however, was speaking of the suffering Jesus, and how fearful were the agonies he bore for men. As the child rushes across the field, the thought of the suffering Savior arises to his mind—he walks more deliberately, and in a few minutes he is pondering the sufferings of Christ. He thinks—"Has Jesus suffered so much for me, and have I cared so little for him?" From that hour a change is made on his affections that never ceases to influence him while he lives. Is not that a case of real touching of the heart?

I. Clearly so.

P. But is it not a case in which the heart is touched by means of thought suggested to the mind?

I. Assuredly. It is impossible to doubt it.

P. Well, then, can you conceive of any other way of touching and changing the desires?

I. It is evident I have thought there was some other way, but I admit I am unable to conceive of it. I begin to see that we deceive ourselves by words which we have not duly considered. Had I thought of what the heart really is, I could not have entertained the conceptions which I did on the subject. I have thought of the matter as if it had been the material, and not the mental heart that was to be affected.

P. Does it not appear to you, that if God, consistently with the nature he has given man, could have touched and changed the heart as you supposed, he could never have been at the immeasurable cost of providing the sacrifice of Calvary wherewith to touch and change it?

I. That is clear enough to me now; but I own that I did not see how to explain much in the ways of God at all in consistency with the ideas I entertained. I do now see one reason why he provides so great a sacrifice. No doubt it is wondrously fitted to touch the heart when brought before the mind.

P. The great importance of our present subject may be said to lie in the necessity and value of that great sacrifice to change the affections of man. The idea you were led to entertain, led you to neglect that sacrifice and to long for some inconceivable something which is to touch and change the heart instead. Nothing has so largely contributed to a neglect of the cross of Christ as this same error. When you see that the Spirit of God touches, melts, changes, regenerates the mind, by bringing up, and keeping up the thought of Christ and him crucified, then you seek to co-operate with the Spirit in turning or calling all possible attention to the Savior; but when you are under the notion that some secret, indescribable touch, or influence is to change the heart, and that the presentation of thought is vain in itself, you are led away from that thought to look and long for the secret influence. An imaginary work of the Spirit, which is not his real work at all, is thus made to supplant the saving work of Jesus. The effects of this mistake are palpable on every hand. There is not a thousandth part of the interest felt in the cross that would be were it not for this error.

I. There is, doubtless, truth in what you say, and yet it is very difficult to get over ideas which one has so long cherished. Do you not think that the Spirit exerts some direct influence on the will of men?

P. That question introduces another branch of our subject, and to do it anything like justice we must take it up at another opportunity. In the meantime, I trust you will seek to have all your affections, more than ever, brought under the touching power of the love and sacrifice of Jesus. We have got so far, at least, as to see that the thought of the Savior in the mind is that which works the wonders of right-heartedness in man.

I. That is, I acknowledge, a great deal, and I shall gladly wait in the hope of another conversation.

P. Good by at present, and be sure to call ere long.—Prof. Kirk, Sel. by A. Armour.

Think Now.

It is said that when Lysimachus was engaged in a war with the Getae, he was so afflicted with thirst that he offered his kingdom to his enemies for permission to quench it. His exclamation, when he had drank the water with which they furnished him, is wonderfully striking: "Ah, wretched me, who, for such a momentary gratification, have lost so great a kingdom." How applicable is this to the case of those who, for the momentary pleasures of sin, part with the kingdom of heaven! They part with all opportunity of enjoying a well-grounded hope of glory, merely to enjoy a brief, and wretchedly unsatisfactory portion of guilty pleasure; and they do so first, and think after they have begun to taste the bitter fruits of their conduct. Have you so thought of your ground of hope, and of the consequences of your conduct, that you are safe from such afterthought? If you have not, let me beseech you to think now!—Kirk.

Correspondence.

A Defense.

As certain slanderous reports concerning Br. A. D. Mackie have been published by various papers, we wish to set him right before our brethren and the public.

The facts in the case are these. The sister referred to is living in the family of Br. Green of this place. Br. Mackie is preaching on his circuit as usual. Wm. Imerson, who started the report, is her own brother, and knows perfectly well that she is in Lapeer, in good hands; and she has been back to Almer once since she decided to live here. The church at Almer understand the matter perfectly well; and the published report is a base slander upon a Christian minister and a poor girl, designed, no doubt, to injure the Advent cause.

We will vouch for the above.

(Signed.)

FRANCIS J. MORGAN, JAMES SLOAN,
THOMAS C. BAKER, IRA GREEN.

From Philander Nokes, Arbor Hill Iowa.

I wish to say something about our little church here. In March, 1870 Br. Cate preached for us some four or five times and organized a church of eight members. He was the first Adventist that ever preached here. It raised quite an excitement, many saying we were Mormons, etc. So things continued until September 1870 when Brn. Cate and Kent came and commenced a meeting. On the first Sunday Br. Cate preached on the immortality of the soul. When he got through an Eld. Brown got up and said he would reply in the evening. So a discussion commenced, and lasted for five nights, resulting in a complete victory on the side of truth, Br. Morphy also preached for us several times getting up quite an interest, and causing many to search their Bibles to see if these things were so. Steadily the work moved on, truth gaining ground and opposers getting more bitter against it, because they saw it was making inroads into their members, and about to take some of their best members. Last September Br. Kent again visited us, and preached about a week, and in his pleasant yet firm manner, left an impression on the minds of the people, that they will never get rid of and which will I hope be the means of bringing many of them to see the truth.

Dec. 17, last, Br. Clark commenced a protracted meeting here, and all who know Br. Clark, are acquainted with his manner of commencing a revival meeting. We began with crowded houses and a good interest. The third night two rose for prayers, and the next night five or six, and so things continued until over forty were converted. Twenty-six put on Christ by baptism, and there were many others that would have done so, but were prevented by their parents and members of other churches. But, thank the good Lord there are many that are not so easily persuaded. Thirty-one united with the church.

We feel to thank God and take courage. Last night our meetings closed with a crowded house and a good interest. I think many more will embrace the truth and unite with the church.

Sr. Jessie Lawrence, Linden, Mich.

I would ask an interest in your prayers. I am surrounded on all sides by temptations, and am far away from

Communications.

Dying Four Deaths.

I have just returned from the last meeting of a series that has been in progress in our village at the M. E. church for five weeks, with the visible results of one joining by letter (or "certificate"). The spiritual state of the church has, unquestionably, been improved. For the entire summer and fall months two faithful souls have kept up the Thursday evening prayer meeting. Occasionally this number has been increased by a few sisters who seemed to partake of the same "gift of continuance." Under these circumstances perhaps it is not strange that a spasmodic effort is not attended with different results, and the truly zealous efforts of the minister in charge rewarded with better results. Oh! when will all churches, all professors, learn that God demands of his people a perfect, complete, and entire consecration; that in this warfare there is neither discharge, nor furlough granted, but in summer as well as winter, in evil as well as good report, God demands our service. This evening the text was "Why will ye die?" (Ezk. 18: 31). With the exceptions of the theological definition of death, the discourse was one that greatly moved my own heart, and I wondered that men and women would, with such ample provisions for life, be guilty of suicide, and die because they would not come to Christ that they might have LIFE. The speaker enumerated four deaths; spiritual, temporal, eternal, to sin. The first and third I need only refer to, as we agree on the others. Death spiritual he defined as "a separation of the soul from God." Death eternal [which he clearly showed was refered to in the text] he defined to be "a continuation of the first, death spiritual, for time without end, or an eternal separation of the soul from God." Now accepting the four, what do we find? (1.) When man is "spiritually dead," no spiritual life remains; and when he [illegible] ally (or physically) dead, n[illegible] or temporal life remains. When "dead to sin," no life or power of [illegible]; and when eternal death [illegible] supervened he will have no eternal life. By sin (transgression) man lost his temporal, natural, or [illegible] life and had to "return to the ground." From the time that he lost his "spiritual life," until he returned to the ground, by physical death, he could live only by animal life, having [illegible] from the time of transgression to the day of execution of sentence; [illegible] continuing all the days of his [illegible] unbelief and in sin, he [illegible] get, obtain, or "lay hold of eternal life," and so loses ETERNAL LIFE. Now having lost three of the four, and having no part in the fourth by [illegible] can make claim to eith[illegible], I would like to have these dear good, but (it seems to me) m[illegible] [illegible] ...ren whom I cannot help but [illegible] tell me how MAN is going [illegible] ...ery or in any other condition [illegible] ...lly, without spiritual life, [illegible] ...ral life, and without [illegible] ...out any kind of life wh[illegible] [illegible] bad as this may be, it is [illegible] of the dilemma; for by [illegible] of eternal death, w[illegible] ...ner already suffering the penalty of sin, as inflicted subsequently to [illegible] sentence; already a part[illegible] the doom of the damned [illegible] ...ker of eternal death (as [illegible] spiritual death perpetuated); still [illegible] what results? Why they [illegible] ...ey choose it; they rej[illegible] a penalty for sin is th[illegible] ...ithstanding their glory is their shame; and five weeks of [illegible] with all the persuasive eloquence of a Boanerges and the [illegible] of an apostle was insuffi[illegible] ...hem from it. Oh! when w[illegible] ...ring brethren in the gospel [illegible] that life and death are terms of relative and opposite conditions; that life and death are literalities; are facts. That Christ did not come into the world to destroy men's lives, but to save them (men's LIVES); and that himself answered the question in the text of this evening when he said—"I am come into the world that ye might have life and have it more abundantly, and ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." This question of life and death has been so thoroughly canvassed in this field, that the present generation will not accept, believe, or be moved by the preaching of eternal torment. Nothing but the goodness of God, in offering them life from the dead as a boon of his rich grace in Christ, through faith, repentance, and obedience, will touch them: and I do not know as that will. May the Lord in his infinite goodness and wisdom save the people.

G. W. STETSON.

The Spirit And The Heart.

Pastor. Come in, I am glad to see you again. It was with you, I think, I had a conversation lately on the work of the Spirit.

Inquirer. Yes, sir, and I am just come to have another on the same subject. I learned somewhat from the last, but only so much as has made me desirous for more instruction. My mind is not so clear on it as I could wish.

P. Perhaps you could give me an idea of what part of the subject gives you the greatest difficulty.

I. Well, you spoke last time of thoughts coming into the mind, even when we were doing all we could to keep them away. The thoughts of eternity or God, for example, will rise in one's mind, when he is bent on other things. I am aware of this, and I can see that some one must put such thoughts into the mind—this, it would appear, is done by the divine Spirit, and so far the matter seems clear enough; but is this all the Spirit does?

P. What do you imagine he does more?

I. Does he not touch the heart so as to change it by his influence?

P. It is impossible to answer that question satisfactorily without knowing what is meant by the heart. Could you tell me what you think that heart is which you imagine the Holy Spirit touches?

I. Oh, you know, just the heart that needs to be changed.

P. But what do you mean by the heart that needs to be changed? Do you mean the material heart through which the blood circulates?

I. No; I just mean the heart of the mind—you know what I mean well enough.

P. My fear is, that you do not know yourself what you mean. That is the reason I am asking you so perseveringly. Your habit of using words without duly thinking of what they mean, is one cause of the indefiniteness of your views. Now, try to tell me what that is which you think the Holy Spirit changes by a touch of his influences.

I. Well, I really cannot tell you any thing more about it, than just that it is the heart of a man—not of course the muscular heart in his breast, but the heart of his mind.

P. Then, what is there in the mind which you call its heart?

I. Really I do not know. I own I have thought loosely on the matter, and when you come to it in that way I am nonplussed.

P. I am desirous you should understand this point clearly, for if you do not know what the heart is which needs to be touched, you can have no clear idea of what it is to touch it so that it may be changed.

I. You are quite right. I see you are right. I am quite conscious I have thought vaguely on the matter.

P. Suppose the case of a man who desires and loves vice with all the power of his mind, you admit that that man needs a change of heart?

I. Certainly.

P. Suppose he is brought to desire and love God and virtue with all the power of his mind, what would you say of him?

I. I would say his heart is changed.

P. And would anything more be meant than just this—his desires had been changed; from desiring sin, he had changed to desire God and holiness?

I. Well, I cannot see that there would be anything more meant.

P. You mean, then, you see, by the heart of the man, just the desires or affections of the man. By a change of heart you really intend a change of his desires and affections. From supremely desiring sin, he comes supremely to desire God and holiness—that is a change in his desirings, or, as we may say, and do say, a change in his heart.

I. That is evident.

P. Now, can you tell me what you mean by touching the desires or affections of the man? It is not at all a wrong expression, but we must try to get at its meaning.

I. I really cannot tell you. I begin to see that I have not been thinking of mind in my ideas of man's heart. I have been thinking of the material heart after all. I had an idea of some warm, genial influence, like sunshine, or something like that, which, of course, could only affect a material heart.

P. But the affections of the mind can be touched, and moved, and changed, as truly as the material heart can be touched or wounded according to its proper nature. You have only to keep in mind what that nature is.

I. That is what I have not done, and hence when you ask how desires can be touched, I am at sea.

P. Yes, but you may soon get to terra firma, if you look a little to the simple truth of the case. Suppose, for example, that you pass a poor child on the roadside. It stands silent, pale, and shivering, and you are full of some personal business, so that you turn merely a vacant look upon the child—you feel nothing, and hasten on. In a little, the image of that shivering child comes up in your mind, but you banish it in a second or two. It starts again, and you cannot get it shaken—you can see its pale, despairing look, and the tear as it frozen under its eye—your heart is touched, and you cannot help turning right back, and inquiring after the child. Is not that a case of real touching of the heart?

I. No doubt of it.

P. But is not the touching of the heart by means of a thought in the mind?

I. I never saw that before. That throws a world of light on the subject in my mind.

P. But let us take an example that comes closer to our subject. There is a boy crossing a field. He has left the Sabbath school, light-hearted and careless. The teacher, however, was speaking of the suffering Jesus, and how fearful were the agonies he bore for men. As the child rushes across the field, the thought of the suffering Savior arises to his mind—he walks more deliberately, and in a few minutes he is pondering the sufferings of Christ. He thinks—"Has Jesus suffered so much for me, and have I cared so little for him?" From that hour a change is made on his affections that never ceases to influence him while he lives. Is not that a case of real touching of the heart?

I. Clearly so.

P. But is it not a case in which the heart is touched by means of thought suggested to the mind?

I. Assuredly. It is impossible to doubt it.

P. Well, then, can you conceive of any other way of touching and changing the desires?

I. It is evident I have thought there was some other way, but I admit I am unable to conceive of it. I begin to see that we deceive ourselves by words which we have not duly considered. Had I thought of what the heart really is, I could not have entertained the conceptions which I did on the subject. I have thought of the matter as if it had been the material, and not the mental heart that was to be affected.

P. Does it not appear to you, that if God, consistently with the nature he has given man, could have touched and changed the heart as you supposed, he could never have been at the immeasurable cost of providing the sacrifice of Calvary wherewith to touch and change it?

I. That is clear enough to me now; but I own that I did not see how to explain much in the ways of God at all in consistency with the ideas I entertained. I do now see one reason why he provides so great a sacrifice. No doubt it is wondrously fitted to touch the heart when brought before the mind.

P. The great importance of our present subject may be said to lie in the necessity and value of that great sacrifice to change the affections of man. The idea you were led to entertain, led you to neglect that sacrifice and to long for some inconceivable something which is to touch and change the heart instead. Nothing has so largely contributed to a neglect of the cross of Christ as this same error. When you see that the Spirit of God touches, melts, changes, regenerates the mind, by bringing up, and keeping up the thought of Christ and him crucified, then you seek to co-operate with the Spirit in turning or calling all possible attention to the Savior; but when you are under the notion that some secret, indescribable touch, or influence is to change the heart, and that the presentation of thought is vain in itself, you are led away from that thought to look and long for the secret influence. An imaginary work of the Spirit, which is not his real work at all, is thus made to supplant the saving work of Jesus. The effects of this mistake are palpable on every hand. There is not a thousandth part of the interest felt in the cross that would be were it not for this error.

I. There is, doubtless, truth in what you say, and yet it is very difficult to get over ideas which one has so long cherished. Do you not think that the Spirit exerts some direct influence on the will of men?

P. That question introduces another branch of our subject, and to do it anything like justice we must take it up at another opportunity. In the meantime, I trust you will seek to have all your affections, more than ever, brought under the touching power of the love and sacrifice of Jesus. We have got so far, at least, as to see that the thought of the Savior in the mind is that which works the wonders of right-heartedness in man.

I. That is, I acknowledge, a great deal, and I shall gladly wait in the hope of another conversation.

P. Good by at present, and be sure to call ere long.—Prof. Kirk, Sel. by A. Armour.

Think Now.

It is said that when Lysimachus was engaged in a war with the Getae, he was so afflicted with thirst that he offered his kingdom to his enemies for permission to quench it. His exclamation, when he had drank the water with which they furnished him, is wonderfully striking: "Ah, wretched me, who, for such a momentary gratification, have lost so great a kingdom." How applicable is this to the case of those who, for the momentary pleasures of sin, part with the kingdom of heaven! They part with all opportunity of enjoying a well-grounded hope of glory, merely to enjoy a brief, and wretchedly unsatisfactory portion of guilty pleasure; and they do so first, and think after they have begun to taste the bitter fruits of their conduct. Have you so thought of your ground of hope, and of the consequences of your conduct, that you are safe from such afterthought? If you have not, let me beseech you to think now!—Kirk.

Correspondence.

A Defense.

As certain slanderous reports concerning Br. A. D. Mackie have been published by various papers, we wish to set him right before our brethren and the public.

The facts in the case are these. The sister referred to is living in the family of Br. Green of this place. Br. Mackie is preaching on his circuit as usual. Wm. Imerson, who started the report, is her own brother, and knows perfectly well that she is in Lapeer, in good hands; and she has been back to Almer once since she decided to live here. The church at Almer understand the matter perfectly well; and the published report is a base slander upon a Christian minister and a poor girl, designed, no doubt, to injure the Advent cause.

We will vouch for the above.

(Signed.)

FRANCIS J. MORGAN, JAMES SLOAN,
THOMAS C. BAKER, IRA GREEN.

From Philander Nokes, Arbor Hill Iowa.

I wish to say something about our little church here. In March, 1870 Br. Cate preached for us some four or five times and organized a church of eight members. He was the first Adventist that ever preached here. It raised quite an excitement, many saying we were Mormons, etc. So things continued until September 1870 when Brn. Cate and Kent came and commenced a meeting. On the first Sunday Br. Cate preached on the immortality of the soul. When he got through an Eld. Brown got up and said he would reply in the evening. So a discussion commenced, and lasted for five nights, resulting in a complete victory on the side of truth, Br. Morphy also preached for us several times getting up quite an interest, and causing many to search their Bibles to see if these things were so. Steadily the work moved on, truth gaining ground and opposers getting more bitter against it, because they saw it was making inroads into their members, and about to take some of their best members. Last September Br. Kent again visited us, and preached about a week, and in his pleasant yet firm manner, left an impression on the minds of the people, that they will never get rid of and which will I hope be the means of bringing many of them to see the truth.

Dec. 17, last, Br. Clark commenced a protracted meeting here, and all who know Br. Clark, are acquainted with his manner of commencing a revival meeting. We began with crowded houses and a good interest. The third night two rose for prayers, and the next night five or six, and so things continued until over forty were converted. Twenty-six put on Christ by baptism, and there were many others that would have done so, but were prevented by their parents and members of other churches. But, thank the good Lord there are many that are not so easily persuaded. Thirty-one united with the church.

We feel to thank God and take courage. Last night our meetings closed with a crowded house and a good interest. I think many more will embrace the truth and unite with the church.

Sr. Jessie Lawrence, Linden, Mich.

I would ask an interest in your prayers. I am surrounded on all sides by temptations, and am far away from any one that advocates Adventism. I still hope to come off more than conqueror. I attend church every Sabbath and listen to a mixed theology; treasure up the good, and drop the evil, then come home and take the TIMES and the Bible and sit down and feast on the sermons recorded in those pages. I feel glad that I am an Adventist, for it is such a substantial faith. Opposition is strong here, and I stand alone and need much strength from our Father in heaven.

Br. H. H. Skinner, Wexford Co. Mich. The little church that Br. Bower organized here last fall is "growing in grace and the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." For some time past there has not been any meeting owing to the distance which the brethren live apart; for the roads are not kept well broken; so many teams gone to the lumber woods that it makes it difficult to get about. But with the coming of spring I expect that meeting together and caring for the seed sown will be resumed. The church has made a most excellent choice in chosing Br. Brigham for elder. He his able to "give a reason for the hope that is in him," "also zealous in every good word and work." We are in hopes that Br. Bower will come back. And if an "Editor's Journal" could be written some time in the spring or summer telling your readers about the pure water, the healthy climate, and above all the preaching of the gospel in this Grand Traverse region, it would be most gratifying.

Br. D. S. Clark Dexter, Mich. writes: Last Friday eve a Methodist minister challenged me to discuss the immortality of the soul. Saturday eve was set to commence the debate. He had to affirm but did not bring his Bible. I asked if had not brought his Bible, he said that I had one, and he should not need it. But he brought Josephus, and out of it he tried to prove that man is in the possession of an immortal soul. I was ashamed for him. They say he is a "graduate." But it was a perfect fizzle.

From Br. E. McCullock, Nevada, O. The work of the Lord in this place is still advancing. Three persons united with the church at our last communion season, the last Sabbath in January, and many others are interested in the truths of the Bible. My labors have been greatly blessed during the two years that I have served as pastor of the church. Our numbers have steadily increased, and our Sabbath school is in a flourishing condition, numbering nearly a hundred scholars, and rapidly increasing. We feel that our time to labor is short, and oh, that we may work while the day lasts, and win for our Master a glorious bride, that shall be clad in white robes. I do not expect to remain here another year. Where the Lord may direct I know not as yet, but pray he will direct. We would welcome you this way whenever you can come. Christian fellowship to all.

BRIEF EXTRACTS.

Br. Wm. Young, Moline, Ill. Not long since in THE TIMES an orthodox question was asked, "Which do we speak to?" If the inquirer was correct, would it not be proper for us, when we meet a man, to say—"How do you do, Mr. Spirit?" And if that spirit is a part of God, and all men are in possession of it, why do they labor so hard to have him converted. I am puzzled to find out what part of man they convert. If it is the "part of God," will some one tell me how a part of God can be converted. [or perverted. ED.] I was brought up under that influence—lived under it twenty five years. Three years ago I began to creep out from under it—to-day I am a free man. Since I have done my own thinking I have found new light, and it grows brighter continually. ——Br. W. H. Jarvis, West St. Paul, Minn: You wrote, recently, concerning the poor paper you had to use for THE TIMES one week. There are many who would rather have the most inferior article rather than not get it at all. And here especially, since Br. Edwin's sickness has prevented his filling his usual appointment, it fills an interstice which nothing else would supply. Br. Edwin has endeared himself to us by his unfaltering faith in God, his truly Christian life, and most by his conversation, truly continually in heaven. 1 Cor. 16:2, must have its mite, and has had since Br. Edwin left the "mission box" with us. It hangs under the clock where we cannot fail to see it.——A Baptist minister at Rockbridge, Ill., says: I am trying with all my might, under severe persecution, to spread the glad tidings of immortality by a resurrection from the dead, at the appearing of our absent Savior, who, I believe is waiting for the fullness of time, to come to do the work. My heart is made to rejoice at the great spread of the truth, and the new witnesses that arise daily to advocate the simple gospel, and to fight against the human traditions that are now sapping the very vitals of religion, undermining the plan of redemption and robbing God of his glory; especially that tradition that had its origin with the heathen philosopher—the belief in inherent immortality.——Br. S. Workman, Wright Co. Minn.: I am a new beginner in the service of the Lord. Wife and I were baptised the latter part of last summer. We are trying to keep our lamps trimmed and burning, expecting the Lord soon to come. Pray for us that we may increase in the truth and saving knowledge of our Lord.——Br. S. Weese, McLeod Co. Minn.: We had a glorious Q. M. at Br. Whitelock's in December. It was a goodly sitting. Elders present were, J. Raymond, Parsons, Scott and Wood. The little church here is trying to let their light shine, that the world may know that they are the children of God, and that they are waiting for his Son from heaven. We are a little band, only fourteen in number. Our prayer is that many more may be added and be saved at Christ's coming and kingdom. ——Br. Miller, Sullivan Co. Mo.: I have just returned home from a place where I was the first to preach the truth. A methodist preacher confronted and abused me much. He thought the thief on the cross an impenetrable barrier against me. I then went on into the argument, and made him say, "Yes, yes," to every step as I went through the explanation, and then showing him that he had yielded the whole ground, he denied it. But, thank God, a few will receive the truth in every place. When Jesus comes and we all get together, we'll make a mighty multitude, Many times I get out of heart, for when I compare the large assemblies that listened to me, even in my boyhood, when I preached Plato, etc., with the little flocks that now come out to hear Christ preached as our "life," I feel that nearly all men choose darkness, and I pray, Lord Jesus come quickly! Two were yesterday converted to the truth, and they want THE TIMES.——Br. E. E. Bush, Hennepin Co. Minn.: I have been getting THE TIMES some time for nothing, as I suppose, as I have paid nothing for it. Now I want to pay for it, and keep it coming. In fact, we are not at home without it. To tell the truth, I had begun to look upon the Bible as a book of confusion, for the more preaching I heard, the thicker grew the fog; for they preach the Bible one way, and it reads another; and being a man of very little education I did not know but they were right. But I could not accept their theory, and I am farther from them now than ever, since I have read THE TIMES. It has convinced me that the Bible is right, and they wrong. The paper has preached and explained more Bible than I had heard in all my life. The Bible is plain to me now. On one point I am at last satisfied. It is, "that the wages of sin is death." Orthodoxy says, "eternal life in misery." But the Bible is right.——P. D. Austin, Marshall Co. Ill.: You are very kind to send me THE TIMES so long without the money. I have been expecting you would stop the paper, but every week brings it, for which I thank you. It is about all the preaching I have. It is about a year since I became an Adventist. I can truly say that I never enjoyed religion until I became one, although I was a member with the United Brethren. But I could not understand what I can understand now. I went to Sparland and heard Br. R. P. Hoge. Since then I enjoyed more true happiness than in all my life before. I feel daily more encouraged to press on, for I believe Christ will come soon.——Br. H. Albertson, Burnside, Mich.: It makes me rejoice when I hear from so many of Christ's little flock, scattered abroad in the land, all with one accord searching for the truth and clinging to the blessed promises. It is refreshing to me to know that the faithful ones are sowing the good seed, and whosoever receiveth it in their hearts, oh! may it take deep root, and bring forth good fruit, thirty, sixty, and an hundred fold. I long to see Br. Himes. But if I should never see him here, may I be so unspeakably happy as to clasp glad hands with him and all the dear brothers and sisters in the kingdom of our Lord and Master.——Br. and Sr. John Junk, East Gilead, Mich.: There is but a small band of us here, and we stand amidst the usual amount of persecutions that Adventists are acustomed to bear in nearly every locality. But we pay but little attention to all that. Our time for serving our Lord and Master is of too short duration for us to find it in our hearts to spend our moments in trying to convince such as are trying to injure us in the cause, that we are only humble pilgrims striving in our weakness to serve God, and that we are not "children of the devil," as they seem to infer. May God bless his little band of waiting ones, here and elsewhere, with revived courage, and a fresh supply of confidence in his speedy coming, and may we soon rest with him in peace forever——Sr. Julia Richards, Almer, Mich.: I am waiting with patience, while I watch for the speedy coming of our Lord. God help me to put my whole trust in him. May I not be found sleeping, but awake and at work, too, when he comes. God help the cause, is my continual and earnest prayer. Oh! that he would give each one of us a spirit of self-sacrifice. The devil is at work here, trying to hedge us in on all sides. At present we have no place of worship, except our dwelling houses, which give little chance for the truth to spread abroad. But we wait and hope for better things, while we pray for Jesus to come, and set up his eternal kingdom.——M. B. Hubbell, Dexter, Iowa: Br. Clark is here. He commenced last Monday evening preaching the word of God. The first evening he preached on practical religion. He then gave out that he would take Lk. 23:42, 43—the thief on the cross. He proved plainly that Christ was crucified on Thursday, and that he was crucified between the two evenings; and that Christ and the thief did not die the same day; and he proved that kingdom and paradise were synonymous. After the meeting was out one man said he had not touched the spirit: that was what he wanted to hear about. Then one spoke up and said that Clark believed that man had no soul or spirit: all went into the grave at death. Br. Clark denied, and then the man said he read that doctrine in the Key of Truth. He showed a very bad spirit. Br. Clark and Br. Hough went over to see him (Eld. Alger) the next morning. He told Br. Clark he was a liar and had a spirit of the devil and all such stuff. He is trying to keep the people from hearing the truth. He tells them that Br. Clark will lead them astray. There is a good interest to hear; the school house is filled every night. Bless the Lord, the interest is good, and some are confessing Christ. I think others will go forward before this meeting closes.——Br. Geo. W. Hurd: I have closed a meeting at the Pleasant View S. H. in Brown Co. Ill. One was baptised and two added to the church at Mt. Pleasant. As usual, we met with strong opposition from some of the orthodox; some compelling their children to keep away from the meetings, yet, while the meetings were going on allowed them to attend parties, etc. Others were more noble, attending and trying the preaching by the great Standard. Br. Richard Bush, who has lived here alone for some years, feels cheered and encouraged.——A. B. Cushing, Barford, P. Q: The truth is spreading quite rapidly and extensively through this section. Thank the Lord. The seed has been sown to some extent, and we want some good minister of Jesus Christ to come and water that already sown, and sow more, and then we will look to God for the increase, and shall expect it, too. Oh! for grace to live every day, right down humble at the feet of Jesus, and learn of him and be animated by his Spirit so much that we may love and pray for our enemies in sincerity and truth.——Br. W. C. Irish, Labette Co. Kas. The publications of your Association have been instrumental of great blessing to my soul, bringing present peace, a religious feast, and most consoling hopes of the future. A seed is cast in this part that promises to bear fruit. The first thing that started me was a tract "Think for Yourself," with some others sent by a distant friend. There are but few in the faith in these parts; and I am sorry to say that for one to avow his belief that man is not immortal, is in the public opinion to say he has no religion. It was said recently—"No one believing this Adventism can have religion any more than a horse." This was from a leader of an orthodox flock; who, by the way, in a quarrel with a neighbor some days before knocked him senseless with a club. They call us heretics, infidels, soul-sleepers, atheists. They have thrust me out of the Sunday school, the society I have always loved. But I shall remain true to my convictions.

Conference Minutes

Minnesota.

WINONA DISTRICT.

Convened with the Canton Church, Feb. 2. Preaching by G. W. Miller. Text, "Behold I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast: let no man take thy crown." (1) He showed that Christ was coming quickly. (2) The neces[illegible] holding on to what we have [illegible] received; and that the great fundamental truths of our faith and hope are unchangeable: using the text as a timely warning against those pretenders of new light, whose whole effort is to change the fundamental truths of our faith and hope. At the close of the meeting we had a manifestation of those very characters. All felt like praising the Lord for his goodness in giving timely warning. Saturday, preaching by Eld. Rima, of Cresco, Iowa, upon the reward of the righteous and the wicked. He showed by the Scriptures that the righteous would have their reward in the earth made new; and that the wicked would receive theirs by being punished with everlasting destruction.

A business meeting was called and the following resolution passed, unanimously:

Resolved. That we deeply feel and mourn the loss of our beloved borther, Edwin T. Himes, and that his labors throughout this state had endeared him to us, during his short stay, that we feel his loss is to us an irreparable one.

Resolved, that in our bereavement our hearts are made sad, and we cry, "How long shall death the tyrant reign and triumph o'er the just?"

Resolved, that we tender our sympathies and prayers for the friends of our deceased brother; and that we will endeavor to remember the widow and the fatherless in their affliction and bereavement, after a godly sort by our means as the Lord may prosper us.

Our prayer and conference meetings were seasons of interest to all who attended. There was manifested by all who took part in the exercises a determined will to live in readiness for the coming of the Lord. Our meetings closed Sabbath evening by celebrating the Lord's Supper, and we felt that perhaps it might be the last ere we should celebrate it in the kingdom. Thus we preached, thus we talked, and thus we felt that we were on the last plank of time in the history of this world.

Adjourned to meet at the same time with the annual campmeeting in June.

GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp. Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath. Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Remainder—30 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—2 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—48 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,200 pp. for $1 by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth $1. paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid in pilgrims in to Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1.50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single; $2.15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation, with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 35c.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 10c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1; postage, 16c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation, a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2.50, post paid

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 16c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10.80 a dozen. Gilt, $1.10. Full gilt, $1.25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 for a dozen.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $4, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1.50. By mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures, with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1.50. By mail, $1.75.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy, the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings. 10c.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 120 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 317 pp. Paper covers, 35c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 48 pp. 10c.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable. Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2.50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Gould. 400 pp. $1.25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25. Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4.00.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.

An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.

The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.

A Treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 15c.

The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.

The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.

Last day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.

[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]

Revelation 20. 5c.

The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.

Evangels of the Coming One. 8c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid for $1.30.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22, by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7.50, by express.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY OF GOD; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD. By John Couch. An exposition of Dan. 11. 15c.

DEATH NOT LIFE; or, The Destruction of the wicked established, and Endless Misery disproved. By Jacob Blain. 25c. post paid.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED BY THE BIBLE, and the testimony of its own witnesses. By Mrs. M. D. Wellcome. 10c. post-paid. For distribution, fifteen copies for $1.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions of the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 40c. post paid.

REASONS FOR MY HOPE; or, Tokens of a Speedy Redemption. By Hastings. 25c.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SOUL; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.

THE SPIRIT; What is It? 5c; by mail, 7c.

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c, post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 30c. post paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—45c. post paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 35c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth: containing seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth $2.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 20, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
L. P. FOX, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.
A. S. CALKINS, } Pub. Committee.
L. H. DAVIS,
D. MATHEWSON,
N. FIELD, } Editorial Com.
H. G. McCULLOCH,
L. C. COLLINS.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, Business Agent,
To whom all communications should be addressed

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 10c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

Harps Etc.

We are out of Harps, and of Eld. Grant's works bound in one volume. New editions are preparing. When copies of them are received we will fill orders immediately. Our friends will be patient until then.

Field's Discussion.

For some time this desirable work has been out of print. The main topic is the Intermediate State, or Condition of the Dead. When a new edition was announced, some of the Doctor's old Disciple friends announced that they would buy and circulate it as soon as ready, because they thought it would help their side—that Mr Connelly had the best of the argument. We shall soon know whether they really so felt, or were indulging mere bragadocio. The book has not yet made any converts to immaterialism that we have heard of; but we have learned of its bringing not a few to adopt the Bible theory.

The book has heretofore been sold at one dollar. The present edition is in paper covers (pp 315), and will be sent post paid for 50c. We hope for liberal orders.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawver, M. B. Geer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Hink, "I. C. Welcome, J. F. Huber, Grand St. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M Hall, J. C. Stone, W. E. Brown, M F Wistrom, R. W Wilson, E. M. Lampard, Clinton (Io) Church, Lapeer Church.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clew, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand-raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $120. See advertisement.

Correction.

The article on Christian Baptism in the TIMES of Jan. 16, was by Wm. Honne.

The Discussion.

Through carelessness in "making up" the paper, the matter of Eld. Braden's letter was thrown into confusion, and a few copies worked off before the blunder was discovered. The readers of those copies will find his fifth argument coming before the fourth.

To Correspondents.

D. S. CLARK. Wrote them to write to you; but heard they could not delay and had found help....J. W. FARROW. You did not give your P. O. Address. ....F. H. KENNY. That will do for Beecher. Still he may not have said it. It is hardly worth notice. ....J. NORTH. We do not recollect the sermon you speak of. It would hardly be necessary to republish it....T. ELLSASSER. Your views of the name-question are sound and good. Hope you will be able to spread the truth in your section....M. A. TIBBETS. The Harps with notes have not yet come We know of no such S. S. books as you mention. Will get the B. B. if possible....G. C. MEIGS. Where does B. N. Meigs take the paper? We cannot credit the money until we know his P. O. Address....J. LOWRY. Books ordered to you by mail.

New Press

S W Miller $1 00 J Black 5 00.

Our Debt.

G Reddell	pd	5 00	L Liederbick	pd	10
H Liederbick	"	3 00	H Welty	"	5 00
M Liederbick	"	25

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged.............. ....$847.79

S Stephenson	25	L Town	50
N S Glidden	50	J T Sargent	2 00
E C How	50	A Friend	5 00
N E Fry	50	J Halcrow	75
N J Hendrix	50	J Smith	2 00
E Theophilus	50

Communications.

J R Preston
J D Jones
E J Sweetland
M J James
F Reynolds
M E Green
C E Barnes
P W Hough

Letters Received,
TO SATURDAY, JAN. 30.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

L Warman
W S Gobble
C C Marston
L C Collins
L L Ames
S B Mabey
O Sherwin
S Reed
C Foster
J S Barley
J Barnes
J Roberts
J Sloan
J Leighton
J W Fauret
E A Clapp
M Butler
J W T
N Wilson
H R Halsinger
Geo Wright
S Hewett
G L Tuple
H W Chase
J Johnson
J Whitman
B P Braley
L G Merrill
E A Dodge
G W Miller
S C Wellcome
C Waffle
B S Conley
C Leborch
D H Warren
W L Skeels
G Stephenson
J Card
J C Shaw
J Miette
L M Stoddard
E Talford
E Theophilus
C Fox
J R Preston
M E Osterhout
S Cronce
L Jackson
G Thomson
S C Wellcome
H M Judge
E J Martin
N Hendrix
N E Fry
M S Cook
E C Howe
N L Glidden
L D Heath
A W Tucker
I P Thomas
J Anderson
A A Phelps
J H Lattenton
B H Hall
D Brown
J Hayes
N Field
F T Gallup
S A Bechtel
T B Reece
G Thompson
M P Trabel
J Black
P Foster
E S Penwell
H Jeffery
T Hosebury
N Persons
F W Haskell
C Crawford
E F Cook
R T Church
T Daily
W M Snyder
N Warner
J S Lawver
H Linderbeck
W McCormick
W Francis
M J James
T Barker
J Knights
T Vandervoort
T Burroughs
J T Sargent
F Burr
H G McCulloch
T Davidson
J Chalser
W E Brown
H Patten
G W Hurd
N H Reed
G W Lawson
S J Adams
S A Hartsell
H C Gifford
C S Branch
J S Scott
Geo Haddell
H B Williams
L F Collins
F S Morgan
A Bowen
L Reimer
J W Farrow
D F Scamman
I E Andrus
A E Rathbun
G D Gibson
L Town
A M Gladding
M Pieranda
E A Lake
J W Taylor
J M Snook
E Chase
E B Scott
A E Babcock
A McCowan
E M Howe
E A Marsh
A Gibson
J Smith
J M Stephenson
J N Sherman
W Durand
A Morse
H Welty
W Dunbar
J Halcrow
W B Thompson
I H Gladding
J A McCullough
C C Barker
M Johnson
D H Warren
O R Stouffer
S Fullerton
A H Briggs
C C Marston
W Murphy

Books and Tracts by Mail.

N C Miller (3)
W L Skeels
A J Tuttle
J Sloan (3)
M Butler
M P Trabel
S Weese
W Welty
E New
G C Meigs
R Visser
V Beaton
N Blair
E P Goff
A W Tucker
J B Jeffry (3)
J M Snook
T Davidson
D T Taylor
C C Marston
A McCowan
M Pieranda (3)
C S Branch
L Town
A E Rathbun
L F Collins
W M Snyder
M Webb
W Dunbar
L Jackson (3)

By Express.

E A King S C Raymond N Field Geo Wright jr.

Book Notices, Etc.

SCRIBNER'S Monthly still demands a candid word from us. The "advance sheet for" March (we did not see the February number) confirms our former judgment that there is no better magazine than Scribner's Monthly published. The publishers offer to send the Monthly for 1872, with the entire series from the beginning, containing more than 3,000 pages, from the pens of the ablest writers, (Nov. 1870, to Dec. '72) for $5.00 ! (the price of one year's subscription is $4.00, and single numbers are thirty-five cents each). For ten cents will send a specimen number of last year, or for twenty-five cents, a specimen number of this year. Scribner & Co. 654 Broadway, New York.

Obituary.

FIFE.—Fell asleep in Jesus April 24, 1871, Calista Fife: in her 67th year.

She united with the little band of Adventists in Deerfield, Mich. in the fall of '68, and died in the hope of the resurrection to life when Jesus comes. Blessed hope ! We shall be raised immortal and our vile bodies be made like unto our Savior's glorious body.

JULIA THAYER.

DEYO.—Fell asleep in Jesus at Rockford, Ill. Dec. 28, 1871, Mary, wife of Eld. S. D. Deyo, and mother of the writer: aged 60 years, 3 months, and 12 days.

Mother had a shock of paralysis last spring which deprived her of the use of her limbs somewhat. They went to Rockford, Ill. about two months ago to spend the winter. She lived but a week after her last shock, conscious to the last, and talked freely till within a short time of her death. She often repeated the lines,

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep," etc

To her I owe much of my character talent and life. From her I received my first impression for good. In answer to her prayers I have tried to preach the gospel of glad tidings. She embraced Christianity in her youth, and ever lived worthy of example. She embraced the blessed hope of the coming of Christ at its first proclamation, and hoped to remain till Jesus came. But she said, "It won't be long until I shall wake up again."

P. S. W. DEYO.

RICHARDS.—On Wednesday, Jan. 24, 1872, in Burton Lapeer Co. Mich. Willard Richards: aged 75 years.

Another soldier of the cross has fallen at his post. Br. Richards learned to follow Jesus in the days of his youth and for many years had been looking for his return. His only hope was in the resurrection of the dead. I had the privilege of conversing with him a few days before his death, when he told me that he had no doubts or fears, and was ready to meet his Lord in peace. He requested me to preach his funeral sermon for Job. 14: 14. "If a man die shall he live again ?"

He leaves a family and a large circle of friends to mourn, and many of them expect to see him again at "the resurrection of the just."

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

A. M. B. GRAHAM.

TALBOT.—Fell asleep in Jesus on Monday, Jan. 15, 1872: George Henry son of Deacon Wm. and Sr. M. E. Talbot: aged 4 years and 6 months.

George was a great sufferer for the last three weeks of his life, but in it he never forgot his little prayer which he was in the habit of repeating; and was a number of times heard to sing that pretty chorus—"Happy day, when Jesus washed my sins away." Br. and Sr. Talbot are truly afflicted. Death has taken from their fond embrace four little boys within the last seven years. Yet they mourn not as those that mourn without hope, for within the last two years they have been converted to God, and have learned to love his blessed truth, and to take hold upon the promise of him who said "I am the resurrection and the life." Now in the midst of all their afflictions they look with joyful anticipation to the time so soon to come, when Jesus shall return to take his people home, when they with their little ones now living and those that sleep in Jesus, shall be reunited and dwell in that beautiful land, amid the beauties of the new earth, with all the family of the redeemed, and Jesus as their king.

Words of comfort by the writer to a large circle of mourning friends, from Jer. 31: 16, 17.

Geogie we miss thee the live-long day,
In thy pleasant prattle and thy quiet play;
We miss thee at morning and evening prayer,
At the fireside circle and everywhere.

But we've gently laid thee in the quiet grave,
In the watchcare of him who has power to save.
His lambs are all precious, he's prepared them a home,
We'll be hopeful and prayerful till the Master shall come.

S. C. WELLCOME.

HITCHCOCK.—At my house, in Exeter, Wis. Jan. 9, 1872, my venerable mother, Malinda Hitchcock. She was a native of Vermont; born in 1785, and died in her 87th year.

Mother made a profession of religion in the days of her youth, more than seventy years ago. She was very familiar with the Scriptures. Their study and investigation was her delight. She embraced the Bible doctrine of the entire mortality of man, his unconsciousness in death, and the destruction of the finally impenitent, at an early day, and during the early history of the Christian Connection, under the preaching of E. Smith, C. W. Martin, John L. Peavy, and others of that denomination who held and preached these sentiments, she embraced the faith of the Lord's second and speedy coming in 'forty-three. These sentiments she held firmly until she died. During her sickness she selected two hymns to be sung at her funeral; also chose the text and requested Eld. Isaac Adrian to preach the discourse. A short time before she died she asked if we heard the singing. When told we did not, said she heard beautiful singing, it was coming near, and said they sung "We'll die on the field of battle, with glory in the soul." When we supposed she was past speaking audibly, she looked up and said—"I love my Lord." These were her last words. Thus she fell asleep. Oh ! may we live to rejoice with her in the soon coming kingdom. Eld. Adrian preached from 1 Cor. 15: 49, at the Free Baptist church, in Monticello, to a large circle of friends and relatives.

N. A. HITCHCOCK.

GROCE.—At Shousetown, Allegheny Co. Pa. Nov. 18, 1871, of consumption, Sarah, wife of J. M. Groce; in her thirtieth year.

Sr. Groce, in early womanhood connected herself with the Covenanter church, of which her parents were then members; but she did not even then believe in many of its doctrines; and in 1862, the time of her marriage to Br. Groce, cast in her lot in the M. E. church, of which her husband was then and is still a member. Sr. Groce had long since ignored the doctrine of endless torment; and subsequent to that, the kindred doctrine of the conscious state of the dead. Her hope was in Christ, as the Resurrection and the Life; and in her long sickness she frequently spoke of the coming of the Savior. When she could no longer hold the family Bible in her hand, from weakness, she would get her husband to read it to her, or open it at the 17th Psalm, and she would quietly look at the last verse, in which she seemed to have a special interest. She sleeps in hope of a glorious awaking to eternal life when Jesus comes. Come, Lord Jesus !

Services at the house, by J. Dillon, pastor in charge of the M. E. church at this place.

Notices, Etc.

Br. Peter Milson has arranged to devote most of his time to the work of the ministry. Churches and brethren desiring his labors should correspond with him at once. We recommend him as a faithful minister of the word, one that will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God.

GEO. W. MILLER.

Minnesota Tent.

Notice is hereby given to those brethren and sisters of the State of Minn. who have subscribed for the purchasing of a new tent for the State, that the business of collecting and purchasing the tent in time for the summer campaign, has been committed to the undersigned, by a vote of the Annual Conference at its last session. All such as have not paid their subscriptions will please remit to me as soon as possible, that I may have time to make the purchase, before it will be actually needed. ADDRESS: GEO. W. MILLER, Millersburg, Rice Co. Minn.

Appointments.

MICHIGAN.

Porter Center, Saturday eve. March 2, and over Sunday; and longer, perhaps, if advisable.

JAS. FERRISS.

The third Q. M. for the Southern District of Mich. will be held at the Munger S. H. five miles north of Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co. commencing Wednesday eve. March 20, and hold over Lord's day. Teams will be at the station at Eaton Rapids on the arrival of the p. m. trains from Grand Rapids and Jackson. Eaton Rapids is on the Grand River Valley R. R. Let there be a full attendance.

J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y. pro tem.

ILLINOIS.

Amboy, Sabbath, Feb. 25. Subject in the eve: Modern Infidelity—what is it ? C. C. MARSTON.

Aurora, Sabbath, March 3.

Milroy, Sat. eve, March 9, and on Sabbath at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. At the Town House at 2 p. m.

C. W. SMITH.

Eld. Wm. McCulloch will preach in our vicinity (Cobden) on the third Sunday in February, continuing a few days; and in the vicinity of Anna the fourth Sunday, continuing a few days, as Br. Childs may arrange.

J. S. LIMERIC.

IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa First District Q. M. is to be held at Lewis, Cass Co. March 15-17. Brethren and sisters, let us have general rally.

WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

The second Q. M. of the A. C. C. of Manchester District commences Thursday, Feb. 22, with the Elk Valley church, at the Otisville S. H. continuing over the Sabbath.

This is comparatively a new field. Let every lover of Jesus and his cause be there. Come, brethren, laden with the Spirit of Jesus, praying in the Holy Ghost. Come, to work for God and his cause.

M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

Milan, March 31, and over Sunday,
South Milan, April 7.
West Unionville, 3 miles, May 4, 5.

N. C MILLER

The second Q. M. of the Mo. and S. W. Iowa Conference will convene with Empire church, Friday evening, March 1, and continue over Sunday. Let all the churches in the District be represented. Let none of the ministry fail to be there.

JAMES FINDREN, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Stone, S. H. 10½ a. m. Sunday, Feb. 25.

Murphy S. H. 2½ p. m. and Bently S. H. eve. same day.

Bliss S. H. 10½ a. m. and 2½ p. m. Sunday, March 3.

Vowles S. H St. Charles, 2 p. m. March 9, covenant meeting. All the members of Utica church are invited.

Utica Station, 10½ a. m. and eve, March 10.

Vowles S. H. 2 p. m. and regular appointments thereafter at the last named place.

S. C. WELLCOME.

WISCONSIN.

The third Q. M. for Eastern District, Wis. will be held with the church at Cassel's Prairie, Sauk Co. Friday March 22, and over the Lord's day. Come at the commencement of the meeting, and bring the holy fire with you. GEO. THOMSON.

NEW YORK.

Regular meetings are held by the church at 126 West 24th St., New York city: three times on Sunday, and Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings.

T. J. COX.

The Lord willing, the next Q. M. of the N. Y. Advent Christian Conference will convene with the church in Lockport, Thursday eve. March 14, and continue over Sunday. All are invited. It is hoped there will be a large attendance and a full representation by delegates, as there will need be some judicious planning for the next Annual Meeting in June. Shall there be a camp-meeting, as last year? Where? Pray for this meeting, and come praying. Don't forget the collection.

D. COGSWELL, Pres't.
WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

The next Q. M. of the A. C. Conference of No. Penn. and So. New York, will be held with the church in Hornellsville, New York, commencing March 15 and continuing over Sunday. All are invited.

J. W. TAYLOR, Pres't.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

There will be a Q. M. held with the church at Fremont, Steuben Co. Saturday and Sunday, March 2 and 3.

J. W. TAYLOR.

Advertisements.

Free. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee-keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage.

H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper of 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.50 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4. Fifty copies, $15. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

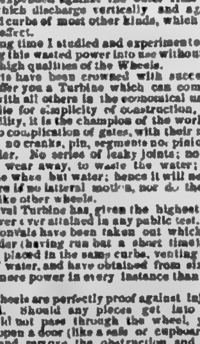
WAIT'S

TURBINE WATER WHEEL.



HUDSON RIVER CHAMPION

A WORD TO MILL MEN.

I have been building the Jonval Turbine for the past eight years. Have built some seven or eight different kinds of wheels. Am acquainted with nearly all the first class wheels in the country, and am fully persuaded that the Champion stands alone without a rival. Early I discovered that the tangential and centrifugal forces of the water, exerted a tremendous power which is expended against the outer rims of those wheels, which discharge vertically and against the scrolls and curbs of most other kinds, which is lost to all useful effect.

For a long time I studied and experimented carefully, to bring this wasted power into use without injuring the other high qualities of the Wheels.

My efforts have been crowned with success, and I can now offer you a Turbine which can compete successfully with all others in the economical use of the water, while for simplicity of construction, strength and durability, it is the champion of the world.

It has no complication of gates, with their multitude of Levers no cranks, pin, segments nor pinions to get out of order. No series of leaky joints; no rubbing surface to wear away, to waste the water; nothing touches the wheel but water; hence it will never wear out. There is no latteral motion, nor do their steps wear out like other wheels.

The Jonval Turbine has given the highest percentage of power ever attained in any public test. Several of these Jonvals have been taken out which were in perfect order (having run but a short time), and the Champion placed in the same curbs, venting the same amount of water, and have obtained from six to eight per cent. more power in every instance than the Jonvals gave.

These wheels are perfectly proof against injury from flood-wood. Should any pieces get into the curb which could not pass through the wheel, you have simply to open a door (like a safe or cupboard), enter the curb, and remove the obstruction, and it is all ready for work again. This can be done in five minutes.

They are now in operation in every section of the country, giving unbounded satisfaction and taking the places of all other wheels. The extreme low price for which they are sold astonishes everybody.

Circulars sent free. Address

P. H. WAIT, Sandy Hill, N. Y.

THRESHING MACHINE.

FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $500. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $300. Warranted as represented.

N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure. (tf) Address, A. J. Brown, Hesperia, Mich.

FANNING MILL. I make an excellent machine for cleaning wheat. It will take out all cheat and oats, and leave the wheat clean and fit for seed. I will ship one of these machines to the first brother who will send $25 to the office of THE TIMES. They are well worth $35. E. M. Wheeler, Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Ill.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.

This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

HOW TO GO WEST."

Forty years ago, Illinois was as far West as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of Progress and Improvement, the word West has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid Line of Railroad.

This Line of Railroad is the Burlington Route, which starts from Chicago by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and, running through Burlington, reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific, and other railroads running from these cities.

People going to Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, California, or any point in the Territories, will study their own interests by going "By way of Burlington," for the rates of that Line are always as low as any other, and it is the best Route in the West, therefore you are more sure of your safety and comfort.

The Burlington Route has admirably answered the question "How to go West?" by the publication of an excellent pamphlet, containing a large, truthful map of the Great West, and much interesting and valuable information, which can be obtained free of charge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

Our Book and Tract Column

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—20 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—36 pp. Restitution—36 pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,500 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,200 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 300 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers into Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 126 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single, $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 20c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral, social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 25c.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul, and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 10c.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 234 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 16c. Single volume 60c.; postage, 6c.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, post-paid

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 18c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $5, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 40c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures, with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 31. BUCHANAN, FEBRUARY 27, 1872. WHOLE NO. 411.

Contents.

The Lord's Supper; From Arkansas....341

How About Annihilation? Everlasting Punishment....342

What Can I do for Jesus? Hope for our Race....343

Brief Editorials; Editor's Journal; Wanted—Persecution; A Model Donation; Baptised but Unregenerate Heathen Philosophy....344

Plainness of Speech; An Excellent Way; Editorial Gleanings; At Home and Abroad....345

Our Cause; The Art of Stopping; Discussion at Morrisonville; The Resurrection of Christ....346

Instrumental Music in Religious Worship; "I Dont Care;" The Unbaptised Child; Correspondence; Brief Extracts....347

Business Agent's Department; Book Notices; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements; Book and Tract Column....348

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 27, 1872.

The Lord's Supper.

A correct understanding of this subject as to the time when this ordinance should be observed is of vast importance to the Christian church, especially to that class that are expecting him to come the second time from heaven, the same Son Of Man that arose from the dead. There is no ordinance left to the church which has such a tendency to unite and cheer the hearts of those that feel that the blood of Jesus has been shed to wash away our sins. When we contemplate the pierced hands and feet and sufferings of one who knew no sin, all to deliver us from the enemy death and become our Savior or life giver the very thought or contemplation of this love is sufficient to melt the heart and long for the time when he will come again. This ordinance was more realized in the three first centuries than in these last days. The church came together on every first or Lord's day to be instructed in the way of truth, to attend to this solemn institution, and to cheer one another to persevere unto the end. But in these last days it is thought by some that once a year is quite sufficient. Such an idea never was entertained by the church for the three first centuries, except by a few Jews who claimed to be partially under the law of Moses.

My object in writing this article is to convince the church that we have departed far away from that practice of the apostles and the early church. I wish first to notice the claims of those in our day that hold this institution is a part of the law of Moses. Those who claim that this institution is part of the Mosaic law, as a general thing are either converted Jews to Christianity or converted Christians to Judaism. I say as a general thing, because all those that set forth these views at first as far as I know are either Jews or those which believe that the Jews after the flesh will be restored in the age to come. In an article in the Herald of Life, March, 1865, Br. Lederer, a converted Jew, who is "an Israelite indeed," says "There are certain doctrines in the Christian religion in which a Hebrew Christian is more interested than in others; particularly is this the case with such institutions as are purely Jewish, and which by direct command of the divine Author of Christianity have really not another form but another and more important meaning, representing and commemorating events of more general and more glorious consequences than these which called forth those institutions among the children of Israel, by divine command of course, before the appearance of the son of David. ....There are but two ceremonial institutions or ordinances which our Savior kept by for his followers from the many which were in existence among his people, namely, baptism and the Lord's Supper. Baptism existed among the Jews before and in the days of Christ and is still practiced by the Jews of our day."

This article shows the strong attachment to his mother church. (Gal. 1: 15.) I wish our brother had referred us to that portion of the law of Moses where the "Lord's Supper," is even hinted at, for I am sure it is not plainly revealed by Moses; for if such was the case some use would have been made of it by those who claim that the Lord's Supper should only be attended to once a year, on the passover day, according to the law. If it was a part of the Mosaic institution then it ended when Christ was nailed to the cross.

It appears that the Lord's Supper was instituted after the supper or passover was eaten. The wine was the first thing drank after giving thanks, then the lamb was eaten with "bitter herbs." The order is given by Luke (ch. 22: 17-20): "And he took the cup and gave thanks, and said, Take this and divide it among yourselves; for I say unto you I will not drink of the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God shall come. And he took bread, and gave thanks and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you. This do in remembrance of me. Likewise also the cup, after supper, saying, this cup is the new testament in my blood which is shed for you." It is evident from Luke's testimony that after supper our Lord instituted this memorial of his sufferings; and therefore it was no part of the law of Moses. And Paul so understood it, for he calls it the "Lord's Supper," instead of the passover supper, which the law required to be eaten as a memorial of the deliverance from Egypt; which was annually observed and ended when the antitypical Lamb, Jesus, was slain. The law brought us to Christ and there ended. (Gal. 3: 25.)

I would ask if we are not now under the law why observe or continue the anniversary of the passover? But, says one, "Christ as our passover, was slain for us: therefore let us keep the feast," etc. (1 Cor. 5: 7.) The margin says, "Let us keep the holy day." From this expression it is assumed that Paul was speaking of the anniversary feast of the Jewish passover. It is claimed by some that the last part of the passover, the breaking of the bread and partaking of the wine is still to be continued during the gospel dispensation; for this was the "concluding service of the passover." As I have before stated I have yet to learn from the law of Moses that this "concluding service" was ever instituted before our Lord first gave it to his disciples after the passover supper was eaten. The custom was to partake of the wine first after giving thanks; then they ate the passover, with bread, dipping it into the bitter herbs. But in this case Jesus took the bread and the cup after supper, and gave thanks: for Luke says: "Likewise the cup also after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood which is shed for you." The words "likewise also" show that the bread was broken after supper as well as the cup "taken" after supper, and therefore was not at all connected with the ordinance commanded by Moses.

Let us see if we can ascertain what feast or holy day Paul said, "let us keep." In this same epistle (ch. 11) we learn the church came together to celebrate the Lord's supper and "the feast of charity" as it was termed in his day. He upbraided some of them for their unchristian conduct. He says: "When therefore ye come together, ye eat and drink not as is becoming on the day of our Lord, but one and another proceedeth to eat his own supper: and one is hungry and another is drunken. What! have ye no houses in which ye can eat and drink? or despise ye the church of God, and shame them who have nothing? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you? In this I praise you not. For I have received from our Lord that which I imparted to you; that our Lord Jesus on the night he was betrayed took bread and blessed and brake it, and said, Take, eat; this is my body which is broken for your sakes. This do in remembrance of me. So after they had supped he gave also the cup and said, This cup is the new testament in my blood. This do as often as ye drink it in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup ye commemorate the death of our Lord until his Advent." (Syriac).

I have quoted so much of Paul's words that we might consider what kind of feast is here referred to, and on what day it was celebrated. First, Paul upbraids some for eating their own supper and getting drunk. What does Paul mean by "eating their own supper," etc? It was the custom in those days to have a feast of charity, and those that were well to do brought bread and wine, etc., sufficient for themselves and for those that were poor and unable to provide anything. Everything that was brought was consecrated to the Lord with thanksgiving, and all had equal right to share in the feast. But it seems there was contention among them; and instead of dividing what they brought among the poorer brethren, they devoured their own supper, and got drunk on the wine which they had brought. This will be better understood when I give the history on this point. This feast is said to have occured "on the day of our Lord." On what day of the week is the day of our Lord? Paul says (Acts 20: 7): And on the first day of the week when we assembled to break the eucharist, (Syriac.) Here we have the Lord's Supper commemorated on the first day of the week, which is called "the Lord's day." This could not occur on the anniversary of the passover for that occurred on the sixth day of the week, the day before the Jewish Sabbath.

Again, if the institution of the Lord's Supper was part of the Mosaic law, and all partook of it, then our Lord must have eaten his own body and drank his own blood, for he did eat the passover and drank of the wine as it was the custom among the Jews. The thing is entirely absurd to suppose, that the supper instituted by our Lord was any part of the Mosaic law. Paul says: "For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup." This language "as often" shows that it was not to be observed as an annual feast or supper, for such language would not be used if there had been any particular time given, especially if it were annually. The definition given by Webster is, "frequently, many times, not seldom." In fact the word "often" never indicates a set time unless it is in comparison of a greater length of time. If Paul understood the matter, then he did not understand that the "Lord's Supper" was only to be observed once a year. If he being a Jew did not consider it a part of the Mosaic law, it is useless to receive the testimony of Jew or Gentile of these days to prove it is part of the ceremonial law engrafted on the Christian church.

As I have given some testimony from the inspired word of this point, I now purpose to give an historical account in the apostles days. I will quote from Mosheim as he is a standard church historian. He says: "The people though they had not abandoned the Jewish worship held however separate assemblies, in which they were instructed by the apostles and elders, and prayed together, celebrated the holy supper in remembrance of Christ, of his death and sufferings, and the salvation offered to mankind through him; and at the conclusion of these meetings they testified their mutual love partly by their liberality to the poor, and partly by a sober and friendly repast, which from thence was called "feast of charity." (Vol. 1, part 1, ch. 4.) Again: "All Christians were unanimous in setting apart the first day of the week, on which the triumphant Savior arose from the dead, for the solemn celebration of public worship. To the end of these services were added certain hymns which were sung, not by the whole assembly, but by persons appointed for that purpose, during the celebration of the Lord's Supper and Feast of Charity. Such were the essential parts of divine worship, which were observed in all Christian churches, though perhaps the method and order in which they were performed were not the same in all places. Every Christian who was in opulent condition, and indeed every one according to their circumstances, brought with them gifts and offered them as it were to the Lord. Of the bread and wine presented in these offerings such a quantity was separated from the rest as was required in the administration of the Lord's Supper. These were set apart by prayer by the bishop, to which the people said, Amen. The Holy Supper was distributed by the deacons, and this sacred institution was followed by the Feast of Charity. Many attempts have been made to fix precisely the nature of these social feasts; but here it must be again considered that the rites and customs of the primitive Christians were very different in different countries, and consequently these feasts, like other institutions, were not every where in the same manner." (Mosheim, Vol. 1, part 2, ch. 4.)

Bingham in his Antiquities of the Christian church, says: "If we run over the whole history of the three first ages of the church we shall find this to have the custom practised, and was never omitted by any assembly of Christians whatever." Here are facts which dispute the theory that the Lord's Supper is an annual feast, which was to be observed as a passover feast. It will be seen that the church of these last days is far behind the apostolic church, not only in celebrating the Lord's Supper, but in their "Feast of Charity." There is one thing worthy of notice: in celebrating the supper in the Apostle's days they attended to the Lord's Supper first; afterward the feast was attended to. But in these days the feast comes first, and then the Lord's Supper.

M. E. GREEN.

Crisis please copy.

From Arkansas.

Since writing my last I have had to "contend earnestly for the faith," but I praise the name of my Master that "his grace has been sufficient for me," and I feel that I have "come out more than conqueror" in this great fight of faith. But as the champion oak of the forest owes half his strength and beauty to the driving tempest's power, even so I feel that I am strengthened by every conflict; that every assault of the enemy only tends to shake me loose from the weak and foolish traditions of my fathers, and force me in humble faith to seek refuge behind the battlements of truth where I can stand secure, and smile complacently, while the malicious darts of my enemies fall harmless at my feet.

I feel now to be earnestly engaged in the great gospel work of making known to dying men the blessed truth that they can find an antidote to death only in Jesus Christ, the fountain of life. And oh, what an easy matter to preach the truth when we have believed it ourselves! It is an easy matter for us to explain and communicate that which we understand. Although I have been trying for four years I was almost entirely ignorant concerning the real truth of the gospel. But I feel now that the clouds and fogs of tradition have been dispersed and that I have had a sunburst of gospel light, a rich and glorious feast of "hidden manna," (hidden before to me) which enables me to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus."

My church is now taking steps to try me as a heretic. They have a hard time of it. The majority of the church sympathize with me. In fact the bone and sinew is Adventist in principle. I preached yesterday by request on the nature of man, and to-day on the kingdom of God. Both discourses met with general approbation, with a few exceptions. One good brother arose after I was through and said I was preaching heresy, and the church would have to deal with me as a heretic. I plead guilty of preaching doctrine that was not Baptist, but told them that if it was heresy, as had been affirmed, it appeared to me that the evidences of it might be produced. After some deliberation they thought best to give more time, so they put my trial off till the April meeting, when I shall have to meet in discussion a "Goliath." But I pray that I may be fully armed and equipped with the preparation of the gospel, "spiritual weapons which are mighty to the pulling down of strongholds." Pray for me in this hour of trial.

G. W. CROSBY.

Michigan. 1872.

Michigan Adventists: wake up! Remember Michigan is to have a camp-meeting this year. It may be well to begin to think about it. Every church will want a tent. Let all commence in time. Every member of the committee is alive, and resolved by the blessing of the Lord to make the yearly meeting of 1872 a success. Let the churches co-operate. God speed our work.

J. R. PRESTON,
One of Com.

Communications.

How about Annihilation?

There are many people who are greatly exercised about the certain few who profess to believe annihilation the doom of the impenitent. They can be satisfied with nothing short of everlasting torture in a lake of fire and brimstone. If they could but once have a thought that they at no distant day might be one of the many in the hell of orthodoxy, I have no doubt they would be willing to examine the Scripture evidence concerning the future of the lost. But I do not care about troubling these persons concerning their Simon-pure orthodox views of the future abode of the wicked. Leaving them let us consider a few of the points that lead us into a belief in annihilation. What is annihilation? Unless some, who like a Freewill Baptist minister, think that when a structure is destroyed, it is not annihilated, we will give the definition of annihilation. By the way, the Freewill Baptist minister claimed that when a man died he was no more annihilated than a building burned to the ground was annihilated. I heartily agree with him. The building is destroyed, said he, but not annihilated. The elements that formed it still exist. Reading from the selfsame dictionary which he used while getting up his anti-materialistic sermon, I read, "Annihilate: to reduce to nothing, to destroy the existence of; as no human power can annihilate matter: to destroy the form or peculiar distinctive properties so that the specific thing no longer exists as . . . . to ANNIHILATE a HOUSE by demolishing its structure."

Again: "Annihilation: the act of reducing to nothingness or non-existence; or the act of destroying the form or combination of parts under which a thing exists so that the name can be no longer applied to it." Now Webster's dictionary needs revision, or else the ideas of some on annihilation do. Who can reasonably doubt death to be annihilation? Does not the person cease to exist? If not, then how foolish it is to punish a man because he has killed his fellow, when his fellow still exists! Does not law recognize the fact that at death man ceases to exist? Do not physicians consider this to be the state of affairs when they see no signs of life in the body? Do we not publish to the world that such and such a person is dead, has ceased to exist? Is the world to live in anxious fear that James Fisk jr. still lives, and may be back to curse the earth? Why, it is to argue against every principle of common sense to say that a man does not cease to exist when he dies. Then if he ceases to exist he is annihilated; there is no escape from it. Although we do not find cessation of existence in Webster's definition of death, and although he does give annihilation as a synonym of death, it is made so by his remark upon death in the table of synonyms. There his good sense speaks: "Death applies to every form of existence, both animal and vegetable." And so reason teaches us to regard death and annihilation as convertible words. Both mean a cessation of existence. And if it is any more pleasant to one to think that the end of the sinner is endless death, than to consider it annihilation, why I see no cause for dispute with him. If we go to the Bible we find God threatening man with death if he disobeyed. Man disobeyed, and God pronounced the curse of death upon him, and described tersely that death to be a return to the dust out of which man was taken. Now this always looked decidedly like annihilation to me. It seems that the structure, man, is no longer man. When the elements that composed him are dissolved, man is no more. In simple language, he is dead. In obnoxious, yet no less true, language he is annihilated. This curse was pronounced upon all men, but to give man a chance to escape from its eternal grasp, God instituted a way of salvation through faith in his Son Jesus Christ. Up to this day we have seen men die; we have seen nothing leave them; we have buried all we ever called by their name; we have seen them slowly but surely return to their dust. But they may not have died without hope in a resurrection, or faith in God's promise to resurrect even a being not in existence.

It would be impossible for us to conceive how this can be; but it is impossible for us to conceive how this world was made; and we have no more reason for skepticism in the one case than in the other. This is just what harmony between the Scriptures and common sense leads us to believe: that God pronounced death upon all men; that all are under this curse; that death is what God defines it—a return to the dust; that the only means of escape from its grasp is that held out to us through faith in Jesus Christ. Outside of the Bible we have no hope nor reason for expecting an after life. Faith in Christ's power to perform miracles is all the hope we get in this Bible. Thank God, it is all-sufficient to those who truly believe that the Bible is what it is represented to be. Many confess their faith weak in Christ's promise to raise one that has gone out of existence. I can not see how they believe in Christ at all if this staggers their credulity. Although the resurrection promised those who truly love the Lord seems an impossibility, is it any more so than it would be to feed five thousand people upon five loaves and two fishes? If one believes Christ performed that miracle have they any reason to limit his power? If they do not believe this do they believe in Christ at all.

But will the wicked also be resurrected? I should deny Bible truth to say otherwise: but resurrected to damnation, which is said to be death, and eternal death, death that knows no resurrection. Orthodox people ask why they are thus resurrected. God says in the Bible, to be punished. Why not punish them at death? We interrogate the secrets of Deity. For my part I am willing to let God have some secrets. I have such an unbounded faith in him that I am not afraid to let him do as he said he would do, without inquiring why he does it.

To briefly review before closing I hold that death as defined by God is equivalent in its results to annihilation. That God has promised a resurrection to all;—to life and joy if obedient to his requirements; to death eternal if transgressors, or annihilation without a hope of life again. I ask none to believe this because I do. I may be in error. If so may God speedily show it to me.

J. D. JONES.

Everlasting Punishment.

What is the nature of this everlasting or eternal punishment? Is it death, the extinction of life? or is it eternal life in misery? Modern theology affirms the latter. We deny, and claim that death is the threatened punishment. But it is objected that death is no punishment. Let us see. On our statute book of Missouri death is recognized as a punishment. For instance: the legislature has enacted a law condemning murderers to death. The man who is thus guilty must die for his offence, which death is called capital punishment; not because it inflicts more misery than any other mode, but because it deprives of life.

But the great question is, does God in his statute book recognize and explain death to be a punishment. If so, what will it avail us to say death is no punishment? Dare we contradict God? If God says that death is a punishment and we say it is not, then do we reply against God.

"And if a man smite his servant or his maid with a rod, and he die under his hand, he shall be surely punished." (Ex. 21: 20). The nature of the punishment is not here explained. It might be fine, imprisonment or death. But as God explains it let us believe what he says. In Numbers 35: 16 this punishment is explained to be death. "And if he smite him with throwing a stone, wherewith he may die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death." Now put the two statements side by side—Ex. 21: 20—"Be surely punished;" Numbers 35: 16—"Shall surely be put to death." Nothing can be plainer than that God explains death to be a punishment. Four times in this chapter it is declared that the murderer shall be put to death. Now as death is a punishment, everlasting or eternal death would be everlasting or eternal punishment. There is no way to avoid this conclusion. It is both Scriptural and logical.

But, says one, the New Testament Scriptures do not affirm death to be the punishment of the wicked! to which I reply, the Old and New Testaments do not contradict each other. Whatever one teaches in relation to man's nature and destiny the other affirms. But Paul in Rom. 6: 21-23 most pointedly teaches life to be the reward of the righteous, and death the doom of the wicked. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Observe the contrast: life to the righteous, and death to the wicked. As death is a punishment, everlasting death will be the doom of the wicked, inflicted at the judgment. Let us seek for life everlasting to be given when the Master comes.

A. F. DUGGER.

The Year-day Theory.

In the Advent Christian Times of Dec. 19, is an article by W. N. Pile, under the caption, "The Year-day Theory: is it correct?" I have read it with care, and wish to offer the following remarks concerning it.

The writer says: "A day for a year is a divinely established principle." He quotes in proof, Num. 14: 34. But there is no symbolic prophecy in this passage. In v. 33, Moses says: "And your children shall wander in the wilderness forty years." Here the time is told in language. In the next verse Moses refers to the historic incident of the forty days spent in searching the land. Just in the same manner, Christ referred to the incident of Jonah being three days and three nights within the whale (Mat. 12: 40); but there is no symbol in either case. When symbols are interpreted, they are interpreted after the symbols have been seen of course. If the forty days in Num. 14: 34 are symbols, they follow the interpretation (forty years), which is in v. 33: but symbols always precede their interpretation; hence, these forty days are not symbols. The writer also refers to Ezk. 4: 5, 6. In this case the forty days are symbols; and the scale of representation is given—"each day for a year" But why is this so? For this plain reason: the Lord told Ezekiel to lie upon one of his sides 390 days, and then upon the other 40 days, 430 in all. The attitude of the prophet and the length of time, were intended to represent the kingdoms of Judah and Israel, bearing their iniquity for 430 years. The prophet could not live 430 years; therefore, the Lord required him to lie as described for a shorter period; stating distinctly that, in this case, a day means a year. There is no other case in the entire Bible like this: therefore, there is not another prophecy in the Bible, to which "a day for a year" is applicable. In every other prophecy containing numbers, the prediction is verbal—in language. I once understood a day to represent a year; but (excepting Ezk. 4: 4, 6), I am fully satisfied, that the prophecies can never be satisfactorily interpreted upon this plan.

Again: the writer introduces the 70 weeks of Dan. 9: 24. in proof that a day represents a year. These 70 weeks he considers 490 years. This is obtained by multiplying the 70 by 7; thus obtaining 490 days which in turn are made to represent years. In the Septuagint we read: "Hebdomakonto hebdomades"—seventy sevens. But "seventy sevens" of what? Of days? weeks, months, years, or centuries? We can learn only by the preceding context. In the second verse we read: "In the first year of his reign, I, Daniel, understood by books the number of the YEARS, whereof the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish SEVENTY YEARS in the desolation of Jerusalem." Here we have years, seventy years. This number may be considered Daniel's text, upon which the whole chapter. to v. 19, is based. There are no weeks in the first twenty-three verses: and the twenty-fourth verse begins thus: "SEVENTY SEVENS are determined upon thy people." These can only be seventy sevens of years—490 years. They cannot be seventy sevens of weeks; because weeks are not in the preceeding context: therefore we cannot supply them. There being no weeks to reduce to days, there is here no authority for the year-day system. Again says the writer: "The connection of the prophetic periods by symbols evidences the year-day theory." There is certainly no symbol in Dan. 12: 11, 12, which reads as follows: "And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days. Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." A symbol must be present and visible, representing that which is absent, and, of course, invisible at the time the symbol is seen. Nothing of this is seen in the quotation just made. But are the 1290 and 1335 "prophetic periods?"

In Dan. 8: 14, we read thus: "And he said unto me, unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." The symbols in this chapter end with the 12th verse—they, like all other prophetic symbols, are seen. In v. 13 and 14 Daniel hears—this part of the prophecy is in language; not in symbol. So, then, the 2300 days in this place, are not connected with symbols. But are the 2300 days a "prophetic period?"

In Rev. 11: 2, we read thus: "And the holy city shall they tread underfoot forty and two months." Here again there is no symbol. The prophecy is in language only, and the tense of the verb is future. Symbols, therefore, are out of the question. But are the 42 months "a prophetic period?"

In Rev. 11: 3, we read thus: "And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and three score days, clothed in sackcloth." Like the last example, this is a purely verbal prophecy.

In Rev. 13: 5 we read thus: "And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months." The language grammatically connected with a symbol, must describe either the symbol or that which it represents. Here is nothing else it can describe. If the language is properly descriptive of the symbol, it is symbolic, representing an analogous description of the thing represented. But if the language is properly descriptive of that which is represented, it is not symbolic. Symbolic language is seen in Dan. 7: 7—"Behold a fourth BEAST dreadful, and terrible, and strong exceedingly. Unsymbolic is seen in the next verse—"Behold, in this HORN were eyes like eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things." This "beast" represents a king, (17); but the description is that of a beast, the symbol. This "horn" represents a king, and the description is that of a king, the thing represented; therefore this language is unsymbolic. Thus, we see that language may be connected with a symbol and yet not be symbolic. To determine the kind of language in every case, is indispensible to the correct understanding of the prophecy.

Now let us return to the "beast" in Rev. 13: 5. This is Daniel's fourth beast, and, of course, represents one king. See Dan. 7: 17, Rev. 17: 11 and 16: 10. The language previously quoted from Rev. 13: 5, must describe either the beast or the king whom he represents. "A mouth speaking great things and blasphemies," can be said of a king but not of a beast; therefore the language is not symbolic. The next verse says; "And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God." This describes the KING, not the beast. Here we have another "prophetic period" not connected with the symbol, the beast, but with the king, the thing symbolized. What is true of the cases examined in this article, is equally true of the other "prophetic period." They are all literal.

P. S. G. WATSON.

Versailles, Ky.

REPLY.

I. By reference to my former article it will be seen that I did not assert that Num. 14: 34 was connected with a symbolic prophecy, but referred to it and Ezk. 4: 4-6 to show that the use of a day to represent a year was a "divinely established principle." The reference by Christ to "the incident of Jonah being three days and three nights within the whale" does not bear upon the point, for in the cases of Jonah and Christ the periods were both alike and are stated so to be; while the forty days search of the land are stated to have represented forty years of wandering in the wilderness. In this case the two periods are not alike, therefore the forty days may be properly said to have been symbolic days, though not connected with a symbolic prophecy. A symbol is a "type, emblem;" a "representative agent or object," and the forty days, though an "historical incident," are used by the Lord to "represent" forty years. The fact of a period having been historic does not forbid its subsequent use as representative or symbolic.

Next our brother refers to Ezk. 4: 4-6, and in this case admits the three hundred and ninety, and forty days to have been symbols. The principle reason of this admission is because "the prophet could not live four hundred and thirty years; therefore the Lord required him to lie as described, for a shorter period; stating in this case, a day represents a year. There is no other case in the entire Bible like this." It seems, then, that the Lord was under the necessity of making these days symbolic to suit the condition of the prophet; but we think that the same God that could keep a man alive in such positions during four hundred and thirty days could also during four hundred and thirty years. Certainly little more power would be required in the latter case than in the former. But does our brother believe the prophet Ezekiel literally lay upon his side during four hundred and thirty literal days? If he will read carefully from ch. 1: 4 to the close of ch. 4 he will find that Ezekiel saw wonderful sights, was transported from place to place, ate the "roll of a book," laid "siege against" Jerusalem, "built a fort against it and cast a mount against it; set the camp against it," etc., and "lay on his side four hundred and thirty days,—all in vision." The chronology indicates that the next year after this when he should have been lying on his side (if the transaction was literal,) he was sitting in his house with the elders of Judah about him; see ch. 8: 1, 2. All necessity in the case, therefore, is removed, and it becomes apparent that the only reason why these days represent years is because the Lord thought it eminently proper under the circumstances; therefore "a day for a year is a divinely established principle."

II. Passing over some important parts of my article my brother next refers to the "seventy weeks" of Dan. 9. I anticipated his objections in my article and answered them; but will examine them again. By reference to his review it will be seen that he says that the "seventy sevens" can not be weeks "because weeks are not in the preceding context," but are years because Daniel mentions the seventy years of the captivity in v. 2.

But we deny that the two periods sustain any relation to each other. Daniel says he "understood by books the number of the years" that Jeremiah gave literally as the length of the captivity. Having ascertained by searching this prophecy that the end of the captivity was at hand, (in about one year afterward Cyrus issued his proclamation permitting the Jews to return to Jerusalem), he began to pray that his people might be released. While praying, the angel Gabriel whom he had "seen in the vision at the beginning," touched him and said, "I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. . . . therefore understand the matter and consider the vision." Then commences the prophecy of the "seventy sevens," which our brother admits are seventy sevens of years. From this we learn that the seventy weeks are connected with the former vision, and not in any way dependent upon the seventy years of v. 2 for their interpretation. There is not even an analogy between seventy years and four hundred and ninety years, but there is between seventy weeks of days and four hundred and ninety years.

We now come to the word "hebdomad." It is admitted that our English word "week," defines "the space of seven days." Now if it can be proved that the word hebdomad is properly rendered by "week," it "evidences the year-day theory." (1) The Greek word "hebdomad" is the equivalent of the Hebrew "shevua." Gesenius defines "shevua: "a seven, a sennight, hebdomas, i. e., a week." In the phrase, shevua zoph (Gen. 29:27) shevua is not fem., but et. constr. before zoph, i. e., the week of this daughter.

(1) Princ. a week of days, seven days, (Gen. 29:27, 28) . . . . (2) A week of years, seven years, (Dan. 9:24, 29). Compare hebdomas annorum,

Gesenius' first and principal definition is a "week of days," and while his second is "a week of years" it is evident that inasmuch as the word "week" covers but the "space of seven days," the expression "week of years" is only proper upon the principle that each of the seven days of the "week" mentioned represents a year.

Roy in his Hebrew Lexicon defines "shevua"—"a week." Pick also gives, "a week."

The feast of Pentecost was called the "feast of weeks," because it was celebrated fifty days after passover. (2) We will now give some instances of the use of the word hebdomadon in the Greek of the Septuagint as the equivalent of the Hebrew "shevuaoth." Ex. 34:22; Num. 28:26; Dan. 24, 25, 26. In these places as in others, the translators of the Septuagint into English have given weeks. The English version, translated from the Hebrew, also gives "weeks." The opinions of these scholars is entitled to respect, especially when they have no theorie[illegible] warp their judgment.

(3) Webster defines [illegible] "week; a period of seven days. [illegible] defines hebdomadal: "weekly; consisting of seven days, or occurring every seven days." Worcester defines hebdomad: "a week; space of seven days." He defines hebdomadal, "weekly." Adam Clark says on Dan. 9:24, "The Jews had sabbatic years (Lev. 25:8), by which their years were divided into weeks of years, as in this important prophecy, each week containing seven years. The seventy weeks, therefore, here spoken of, amount to four hundred and ninety years."

We have here the testimony of Gesenius, Roy, Hick, the Septuagint, and English versions, Webster and Worcester, to say nothing of so eminent a scholar as Adam Clark, to prove that hebdomad is properly rendered "week." Therefore as a week is a space of seven days, and as the prophecy of Dan. 9:24–27 has required four hundred and ninety years in its fulfillment, the four hundred and ninety days contained in the seventy weeks were representative, therefore symbolic of as many years.

III. Our brother says there is no symbol in Dan. 12:11, 12. But let us see. The "daily sacrifice" was a literal sacrifice under the Jewish dispensation, but does this forbid its use as a symbol? No. The New Testament furnishes abundant evidence that the apostles understood it of Christian worship. There were many "abominations" under that dispensation, and some of them were "desolating" ones. Does this forbid the use of the expression "abomination of desolation" in a symbolic sense? The first of Winthrop's "seven laws of symbolization," found in his Essay on the Laws of Prophetic Symbols, is this: "The symbol and that which it represents resemble each other in the station they fill, the relation they sustain, and the agencies they exert in their respective spheres." Thus we see that both the "daily sacrifice" and the "abomination of desolation" may be said to be symbols. But again, what are the facts in the case? There are two applications made of this prophecy: the destruction of Jerusalem, and the establishment of the Roman Catholic church as a persecuting power. The first cannot be true either upon the day-day or year-day theories. 1335 literal days or years from A. D. 70 brought no resurrection, therefore the second application is the only one entitled to consideration. The 1290 and 1335 days are "prophetic periods" because they measure prophetic events.

IV. Our brother next refers to the 2300 days of Dan. 8:14 and says, "The symbols in the chapter end with v. 12. They, like all other prophetic symbols, are SEEN. In vv. 13 and 14 Daniel hears this part of the prophecy in language; not in symbol. So then the 2300 days in this place, are not connected with symbols."

By reference to vv. 10 and 11 it will be seen that the Roman power takes away the "daily sacrifice," and casts down "the host" by reason of "transgression." Now mark vv. 13 and 14: "How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

We learn from this that the 2300 days were given to measure the symbols which "end with v. 12," therefore the 2300 days are "connected with symbols."

The work of the powers symbolized from v. 1 to v. 12 occupied hundreds of years, therefore the "days" measuring the "vision" are year-days. Again, by comparing Dan. 8:10–14 with Dan. 12:11, 12 it will be seen that the "daily sacrifice" and the "transgression," or "abomination of desolation" are the [illegible]bjects of both chapters. The 1335 [illegible] reach to "the end of the wonders" [illegible] resurrection, while the 2300 days, measuring as they do—"the vision" must begin not later than sometime during the reign of Medo-Persia. Therefore both the 2300 and 1335 days are year-days.

V. Our brother next refers to Rev. 11:2, and says, "Here again there is no symbol."

The "holy city" mentioned here is certainly either literal or symbolic. If literal, it refers to literal Jerusalem. That city had been destroyed twenty-six years before the revelation was given, therefore no such city really existed, except we apply the name to its former site or ruins. The city then must first be rebuilt before its treading under foot forty-two literal months can begin; but the language of Christ forbids this—"Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.' (Lk. 21:24.) This treading down was to commence with its overthrow in A. D. 70. It has now been trodden down 1800 years and is to remain so till the end. The forty-two months therefore do not refer to the literal city. Rev. 11:2 cannot refer to the "New Jerusalem" of ch. 21, for [illegible] calamity can overtake that city.

There is but one [illegible] application, viz. that the "holy city" of Rev. 11:2 is a symbol of the true church in contradistinction to the Roman church which is symbolized by the "great city Babylon" of ch. 17. The true church was "trodden down" by the "Gentile" kings, influenced by the unholy "woman" or "city Babylon," during forty-two months of years. The fulfillment therefore proves our application.

VI. Next in order is Rev. 11:3—the "two witnesses." Our brother says: "Like the last example, this is a purely verbal prophecy. If so, then these two witnesses are two men. If so, they are also olive trees and candlesticks. "Fire proceedeth out of their mouth and destroyeth their enemies," and yet notwithstanding all this power they are killed by the "beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit." Is all this purely verbal? We confess our incredulity.

VII. The next reference is to Rev. 13:5—the "beast like a leopard." Our brother says: "If the language is properly descriptive of the symbol, it is symbolic, representing an analogous description in the thing represented. But if the language is properly descriptive of that which is represented, it is not symbolic." Again he says: "A mouth speaking great things and blasphemies can be said of a king, but not of a beast: therefore the language is not symbolic." The next verse says: "And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God." This describes the KING, not the beast. We do not know what authority there is for our brother's rules, but they are certainly very defective. This beast which John saw in vision was an anomaly. It had seven heads and ten horns, crowns upon its horns, a bear's feet, a lion's mouth, &c., &c. This language does not properly describe any beast of which we have knowledge. Neither does this language properly describe any king which might be symbolized by such a beast. No king has seven heads and ten horns, &c. But again, in Rev. 17 there is a woman seen sitting on a seven-headed beast. The angel says he will shew John the mystery. But his explanation is: "The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth." Now it is not properly descriptive to say that a woman sat on seven heads of a beast, neither is it to say she sat upon seven mountains. Either is an impossibility in nature. Again: "The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." (Rev. 17:15.) Now this language explains the symbol of the waters, but leaves that of the woman unexplained. Again, it leaves us the anomaly of a woman seated on peoples, multitudes, nations, &c. It would not help us to say that the angel says the woman is that "great city," &c. because a city does not drink blood, sit on the waters, etc. Who can read Rev. 18 and not see that there is a double symbolization of the Catholic church kept up through the chapter by the interchangable use of the woman and city Babylon. It is useless to say the city of Rome is meant, for the prophecy says the city Babylon.

Returning to Rev. 13 we find the prophecy says: "And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? Who is able to make war with him? And there was given unto him [the beast] a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies: and power was given unto him [the beast] to continue [or make war] forty-two months." The beast is a symbol, and it is just as proper to say that the beast opened his mouth in blasphemy, &c., as to say that a woman sat upon peoples, nations, &c. The very use of such language proves it to be symbolic. In Dan. 7:11 we read: "I beheld then because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake," &c Our brother says of the beast like a leopard: This is Daniel's fourth beast, and of course represents one king.

Both these statements we deny. The fourth beast of Daniel represents the Roman Empire in the extent of its history, and embracing all its changes. The dragon of Rev. 12 represents it as it was at the first advent, and the beast like a leopard, two-horned beast, &c. represent the subsequent changes which took place. Again, the beast like a leopard does not represent one king, but a successor or line of kings reaching through 1260 years.

We now call attention to Winthrop's seventh law of his seven laws of symbolization. It is as follows: The periods of time during which a representative agent performs certain representative acts, symbolize the periods during which the agents denoted by the symbols perform the corresponding acts: and in all cases where such an interpretation is not contrary to analogy, days symbolize years.

Now let us apply this rule. Our brother admits that the 390 and forty days of Ezk. 4:4–6 are symbolic, because the prophet was a representative of Judah and Israel, bearing their iniquity, in lying on his side, in vision, and that those days represented years. For the same reason we believe the three days and a half, five months, the day, hour, month and a year, the 1260 days or forty-two months, the 1290 days the 1335 days, and the 2300 days are all symbolic, each day for a year. In each case a representative agent perform a representative action, and is therefore symbolic. The period of time measuring such action is therefore symbolic also.

We are fast approaching the end of these periods. May our faith be such as to fully prepare us that when the "day of vengeance" shall come it may be the year of our redemption. See Is. 63:4.

W. N. PILE.

What Can I do for Jesus?

Every one that feels—"Jesus died for me!" has asked this question of their own heart often. What can I do for Jesus? It is love that prompts the question, and love always finds a way to manifest itself. We show our faith by our works—so also our love is declared. Faith works by love, if it is genuine—and always works. The Christian has an infallible rule given by which he is to work. Love prompts him to obey that rule. In obedience to the divine law all find enough to do. True we may not be sent off as missionaries, or become gospel orators; but we can conquer self, and have the province of one soul subjected to Christ. Then when our hearts are imbued with his love and spirit, our influence will be felt by others. The Holy Spirit makes men feel that they are sinners, while he assigns the pleasing work of pointing them to the Savior. This is done by us unconsciously, sometimes, when we give ourselves anew to God in prayer, in the social meeting, or in the testimony we present to the world that we have found him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write. Thus while we speak of our own personal acquaintance with him, others catch the flame of love and begin to tell the story of the Lamb.

What can I do for Jesus?

Give yourself wholly to him and his cause. He will find place for you, and lead you out, and bless you. Yield to him now; and when he has accomplished his work in you, and with you, and when heaven's great pay-day comes, Jesus will come and receive you to himself.

J. R. PRESTON.

"Hope for our Race."

Personally, I have entertained a high regard for the venerable author of a pamphlet bearing the above title; and nothing but a sense of duty would prompt me to animadvert upon his religious career. It is painful to part with old friends and associates in the church or ministry, and to warn the young and unwary against their influence. But painful as it is, the task must be performed. When men who claim to be in advance of the religious intelligence of the age, and speak authoritatively as leaders of the people, it is right and proper that their pretensions should be closely scrutinized. And, if it shall appear, that they have boxed almost every point of the theological compass, and have been everything by turns and nothing long, it is reasonable to conclude that they are unsafe guides in matters of such vital importance to the welfare of our own race. It is the part of prudence to hesitate long and prayerfully before accepting their expositions of the Bible. They, as well as their writings, are proper subjects of criticism, and no consideration of friendship or personal worth ought to exempt them from its ordeal.

The Advent cause has suffered severely by the instability of some its professed advocates. All sorts of ultraisms and extremes have been contended for under that name. The cause has been wounded in the house of its friends. It has been shamefully abused and disgraced by men who crept in amongst us for the purpose of sowing the seed of discord and strife—not to build up but to pull down, not to unite but to divide. But the reign of lawlessness, anarchy, disorder is at an end with us. If men who profess to believe in the speedy coming of the Lord will not identify themselves with us, and share our reproach and labor for the good cause with their whole heart, let them keep aloof from us, and preach as the saying is "on their own hook."

On p. 5 of the pamphlet under review its author speaks as follows:

"In reviewing my own system I have looked at the great redemptive work of Christ, and asked myself, can it be possible that this stupendous work, manifesting so fully the love of God to his fallen creatures, is only to give eternal life to a very small minority of the race!! Has our loving Creator so deeply planted the love of endless life in every human breast, when he only purposed to give it to as few as is generally believed? I have made this similitude: suppose a farmer owns one thousand sheep, the wolves attack them, makes a great outlay, and uses protracted efforts to save them, professing and feeling great love for them; but finally succeeds in saving one out of a hundred; the rest the wolves devour. In such a case it might be asked who gets the victory? Viewing the state of the world from creation down to the present period, and exercising charity to its extent, we cannot believe that one out of one hundred have yet exercised that repentance and faith the Bible seems to require to obtain eternal life.

With this view of things, how are we to harmonize such declarations as these: "The bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world?"—John 6:51. "Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified [made known] in due time." 1 Tim. 2:6.

Can any discerning reader of this extract fail to see in it the elements of Universalism? To carry out the similitude, suppose the owner of the sheep, loses one of them; is the victory complete? Certainly not. Then, to apply the figure, Christ must save the whole human race to get a complete victory over Satan. This, in my opinion, is just what will be the ultimate position of the teachers of this new theory of the gospel.

Instead of there being but "few saved," according to the teaching of our blessed Savior, there will be but few lost, and perhaps none at all, according to our philanthropic author.

N. FIELD.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post paid

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection. These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents. It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 2 for 10 cents. 30 copies for $1

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c. Every one should have a copy.

Good Tidings. By Couch, Sheldon, Grant and Himes. Prophecy and theology. A valuable book. Paper, 50c. Cloth, $1.

Advent Christian Times.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 27, 1872.

JOSHUA V. HIMES. - - - - EDITOR

ONE thing we advise ministers never to be guilty of: we mean signing a letter with the prefix "Eld." or "Rev." to your name. Don't do it. Somebody may see it. It is weak, very weak. Whatever you mean, it looks as though you considered the title a distinction, and were puffed up by it.

"DAMP rooms and damp beds are the sepulchres and winding sheets of living men." So says a newspaper item. And no men realize it more fully than traveling preachers. Be sure their beds, when they sleep in a room where there is no fire, are thoroughly "aired," and that the sheets are dry and warm.

WE always read the reports of the meetings of the Radical Club of Boston, so tersely yet comprehensively reported in the New York Tribune. At their last session Darwinism was discussed, and as usual everybody disagreed with all the rest. Col. Higginson "professed himself more afraid of the despotism of science than of that of theology." For our part we see but little to choose. They are about equally matched for imperious dogmatism; and prefer the liberty of the gospel to either.

THE Congregationalist says:

> The plan of having a Bible service instead of a sermon has worked so well at Stoughton the past six months that it is to be continued.

—The unconscious irony of this passage is none the less severe for not being intentional. We cannot doubt that the substitution of "Bible services" for many of the sermons of these days would be a gospel reformation. But we are not so sure that sermonizing should be discontinued. The improvement should consist in having Bible sermons.

A UNITARIAN minister says "Heaven will not be shut forever without a knocker left upon the door for those who have staid behind." The orthodox journals respond by citing Lk. 13:25. The Restorationist feels that eternal misery is a moral impossibility: his orthodox opposer sees with equal clearness that the doom of all men is irreversibly fixed at the judgment. Both are right, but both hold a common error that keeps them apart—the notion that the soul must exist eternally. Neither will give that up. But the man who takes the Bible as it reads, rejecting Platonism, sees that neither eternal misery nor restorationism is true; but that all souls that neglect the means of life they may have will die, and die forever.

IN a late address to promote Christian unity, among other things J. C. Ryle said:

> He would urge that they should cultivate the habit of speaking charitably and courteously of those who disagree with them. Nothing so divides the church as the use of strong language—incivility must not be tolerated. This must not be mistaken for counsel to shirk the truth—but they need not, and must not, use words which were stinging, irritating, and vexatious. They must not revile. It was not right to stigmatize Ritualists as being necessarily Jesuits and liars. It was, he knew, hard to draw the line as long as there must be controversy, and it was difficult to hold the tongue in check. They need not carry about butter and honey in a lordly dish, but they must remember a word spoken in love will overcome a whole world of invective.
>
> Thirdly, they must make themselves acquainted with the real sentiments of those of other schools of thought. Ideas on this subject were too often picked up second hand. Men often attributed to others what was untrue, and then abused them.

—If Christian opponents of the different phases of Adventism would adopt these rules, we think they would esteem us more, and we are sure we could love them better.

> God does not need us, and can do entirely without us. He can drop us any moment into non-existence without any real loss to himself. Nay, the angel who has lived trillions of years in perfect obedience to God has no claim for another moment of existence.

—The above paragraph is from the pen of D. D. Whedon, one of the greatest minds of the Methodist church. We wish he would state on what grounds God keeps the wicked eternally living in misery. He could drop them out of existence any moment by a mere act of his will, or by simply withdrawing his sustaining power. He does not need them: they have perverted the existence he has given them. Who does need them? Is their misery an essential complement of the happiness of the righteous? Do the saved need their example continually before their eyes to prevent "a fall from grace" in the heavenly kingdom? Surely they are not kept alive for their own sake, as the righteous evidently are, as well as for God's glory. Why are they kept in endless miserable existence?

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

FRIDAY, Feb. 9. Finishing my work at home for the time, and commending my dear ones to God, I took the cars for Rochester. Duty calls, and its summons must be heeded. This is the state of trial and of work. I look to the next world for rest. And did I not believe in the "world to come," a world of reward, of blessedness, and immortality, I would not spend my life as I now do, almost entirely, for what I deem to be the good of others.

Saturday night I arrived safely at Rochester, and had a kind reception from Br. Fay Brownell and family. Here I am to work for the next two weeks with Br. James H. Whitmore, for the cause of Christ in this city. The Lord give us success.

SABBATH, Feb. 11. Commenced meetings in the Advent Hall, on State St. The theme was a refreshing from the Lord, who had promised that he would "pour water on the thirsty, and floods on the dry ground, and, pour his Spirit upon our seed, and his blessing upon our offspring." It was a precious beginning. At the close of the sermon, we had a free conference of half an hour. The Lord greatly blessed us. There were indications of life, and fruit. In the evening I addressed them from Is. 44: 21, 22, on the completeness of redemption. "I have blotted out thy sins." A complete work. I I endeavored to show the timid and week ones that God's work in conversion is a finished work, and that they must rejoice in it, and not be unbelieving or afraid. Trust him, and be not afraid.

They have a good Sabbath-school, in which the pastor takes a deep interest, as the pastor always should. We cannot well take too much interest in the Sabbath school. We must not neglect the young.

MONDAY, Feb. 12. Spent the day at Brockport, 16 miles out, with Brn. Brownell, Davis and others. Br. Miles preached to them yesterday, and greatly cheered their hearts. The church here is small, but reliable and good. I enjoyed a good day with them. At night returned to Rochester, and spoke from Mk. 14: 1–8, showing that Christ commended the woman, for doing what she could. I recommended her example to my hearers, and exhorted them to imitate her, in doing all they could.

TUESDAY, Feb. 13. Visited the sick and afflicted, with others, in company with Br. Whitmore. Most of the parties we saw I had been intimately acquainted with for thirty years. I found Sr. Pease very feeble, but full of faith and hope. Br. Haskins, sick with dropsy, must soon leave us, but holds the faith and hope firmly. One by one we are passing away. Had a very pleasant call on Br. and Sr. Bloss, who are among the excellent of the earth. Called upon Sr. E. C. Williams, widow of Capt. Williams. He took his stand with me thirty years ago at the tent meeting here, and traveled with me in my journeys afterwards with the "Big Tent," to help proclaim the tidings of the coming kingdom. He lived and died in the faith, and Sr. W. lives in the same faith and expects soon to meet her husband in the kingdom.

Br. Wm. E. Arnold, one of the firs to greet me thirty years ago, greeted me to-day with the same smile of welcome and cheer as at first. He ever stood by me. He has seen much affliction and change in his household. Some have gone to rest, and some are deprived of health. But in it all the faith and hope of the gospel holds him, and his dear ones up. He, himself, has had great enlargement of light, and love within the past few years. The life and death question, or clear views of the gospel hope of immortality, has greatly animated his heart. It opened to him ravishing views of the atonement, and entire plan of salvation and set his feet in a large place, giving him an overflowing cup. I have hardly ever seen a case of such blessedness as his; and yet it is the fruit of "materialism."

Sr. Arnold has been an invalid for many years. But for the blessed hope these years would have been long and weary. As it is she has contentment as she lies a prisoner on her couch, with a sweet smile and words of cheer to those who wait about her. Oh! how blessed it will be for this mortal to put on immortality. The Lord hasten the time, when disease and death shall be swallowed up of everlasting life. My old friend Carlos Dutton has been South a year or two since I saw him, and has been sick, but is now better. He was the first to greet me thirty years ago on my arrival at Rochester with the Tent, and gave me a home. And I have been welcomed ever since, and still am welcome. He has buried a son-in-law the last year, Rev. Mr. Chase, an eminent Baptist minister.

Since our acquaintance he has buried two sons, and now another like a son; and I have laid away two sons. We can mingle our tears and talk of the same "blessed hope."

We returned home after six hours of conversation, prayer and song, weary in body and mind. And getting an hour's rest, went to the hall for worship. In the first half hour the church elected their deacons, and attended to other business. Great unanimity prevailed, and all things were done in order.

I spoke on the habits of Jesus, as to private and public prayer, commending his example to his followers. A praying Master should not have prayerless disciples. Much prayer is indispensable in order to be a Christian. No one can be a Christian without prayer. "Prayer is his vital breath."

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 24. My attention has been called to some of the darker features of our frail humanity, on which it is not pleasant for a Christian mind to dwell. I always pass over them, as it is more useful as well as pleasant to dwell on the good features of human nature. But how many imperfections we see in ourselves, and in others. We often weep over our own faults and mistakes, and are made sad at the missteps of others. This is the Christian spirit, to "weep for others woes." But what a strong tendency there is in human nature to exaggerate, to magnify the faults of others; but the real faults of our neighbors are bad enough in this imperfect state of things without exaggeration. Yet with some they must always be magnified, as though they took delight in making others look as bad as in their power to describe. But what possible good can come of this I could never see—to place others in a false light. Why not be just? Why state a a part of the truth, and place one in a false position, and so scandalize them, when if all the truth were stated fairly, it would place them in a position of honor and rectitude. And the things they make a scandal of, rightly understood, would be meritorious instead of blameworthy.

The character and good name of our neighbor is a great treasure, and should not be trifled with. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," is the royal law. And it is enjoined upon the disciple of Christ to carry out this law. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." And with this love in the heart no one can circulate an evil report against ther neighbor. And most of all, they will first be assured of the truthfulness of any report they may hear, before they even whisper it to others. And if assured of the correctness of the report, they will just go to the party concerned, and to no one else. They will seek to do the guilty or unfortunate ones good. Aye, to "save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins." This is the way a Christian will act.

When one is so lost to all sense of justice and right, as to circulate slanders about their neighbors, and then enjoin secresy; poison and prejudice the minds of friends, and then deprive the injured one of means of knowledge of the cause of disaffection they will soon feel, it would seem that such persons have lost all sense of true religion. To say that such conduct is unchristian, would be tame: like the assassin, they strike a blow in the dark, and give one no chance for his life.

While thinking on this subject my thoughts reverted to words spoken by Dean Stanley, in a late sermon from the text, "Love one another." "Christ came to bless the most unworthy, and to save them, and we should love one another. Make the best of one another, as he loved us, who, for the sake of saving what was good in the human soul, forgot, forgave, put out of sight what was evil; who saw and who loved what was good even in the publican Zacheus, even in the expiring malefactor, even in the penitent Magdalene, even in the heretical Samaritan, even in the Pharisee Nicodemus, even in the heathen soldier, and the Canaaniteish woman."

It seems to me that the disciples of Jesus should seek with much care to follow his example in these things. While we condemn all sin, let us remember that "love worketh no ill to his neighbor."

In company with Br. Whitmore visited many to-day. At night spoke on Perfect Peace. Three desired help, that they might come to Christ.

WANTED--PERSECUTION.

Our seventh-day-keeping friends are exceedingly anxious to become martyrs. They have prophesied that they should be persecuted for keeping Saturday—be taken to prison, and perhaps killed by those who have "the mark of the beast," that is, people who observe Sunday as a day of rest and worship. Anxiously as Elijah watched for the coming rain, they await the appearance of the "little cloud" which is to be the precursor of their tribulation. If a movement is made against German "Sabbath-breaking," so-called, it is hoped that now the glad day has arrived when "the two-horned beast"—that is the United States—will make a law that all who will not "worship the beast"—that is, keep Sunday, "the Pope's Sabbath"—shall be slain. The fact is persistently overlooked, that none of these moves are directed against Jews, or other Saturday-keepers, but against men who not only keep no Sabbath at all themselves, but disturb other people in keeping theirs. The notion of forcing all men to "keep Sunday" has never been entertained in this land, and never will be. The tendency is precisely in the opposite direction.

But the would-be-persecuted hope they have found, if not the "little cloud," at least the straw, which shows the blowing of the wind that will eventually bring the cloud. A convention has been held in Cincinnati to organize measures for a religious amendment to the Federal Constitution. The character of the men engineering the movement is indicated in the fact that already two Governors of States—Connecticut and Massachusetts—whose names were attached to the call for this convention as sanctioning it, have repudiated the entire movement, and declared that their names were used without their consent. This indicates the need of a religious amendment among the would-be amenders of the Constitution, whatever the Constitution itself may need. But the whole movement is absurd, uncalled for, and will amount to nothing. Our Seventh-day friends fondly hope it is the beginning of a movement which is to culminate in a Protestant ecclesiastical despotism. But we assure them there is no rain in this cloud. However, they will do well to make the most of it. Something must be done soon, or there will be a new application of an old saying—"Every vision faileth."

A MODEL DONATION.

It was my privilege to be present with the church in Chicago on Wednesday eve, Feb. 21. A discourse had been announced for the evening, but Br. Burr was entirely ignorant of the subject and of what the society intended to do. The speaker took as text Paul's word, "Be ye thankful." After a practical application of them in various ways, he spoke of the privileges the church had enjoyed, and of the abundant labors of their faithful pastor; and then stated that the object of the gathering was to present him a substantial testimony of their gratitude in a form that would aid him to feed and clothe his family and himself, and meet some of the expenses of his liberal hospitality to traveling brethren.

The elders of the church, Brn. Price and Wright then passed through the congregation, receiving in all the sum of $120. The speaker of the evening in a few feeling words presented this sum to Br. Burr who replied as well as his feelings would allow him to do. We never saw him so hardly bestead for words. But this made the occasion all the more enjoyable, as it evidenced the depth to which his feelings were moved.

The audience then passed around, each giving Br. Burr a hearty grasp of the hand, and the evening concluded by a half hour spent in social converse.

Br. Burr had not the most distant idea of the purpose of the services of the evening until it was gradually disclosed by the preacher. It was a complete surprise, and an unmistakable token of the affection of the church for their preacher. God bless them all!

W. L. H.

BABTISED BUT UNREGENERATE HEATHEN PHILOSOPHY.

"NOT LOST, BUT GONE BEFORE."

"Once there was a beautiful pond in the centre of a wood. Trees and flowers were growing about it, birds sang, and insects hummed above it. Under the water, too, there was a little world of beings. Fishes and little creatures that live in the water filled it full of busy life. Among them was the grub of a dragon-fly, with a large family of brothers and sisters."

"What is a dragon-fly?" interrupted Arthur.

"It's just a darning-needle," said Helen.

"Yes, you children call it a darning-needle," said their father; "that beautiful, swift creature, with a long, glittering, blue-and-green body, and brilliant, gauzy wings. Now, before he became a dragon-fly, darting through the air and flashing back the sunshine he was a dark, scaly grub, and lived down in the forest pond. He and his family were born there, and knew no other world. They spent their time in and out among the plants at the bottom of the water in search of food.

"But one day this grub began to talk among his mates about the frog. Every little while said he, 'the frog goes to the side of the water and disappears. What becomes of him when he leaves this world? What can there be beyond.'

"'You idle fellow,' replied another grub, 'attend to the world you are in, and leave the "beyond" to those that here!' So said all his relations, the curious grub tried to forget his tonings. But he could not do it; ne day when he heard a heavy h in the water, and saw a great w frog swim down to the bottom, rowed up his courage to ask the himself.

Honored frog,' said he, approach- iat dignified personage, as meekly ssible, 'permit me to inquire what is beyond the world.'

What world do you mean?' said rog, rolling his goggle eyes.

This world, of course; our world,' ered the grub.

This pond, you mean,' remarked rog with a sneer.

I mean the place we live in; I t the world,' cried the grub with t.

Do you, indeed!' rejoined the 'Then what is the place you live in; the "beyond" the world,

That is just what I want you to me,' replied the grub briskly.

Well, then,' said frogy, 'it is dry

Can one swim about there?' the grub.

Dry land is not water, little fel- chuckled the frog; 'that is just it is not.'

But tell me what it is,' persisted rub.

Well, then, you troublesome crea- cried the frog, 'dry land is some- like the bottom of this pond, t is not wet, because there is no .'

Really,' said the grub, 'what is then?'

They call it air,' replied the frog, the nearest approach to nothing.' inding that he could not make rub understand, the good-natured offered to take him on his back up y land, where the grub might see mself. The grub was delighted. dropped himself down upon the back, and clung closely to him he swam up to the rushes at the 's edge. But the moment he ged into the air, the grub fell reel- ck into the water, panting and gling for life. 'Horrible!' cried soon as he had rallied a little; is nothing but death beyond this . The frog deceived me. He t go there at any rate!'

hen the grub told his story to ends, and they talked a great bout the mystery, but could ar- t no explanation.

hat evening the yellow frog ap- l at the bottom of the pond.

'ou here!' cried the startled 'You never left this world at all pose.'

lumsy creature,' cried the frog, id not you cling to my back? I landed on the grass you were he grub related his death-like gle, and added, 'since there is g but death beyond this world, r stories about going there must se.'

forgive your offensive remarks,' he frog gravely, 'because I have d to-day the reason of your tire- curiosity As I was hopping on the grass on the edge of the I saw one of your race slowly ng up the stalk of a reed. Sud- there appeared a rent in his scaly and after many struggles there out of it, one of those radiant -flies that float in the air I told . He lifted his wings out of the s he was leaving, and when they ied in the sunshine he flew glit- away. I conclude you grubs the same thing by and by.'

e grub listened with astonish- and distrust, and swam off to friends. They decided it was sible nonsense, and the grub said ld think no more about it. He l restlessly about in the water g for prey, and trying to forget. t long after, he began to be nd a feeling he could not resist ed him to go upward. He called relations and said—

must leave you, I know not If the frog's story of another is true, I solemnly promise to re- d tell you.'

s friends accompanied him to ter's edge, where he vanished eir sight, for their eyes were o see only in water. All day atched and waited for his return came no more.

e of his brothers soon felt the rresistible impulse upward, and promised the sorrowing family he should indeed be changed at glorious creature of which d heard, he would return and m. 'But,' said one, 'perhaps ght not be able to come back. ture so exalted could certain- nything,' replied the departing grub. But he also came not again. 'He has forgotten us,' said one. 'He is dead,' said another, 'there is no other world.'

"And now a third brother felt the same inward necessity driving him upward. He bade his friends farewell, saying, 'I dare not promise to return. If possible, I will; but do not fear in me an altered or forgetful heart. If that world exists, we may not understand its nature.'

"His companions lingered near the spot where he disappeared, but there was neither sign nor sound of his return. Only the dreary sense of bereavement reminded them that he had once lived. Some feared the future; some disbelieved, some hoped and looked forward still. Ah! if the poor things could only have seen into the pure air above their watery world, they would have beheld their departed friends often returning to its borders. But into the world of waters they never more could enter. The least touch upon its surface as the dragon-fly skimmed over it with the purpose of descending to his friends, brought on a deadly shock, such as he had felt, when, as a water grub, he had tried to come upward into the air. His new wings instantly bore him back.

"And thus, divided, yet near, parted, yet united by love, he often hovered about the barrier that separated him from all his early companions, watching till they, too, should come forth into the better life. Sweet was it to each new comer to find himself not alone in his joyous existence, but welcomed into it by those who had gone before. Sweet also to know that even in their ignorant life below, gleams from the wings of the lost ones they had lamented, were shining down into their dark abode. Oh! if they had known, they would neither have feared nor sorrowed so much!"

The above, an article published in the Congregationalist, is republished in Zion's Herald, and we know not how many more orthodox journals contain utterly false doctrines in a form well calculated to pervert the faith of Christian families. In it is plainly taught that death is merely a change of mode of life, nd not its cessation; and that the cha of the grub to the fly fairly illust es the entrance of man upon his future life. The old heathen fable of the psyche, a counterfeit faith, is revived, stamped with the broad seal of Christianity, and sent out as genuine, while the Scripture doctrine of the resurrection is not only ignored, but is made ridiculously absurd; for if the emergence of the fly from the grub is the equivalent of death, a return to the grub state is the equivalent of re-living or a resurrection and is the most untoward event possible. What! The beautiful butterfly become again a creeping worm! The lustrous dragon-fly be again a grovelling grub!

True, the resurrection is not directly impugned, but the inference that it is entirely disserviceable and unnecessary is irresistible; and the influence of this parable will be directly to bring the resurrection into disrepute, particularly among the youth of Christian families where it is read. It is quite useless to protest against the the circulation of such pure spiritism with the label of Christianity attached: the religious world is full of it, and protest is idle. Something more is demanded. Earnest work is needed. Papers, books, tracts by the thousand should be scattered!

"Fly, fly on wings of morning,
Ye who the truth can tell?

Have we all done our duty in this matter! If not, is it not high time we were up and doing?

PLAINNESS OF SPEECH.

Some have felt hurt at Br. Field's great plainness of speech in dealing with "Age to Come" views. We have many excellent brethren, among the very best, who hold those views. We love them, and trust we are beloved in return. They are not the ones who make strifes or divisions of feelings among us. Br. Field's experience has been with another class of teachers; men to whom he opened his church and his house, who in turn have ostracised him because of his failure to receive their special views of truth. He has seen and felt the sad effects of such outrageous sectarianism, and in telling the truth sometimes no doubt speaks warmly as well as plainly.

Now we purpose to lay before our readers in "plainness of speech" the position occupied by most "Age to Come' believers in the West. And we will give it their own language, italicising a few words occasionally to call attention to the sentiments expressed. The following extracts are from the leading editorial in The Restitution, of Chicago, of Jan. 25, 1872. They occur in response to certain questions by a subscriber to that journal who being alone in his views of the future age, joined an Advent church in his vicinity. The Editor says:

> And how is it with the Adventists? Do they teach a belief of this gospel of this kingdom of God as an essential pre-requisite of forgiveness of sins and salvation in the future ages? No. They require nothing more than any other sect of Christendom. The faith and confession of a Methodist, a Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, or any other denomination will secure membership with the Adventist. One asks no more than another. All are agreed on this point, hence Adventists call members of other denominations "brethren," and they hold "union meetings" for the conversion of souls, where Adventists and believers in immortal souls, sky-kingdom, etc., all join together in worship, preaching, singing, and converting the unconverted. Virtually then, there is no difference between Adventists and Methodists, so far as the requirements of faith are concerned, or as to what constitutes "the gospel" to be believed in order to salvation. All difference as to the nature of man, the kingdom of God, the millennium, the Trinity, etc., are treated as opinions, and no barrier to fellowship, or acknowledgment as true believers. Hence they are preachers of "another gospel"—as much so as any sect of the present day. A believer of Paul's gospel, therefore, cannot consistently unite with them, any more than he can unite with the thousand and one other churches around him.
>
> But do they not teach many of the truths believed by us? Yes. So do others. Many Episcopalians and Lutherans teach as much or more truth than the Adventists, yet that is no reason why we should become members of those churches. No doubt the sects in Paul's day held and taught many things in common with those he preached himself, yet he invariably kept aloof from them so far as acknowledging them as Christians was concerned.... Again, this freedom and liberality when it transcends the marks and bounds established by our Lord himself is pernicious. And in the case of Adventists this is so. They allow liberty of opinion, and treat what Paul preached as the gospel as mere matters of opinion, to be received or rejected at will. Hence they grant too much liberty and are in error on this point, as in others. Too much charity, or a mau-advised charity, is ruinous. If we are as charitable as Jesus was, that is all sufficient, and as gospel believers we require no more than he did.
>
> His third reason we have already shown to be a mistake. The difference between them and us, as to what constitutes the gospel of our salvation is not "little," but very wide. It is quite as wide as it is between us and every other denomination in the world. Hence we could with as much consistency unite with the Congregationalists, or Baptists, as with the Adventists. They occupy one and the same ground as to essentials of belief. Hence, if we admit the Adventists to be CHRISTIANS and can fellowship them, we open the doors for all other denominations. This position is a true one, and consistency will compel its admission. Charity on our part, therefore, if exercised to the degree of fellowshipping Adventists, cannot be denied to Methodists, or any other church.
>
> In conclusion, then, we would kindly remind our brother that he has adopted the very worst plan he could advise for bringing his Advent friends into the truth. To become one with them and thus virtually admit the non-essentiality of the gospel as a matter of faith before becoming accepted by God as children, is not the way to exert an influence for good upon them. It is just the way to destroy your influence. You can bring no argument to bear upon them that will tell so powerfully as the argument of your own actions.
>
> The question arises then, what shall be done under the present circumstances? We say by all means "come out from among them and be ye separate," so far as any union of worship or membership of their society is concerned. Commence meetings of your own. Send for some good Evangelist to preach the gospel and show them its essentiality as a matter of faith in order to salvation, and thus build up an organization that shall continually witness for the truth. Then you will be freed from all blame in the matter, and God will be honored and glorified thereby.

It should be understood that by the gospel or gospel of the kingdom, the writer means "Age to Come" views. Faith in them is "essential" to salvation. We purpose no argument on the above positions: we have no desire to stultify ourselves. Our only motive is to let our readers know just where those opposers stand, what their platform is. They have a perfect right to their convictions, to hold and to teach them. We respect them more than we can those who while no more "of us" than they, and continually sowing strifes and discord among us, still insist that they are "of us;" and while our "Age to Come" opposers denounce us as liberal, and too free, these assail us with charges of drawing the lines closely, even to sectarianism and bigotry. Both charges cannot be true; and as the accusations come from extremists on each side, we may safely conclude that we occupy a medium position between the extremes. At any rate we occupy just the position we think we ought to, and mean to maintain it.

AN EXCELLENT WAY.

The following experience upon the Life and Death question, as related by Henry Constable, is substantially our own. Our mind had been exercised for a long time upon the subject; but was settled by a course similar to that he mentions. Let those in doubt take up the words sheol, soul, spirit, death, and trace them through the Bible, laying aside all prejudice, and all opinionated opinions, simply seeking to learn the mind of the Spirit. Mr. Constable says:

> The subject is, indeed, an absorbing one. Strange, that so many appear indifferent about it. I derived my view of it entirely from Scripture. I had been educated, as you, in the ordinary belief, and forced myself to think that it must be right. A conversation I had one day, with a friend, who was, I could plainly see, shaken as to the truth of the common view, made me resolve to study it more closely than I ever had.
>
> I sat down to my Bible; wrote down every text in full, from beginning to end, that appeared to me to refer to the subject; wrote after each text a few lines—giving my opinion of its meaning; and when I had got to the end, rose convinced of the truth of the theory of eternal Life in Christ only.
>
> I had at this time, never read a book on either side of the question; and all my subsequent reading has only confirmed me in the belief of a glorious truth; for opening my eyes to which, I thank a gracious God.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

A Baptist Br. Chicago, writes: I find that I am becoming just a little selfish with my tracts and papers; when I have but one copy of a kind, I do part with it reluctantly.——Br. P. McGarr is about republishing Thomas Burnett's fourth book, On the Destiny of the World, first printed in London, in 1683. We shall announce it when ready.——The Editor of THE TIMES will spend Sunday, March 3, in Detroit.——Br. E. C. Andrus is working faithfully to get up a tent for Indiana. We hope the friends will be liberal.——Eld. Grant baptised five at San Francisco, Cal. Jan. 28.——A discussion between Eld. Grant and Mr. Johnson is announced to occur in Vallejo, sometime in March.——Br. P. Holler has been holding meetings near Nashville, Mich. Fifteen or more confessed Christ.——The types made us say that Br. D. S. Clark was laboring at Dexter, Mich.; but it was Iowa.——There is a good interest in Br. J. R. Preston's circuit. Three have joined at Woodbridge, and three at Gilead. Algansee church is holding a protracted meeting.——Br. C. W. Smith holds a discussion at Milroy, Ill., with the Mormons, upon the authenticity of the Book of Mormon, commencing March 11.——Four Advent chapels are building in Eastern Michigan.

The Times.

AT HOME.

* * * Chicago has 1,967 retail liquor dealers of various grades.

* * * Domestic news relate chiefly to political matters and railway accidents.

* * * A party of Spiritualists have purchased a fine piece of farming property in Santa Barbara county, Cal., on which they intend to establish themselves in a sort of community life, taking the Oneida Colony of New York, as a model. All property is to be in common. The ground will be apportioned out to the various families, and the profits will go into a common purse, to be equitably divided.

* * * A session of the Cabinet on Friday, upon the Alabama claims question lasted about two hours, and was devoted principally to the interchange of individual views upon the present situation of the American case. Prior to the assembling of the Cabinet, most members had taken the trouble to inform themselves, through Minister Adams, who has been there for several days, as to the sentiment in England on these matters, and whether the newspaper bluster in Great Britain actually reflected the feelings of the Government and people on this point. Mr. Adams says the excitement is merely one designed for political effect. The commercial classes he believes to be in favor of paying the award of the Geneva Conference, however great it may be, providing, always, it is within the bounds of reason and justice. So far as the various members of the Cabinet are concerned, there does not appear to be one who is in favor of abating one jot or tittle of the case as it has been made up by our counsel. There are intimations to the effect that Secretary Fish would consent to its modification, rather than that the treaty should fail; but they do not appear to be governed by anything he has said. His situation was developed in the Cabinet to day. It would appear that the sentiment of our Government would favor retiring from the Conference altogether rather than compromise, and have the Alabama claims in the condition which they were in before the treaty was drawn up. Secretary Fish thinks it will be some time before Granville's note will be replied to, and that reply, whatever it may be, will be couched in the most friendly spirit. Before the contents of the note shall be agreed upon, however, another Cabinet meeting will be held, when a draft of the proposed reply will be submitted to the criticism of various members of our Government.

ABROAD.

* * * The Italian king of Spain is disgusted and homesick, and wants to give up his throne; but Victor Emmanuel counsels patience.

* * * It seems that some of the petty German States are in the habit of pardoning criminals upon receiving a pledge that they will depart for the United States and never return. Most European powers, it is said, have indulged the same easy method of getting rid of criminals. No wonder we have a superabundance of crime.

* * * A Berlin correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, referring to an entry made on the 2d of May, 1870, by Professor Frederich, in the diary kept by him at the Œcumenical Council, in which the professor speaks of an understanding between the Jesuit party and the Tuileries in view of a Franco-Prussian war, observes that in well informed circles in Berlin, it was well known at the time that an understanding of this kind had been arrived at. "It was no secret, but a notorious fact, that the Empress Eugenie was entirely under the influence of the Jesuits, and in constant communication with Rome, and that she was eager in urging on the war, which she repeatedly called ma guerre, because she regarded it as a sort of crusade. The Empress and her clerical advisers represented the party which was then dominant at the Vatican, and they hoped to promote by a war the policy they had inaugurated by the Œcumenical Council and the Syllabus which had preceded it. The agent employed to conduct negotiations between the Empress (who, after the departure of the Emperor for the army, assumed the supreme power as Regent) and the directors of the Papal policy, was her Majesty's confessor. The participation in this affair of other Court confessors, such as that at Vienna, was also reckoned upon. Even Italy would, it was thought, be brought to the cause; and if the victories of Wissemberg, Woerth, and Spicheren had not so rapidly succeeded each other, perhaps the calculations made at the Vatican and the Tuileries for bringing about a coalition of the Catholic Powers against Germany would not have proved fallacious."

* * * The London News of the 16th by the last steamer, has this telegram from Paris:

The rabid ultramontanism of the new Archbishop of Paris has produced a serious schism among the Paris clergy. Michaud, Vicar of the Madeleine, who is honorary Canon of Chalons, in a letter to the Archbishop dated this day resigns all his ecclesiastical preferments. The reason he gives for this step is that the Archbishop requires the clergy not only to publicly profess belief in the dogma of the Pope's infallibility, but to believe it in their hearts. Michaud declares open war against the Archbishop, and directly defies the excommunication which he expects will be launched against him. He cares nothing for the scandal which he knows his protest will create. He will remain a priest and Catholic, but a Catholic believing with regard to Christ what has been everywhere always and by everybody believed, and not in a belief decreed by a man in Rome just as fallible as himself. He acts not merely on his own account, but for a party in the church, and announces that a committee will assemble at his house in connection with the Russian, German, English, Italian, and Spanish committees, and that as soon as sufficient funds are collected churches will be opened independent of the Episcopacy. The priests led by the Abbe Michaud, will not allow the Pope to supplant Christ by the syllabus. This anti-Papal movement is regarded abroad as of exceeding importance and the utmost significance.

Our Cause.

When we realize how near we are to the judgment, to the ushering in of the great day of God Almighty, to the time when the saints will be rewarded, and the wicked shall be as though they had not been, how earnest, we, his chosen messengers in these last days, should be in sending out the glad message of salvation, eternal life and a home in his coming kingdom. Wake up slumberers! Behold, the Bridegroom cometh! Don't waste time in useless fears of what you will eat and what you will drink and wherewithal you will be clothed: your Lord knows you have need of those things. Let it be his cause first our rewards are on the other shore, and blessed be God, they are sure. But, remember brethren, you cannot bring into God's kingdom any of your surplus cash, goods or chattels, but may have to remain outside with your idols in the common destruction. God wants a "peculiar people, zealous of good works." (Tit. 3: 11-15.) Then let us thank God for the health and strength he has given, and be willing to devote some of the means God has blessed us with to support the several branches of his most holy cause.

I sometimes meet with a class of Christians, and some that profess to believe in the speedy coming of the Lord, whom, to hear talk in meeting, you would think, Peter-like, they would be ready to lay down their lives for Jesus' sake; nevertheless, you could not get them to lay down one dollar for his cause. It puts me in mind of the story I once heard, about a man who thanked God for a free salvation; for he had been a Christian twenty-five years and it had only cost him twenty-five cents.

Now, brethren, it is very easy to talk about the coming of the Lord, but while you consecrate yourself to his service, remember he has lent you the good things of this world, and expects you will make good use of them to promote his cause and aid in saving perishing men. Don't let it all rest on the devoted few that are doing so nobly. Come! Help bear the burden in the heat of the day. The Lord will soon give you rest. Let us "occupy till he come," in an earnest desire to work a work that he will be pleased with. Cast your eyes around. You can do something if you will. Let it be ever so little, the Lord will bless the sacrifice if it is made with an eye single to his glory. Then the gift will come (eternal life), not because you have done those good works, but because Jesus loves you, and you have walked by faith in those things, knowing and trusting to him that he is able to take care of the results.

Keep the steam up night and day at our office. You can do it if you will all help. Send in your tithes and offerings to the Tract Fund. Pay up your subscription on THE TIMES, and as much in advance as you can. Provide your minister with tracts to sow broadcast over new fields. Don't let them have to buy them out of the means you give them to support themselves and their families. If you will only put your shoulder to the wheel individually, you will soon see what a lift you will give to those that have willingly sacrificed all to promote the cause of present truth. And above all, the Lord of hosts will open the windows of heaven, and pour you out such a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

WM. C. HICKS.

The Art of Stopping.

The art of stopping is one of the fine arts. Few seem able to acquire it. One thought links on to another, or calls it up from the vasty deep, and the speaker waits for his thoughts to run out before stopping. You might as well wait for a river to run by. A man needs to learn the delicate art of knowing just when to snap off; or, to keep the figure, just when to dam up. Reason must be called in to regulate or stay proceedings, instead of trusting to exhaustion of the subject. They tell us that, in casting Bessemer steel, one-half minute too soon, or one-half minute too slow, and, instead of well-tempered steel, fit for keen blade, or delicate wire, or strong bar, you get a brittle or granulated mass, utterly useless. It needs almost as delicate judgment in precipitating a speech, sermon, remarks, or prayer. "Ah!" you often say, "if you would only stop there, just there, you would have achieved a masterly work;" but, "just one word more," and the effect is spoiled. Agents almost invariably lack the delicate art. It costs the societies many thousands a year. My young friend Hal often sits down by me full of questioning about the spectroscope, or microscope, or some deep trouble. He listens capitally till his cup is full, and then says: "There, brother, that's all I can hold this time." Many an audience looks just so: "There, brother, that's all we can hold." My good friend, the Doctor, "addressed" the other night to a crowded house. His theme was abstruse. His hearers were not. They, however, held well for about three-quarters of an hour. But the Doctor poured in another fifteen minutes. The people were uneasy and top-heavy—too full decidedly. Half an hour more. They held their sides and were angry. Fifteen minutes more they rose up and poured out. But the Doctor's artlessness had grown decidedly funny, and the people went home with glee and sport.

How often a prayer meeting that opens gloriously, and is just the touch every way, is spoiled by some one who has not some good to do, but something to say. I remember when in college, during a remarkable period of religious interest, that the students sent a committee to one of the professors, asking him to cut short his remarks for Christ's sake. He did so for two evenings; but on the third, while the impenitent crowded the hall, he spoke forty-five minutes on the Formation of Character. It killed the revival.

Deacon X. was another example of the need of knowing when to stop. He was hard to start. You had to urge and drive him to the uncongenial duty; but, when he got on once he couldn't jump off. He always made me think of the boy that wants to get out of the fast-going wagon, and is so timid that when at last he does jump he comes down in a heap. So Deacon X. at last would fling himself off from his speech with a thud that was blunt and hopeless. He wiggled and wriggled, and every time he meant to stop, he would unfortunately wind up with "and." Well, that "and" implied there was something more to come. It was a kind of promissory note to the audience—at least, a verbal promise; and when the Deacon's word was given, he never broke it. So "and;" and then again "and." That conjunction was the torment of his life. I have seen him work by the half hour to get by it, till at last "and" had the last word, and the Deacon sat down. His last words were: "Good bye Brother P. and."

Brother W. was the worst case, however, that I ever knew. He could talk about two minutes very sensibly; then he would invariably spend ten or fifteen more closing his two minutes' speech. He backed up, and then rushed forward. His brain got hot, his grammar broke down, his tongue grew thick, his face flushed; he tried to look wise, when he thought he was making a fool of himself; and, at last, after some of the most astonishing English, he sat down in the midst of a wilderness.

A dear old semi-stated supply of the Baptist persuasion used to drop in, neighbor-like, to pray with us. I always caught tight hold of my legs with both hands as soon as he began. He invariably started off at a high pitch, and shot ahead at a dead level, quoting hymns, quoting Scripture, quoting commentators, and throwing in enough of his own for cement, till all of a sudden, just when you couldn't anticipate, he came up with a whack. It was like a velocipede running into a stone wall, or a balky horse changing his mind. But his prayers were capital, quotations sensible, and his spirit good; only he had not the art of stopping.

Another occasional visitor had a Swedenborg touch—full of imagination, full of poetry, full of love. He rose and soared far above common things. It was really inspiring to hear him. But as soon as he was well up he began to throw out ballast. Over went the churches; over went the creeds; over went all ordinary attainments. Out with the sand bags, for the world was despisable. Up, up, he soared and sailed among the clouds, till you were dizzy watching him: and he came down (shall I say it?) only when the gas gave out.

Brother Baker gets up with an unimprovable dignity. He lets loose one thought, and rolls that around and around, tosses it up, and bounds it, warms it till it hatches; and a second thought peeps. This is handled in the same incubating style, till it gives birth to a third; and so Brother B. never stops before a good dozen generations of his ideas are born.

Brother M. always reminded me of a dog churning. The poor dog can't stop if he wants to. You always had to take Brother M. down, or he would not stop at all. I verily believe he would have churned all night sometimes, or till he fell asleep, only for help. The Pastor would say: "Exactly, Brother M.; we are much obliged to you. Will Sister S. please pray?" The dear, good man was always in a profuse sweat, though very lean; and I have no doubt but that his churning efforts shortened his life. It was a steady, beating tread, tread, tread; and he never knew when the butter had come.

But how to stop! Well, don't start till you have a place to stop at. Pick out your tavern, and haul up when you get there sure. The difficulty with many is, they prepare too much; and with others, they prepare too little. The first over-estimate the capacity of the people; the latter talk all about a subject, instead of at it. A prayer ought to have a topic as much as a sermon. It is a mistake that we are always at work in adoration, petition, thanksgiving, etc. A man ought to have some one or some thing to pray for or give thanks for, and concentrate himself at that point.

Above all, burn with a desire to do good. Value your talk only as a power to save. Consider your opportunity as one that will never recur to produce a result, not for yourself, but for your God.

Sacrifice every desire or purpose to that of wisely adapting yourself to the needs of those before you. If they need nothing, no words are necessary; if they do need something, you are heartless if you do not try to give them what they need.

And then be willing to leave some good things unsaid. Say one thing well, clearly, pointedly, and then rein your tongue with reason. When the dish is full, you may pour in even honey; it will run off and be wasted.

The art of stopping, well learned, would make the churches more popular, give ten per cent. more usefulness to the ministry, and save thousands of souls.

That's so! Column's up! It is time for me to stop.—Independent.

Discussion at Morrisonville.

I have just closed a debate with Eld. C. A. Worley, Baptist, from Carrollton, Green Co., Iowa, who is county superintendent of schools. While preaching at Palmer a few weeks since I received a challenge from him to discuss the following propositions:

Resolved, That the Scriptures teach the immortality of the soul of man, and the conscious existence of man between the death of the body and the resurrection.

Resolved, That the Scriptures teach the annihilation of the wicked at the resurrection and Judgment.

The first was affirmed by Eld. W. and the last by myself. Three sessions of two hours each were given to each proposition. The inhabitants of Palmer manifested a lively interest. As there was no house except the school house, the directors dismissed the school for our accomodation, and the people turned out en masse to hear. Some came twenty-five miles. Eld. Worley selected Eld. Scott of Auburn as his Moderator, who came about fifty miles. I chose one of the citizens. There were four or five Baptist, three or four Methodist, and one or two Presbyterian ministers present, who all seemed anxious that my opponent should make good his points. He read largely from Mattison, W. W. Clayton, etc., which was contrary to our rules, as the Old and New Testaments were to be the only proof adduced, except to define terms. But on the part of truth as held by myself there was none to back me but the Lord God and his word, which liveth and abideth forever; which I trust did not suffer in my hands, each point being abundantly sustained thereby.

On the first point in the first proposition I took the position that not one direct proof-text could be adduced. That is, not one in which the word immortal, nor any of its equivalents can be found applied to the soul. After much waste of supposed logic, one text, and the only one he confessed his ability to bring, was brought. I will give it; for as such texts are as "scarce as hen's teeth," all should be apprised of it. It is found in 1 Pet. 3: 3, 4. "A meek and a quiet spirit." This I showed was an ornament put on, and not the thing ornamented. Support for the second point was the usual routine of "rich man and Lazarus," the "thief on the cross," "souls under the altar," etc. But ere the point was passed, my opponent was driven from the supposed stronghold of "heaven at death," which he evacuated, retreating upon hades, where he entrenched himself thus: Hades is a secret or hidden, out-of-sight place, composed of two rooms. One called Paradise, where the souls of the good go and rest until the last day; the other called Tartarus, where all the souls of the wicked go till the same time. Here is where the rich man went. Here also went Christ and the thief. Here are the fallen angels, or devils. Thus good men, wicked men and devils are underground in the bowels of the earth. So Josephus says, and he is the only authority. So there is one glorious point gained. They are one step nearer truth. Heaven is evacuated as untenable for souls at death, and now having got them to the earth, there is hope we may yet get them located in the Bible hades—the grave. (1 Cor. 15: 55; Rev. 20: 13; Ps. 86; 13; 41: 38).

On the second proposition I affirmed that annihilation is not a Bible word, but its equivalents are. Destroy and destruction are its equivalents. I then adduced over twenty passages where these are affirmed of the wicked directly. Perish is equivalent to annihilation. Twenty passages showed that the "wicked shall perish." Also a long array of passages bearing other equivalents were brought, such as, consume, devour, burned up, die, death, second death, shall not be, be as though they had not been, etc. I think the candid portion of the community were persuaded of these plain truths. Light is spreading and truth is gaining ground. I am now in Morrisonville, Christian Co. I will make a further report when I get through here.

O. D. GIBSON.

The Resurrection of Christ.

As a proof of the truthfulness of Christian religion, the resurrection of our Savior from the dead cannot be made too prominent, for it is made in the New Testament the basis of all our hopes, and is, if the term be allowable, the hinge on which Christianity turns.

If Jesus were not what he claimed to be, and if his teachings were not true, it is not to be supposed that God, whose Son he claimed to be, would own and endorse him. His condition in death would be similar to that of all impostors, because to release him from death would be contrary to all our ideas of what is right and just. If he was a deceiver, as some claimed in the days of his flesh, and as some claim now, God would not, nor could sanction him in his work.

But on the other hand if he were what he claimed to be, it is natural to suppose he would receive tokens of approval from him who sent him; and as Jesus predicted that among other acts of endorsement would be his resurrection from the dead three days after he should become a victim of death, we naturally conclude that if God did send him and authorized him to teach men, he would not be left in the embrace of the tomb.

Christians contend that he was released therefrom, and therefore claim Christianity to be divine in its origin. Is their claim a good one? Have they sufficient evidence to prove whereof they affirm? If they have, we may regard their foundation as sure and permanent.

The following is presented as being a brief argument confirmatory of the alleged fact: As the time in which the event herein considered is located beyond the memory of any of the human family living to-day, we are obliged to rely on the testimony of men who did live in the time the event is said to have occurred.

And in the reception of their testimony, two things will have to be proved, namely: (1) their sincerity and honesty of character, so that we may be assured they would not knowingly deceive us, and, (2) their soundness of mind, so there would be no liability of their being themselves deceived.

If these two points can be proved true in their cases, we can unhesitatingly receive as true what they testify concerning the matter. But if, on the contrary, we fail in proving either or both of these two points, we cannot rely implicitly on what they state, because, if we fail to find evidence of sincerity and honesty on their part, or find that they were men of weak minds, too easily convinced and capable of being readily deceived, this will be a barrier hindering us from receiving as certain whatever they may state.

Let me then first prove that they were honest and sincere in what they said. Although they had frequently heard the Savior say that he should be put to death and rise again, it does not appear that the disciples had clear conceptions of what the "rising from the dead" meant. (Mk. 8: 10.) And after he was dead and buried, instead of looking for his re-appearance, we find them on the first day of the week coming to the sepulchre with spices to perfume the body, and all expressed surprise and amazement at finding the sepulchre empty. (Lk. 24: 1-4.)

In the statements they have left on record, they affirm that subsequently to this, Christ showed himself alive repeatedly during a period of forty days giving them "many infallible proofs" that it was really himself (Acts, 1: 3); and they affirm further, that at the end of this period he was taken bodily into heaven where he was prior to his incarnation. (Acts 9: 10; John, 17: 5.) So important did these events seem to them that they began to tell of them in public, but instead of its meeting with a universal reception their story aroused opposition, and then persecution. They were imprisoned, whipped and stoned to death; they were driven from place to place, suffering the spoiling of their goods, many meeting violent deaths by fire and crucifixion. All these calamities they suffered because of their adherence to, and proclamation of this fact, the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

Whatever else may be denied, surely their sincerity cannot be. Suffering in behalf of a cause is not evidence that the cause is a worthy one, but it is evidence of the sincerity of those who suffer. And so in the lives and deaths of the apostles, we have the strongest evidence possible that they themselves were fully persuaded of the truthfulness of what they affirmed.

Having conclusively proved their honesty and sincerity, it remains to be seen whether they were deceived in the matter, or over credulous. As honest men have been deceived before and since, and suffered because of their simplicity, it is not impossible that it may have been so in this instance. The question is, were they so deceived? That they were not, may be proven from the following facts.

1. They were backward to believe the fact when it was first declared to them. After they had found the sepulchre empty, and the clothes in which Jesus had been wrapped, folded and laid aside, the record mentions but one who seemed to have any idea that Christ was alive again. (John, 20: 8.) And when all but one were convinced, and what they had seen was mentioned to him, such was his incredulity that he declared nothing but a personal vision of Christ would make him believe. (John, 20: 25.) These facts and others tell us they were not over credulous.

2. Their association with Jesus during the forty days of his sojourn among them subsequently, was of such a nature that they could not have been deceived. They affirm they saw him; heard him speak; saw him eat food; handled him with their hands and listened to his instructions, and they in many ways convinced themselves that it was no illusion, but really the Lord they loved. They could not have been deceived in these things, and they either really happened as they are recorded, or else they are the productions of a falsifying brain.

But that they are not the latter we have already proved by demonstrating the uprightness and honesty of the witnesses—hence, the only legitimate conclusion we can come to, is that their story is true.

And if their story be true, then, indeed, Christ our Lord is risen from the dead, and the Christian's hope founded on that fact becomes a good one.

C. E. BARNES.

Instrumental Music in Religious Worship.

Although the use of instruments of music in religious worship is not directly forbidden in the Scriptures I think the spirit of the New Testament is decidedly against it. In fact the teaching of the gospel is more by spirit than by letter, as in the matter of giving. While the Jews were required to give a tenth or tithe of their increase (Deut. 14: 28), Christians are commanded to give as "God hath prospered them." (1 Cor. 16: 2.) No definite rule is given. I think there are evils necessarily accompanying the introduction of organs or other instruments into the church. An organist must be hired. If there are none in the church an outsider must be employed. Perhaps, as is often the case an ungodly person hired at a greater or less expense to help the flock of Zion praise their God. If we imagine the Israelites in Babylon when asked to "sing one of the songs of Zion" hiring an accomplished Babylonian musician to sing for them, it does not seem more absurd. (2) A choir is generally organized next. The best singers that can be, had are obtained, regardless of their devotion or opposition to the cause of Christ. This custom has separated the choir from the congregation, until, at the present day, congregational singing has become very unpopular. In short I think it cannot be denied, that organs among other things have done their part towards bringing in the cold formal condition of things which exists in the popular churches of the day.

As regards a lack of harmony among the singers, I think we can better afford to have a little discord in time and tune than to lose the spirit of the hymn which should be as earnest a part of our worship as any other. I know of no reason why there should be more discord in following the person who leads in singing than in following the sound of the organ, unless it is that the latter by making more noise renders a discord less perceptible. I well remember when I first became interested in religion and attended meetings where they sung as if filled with the Spirit, how beautifully it sounded in contrast with the stiff, formal mode of singing and playing to which I had been accustomed. After hearing both for some length of time I feel confident that I have heard better singing without an organ than with.

Ps. 33: 2–81: 1–3; 149: 3; and 150: 1, 3, 5, have been quoted to justify this custom. If those passages do justify it, they also justify dancing; and if we "adapt ourselves to the times in which we live," we certainly shall not abstain from that practice; as professors of religion very commonly engage in it, and institute balls and festivals to raise money for church purposes. How common to hear these people justify themselves by quoting Eccl. 3: 4, "A time to mourn and a time to dance;" or the above: "Praise him in the dance." Many things were right under the law which would be wrong now. The Jewish nation no doubt typified the future kingdom of the saints. Jerusalem is called "The city of the great King," and foreshadowed the heavenly Jerusalem which is to come. With the passing away of that dispensation the reason for this earthly glory vanishes. Now, the Lord has no particular people to represent his name, but "in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted of him." (Acts 10: 35.) All the pomp, parade and magnificence, with the organs, timbrels, dances, etc., attendant upon the Jewish ceremonies would be wrong now, and have no more of the spirit of the gospel than a political procession or the ball room revel. Nothing, certainly, can be proved in favor of worship with instruments of music from the above quotations from Psalms.

It has been said that if Christ considered instrumental music sinful he probably would have spoken of it in Mat. 11: 17, or 6: 32. If an inference can possibly be drawn from those texts on this question, I think it is rather against their use than otherwise, because he likened that wicked generation to children who had piped and found fault because others had not danced. It would have been utterly foreign to the subject of which he was speaking, however, to either justify or condemn them at that time.

The same is true of 1 Cor. 14: 7 which has also been quoted. Paul, to illustrate the necessity of interpreting, when speaking in an unknown tongue, speaks of the pipe and harp. Racing and fighting are taken to illustrate the "Christian race" or "the good fight of faith." But we are not to suppose, on that account that racing or fighting either individually or in national warfare are any part of godliness.

There is another very important objection to be urged against this practice, which applies more especially to Adventists than to others. The Advent people as a body are poor in this world's goods. There are some, I know, who profess to believe in the immediate coming of Christ, who are hoarding up riches and building elegant houses, showing that their heart's treasure is in this world. But generally speaking Adventists are poor. To spend from $100 to $1,000 and upward for an organ while men are perishing for the want of the gospel, while ministers have not the means to provide for their families, while the poor and the sick are without the simple necessities of life, and while (as was related of one brother in Girard, Kas. lately) people are denying themselves, even the privilege of a window in their house, that they may help spread the truth, would be very wrong it seems to me. Not but that it is wrong to spend money foolishly whether we have much or little; but in this case it is especially wrong.

If we can say "we know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren," I think our love will make itself manifest. Let us be willing, in view of the sacrifice that has been made for us, and the "great and precious promises" given us, to deny ourselves the pleasures of this life, or yield them to those who have no hope beyond. Let us "be not conformed to this world but be transformed by the renewing of our mind that we may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." (Rom. 12: 2.)

J. S. HASTINGS.

"I Don't Care."

These are little words, but oft times mean a great deal. I have in times which are past uttered them myself, but the next moment felt sorry for it. Words mean something and are generally the index of what remains in the heart. "Well," says one, "I know I did so and so that did not look just right, but I don't care!" Another, "I don't care what people say about me. While they are talking about me they are leaving some body else alone. They can't hurt me." Another, "I don't care if they don't come and speak to me, I shan't go and speak to them." And many other don't cares I could speak about. Now dear members of Christ, if we "don't care," let us give up our religion: for if we retain it we must care.

Must we not care not to offend one of these little ones for whom Christ died? Must we not care whether we are our brother's keeper or not? Must we not care whether people raise slanderous reports about us or not? Must we not care as much as possible to follow peace with all men? Must we as Christians say and do as we like. Must we let others do and say as they like without kindly admonishing them. Have not all these things, little as they appear to be, have they not, I say, a great deal to do with the cause of Christ? And shall we not care for his cause? Yea, shall we not watch it with a godly jealousy? If so let us give up now and forever such expressions and the spirit of "don't care."

FANNY REYNOLDS.

The Unbaptised Child.

AN IMMATERIALIST SUPERSTITION.

It is believed by many in Cantire that if a child die before it has been baptised, it is neither taken to heaven nor cast into hell, and that its soul is neither lost nor saved, but is left upon the earth and made a Sgreachan raidhlic—"a shricker of a burying-place." It is also believed that the faint voices of children who had died unbaptised are heard in the woods and lonely places, bemoaning their hard fate. The first Christian missionaries in Argyllshire were so sensible of the advantages to be derived from the existent superstitions among men who were not yet ripe for receiving the clear light of truth, that they did not so much attempt to stop the source of those superstitions as to turn them into a new channel; and so they taught that whosoever was not received into the Christian faith by baptism, would after death be condemned to wander as a ghost.—Cuthbert Bede, in Notes and Queries.

CORRESPONDENCE.

M. Allen, West Salem, Wis.

I have been a believer for a number of years of the glorious doctrines promulgated in the TIMES and other Advent works, and find every year that my faith grows stronger; and my observation has been that all that have come out and embraced these glorious truths from the heart, adhere to them firmly, and live better lives. And why? Because the truth makes us free, and is calculated to wean us from the world and draw us nearer to Christ, who is the great source of spiritual life. We are weak in numbers yet in Salem, some having moved away and none added to us lately. But God has left us a brave champion for truth in Br. Wood who earnestly contends for the faith in lending books and papers, assisting in obtaining preaching, and striving to live void of offence both toward God and man. There are some others that have always worked in their way, and I believe God has still greater blessings in store if we go on.

BRIEF EXTRACTS.

Br. A. H. Clark, Fon du Lac, Wis. I rejoice exceedingly that in these last days I have been permitted to see the "truth" of God's word. It is indeed "a light to my feet and a lamp to my path." We have a few of the faithful waiting ones here, and as we have no place of public worship, we all meet at my house every Sabbath to comfort and exhort one another and offer prayer. The Lord's presence seems to light up the house, and we have a feast of fat things. Oh, what a blessed hope is ours! I take great comfort in reading the letters from brethren and sisters scattered throughout our broad land. It seems as though I knew them all. Such is the "drawing power" of the "blessed hope." I am greatly rejoiced as I read of so many having the "eye salve" of "non-prejudice" applied to their eyes, and the truth of the Bible seen so plainly. God grant the number may increase daily, is my prayer.——Br. P. Foulks, Corry, Pa. I have been awakened to a lively hope in Christ, my Savior. I know the Lord is my shepherd. I look to him for strength that I may not be led away or captured by the snares of these days. I have to watch and pray. I find that the nearer I live to Jesus, the nearer he gets to me. Let us seek his presence. There are only a few of us here in the faith; but pray for us. ——Sr. Irena M. Judkins. I rejoice in the promise of the grace that will be revealed in us at the resurrection of the saints when we shall be delivered from the body of this death to perfection in holiness. Then shall we be able to offer thanksgiving to God without sin and imperfection. I do wish above my chief joy to see the cause of the Savior prosper and sinners and backsliders turning to the Lord with repentance and hearty zeal in his service. I saw notice in THE TIMES of a dollar sent in for "some poor widow." I am one of that class, and return my thanks in their names and mine, hoping that others will imitate the kind example and send in their gifts to the treasury that the poor may be blessed with the printed word.—— Br. Josiah Bowerman, Monona Co., Iowa. Now we may look up with confidence that Jesus will soon come in the clouds of bright glory to our rescue. He will come, and the heavens will pass away with a great noise at his bright appearing. He will come with his reward, to give every one as his work shall be. Then we shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom, but the wicked will be cast out. Then our endless rest will appear.—— ——S. M. Holcomb. Oceana Co., Mich. We never heard an Advent sermon until Br. Scott preached here last winter. There was a good deal of opposition and almost everything said and done to put down the doctrine. But opposers are not quite so spiteful now as formerly. I was once a Disciple, and think they are nearest like the Adventists of any people; but the points of difference are important. I wonder now how I ever read the Bible and failed to see that man was a mortal being. I see now that immortality is the gift of God through patient continuance in well doing, and faith in Jesus Christ our Lord.——Sr. Susan Ragland, Piatt Co., Ill. May the Lord help us all to remember our duties. I have been so absorbed in our family afflictions of sickness and suffering that I well nigh forgot my duty to the cause. Our sleeping one rests in hope of a glorious resurrection. Jesus will raise him up at the last day. We shall meet all our friends in the sweet by and by. Oh, joyful day! Then salvation will be complete. Let us do good while we have opportunity, and especially to the household of faith.

Our Book and Tract Column

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—An indispensable aid to the study of Scripture. By it one can find any passage of Scripture if one word can be remembered. Unabridged, $3, sent by express. Condensed, but sufficiently full for ordinary students, $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures; With maps and useful tables. 60c. Postage, 8c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: For general use in the study of the Scriptures; with engravings, maps and tables. The best abridged dictionary. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp.—Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist? each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—[illegible] pp. The Everlasting Dominion 20 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—12 pp. Questions on Immortality—[illegible] pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of [illegible]—[illegible] pp. [illegible]—[illegible] pp.

Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,000 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,000 pp. In small lots, one cent for every [illegible] pages, post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by [illegible] T. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this [illegible] published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. [illegible] pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings, with Scripture references, and remarks to aid in reference to Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 136 pp. Paper covers, 15c. $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 20c. single, $2 15 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology, Immaterialism, Death and the Dead, The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 160 pp. 20c.

LAST DAY TOKENS. An edition of those interesting (illustrated) pamphlets, by Eld. S. S. Brewer, including the three numbers in one volume of 216 pages. It contains a full and interesting record of the signs of the times of this age with accounts of remarkable phenomena in the heavens, on earth, and in the moral social, and religious worlds. A particular account of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, is given. Former price of the three numbers, 60c. The three in one volume are now offered for 35c.

THE HARMONIUM: Being an exposition of those passages of Scripture commonly thought to teach the immortality of the soul, and the consciousness of the dead, showing that they are in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the sleep of the dead. By J. W. Taylor. 10c.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 120 pp. 25c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 317 pp. Paper covers, 50c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic [illegible] argument. By Eld. J. Wendell. 48 pp. 10c.

WHAT IS MAN? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SOUL; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
THE SPIRIT; What is it? 5c; by mail, 7c.
RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. 5c. By mail, 7c.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED, and shown to be the work of demons: an examination of its origin, morals, doctrines and politics. 15c, post-paid.

The above five works, by Eld. M. Grant—in one vol. 40c. post-paid. The first four in one vol.—large type—35c. post-paid. "Spiritualism Unveiled," bound with Smith's "Bible View of the Personality of God," 35c.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH, on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth, comprising seven hundred extracts from the writings of more than three hundred of the most noted Rabbins, Fathers, Preachers, Reformers, Poets, Historians, Theologians and writers that have lived during the last two thousand years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth, $2.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added much important History, Statistics and Tables, making a book of great value to all Bible students and teachers. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. The Creation and Fall of Man, the Covenants, Atonement, Redemption, Regeneration, Restitution, Reign of Christ, Millennium, True Israel, etc. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATT. 24 and 25, Expository and Historical, showing the accurate fulfillment of Christ's predictions to the present time, and what we should expect next. 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM—Its Objects and Duty. Thoroughly examined, Scripturally and Historically. [illegible]

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. A valuable exposition of the Scriptures. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4 00.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 224 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1; postage, 16c. Single volume 50c.; postage, 8c.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new emphatic version, based on the interlineary translation, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican manuscript (No. 1209, in the Vatican Library.) 884 pp. 12 mo. Cloth binding, $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $1 50, post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c; 12mo. 75.

THE JUBILEE HARP: A choice collection of Psalmody, Ancient and Modern, designed for use in public and social worship. The best hymn and tune book ever introduced among the Adventists. Single copies $1; postage 12c; $9 a dozen. By mail, $10 50 a dozen. Gilt, $1 10. Full gilt, $1 25.

BOOK MARK. A convenient little instrument to be put on the margin of your book, or letter, or newspaper, being careful to make it point to the sentence or line you wish to mark, and you may be sure you will find it. 25c. a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP. Contains the hymns of The Jubilee Harp, without the music, in large, clear type. Cloth, 75c. single; $7 a dozen. Leather, $1 single; $9 50 a dozen.

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 20c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 10c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 30.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, Feb. 27, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand," his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed, the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead: their literal resurrection, the finite nature of evil: the final destruction of the wicked: personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
L. P. FOX, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.

A. S. CALKINS,
L. H. DAVIS,
D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.

N. FIELD,
H. G. McCULLOCH,
L. C. COLLINS, } Editorial Com.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, Business Agent,
To whom all communications should be addressed

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post paid, 10c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 50c. in paper.

Harps Etc.

We are out of Harps, and of Eld. Grant's works bound in one volume. New editions are preparing. When copies of them are received we will fill orders immediately. Our friends will be patient until then.

Little Letters from Little Folks.

They came from Minnesota. One read—"For the debt From Lucy A. Miller," printed with pencil very plainly. The other was rather hieroglyphical, but we understood it to mean "To help pay the debt; from a little girl named Laura Miller." "There was a ten cent piece in each letter. Thank you, little folks. Every little does help. And the good will shown helps those who do the work.

And a little German girl in Minn. Lydia Liederbach, sends ten cents, with a message in German that we cannot understand verbally, though we think we get the meaning she intended. We are glad the little folks love our paper.

Field's Discussion.

For some time this desirable work has been out of print. The main topic is the Intermediate State, or Condition of the Dead. When a new edition was announced, some of the Doctor's old Disciple friends announced that they would buy and circulate it as soon as ready, because they thought it would help their side—that Mr Connelly had the best of the argument. We shall soon know whether they really so felt, or were indulging mere bragadocio. The book has not yet made any converts to immaterialism that we have heard of; but we have learned of its bringing not a few to adopt the Bible theory.

The book has heretofore been sold at one dollar. The present edition is in paper covers (pp 315), and will be sent post paid for 50c. We hope for liberal orders.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawver, M. B. Geer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Hink, I. C. Wellcome, J. F. Huber, Grand St. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. E. Brown, M F Wistrom, R. W Wilson, R. M. Lampard, Clinton (Io) Church, Lapeer Church.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand-raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $130. See advertisement.

To Correspondents.

C. L. JONES. Look in TIMES Feb. 20, under head of "Harps" on last page....A SISTER—Should sign her name. We cannot publish anonymous letters. MRS. J. LOWRY. Send postal order if convenient.

Communications.

A J Marsh C E Barnes W Branch C M Keach S Morrell A Armour D S Bursum G W Miller L C Collins W M Kendall F E Cook J M Grace G W Crosby.

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, FEB. 24.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

J M Tozier
C Brandeberg
W F Ballard
J Welder
L Rice
E S Jennings
F V Streeter
H Hathaway
G H Adams
J R Preston
F Burr
E C Cowles
Thos Church
R R Hollister
J Thomas

J M Tozier
C Brandeberg
W F Ballard
J Welder
L Price
E S Jennings
F V Streeter
H Hathaway
G H Adams
L Pratt
M W [illegible]orlies
P Holler
M S Boyd
A A Yolan
M Prouty

E Maron
E A Wilson
C Noorse
J E Nichols
A C Hoetson
W N Sarvis
W L Heddington
M E Green
J Sloan
J C Stone
E Boynton
C Libby
J Gillee
H Young
E C Andrus

C H Sweet
N Rogers
O R Hale
E Grinnell
J G Junk
T H Woodruff
V Hunt
Z McGilrech
F W Hough
C P Davenport
M Stahly
R R Cole
R E Dale
N Breden
C E Blackman
T R Way
J L Harrington
J L Harrington
T R Way
D R Blanchard
C E Blackman
R E Dale
N Breeden
S R Cole
M Stahly
C P Davenport
F W Hough
Z McKillsh
V Hunt
T H Woodruff
J G Junk
E Grinnell
O R Hale
C H Sweet
J Thomas
R P Hollister
Thos Church
E C Cowles
F Burr

I Douglass
D Hall
S Tuttle
J M Bliss
L Miller
E B Hilliard
E Wise
M Fairfield
S P Whitney
J Hixon
J E Miller
S Campbell
T P Marshall
J J Towsley
A B Huntington
A S Smith
J Hoddle
A Robinson
C L Jones
J D Olney
H A F[illegible]k
A W P[illegible]
C C Mar[illegible]
J W Hodgson
C M Hollenbeck
J Raymond
W A Morse
E A Palmer
E Green
A Bailey
F A DeWolf
W G Houtse
S C Meigs
J N Hallock
T C Baker
G W English
A E Stanly
S J Rosbrough
N Rogers

[illegible]
J P McLean
M J Liddell
B Tilley
S K Gibson
C W Smith
W S Peyton
J R Preston
D D Field

Books and Tracts by Mail.

J F Huber
C McClure
C J Robinson
N C Miller
J Powell
M Lathrop
J R Dort
A B Fabrick
T B Robinson
J Griffith
S Grosjean
G C Stephenson
S S Babcock
M B Hubbell
C P Shepherd
A J Fosdick
D Hall
H A King
W H Service
H T Taylor
J Green
J R Boynton
C Beckwith
C A Hayke
D O Hink
T S Fisher
J C Stone
J Gillee
W S Peyton
D D Davis
A W Porter 2
E Green
G S Meigs
E Durham
C E Blackmore
E B Hilliard
C H Sweet
A A Yetaw
T R Way
C A Sumner 2
A J Tuttle
J M Stephenson
J M Stephenson
P M Willoughby
T Massey
E Durham
M Chandler
W C Hicks
I C Balcom
J H Anderson
A Stoneburg
W S Houtse
H H Hurlburt
W Shapely
W Dunbar
J Gregg
L C Conner
W A R Ryan

H M Wheeler
T Gainesforth
M E Weston
M A Allen
D Bonnell
Eld M Hammack
C Rima
G Shoriloff
C M Gifford
J McKinley
E B Scott
G Dean
H Harrington
R Barlonshaw
D W Wright
S Chase
W Anderson
L H Hough
W E Brown
M Smith
A W Tucker
A D Thomas
C Palmer
J R Barnes
J B Parkin
M F Cook
D S Palegrove
W W Smith
J T Carpenter
G E Okerlind
R D Austin
O M Garlick
O G Watkins
J Kroah
C M Keach
M K Sayre
V Beely
D C Corwin
G Showerman
J Elliot
I Peacock
J Catlin
L Record
H Seller
J Eaton
E E Sturgeon
J R S Mowrey
W Hodgman
J C Thomas
R Mann
F W Haskell
E H Evans
V Hunt
S M Musk
J Wilber
J McDonald
F A Chase
W G Campbell

H Hall
W C Hicks
H Zeder
L H Little
A W Wan
J B Morgan
W Leaf
E Williamson
E B Hilliard
D W Rook
J N Porter
J W Elliot
E B Williams
J D Mayfield
S Thayer
G Wallace
A G Williamson
T S Raymond
J McMichael
B T Thompson
H McDonald
J W Barritt
I S Ames
E Wakeman
M M Mohr
A Gilmore
D Bates
J C Malloy
L Ackerman
M F Wistrom
D Young
J Halcrow
P F Willoughby
E S Levi
F Braley
E S Robbins
J P Kohleman
J Hamblin
A C Derham
J B Castle
E Temple
D L Barson
J Sparks
A McCowan
A Edwards
E Holden
C Brandberg
G T Adams
T H Woodruff
J W Hodgson
O P Davenport
H Hathaway
J J Towsley
E Grinnell
E C Cowles
E H Barrington

[illegible].

I C Wellcome H G McCulloch.

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged..............................$361.00

A B Huntington	$ 10	C Beckwith	$ 1	25
Susy Miller	10	T E Arnold	1	00
Laura "	10	J H [illegible]cock	1	00
S Tuttle	50	G Conley		50
E A Palmer	1 00

Our Debt.

E Wise	pd	$ 2 00	W G Houtse	pd $	4 00
Mrs Cornwall	"	1 40	R P Henderson	"	1 00

New Press.

M Prouty $1 00

Book Notices, Etc.

The Star in the West is the title of the able Universalist weekly paper published at Cincinnati, O. It is one of the live papers. Those who wish to be posted in the progress of Universalism will find it all they could desire. Published at Cincinnati, O. $2.50 a year.

Br. Geo. Trask wants to know if we have a good word for his anti-tobacco war. Yes, we have. We admire it and bid him God speed. He has just started an Anti-Tobacco Journal. He will send twelve copies a year (3 quarterly) for a dollar. Send him 25c. for specimen copies and tracts. ADDRESS: Geo. Trask, Fitchburg, Mass.

D. P. Faulds, 70 Main St. Louisville, Ky. is a good place to procure sheet music, or musical instruments. Catalogues sent on application.

We observe that the "Back-Log Studies" in Scribner's Monthly are attracting great attention. Mr. Warner, the author, will make his mark in American literature. No. III of the series appears in the March number of Scribner's.

The Sunday School World presents claims upon those engaged in Sunday School work that will inevitably render it popular. It holds an advanced position among its compeers. Published by W. R. Port, 130 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Littel's Living Age—to name it is to praise. No 1444 has a reprint of the Duke of Argyll's excellent article—"Hibernicisms in Philosophy," besides other matter. A 64 pp. weekly magazine. $8 a year. Littel and Gay, Boston, Mass.

The Coming Reign of Terror, or the Commune. A Lecture by Wm. N. Pile. By Mail, 7c. 5 cops. 25c. 10 cops. 50c. 100 by express $3.50. To be had of author, Springfield, Mass. A copy of the above, and of the Mediatorial Kingdom sent for 25c.

This is a tract of 24 pages, filled with highly sensational matter relating to the (in the author's view) probable progress of the Commune. Those interested can procure the work of the author by addressing him as above.

Obituary.

SMITH. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Amboy, Ill. Feb. 12, 1872, Br. Anson Smith: aged 64 years and 4 months.

Br. Smith has been an Adventist since 1843. He was baptised by H. F. Hill in New York. In his last illness his trust was in God. Although his suffering was great, yet he felt meekly resigned to the will of God "The blessed hope" was his comfort and his theme. He quietly "fell on sleep" in hope of a blissful immortality beyond the confines of the grave where "death shall be swallowed up in victory." Blessed sleep!

He leaves a wife, children and grandchildren to mourn. Funeral services by the writer. 1 Cor 15: 54, 55. C. C. MARSTON.

Crisis please copy.

GLASS. In DeKalb, Ill. Feb. 7, 1872, Willie E., son of H. M. & M. B. Glass: aged 4 years, 1 month and 4 days.

Sermon by the writer, from Jas. 5:20.

W. A. KENDALL.

SPEAKER. Near Montpelier, O. Feb. 15, 1872, Mary A. Speaker: aged 61 years and 12 days.

She was born in Adams Co. Pa. United with the German Reformed church at an early age. Some two years since she embraced the Advent faith, under the preaching of Br. Snook. Her life has been an endeavor to live for God, ever ready to give an answer of the reason of her hope. She will be greatly missed by the little church here. We do not expect she will sleep long, but will soon be summoned from the land of the enemy.

She leaves a husband and eight children to mourn. Services by the writer and Br. Johnson, of the United Brethren. Text, Am. 4: 12. G. W. ENGLISH.

QUINN. At Long Point, Ill. Feb. 7, of Typhoid Fever, Henry Quinn: aged 33 years.

He was a noble specimen of integrity and Christian firmness. It is said that he never allowed any business matters to interfere with family devotion, and in his last hours of life he clearly expressed to his attending physician and other friends his hope of eternal life at Jesus' coming. He said that everything was right so far as he knew between him and his fellow-men and his God; he would sleep but a little while.

He leaves a wife and two little girls. Selections of Scripture from Job 14, 19, and Ps. 90, with brief remarks and prayer by the writer. Funeral sermon deferred on account of sickness in the family.

AMOS BAILEY.

Crisis please copy.

BRIGGS. In Bingen, Pa. Feb. 9, 1872, of dropsy, Lydia, wife of E. P. Briggs; aged 60 years, 7 months, and 15 days.

She suffered much, but was patient, like a true Christian. With a firm belief in the resurrection of the dead, and the speedy coming of the Lord, she fell sweetly asleep in Jesus. We feel sad and lonely, but we mourn not as those who have no hope in Christ.

A. H. BRIGGS.

Crisis please copy.

COOPER. Sarah Ann, wife of Charles Cooper, died Feb. 16, 1872: aged 31 years, 9 months and 20 days.

She has been living a Christian life some four years. Came out under Br. D. S. Clark's labors. She left a request for him to preach her funeral sermon as soon as convenient. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn. D. S. BURSUM.

Lines in memory of Eva Thompson: who died Nov. 15, 1871.

Through weary months sweet lamb long tried
A patient heart she bore—
She trod with suffering side by side;
'Till life could brook no more;
Then through the valley dark and deep,
She softly passed and fell asleep!

Asleep! Ah! wither'd like the flower
Nipp'd by untimely frost;
She faded in life's happiest hour,—
The pure, the loved, the lost!—
So beautiful, so early dead,
Ere time had bowed that fair young head.

No murmur from those lips to speak
Of anguish deeply felt:
The smile that lit that poor pale cheek
A heart of stone might melt.
O quiet heart! long worn and tried,
By patient suffering purified!

To weep beside the loved laid low,
To give the last cold kiss!
Is there a pang the heart may know,
Is there a grief like this?
But blessed thought to those who weep—
"He giveth his beloved sleep."

Oh! could the father's hopeless grief,
That mother's breaking heart,
Give but a moment's sweet relief,
Or one glad hour impart,
They would have borne an age of pain
To bring her back to life again.

O thou who driest the mourner's tear,
Whose love no boon denies;
To thee, when bruised and broken here
We turn our weeping eyes!
Touch with thine hand the killing pain,
And soothe the heart to peace again.

W. H.

OBER. At Muskegon, Mich. Feb, 11, 1872, Melissa E. daughter of George and Eliza Lyon, and wife of Geo. Ober: aged 25 years, 3 months and 13 days.

Sr. Ober was formerly of West Stafford, Ct. She loved the house of prayer, and when able was a frequent visitor there, mingling her voice with others in praise to the great I AM.

She suffered long and patiently with her disease, consumption, and it was quite a struggle for her to give up her darling babe, but towards the last she felt perfectly resigned and willing to trust the little one in the same hand that was sustaining her in her hour of trial; feeling that she should sleep but a little while, and then awake to meet little Louis where partings are unknown. She was esteemed most highly by those who knew her best. She sleeps in Jesus, leaving a husband, parents, brother, child, with numerous friends, to mourn her early death. They sorrow not as those who mourn without hope. Yet, we laid Melissa to rest until the chief Shepherd shall appear. Then we hope to meet her with the immortal ones who are to die no more. Blessed thought! To die no more! Oh! who would not strive for a life in the eternal future?

E. A. LAKE.

Notices, Etc.

Br. Peter Mitson has arranged to devote most of his time to the work of the ministry. Churches and brethren desiring his labors should correspond with him at once. We recommend him as a faithful minister of the word, one that will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. GEO. W. MILLER.

Minnesota Tent.

Notice is hereby given to those brethren and sisters of the State of Minn. who have subscribed for the purchasing of a new tent for the State, that the business of collecting and purchasing the tent in time for the summer campaign, has been committed to the undersigned, by a vote of the Annual Conference at its last session. All such as have not paid their subscriptions will please remit to me as soon as possible, that I may have time to make the purchase, before it will be actually needed. ADDRESS: GEO. W. MILLER, Millersburg, Rice Co. Minn.

Appointments.

MICHIGAN.

Marietta. Presbyterian chapel, Monday and Tuesday evenings, March 11, 12.
North Branch Union S. H. Wednesday eve. March 13.
Speaker Gray S. H. Thursday eve. March 14.
Brockway Center, Friday eve. March 15.
Advent chapel, Lake Shore, three miles north of Lexington, Sunday, 10½ a. m. March 17.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H. 2½ p. m.
Port Sanilac, Good Templar's Hall, 7½ p. m.
GEO. WRIGHT, Jr.

Porter Center, Saturday eve. March 2, and over Sunday; and longer, perhaps, if advisable.
JAS. FERRIS.

The third Q. M. for the Southern District of Mich. will be held at the Munger S. H. five miles north of Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co. commencing Wednesday eve. March 20, and hold over Lord's day. Teams will be at the station at Eaton Rapids on the arrival of the p. m. trains from Grand Rapids and Jackson. Eaton Rapids is on the Grand River Valley R. R. Let there be a full attendance.
J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y. pro tem.

ILLINOIS.

Rochelle, Ogle Co. Sabbath, March 3.
Ackerson's S. H. Ogle Co. March 6, eve. Subject: The Hell of Modern Theology.
Amboy, Lee Co. Sabbath, March 10. Subject in the eve: Authenticity of the N. T.
Dalton, Moultrie Co, March 12 to 15, as Br. W. M. Reeder may arrange
Blue Ridge, Piatt Co. March 16.
Skeelsville, Piatt Co. March 17.
Farmer City, Dewitt Co. March 18 to 21, in debate with Eld. S. K. Hallam.
C. C. MARSTON.

Near Mt. Joy, Johnson Co. Sunday, March 3.
F. A. CHILDS.

Clinton, Colton's S. H. Saturday eve. March 16.
Afton, Sabbath, March 17. C. W. SMITH.

Aurora, Sabbath, March 3.
Milroy, Sat. eve, March 9, and on Sabbath at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. At the Town House at 3 p. m. C. W. SMITH.

Eld. Wm. McCulloch will preach in our vicinity (Cobden) on the third Sunday in February, continuing a few days; and in the vicinity of Anna the fourth Sunday, continuing a few days, as Br. Childs may arrange. J. S. LAWVER.

IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa First District Q. M. is to be held at Lewis, Cass Co. March 15–17. Brethren and sisters, let us have general rally.
WM. MURPHY, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

Milan, March 21, and over Sunday.
South Milan, April 7.
West Unionville, 3 miles, May 4, 5.
N. C. MILLER

The second Q. M. of the Mo. and S. W. Iowa Conference will convene with Empire church, Friday evening, March 1, and continue over Sunday. Let all the churches in the District be represented. Let none of the ministry fail to be there. JAMES FINDERS, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA.

Bliss S. H. 10½ a. m. and 2½ p. m. Sunday, March 3.
Vowles S. H St. Charles, 2 p. m. March 9, covenant meeting. All the members of Utica church are invited.
Utica Station, 10½ a. m. and eve, March 10.
Vowles S. H. 2 p. m. and regular appointments thereafter at the last named place.
S. C. WELLCOME.

West St. Paul, March 3.
Cottage Grove, near Br. Fullerton's, March 17.
Independence, March 24. J. RAYMOND.

WISCONSIN.

The third Q. M. for Eastern District, Wis. will be held with the church at Cassel's Prairie, Sauk Co. Friday March 22, and over the Lord's day. Come at the commencement of the meeting, and bring the holy fire with you. GEO. THOMSON.

Near Prescott, as Br. Shepard may arrange, March 10. J. RAYMOND.

NEW YORK.

Regular meetings are held by the church at 126 West 24th St., New York city: three times on Sunday, and Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings. T. J. COX.

The Lord willing, the next Q. M. of the N. Y. Advent Christian Conference will convene with the church in Lockport, Thursday eve. March 14, and continue over Sunday. All are invited. It is hoped there will be a large attendance and a full representation by delegates, as there will need be some judicious planning for the next Annual Meeting in June. Shall there be a camp-meeting, as last year? Where? Pray for this meeting, and come praying. Don't forget the collection.
D. COGSWELL, Pres't.
WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

The next Q. M. of the A. C. Conference of No. Penn. and So. New York, will be held with the church in Hornellsville, New York, commencing March 15 and continuing over Sunday. All are invited.
J. W. TAYLOR, Pres't.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

There will be a Q. M. held with the church at Fremont, Steuben Co. Saturday and Sunday, March 2 and 3. J. W. TAYLOR.

Advertisements.

Free. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee-keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage.
H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper of 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 14 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 25c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $25. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

THRESHING MACHINE.

FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $500. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $350. Warranted as represented.

N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure. (tf) Address, A. J. Brown, Hesperia, Mich.

FANNING MILL. I make an excellent machine for cleaning wheat. It will take out all cheat and oats, and leave the wheat clean and fit for seed. I will ship one of these machines to the first brother who will send $25 to the office of THE TIMES. They are well worth $30. H. M. Wheeler, Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Ill.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.

This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

HOW TO GO WEST."

Forty years ago, Illinois was as far West as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of Progress and Improvement, the word West has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid Line of Railroad.

This Line of Railroad is the Burlington Route, which starts from Chicago by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and, running through Burlington, reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific, and other railroads running from those cities.

People going to Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, California, or any point in the Territories, will study their own interests by going "By way of Burlington," for the rates of that Line are always as low as any other, and it is the best Route in the West, therefore you are more sure of your safety and comfort.

The Burlington Route has admirably answered the question "How to go West?" by the publication of an excellent pamphlet, containing a large, truthful map of the Great West, and much interesting and valuable information, which can be obtained free of charge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

WAIT'S

TURBINE WATER WHEEL.

HUDSON RIVER CHAMPION

A WORD TO MILL MEN.

I have been building the Jonval Turbine for the past eight years. Have built some seven or eight different kinds of wheels. Am acquainted with nearly all the first class wheels in the country, and am fully persuaded that the Champion stands alone without a rival. Early I discovered that the tangential and centrifugal forces of the water, exerted a tremendous power which is expended against the outer rims of those wheels, which discharge vertically and against the scrolls and curbs of most other kinds, which is lost to all useful effect.

For a long time I studied and experimented carefully, to bring this wasted power into use without injuring the other high qualities of the Wheels.

My efforts have been crowned with success, and I can now offer you a Turbine which can compete successfully with all others in the economical use of the water, while for simplicity of construction, strength and durability, it is the champion of the world.

It has no complication of gates, with their multitude of Levers no cranks, pin, segments nor pinions to get out of order. No series of leaky joints; no rubbing surface to wear away, to waste the water; nothing touches the wheel but water: hence it will never wear out. There is no latteral motion, nor do their steps wear out like other wheels.

The Jonval Turbine has given the highest percentage of power ever attained in any public test. Several of these Jonvals have been taken out which were in perfect order (having run but a short time), and the Champion placed in the same curbs, venting the same amount of water, and have obtained from six to eight per cent. more power in every instance than the Jonvals gave.

These wheels are perfectly proof against injury from flood-wood. Should any pieces get into the curb which could not pass through the wheel, you have simply to open a door (like a safe or cupboard), enter the curb, and remove the obstruction, and it is all ready for work again. This cannot be done in other wheels.

They are now in operation in every section of the country, giving unbounded satisfaction and taking the places of all other wheels. The extreme low price for which they are sold astonishes everybody.

Circulars sent free. Address,
P. H. WAIT, Sandy Hill, N. Y.

Our Book and Tract Column.

ADVENT TRACTS—WESTERN SERIES. Sermon on Hell; The Penalty of Sin; Paradise, Heaven and Hell Before Judgment; The Second Advent; The Key of Truth—each 16 pp. Time is Short—Be Ready; The Only Hope; The Personal Coming; Think for Yourself; Why am I an Adventist?—each 8 pp. The 2,300 Days; The Sabbath; Everlasting Punishment—24 pp. The Everlasting Dominion—20 pp. Collins' Address on Future Punishment—40 pp. Objections Removed—a Supplement to the Address—16 pp. Questions on Immortality—8 pp. The Apocalyptic Symbols; The Next Dispensation—72 pp. The Reign of Messiah—52 pp. Tracts for distribution—by express, 1,000 pp. for $1; by mail, 1,000 pp. In small lots, one cent for every ten pages. post paid. Add 2c. for single tracts, for postage.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. The best work devoted to this topic yet published. It is comprehensive, concise and convincing. We could fill our paper with testimonials of its great merits. 360 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL. A choice collection of spiritual songs and hymns, for camp, tent, prayer, and conference meetings; with Scripture references, and remarks to aid inquirers in to Bible truth. By J. V. Himes. 128 pp. Paper covers, 15c; $1 50 a dozen; flexible cloth covers, 25c. single, $2 25 a dozen.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; Clearly proved by showing that the old covenant, or ten commandments, have been changed, or made complete, in the Christian dispensation; with a convincing review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath. In two parts. By T. M. Preble. 371 pp. $1.

FUTURITY. Comprising the four following tracts: Life and Death Theology; Immortalism, Death and the Dead; The Coming Judgment. By Wm. Sheldon. 100 pp. 30c.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 32. BUCHANAN, MARCH 5, 1872. WHOLE NO. 412.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Contents.

The Progress of Spiritualism, John D. Jones; Adultery, or Clinging to Moses and Christ, too, A. P. Moore.........249
A Discussion between Elds. Braden and Himes.....250
On Opinions Concerning the State of the Dead; Corrupt Marriages, L. C. McKinstry; The God of Abraham, A. Armour.........251
Book Notices; The Soul; Editor's Journal; California, O. R. Fassett.........252
Soul Want; Queries; Correspondence; Editorial Gleanings.........253
An Awkward Excuse; The Glory of Drudgery; Be Sober; Letters and Extracts; The Future.........254
The Penalty of God's Law is Death, C. C. Marston; Our Young Folks—The Broken Saw; Rap! Rap!.255
Business Agent's Department; Book Notices; Obituaries; At Home; Abroad; Appointments; Advertisements; Book and Tract Column.........256

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, March 5, 1872.

The Progress of Spiritualism.

We are glad, in one sense, to see Spiritualism make the progress that it is making, viz: a progress more and more towards utter foolishness. We as a people have long argued that for an immaterialist, or in other words, for one believing in spiritism to be consistent he must believe all that the ancient promulgators of that Satanic delusion believed, and add to their faith and belief the theory of the transmigration of souls. And sure enough we have now from a French scientist and spiritist a work advocating the truth of this theory. I regret that I have not the name of the author of this wonderful work; but, suffice it for the present to say, that he is a man of deep learning and regarded as one of the lights in modern science. Whether an ignies fatuous or not I leave the reader to judge. His work is soon to be published in English and a great sensation in the reading world is predicted. A sketch of its theory as I heard from a lecture by the Unitarian minister of this place (Ann Arbor) to-day is as follows, according to my memory.

Heaven, the final abode of the perfect is in the sun. The sun is the animating life-giving force in nature. Life is progressive from the beginning to this brilliant end. It begins in the lowest form of protoplasm. It goes or progresses step by step from plant to animal—from polywog to woodchuck; from woodchuck to the dog that hunts him; from the dog on in successive gradations until a stage in the progression is reached which is called man. If this being dies before twelve months old, its soul goes back to take another start, and try the race over again.

If it live beyond that period and the man's life is perfect enough, it passes on to the next stage, which the author terms the super-human stage; location—etheral space. Here we will leave him to go back to earth and finish up there before proceeding further on our heavenly (?) journey. If the man sins pretty bad, he is denied this blissful promotion, and his soul is sent back to try again, and see if it cannot profit by its experience. Now to go back to our soul whizzing round in ethereal space. After a few revolutions if he has been a good superhuman, he is permitted to land on the celestial shore of the first planet, not as I understand the first from the earth towards the sun, but the other way. He takes a short voyage of exploration before going to glory infinite. He lands on Mars. Here after another trial if good he passes on to the next ethereal space. In all cases if bad he again is placed back and allowed to try over again, until he succeeds. From this on in the same manner to all the planets, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, Venus, Mercury, and finally enters the abode of bliss purified in the sun. After reaching this delightful abode he assumes a new power, that of emanating an influence back to earth.

The author of course makes Spiritism, and as we have long argued, its necessary constant transmigration of souls, the basis upon which he rears his cob-house. He has nothing to do with the Bible—leaves it out as useless. He barely mentions God. The memory of man is lost if he sins. That is his memory of his previous condition or existence. Whether the memory of the perfect was lost or not this lecturer did not say. The author claims science as in favor of his theory.

He adduces as proof of his theory more than its mere plausibility and its harmony with known discoveries of facts and its remarkable adaptability to the wants of mankind as a belief. The lecturer announced himself pleased with it. Said that no one could read his book without feeling that it was a beautiful belief. One that gave comfort to the thirsty soul. (I do not claim these as his exact words but honestly mean to give his ideas). It was a belief which science would demonstrate. Materialists would laugh at it. Some orthodox people would condemn it, but the intelligent thinkers would be pleased with it.

So much for the theory, and the lecturer's faith in it. Will Spiritism, like that well known animal that stings itself to death, will Spiritism come to an end at the hands of its own advocates? I believe it will in time, because I believe it to be a lie instituted by that star liar—Satan; and I rest in full faith on that old saying—Give a liar plenty of rope, and he will hang himself. Spiritism is rapidly passing over to that degree of inconsistency which will make believers in it, as they should be, ashamed of the weakness of their cause. By the aid of their light of Spiritism we may safely predict the future. Spiritists will soon en masse relinquish the Bible and the God of the Bible to true believers in him and his promises. The line is to be drawn so closely between Materialistic Christians and immaterialistic Christians, as to throw the Bible on our side of the question entirely: and the choice is to not be Materialism and God, or Conservatism God and Mammon; or Spiritism and the Devil, but to be materialism and God, or Spiritism and the Devil. This day so surely coming will try men's hearts, and may God help all who are honestly seeking to take the true road to eternal life.

But a word or two as to the comfort in this new theory which the lecturer deemed so ample. Not long since I lost a little sister, dearer to me than life almost. How "comfortable" it would be for me to believe that she was on her way to the sun, alone, mourning for the company of those she knew on earth! Or, how comforting the thought that after indefinite whirlings in which I, wicked as I naturally am should lose my memory many times, might some time, in millions of years be with her again. But I could not know her, for I have lost all memory of previous friendship, or relation-ties. I cannot believe the lecturer ever looked at this subject in this light when he called its belief a comfortable one.

But constrast this dreary aspect with the faith I have in Christ, that he will keep his promise and soon come to resurrect my darling sister to meet me immortalized, and safe from the icy grasp of death: or that if I sleep before that blessed moment, the signs of the times tell me that only a short time will wake me. How pleasant to think that if faithful we will be raised together at the same sound of the trump; that we shall then see as we are seen and know as we are known. Would I be shaken in this faith by such an inconsistent uncomforting theory as is proffered me in the French scientist's heaven? No answer is needed.

I must differ again with the lecturer in his sanguine expectation, that the intelligent will be pleased with this book, unless he means they will be amused in its nonsensical teachings. But nonsensical as it is, it is the legitimate fruits of Spiritism, and immaterialists must support or deny faith in its parent. God grant it may open the eyes of all those who stand on the verge of the precipice of modern Spiritism.

JOHN D. JONES.

Adultery, or Clinging to Moses and Christ, too.

If I understand the force of the apostle's reasoning in Rom. 7, it is, that those who attempt to be married to Christ, and still cling to Moses, are virtually committing adultery. "For the woman which hath an husband, is bound by the law to her husband, so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So then, if while the husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress, though she be married to another man. Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God."

What is the lesson the apostle brings out by this illustration? It seems simply this: that the church was married to a husband, but he being dead, she is at liberty to be married to Christ. Who was that husband? "But now we are delivered from the LAW, THAT BEING DEAD wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter." Would he have us understand that the law was represented by the dead husband? Certainly, or his reasoning is of no force. Can the law still be alive, and we be united to Christ without committing adultery? Certainly not. "But that means the ceremonial law." That is an expression not found in the Bible; but let us see if it does. "I had not known sin but by the law; for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." Was that the ceremonial law? or the decalogue engraven on stones? People claim a difference between the law of God and the law of Moses, but they are used interchangably in many places. "And when the days of her purification, according to the law of Moses, were accomplished," etc., (as it is written in the law of the Lord . . .); "and to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord." (Luke 2 : 22–24.) The Ten-commandment law is called the law of Moses. "Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments." (Mal. 4 : 4.) What law was given in Horeb? "And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them on two tablets of stone."

We learn by this that the law of Moses in Mal. 4 : 4, is what is claimed to be the law of God, or the ten commandments, and also that that is part of the old covenant which Paul said was faulty, and ready in his day to vanish away, to make room for the new. That which was engraven on tables of stone was part of the covenant, and that is what is "done away." "And the Lord said unto Moses, Write thou these words; for after the tenor of these words have I made a covenant with thee and with Israel. And he was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread nor drink water. And he wrote upon the the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments." (Ex. 34 : 27, 28.)

I have heard it asserted that the ten commandments were no part of the old covenant; but this seems plain enough that they were, and the "ark" that they were kept in was the "ark of the covenant." The law "was added because of transgression, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels in the hands of a mediator." (Gal. 3 : 19.) What was the law added to? The promise of inheritance to Abraham. How long after the promise was it added? "Four hundred and thirty years." Why was it added? "Because of transgression," or to keep their wickedness in check. How long was it to be in force? "Till the seed should come." Then when the seed came it was no [illegible] old covenant ran out by limitation. It was made with the Jews, and its promises and blessings were for them only. The dispensation being changed, and the middle wall of partition being broken, it was necessary to have a change in the law. "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also in the law. For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did, by the which we draw nigh unto God." (Heb. 7 : 12, 19.) "For if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily, righteousness should have been by the law (Gal. 3:21.)

We often hear it said that the ten commandments were moral precepts, and it is impossible for a moral precept to be abolished. They were no more moral precepts than all the other commands and requirements of the law. Is not this a moral precept: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might, and thy neighbor as thyself?" This is not in the decalogue, but in the law people admit was abolished. When the young man came to Jesus to ask him which was the greatest commandment in the law, he referred him, not to one of the ten, but to this one separate and distinct. That which was engraven in stones was abolished also. "But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses, for the glory of his countenance, which (glory) was to be done away; how shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory. . . . For if that which was done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious. Seeing, then, that we have such hope, we use great plainness of speech; and not as Moses, which put a vail over his face, that the children of Israel could not steadfastly look to the end of that which was abolished." (2 Cor. 3 : 7–14.) What was abolished? "The ministration of death, written and engraven in stones." What was engraven in stones? "The ten commandments." "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, ye are no longer under a schoolmaster." (Gal. 3 : 24, 25.)

Moses was the mediator of the old covenant; Christ the mediator of the new. The old covenant was dedicated with blood; so was the new. Moses was the head of the Jewish church, and was faithful in all his house; Christ is the head of the Christian church. "But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises. For if the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for a second . . . . In that he saith a new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now, that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." (Heb. 8 : 6, 7, 13.) The old covenant, with all its penalties, passed away. The time it was to be in force ended. The seed came. It was to be in force till then. Christ came. The schoolmaster's time expired. He established a new and better covenant. Now we are commanded to "hear him." What he has commanded is our law. Some ridicule the idea of Christ being a law-giver, and of the law of Christ. Paul says we are "under the law to Christ." (1 Cor. 9 : 11.) Isaiah says, in speaking of Christ, "The isles shall wait for his law." (Is. 42 : 4.) Jesus says himself, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." (John 15 : 14.) The Father acknowledged his authority and said, "HEAR HIM." Every soul that will not "hear him" will be destroyed from among the people. It is Christ instead of Moses. I think he is good authority.

What there was in the old covenant, which he wanted brought into the new, [illegible] that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery; but I say unto you, that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart;" thus showing his authority for making any change for the discipline of both Jews and Gentiles in this dispensation, preparatory to their both entering his kingdom. The man that will not obey his laws here, and be loyal, cannot have the blessings of his kingdom.

Now, that Mosaic covenant being ended, can we still cling to it and to Christ too, without virtually committing adultery, and greatly dishonoring the husband we are now bound to, and commanded to hear?" It is no wonder that those who go back to the keeping of the old law, or to the old husband, for a time, and find they have "fallen from grace," and come back to Christ again, and "hear him," always say—"I thank God I am now out of BONDAGE." Such can appreciate the force of the apostle's words, "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage" (Gal. 5 : 1), referring directly to "Sinai, which gendereth to bondage." "Christ is become of none effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace." (Gal. 5 : 4.) "For if righteousnear come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain." (Gal. 2 : 21.)

A. P. MOORE, in Crisis.

Boston, Mass.

Love of Notoriety.

It is a pity that any man bearing the Christian name should be willing to do Christian work only when it is likely to bring him before the notice of men. And yet there are just such men and women. Every pastor can point out one or more such Christians in his church. If such a one can serve on some official board, or lead the singing, or at any rate teach a bible class; or if such a one can be prominent in getting up a festival "to clear the debt off the church," or be first directress in the sewing society, why then you can get some work out of that Christian brother or sister. But just let it come to pass that there is no notoriety attending what they do, the way their zeal flags, and their determination dies, and their efforts diminish is a marvel.

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

Upon Four Propositions, Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

ELD. CLARK BRADEN'S SIXTH LETTER.

We will first take up certain matters presented in Br. Himes' fourth reply, that have not been attended to as yet. He begins by complaining of the severity of my language, and that I have so pointedly challenged him to answer certain questions, and dared him to define himself on certain issues. The reader will remember that I defined the spirit of man, and made it the same in nature as the angels, Holy Spirit, the Logos, and God, who are spirits. I showed that the attributes that man had in common with these higher intelligences inhered in his spirit. That man's spirit had the same attributes and responsibilities as these spirits. That it was enumerated with them as the same in nature, in many places. That man had a body, soul, and spirit.

To evade this, my opponent quoted certain passages in which it is declared that both man and the brutes have the principle of animal life—that they have one breath, and are subject to the same event—death. Not that the consequences of death are the same to each, but that the same event happens to both. He did this in such a way as to assume that man and animals have the same spirit. Man has the same spirit as the brute. He so quoted them that he knew his readers would give to them just that meaning. Indeed there is no argument for his side in the passages, unless he takes that position. I asked him to say whether he assumed that man had the same spirit as the brutes. Whether spirit, when applied (as he claimed) to the brutes, had the same meaning as in 1 Thes. 5:23; and the places we quoted where it was applied to man. Whether the brute had a spirit in the same sense that man is said to have a spirit in such passages. Whether brutes have a body, soul, and spirit. If not, which of these do they lack? I charged him with attempting to drag man down to a level with the brute—with lugging over into the pneumatology of man, the animal meanings of zoology. He refuses to answer, and complains of severity. How justly, let the reader judge. Speaking of the return of the spirit to God, and of the departure of Christ's spirit to his Father, and commenting on Peter's language in Acts 2:31; we showed that the spirit of Christ went as a conscious entity to the underworld, to Paradise. Our opponent twisted the passages around to mean that our Savior's body, soul, and spirit lay in the tomb. That he died (including the Divine Logos) with an utter extinction of conscious being. That the Divine Logos was extinct three days. When I challenged him to avow these positions he refuses, and says I am trying to lug in side issues. In other words, when he tacitly assumes certain absurd positions, to evade the force of my arguments, I am not to point out these monstrosities, or if I do, I am trying to introduce side issues. I believe I have a right to point out the absurdities of his position, and when I show that they are absurd, I overturn them completely.

I have from the first frankly avowed my positions, and accepted the consequences in full. Our readers will appreciate the manliness of my opponent when I tell them that he has in private letters, since the discussion began, answered the questions he refuses to answer in debate, and binds me by my honor not to use them against him in the debate. Now when Clark Braden pursues such a course, I expect to have severer language than I have used, applied to me; and my own conscience and manhood would reproach me far more than my opponent possibly can. "I would rather be a dog and bay the moon than such a Roman" as he tells a story to begin with, let me illustrate his course by one. An Irishman was seen to shoot at an object in a field. One who saw him, inquired what he shot at. "A deer, shure," said Pat. "A deer!" said the other. "Why, that is a calf!" "Whisht," said Pat, "shure I shot so as to hit it if it was a deer, and miss it if it was a calf!" In like manner my opponent quotes Scriptures to prove a certain point in reply to me, but they don't prove that point at all, when his absurdities are exposed.

My opponent's attempt to set aside what we said on synecdoche, is extremely weak. Now I am not to be alarmed by his bluster over Gen. 2:7. "God made man [his body] out of the dust of the ground, and he breathed into his nostrils the breath of lives, and man [the whole man] became a living soul." This is just what it means, and my opponent dares to give no other meaning to it. Also he dare not deny that soul is here used by synecdoche, for the whole man. We have two instances of synecdoche. Again we do affirm that it was man's spirit that was made in the image of God. Dare my opponent say that his body was? Has God a material organization conditioned in time and space? "Male and female made he them" [their bodies]. A synecdoche again. Now make the most of it. Paul's spirit was caught up to Paradise because flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven—cannot enter it.

I find spirit used in certain passages in a sense that can give to it but one meaning. I do then regard it as pettifogging, that my opponent should, by bringing forward passages in which it is used in a sense that gives to it another meaning, suppose that he can set aside the passages we have quoted in any such way. Especially do we consider such a course to be pettifogging, when, if we were to place the meaning that spirit has in his quotations into ours, it would make nonsense of them; and when he will not dare to avow such substitution himself. We did call his swelling utterances that our proposition was not in the Scriptures, that they have no such phrases as "immortal soul," mere clap-trap. And we so consider them, and he has virtually acknowledged the truth of our charge when he attempts to evade our retort, that his pet phrase, "utter extinction of conscious being," is not there either. He very innocently remarks, "True, but we show that God's book teaches it." So we say concerning our proposition. So that bubble that he blew to such a size, is punctured.

He accepts our college illustration, introduced to show where the man goes, when he dies. He says the illustration is apt. The college, he says, is extinct. Let us see. The faculty and students go to another institution. The rational, thinking, conscious part of the college go to another institution. It is not extinguished by an utter extinction of conscious being. The building is torn down and converted to other uses. So the spirit, the rational, thinking, conscious part of man goes to God a rational, thinking, conscious entity, as the faculty and students went to another institution. The body goes back to dust, to reappear in a thousand forms perhaps. Now if man becomes extinct as the college does, we will shake hands over this question, and take up the next. But mark you, our brother claims that the spirit of man becomes extinct, and not merely the man as a composed organism. We reason on the man just as our brother did on the college. We use synecdoche, just as he would if he were an officer of the college where the students and faculty were then enrolled. He would say that the college was all there, meaning by it merely the real and important part of the college. So Paul says, "I will depart and be with Christ."

We will proceed to our sixth argument, or rather series of arguments, for we shall group a number of analogous arguments into one cumulative argument. To apprehend its full force, the reader must understand the real and full meaning of certain terms we shall use. They are sheol and hades. Materialism claims that the Hebrew sheol and the Greek hades mean grave, and grave only. A more bald assumption never was made. Their primitive meaning was grave, but they soon lost this meaning to such an extent as to be rarely used in that limited sense. To get their full import, let us recur to the principles established in our first letter concerning the growth of human language, ideas and the meanings of words. The Hebrews believed the world to be a vast plain. The expanse above was divided into three heavens, one above the other. Here was the abode of God and angels. Beneath the earth was an expanse of gloom and darkness. Here was the abode of Satan and evil spirits. Volcanic phenomena probably suggested the idea of fire as the instrument of torment there. This was called the abyss, (into which Korah and his companions went) the pit, etc.

Some thought that all around the confines of the earth was gloom and darkness, and access to this gloomy underworld. Our Savior refers to this idea when he speaks of outer darkness. The wicked, he said, using these ideas, are to be hurled into this outer darkness—into this gloomy outer or underworld. Paradise or Eden was to the east of the earth, and was once open to the earth; but was closed after the first transgression. Man at first thought the whole man lay in the grave. Then sheol meant grave. But soon sheol was deepened and expanded into the underworld, the most dreary abode of the shades of men. There was but imperfect knowledge there, and men or their shades wandered there in a dreamy phantom state. Hence it was not a desirable place. So it is regarded by men who speak of it, and by the shades themselves in Homer; and even so late as Virgil, who wrote almost at the time of our Savior.

Such was the view of the Hebrews up to the time of the Babylonish Captivity, and the whole Old Testament was written before the close of this period, and most of it before it began. Hence, Job, David, Hezekiah, the writer of Ecclesiastes, and the prophets, did not look on sheol, the abode of departed spirits, as the Christian now can contemplate the event of death. Br. Himes asks if God's people know less about the future world than the heathen Egyptians. In the first place he gives the Egyptians greater knowledge than they possessed. It is certain that the Egyptians excelled the Hebrews in civilization and knowledge. Again the Hebrews in Moses' day were a nation of lately emancipated freedmen. Their ideas were rude and imperfect, and God's revelation was accommodated to their capacity. Up to the time of the Babylonish Captivity the Hebrews believed that the shades were imprisoned in sheol, in a dreamy phantom state. Soon after, or about this time, they made a division in the abode of spirits. The good were in Abraham's bosom, or Paradise. The wicked in Tartarus. Some thought that the good went to the original Eden or Paradise, and the wicked were cast off the confines of the earth into outer darkness. As Abraham was the leader and father of the faithful in the department of the good in sheol, or in Paradise, or Eden, their abode was sometimes called Abraham's bosom, in allusion to the Hebrew practice of carrying valuables in the bosom of their robes.

There was an expectation that when the Messiah came, he would release the spirits of the good from the underworld; or as some thought, open Paradise to the world again. This was to be a part of his mission. The Pharisees and Essenes, who comprised the vast majority of the Hebrew people in our Savior's day, believed in a general judgment, a resurrection of both good and bad, and that the good would enter heaven forever, and that the wicked would be cast into gehenna. Gehenna, in our Savior's day, meant simply the everlasting abode of condemned spirits and wicked men. Such were the ideas of a vast majority of the Hebrew people in our Savior's day, and during the time of his apostles. I know it is said these views were borrowed from the Persians. I care not, if our Savior and his apostles used and sanctioned them. It is a fact that the resurrection of the body was taught among the Persians before it was a part of the Hebrew belief. I might here retort, and ask Br. Himes if the Persian was wiser than the chosen servants of God—the Hebrews, for he believes this Persian doctrine. He attempts to slur the idea of immortality as a heathen idea. Why not reject the resurrection on the same ground? Slurs are cast on the popular belief, because it was the belief of the Pharisees. Why not reject the resurrection also on the same ground? But [illegible] ideas, it matters not whether the Pharisees believed them or not. Again it is said that our Savior warned the people against the doctrine of the Pharisees; and it is impudently claimed that he had reference to their teaching concerning the future state; when the truth is he had not the slightest reference to these ideas; but on the contrary, he sanctioned and approved these ideas. This attempt to slur these ideas by calling them Pagan and Pharisaic ideas, recoils on the heads of all believers of the resurrection; and is a slur on our Savior and his apostles, who believed them, and a weak attempt to destroy a doctrine by calling it a bad name.

Then sheol at first meant grave, then the underworld or abode of spirits. It means abode of spirits in a vast majority of the instances in which it occurs. When that became the case, the Hebrews used other words, such as keber, etc., to denote grave. It is a gross, unwarrantable assumption to say that sheol always means grave, or only the place where the body is laid. We could as well say our hell means a covered place, for that was its original meaning. Hades, the Greek term, meant literally "the unseen," and then "the abode of spirits." It occurs eleven times in the Greek of the New Testament, and invariably with the meaning "abode of spirits." Sheol occurs in the Hebrew of the Old Testament sixty-four times. Hades is used as the equivalent of sheol sixty times, in rendering the Hebrew into Greek, in the Septuagint; and it should be used in the remaining four times; for buthros, pit, and thanatos, death, do not express the idea, unless they are used tropically for the abode of spirits. The attempt, then, of soul-extinctionists, to narrow down sheol and hades to the one meaning, grave, is a most unwarranted assumption, and in fact in a majority of cases sheol has no such meaning, and in the New Testament hades never has such a meaning.

Now comes the question. Did inspired men use these terms in this way? Let us try by an appeal to their use, to settle the question. Jacob says, "I will go down into sheol to my son, mourning." As he believed that a beast had devoured his son, he could not have meant the grave, for Joseph had never been carried there. He meant "my soul shall go to the soul of my son in the underworld, mourning." (Gen. 15:15.) "Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace." This does not mean mere burial, for going to his fathers and burial are mentioned as distinct events, and also Abraham never went to his fathers in the grave. Gen. 25:18—"Abraham gave up the ghost and died, and was gathered to his fathers, and his sons buried him." He was not buried with his fathers, but with Sarah alone. His going to his fathers was one event, and his burial was another. He went to his fathers in sheol, the underworld, and his body was buried. Gen. 35:29: Isaac's going to his fathers, and his burial, are mentioned as distinct events. Gen. 49:29: Gathering to his fathers is one event over which Jacob had no control; but he gave directions for his burial, as an event, subsequent to and distinct from it. Deut. 32:50: Moses was to die and be gathered to his people, as Aaron died and was gathered to his people. As neither were buried with their people, it refers to their spirits going to the spirits of their fathers in sheol, or the abode of spirits. So also David, Omri, and Manasseh, each died and slept with their fathers, though not buried with them.

David said of his son, 2 Sam. 12:23—"I shall go to him, but he shall not come back to me." "I shall go to him in sheol, or the abode of spirits, but his spirit shall not come back to me." In Elisha's and Elijah's miracles, the spirit was called back into the child. In Eccl. 12:7, we are told that "The dust shall return to the earth as it was, but the spirit to God who gave it." Ps. 16:9—David declares his flesh shall rest in hope, and his spirit shall be glad, "for thou wilt not leave my spirit in sheol [the abode of departed spirits], nor suffer thy Holy One [his flesh] to see corruption. Combining the ideas of the Hebrews concerning sheol with these expressions, we have clear evidence that they believed in the departure of the spirit to sheol or the abode of the spirits. Their knowledge was imperfect, and there was dread and apprehension, but the germ of the New Testament ideas was there.

We come now to the New Testament. In Acts 2:27, Peter, or the Holy Spirit through Peter, quotes Ps. 16:9, 10, and in v. 31 the Holy Spirit gives his comment on the Psalmist's language. I will accept his comment infinitely before those of the men quoted by Br. Himes. "He seeing this before, spoke of the resurrection of Christ, how that his soul was not left in hades [the abode of spirits], nor did his flesh see corruption" (in the tomb or grave). This is the exegesis of the Holy Spirit, on Ps. 16:9, and I will take it before any set of commentators' views. The conjunctive adverbs not and nor absolutely forbid a parallelism in Acts 2:31; and as that passage is the Holy Spirit's exegesis of Ps. 16:9, it utterly forbids a parallelism there also. Let God be true, though all commentators be liars. Our Savior commended his spirit to his Father. His spirit, whether we regard it as the Divine Logos, or a human spirit, or both combined, was a rational, thinking, conscious entity. The Divine Logos must have been such. The Divine Logos did not become unconscious, did not go to the grave, did not suffer an utter extinction of all being. Our brother dares not say so. Peter, or the Holy Spirit, says Christ's spirit went to sheol, the abode of spirits. Stephen commended his spirit to Christ. It was a rational, conscious, thinking entity. Will Br. Himes enlighten us, and tell us what Christ and Stephen commended to God? He dare not on his theory, for any answer he can give without abandoning it, would be gross absurdity; hence his theory is untrue.

In Rom. 7, Paul contrasts his inner man or spirit with his outer man or body. Such has ever been the understanding of this passage, except by such as have a theory to save, such as that of Br. Himes'.

In 2 Cor. 4:16, we have the same expression, with the same meaning. The outward man perishes or wastes away, but the inner man or spirit is renewed or strengthened day by day. In the fifth chapter we find the body called the earthly house. It is, for it was taken from the earth. (Gen. 2.) He then speaks of his house which is from heaven, or resurrection body. The saints whose spirits have been redeemed from liability to imprisonment in hades, wait for this. (Rom. 8:23.) He calls the body a tabernacle, or tent, a house, the clothing. That he refers to the body is clearly shown by v. 6, where he says being present in the body, or being alive, or while his spirit is in the body, he is absent from the Lord. Being absent from the body, or the departure of his spirit from the body, is being present with the Lord. The rational, thinking, responsible spirit is, by synecdoche, called the I; the body is its house, tent, tabernacle clothing, the outward man. This has ever been the meaning that all men have put on this passage, except a few soul-extinctionists, who make nonsense of it to save their pet hobby.

We now call attention to Phil. 1:20. Paul desires Christ to be magnified in his body, by his life or his death. This is the alternative. How can it be done? By his life, or his living; or his death? He then says, "To live is gain to Christ, to die is gain to me." He was in a strait between the two, to live and glorify Christ by laboring for the brethren; or to die and be with Christ. To depart (die) and be with Christ, which would be best for him; or to abide in the flesh (to live), which would be better for the brethren. Here, as clearly as human language can do it, Paul calls death a departure and being with Christ; and life or living is abiding in the flesh. By synecdoche the rational, thinking, conscious, responsible, moral spirit is called I, the I, the person. Such a usage obtains in all languages and has obtained for thousands of years. It is the common usage, except among a few materialists, who violate usage to save their theory.

In 2 Tim. 4:6, Paul says again, "The time of my departure is at hand." He calls his death a departure. The rational, thinking, conscious, moral, responsible part of Paul, the I, the real man, his spirit, was about to depart and be with Christ. In Peter's Second Letter, 1:13–15, Peter speaks of living as being in his tabernacle or tent. He says he must put off this tabernacle or die. That he means death, he clearly shows when he calls the same event his decease. And decease means departure. Hence Peter regarded his decease as a departure to be with Christ.

By synecdoche he calls the spirit I, as we do in all languages under heaven. This language of Paul and Peter is too plain to need any comment. It shows plainly what is meant in Eccl. 12:7, and by our Savior, or Stephen, in commending their spirits to God. We give to this language this meaning, because in all languages and in all lexicons, and by all men, except a few materialists, death is defined and regarded as a departure of a rational, conscious spirit. My opponent dare not deny this. Its synonyms are decease, departure, demise, laying off body. We say of a dead friend, he has gone, he has left us, he has departed. So did the Hebrews and Greeks in common usage, as our brother knows, and dares not deny. We have shown Hebrew usage by an appeal to the Old Testament. The ideas of the Pharisees and Essenes show what it was in the apostles' day. We know what classic Greek usage was. Hence the sacred writers used the common expressions in their accepted meaning. Again, this is the meaning every mind attaches to these Scriptures, except a few soul-sleepers, who have a theory to save. Also no other meaning can be given, except this, that will not make nonsense of these passages.

I hope now we will not have any nonsense in reply, such as inquiring where the man went, if the spirit went to God, and the body to the grave. Common usage, in all ages, lands and languages, sanctions and uses the synecdoche practiced here, when we call the spirit, the I, the real person. The world so talks to day, and did in the days of the apostles. Our opponent knows this. I hope also we shall not have any such nonsense as trying to show that if the spirit is the I, that the spirit dies. Common usage always speaks of the person as dying, and still says he departed, went away, has left, etc. This synecdoche is universal, and every one uses it and understands it. The apostles used it, and everybody understands them.

We have then showed that (1) There is a spirit in man. (2) That this spirit is an entity. (3) It is a rational, thinking, conscious, moral, responsible entity—the rational, thinking, conscious, moral, responsible part of man. (4) That while in the body it acts independent of, and even in opposition to the body. (5) That it departs from the body in death. It returns to God, is commended to God, goes to the fathers, departs from the body, and is with Christ. It does this as a rational, thinking, conscious entity. Any other idea makes nonsense of these important Scriptures. If so, this idea alone can be true. Again, remember the query is not what spirit means in other passages. Its meaning in other passages has nothing to do with its meaning in these passages. What does it mean in these passages? Can it mean anything else than what we say it means, and what common sense says it means? If spirit means breath or disposition, as God is spirit also, an Almighty breath or disposition, is to receive breath or disposition.

Now to conclude, we ask: What returns to God? What did Christ commend to God? What did Stephen commend to Christ? What did Paul speak of as departing in death and being with Christ? What did Peter say would lay off the tabernacle in death? As man has body and spirit, and the body goes to the tomb, the spirit departs and returns to God. As this would be mere nonsense unless the spirit returns as a rational, conscious entity, it so returns. As God, angels, the Logos and the Holy Spirit are spirits, and rational, conscious entities, so man's spirit that is like them in kind or nature, returns to God a rational entity. With this meaning these Scriptures have incalculable import—unutterable meaning. With any other they are utter nonsense. Hence the spirit returns to God a rational, conscious entity

CLARK BRADEN.

NOTE BY ELD. HIMES TO ELD. BRADEN'S SIXTH LETTER.

I do not wish this debate to degenerate into personalities, but feel that I must say a word in reference to Eld. Braden's remarks upon our private correspondence. He has misrepresented me. If he denies this, let his letter and my reply called out by it, be published together, and the public be left to decide concerning our respective claims to "manliness," and let the debate be devoted to argument.

ommunications.

Opinions Concerning the State of the Dead.

ACTS FROM J. PRIESTLY, LL. D., F. R. S., ETC.

think that I have sufficiently ed, in my Disquisitions relating to er and Spirit, that, in the Script- the state of death is represented as e of absolute insensibility, being sed to life. The doctrine of the ection between soul and body, the aterial and the other immaterial, o independent of one another, that atter may die and even perish, and ormer, instead of losing anything, ther a gainer by the catastrophe, riginally a doctrine of the orient- losophy, which afterwards spread he western part of the world. does not appear that it was ever ed by the generality of the Jews, erhaps not even by the more d and philosophical of them, such sephus, till after the time of our r; though Philo, and some others, resided in Egypt, might have ed that tenet in an earlier period.

ough a distinction is made in the tures between the principle, or of thought in man, and the parts are destined to other functions; the New Testament that princi- ay sometimes be signified by the soul; yet there is no instance, in the Old or New Testament, soul being supposed to be in one and the body in another. They ways conceived to go together, at the perceptive and thinking could not, in fact be considered sacred writers as any other than erty of a living man, and there- s what ceased of course when the as dead, and could not be revived th the revival of the body.

ccordingly we have no promise reward, or any threatening of me at, after death, but that which esented as taking place at the l resurrection. And it is observ- that this is never, in the Script- called, as with us, the res- ion of the body (as if the soul, in antime, was in some other place), ways the resurrection of the dead, , of the man. If, therefore, there y intermediate state, in which the alone exists, conscious of any- there is an absolute silence con- g it in the Scriptures; death be- ways spoken of there as a state , of silence, and of darkness, a where the wicked cease from ing, but where the righteous can- aise God.

is is the sum of the argument he Scriptures, and comes in aid arguments from reason and the of things, which show the utter city of any connection between nces so totally foreign to each as the material and immaterial ples are always described to be; that have no common property ver, and therefore must be inca- of all mutual action. I think shown that, let the immateri- defined in whatever manner it ible to define it, the supposition plains no one phenomenon in ; there being no conceivable tion between the powers of ht, and this immaterial, than be- the same powers and a material ple; and for anything that ap- our ignorance concerning the- of this principle should lead us pose that it may, just as well as may not be compatible with l that can be said is, that we can relation between the principle sation and thought, and any sys- matter; but neither do we per- any relation which matter bears city, and various other proper- ith which we see that it is, in ndued. The same great Being, ore, that has endued matter with iety of powers, with which it seems to have no natural connection may have endued the living human brain with this power of sensation and thought, though we are not able to perceive how this power should result from matter so modified. And since, judging by experience, these powers always do accompany a certain state of the brain, and are never found except accompanying that state, there is just the same reason why we should say that they necessarily inhere in, and belong to, the brain in that state, as that electricity is the necessary property of glass, and magnetism of the loadstone. It is constant concomitancy, and nothing else, that is the foundation of our conclusions in both cases, alike.

"There is not, in fact, any one phenomenon in favor of the opinion of the soul being a separate substance from the body. During life and health, the sentient powers always accompany the body, and in a temporary cessation of thought, as in a swoon, apparent drowning, etc., there never was an instance in which it was pretended that the soul had been in another place, and came back again when the body was revived. In all these cases, the powers of sensation and thought are, to all appearance, as much suspended as those of breathing and moving; and we might just as well inquire where the latter had been in the interval of apparent death, as where the the former had been at the same time.

"There is indeed, an imperfect mental process going on during sleep; but this seems to be in proportion to the imperfection of the sleep; for when it is perfectly sound, and the brain probably completely at rest, there is no more sensation or thought than during a swoon or apparent drowning. Or, if there had been sufficient evidence of uninterrupted thought during the soundest sleep, still it might be supposed to depend upon the powers of life, which were still in the body, and might keep up some motion in the brain.

"The only proof of the power power of thought not depending on the body, in this case, would be the soul being afterwards conscious to itself, that it had been in one place, while the body had been in another. Whereas, in dreams we never have any idea but that of our whole-selves having been in some different place, and in some very different state, from that in which we really are. Upon the whole, therefore, there can be no more reason to think that the principle of thought belongs to substance distinct from the body, than that the principle of breathing and of moving belongs to another distinct substance, or than that the principle of sound in a bell belongs to a substance distinct from the bell itself, and that it is not a power or property, depending upon the state into which the parts of it are occasionally put.

"How men came to imagine that the case was otherwise, is not easy to say, any more than how they came to imagine that the sun, moon, and stars were animated, and the proper objects of adoration. But when once, in consequence of any train of thinking, they could suppose that the effects of the heavenly bodies, and of the other inanimate parts of nature, were owing to invisible powers residing in them, or to something that was not the object of their external senses, they might easily imagine man to have a principle of a similar kind; and then it was easy enough to advance one step farther, and to suppose that this invisible principle was a thing independent of the body, and might subsist when that was laid in the grave.

"It was a long time, however, before men got quite clear of the idea of the necessary connection between the corporeal and the spiritual part of man. For it was long imagined that this invisible part of man accompanied the body in the place of interment, whence came the idea of the descent of the soul, shade, or ghost, into some subterraneous place; though afterwards by attending to the subject, and refining upon it, philosophers began to think that this invisible part of man, having nothing gross or heavy in its composition, might ascend rather than descend, and so hover in some higher region of the atmosphere. And Christians, having an idea of a local heaven, somewhere above the clouds, and of God and Christ residing there, they came in time to think that the souls of good men, and especially of martyrs, might be taken up thither, or into some place adjoining to it, and where they might remain until the resurrection." (Corruptions of Christianity; pp. 132–134.) Copied by F. H. Burbank.

Corrupt Marriages.

Marriage is ordained of God. Its nature, conditions and obligations are all of his arranging even down to the minutest details. "It is honorable in all," as the word of Inspiration tells us. It is not honorable, however, to corrupt it. Dr. Holland, in the lecture recently delivered in Music Hall, Boston, tells us that the social evil never flourished in community so rankly as at present; and we add that never did it claim protection under the marriage contract as at present, and never did it therefore so debase and degrade that relation as now. Its influence on the marriage tie has corrupted it, and hence our caption, "corrupt marriages." It has changed its laws to suit its own convenience, and so dressed it over that it is scarcely recognizable by the original pattern. Certainly it cannot change marriage abstractly. It cannot make true marriage other than God made it. Its changes are therefore nominal on the basis of the change made in Christianity.

When one

"Steals the livery of heaven,
And wears it to serve the Devil in,"

in the change in either case, the genuine thing remains what it was originally, while the counterfeit is what it claims to be only in name.

True marriage, according to the Bible, our only authority in the matter, is the union of one man and one woman during the lifetime of both, with but one possible exception to the duration of it as long as both shall live, one possible interruption, to wit: the cause of fornication. Hence we hear Jesus say in Mat. 5:32—"Whosoever shall put away his wife, except for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery." The effect of adultery is as clearly apparent, we think, were the case reversed, and the wife were the party "putting away." Paul in 1 Cor. 7:8, gives us additional light, when having said in v. 2—"Let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband," he declares, "And unto the married I command [yet not I but the Lord], Let not the wife depart from her husband: but if he depart, let her remain unmarried." A husband may, being the head, put the wife away: a wife may go away and leave the husband; in either case a putting away or separation would be effected. Hence Jesus by his own mouth and by the mouth of Paul forbids a separation, except for fornication. Paul explains the matter further in the same chapter (vv. 12–16). "If any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away." The reason is evident. She is his wife; else the virtue would be in putting away, and the vice in retaining her.

For, he continues, "the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife sanctified by the husband, else were your children unclean, but now are they holy." But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother and sister is not under bondage in such cases. But God hath called us to peace. We have therefore a very plain, clear exposition of the matter, and yet the text has often been misapprehended, especially the expression—"Is sanctified by," &c. It is supposed to refer to conversion, and to teach that the Christian companion converts the other. If that were true, there would be no unconverted ones to trouble and perplex. Beside what then could be the sense of the expression—"Else were your children unclean, but now they are holy." That the parties who love Christ may be the means of saving the others is admitted in v. 16. "For what knowest thou, Oh, wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband, or how knowest thou, Oh, man, whether thou shalt save thy wife." It is evident by this that the apostle had no reference to this point in the previous verse, and it is evident that in that verse he did mean by "sanctified" that a reference is made to the fact that God recognizes the marriage for the sake or on the account of the believing one, although he has plainly revealed it to be the duty of all Christians to marry "only in the Lord."

If he recognizes the marriage, then the children "are holy," or legitimate, "else were they unclean," or illegitimate. No departure or separation is allowable, then, except for the one "cause," even though one of the parties may be unconverted, that fact neither nullifying the marriage relation nor relieving the parties of their obligations, or making the children unholy (illegitimate), though it might be supposed to do so. "God hath called us to peace," is the apostle's significant, expressive language, and we cannot be guiltless certainly, if we fail to heed that call.

The term peace there is significant. It means harmony, reconciliation, union. Not division nor dismemberment, not quarreling; not leaving the companion and going away, even though abused and ill-treated, but by the grace of God [illegible] verted companion.

Thus much about true marriage for the purpose of coming more understandingly to the discussion of our theme, corrupt marriages. If marriage is thus ordained of God, and if he has restricted it to a relation between one man and one woman only, then any perversion of it, any change in it, or in relation to it, is corrupt; and if it be called marriage, it is corrupt marriage, and nothing else, by whatever smooth, gentle name it may be called, and all such change is under the direct fostering influence of the social evil, which not being satisfied to wear its own polluted garments and go in its own name, seeks to make its garments white and clean, and its name respectable, by donning bridal robes, and being adopted into the family of the marriage covenant.

In the category of such cases is the monstrosity polygamy, which, whether it flourished in the days of David or in modern times, is all the same, vile and polluted in the sight of heaven. It has not one word of excuse. Even Brigham Young and his forces of lecherous apostles, and "seven women" or more, taking hold of one man and saying, let us be called by thy name; have taken it under their protection and thrown the cloak of their religion over it. It is then even doubly worse, doubly hypocritical.

All the after marriages under such circumstances are in their true guise, but that festering, polluted thing adultery. It is also clearly evidence of adultery when one party, either husband or wife, leaves the other, and without so much as a divorce enters into a so-called marriage relation, which is really no better than a liason. These latter cases however are more common than the out and out polygamies, though if there could be any show of honor anywhere, they are the least honorable. And yet they are for some pretext or other becoming quite common among even professed Christians. Some paltry excuse leads to a separation by mutual consent, or by the will of only one, the party who leaves; and then after a time there is an apology framed for a new relation when before God and the state it is clearly adulterous; and some minister, who should know his calling and responsibility better, sanctions the affair, and it is winked at as all right. As a people we are as likely to be corrupted by such things as any people under heaven, as the world is getting more and more flooded with the excess of those things, and while we see all the corruptions of lust, we should watch lest we be taken in the snare of the Devil, and especially in this snare. The world will do evil. This evil and others will men practice. This evil and others should we avoid, and when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, we shall appear with him in glory.

L. C. McKinstry.

The God of Abraham.

At the burning bush God said to Moses "I [am] the God of thy father, the God of Abraham." (Ex. 3: 6). The careful reader will notice that the word "am" is in italics—being supplied by the translators. It is not in the Hebrew, but, according to the idiom of that language, the verb is left unexpressed, to be supplied by hearer or reader.

Had Moses understood this language to imply the present conscious existence of the dead, while he had no knowledge of, nor faith in such doctrine, he might, and would, have understood the words "I....the God" to mean "I was the God."

But the words "I am the God of Abraham" neither affirm, nor imply, the present conscious existence of Abraham; God does not affirm "Abraham is," but, "I am;" nor is Abraham's conscious existence implied. Let me illustrate.—My father died over twenty-five years since, I am his son. He was my father. To say "I am the son" of a dead father, is neither using the dialect of divinity, as distinct from that of man, nor insulting common sense, nor does it imply that he is alive to me though dead to others. It simply expresses a relationship between me and another,—and, in this case, that other long dead.

So, "I am the God of Abraham," expresses a relationship between the living God and the dead Abraham. But what relationship?—A covenant-relationship in virtue of which Abraham must be raised from the dead. God promised, yea covenanted (Gen. 17) to give Abraham—Abraham himself, and his seed,—"all the land of Canaan." But Abraham died before God gave him "so much as to set his foot on." (Acts 7:5.) Then what has become of this covenant? Is it repudiated? Has God ceased to be the covenant-God of Abraham?

God promised to give him land, visible, material land, with length and breadth. (Gen. 13.) "He gave him none inheritance in it" while he lived, —he told him he would die, and "be buried." (Gen. 15.) Yet he promised him this land "for an EVERLASTING POSSESSION." What could Abraham expect—what did he expect but a resurrection, "a better resurrection" than to mortal life. (Heb. 11.)

God in promising Canaan to Abraham, for an everlasting possession, after he had told him he would die, plainly implied in that promise a resurrection "to everlasting life."

Then when God says, 330 years after his death, "I am the God of Abraham," it implies, not that Abraham is alive in spirit, but, that the covenant God of Abraham lives, and "remembers his holy promise, and Abraham his servant," and is "able to raise him up, even from the dead," and will in due time do it, and thus perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, sworn unto our fathers from the days of old."

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise THE DEAD?" "Ye do err not knowing the Scriptures, nor the POWER OF GOD."

A. Armour.

Meetings in Rochester N.Y.

THE ALMANAC AND YEAR-BOOK.—We sent out by mail and express last week about eight-hundred of the new Almanac and year book.

We made our arrangements to publish this pamphlet by December first. After the fire had destroyed the stereotype foundries of Chicago, we waited for some months upon their promises to resume work, and were finally disappointed after all our waiting, and obliged to print the almanac from the type. The edition, therefore, is limited, and we have not many copies left. While they last they will be sent post paid at the rate of FIFTEEN CENTS A COPY. Those who wish a copy must apply at once.

Besides the usual calendar, it contains a list of the conferences, churches and P. O. addresses of preachers so far as we have been able to obtain them, with some interesting reading matter, and Bible references of value to all.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post paid.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection. These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents. It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 2 for 10 cents. 30 copies for $1

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 50c. Every one should have a copy.

Good Tidings. By Couch, Sheldon, Grant and Himes. Prophecy and theology. A valuable book. Paper, 50c. Cloth, $1.

Advent Christian Times.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - EDITOR

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, March 5, 1872.

THE SOUL.

A SCRIPTURAL COMMENTARY.

Job 11: 20. 'Their hope shall be as the giving up of the ghost'—i. e. of the soul.

Here is one of the phrases that are supposed to prove the ENDURING nature of man, or his spirit, used as an illustration of an exactly opposite idea—that of uncertainty, unreliability. The margin renders it—'as a puff of breath.' The Bible Union—'the breathing out of life.' The sense seems to be an idea of instability, not of continuity. And if we admit the sense that some claim—that death is the only hope the wicked have for relief from sorrows of this life, it shows that the speaker believed that death would end the [illegible] [illegible] is the soul of every living thing, And the breath (RUACH, spirit) of all mankind.'

"Does not the first," says Dr. Adam Clarke, "refer to the immortal soul, the principle of all intellectual life; and the latter to the breath, the grand means, respiration, by which animal existence is continued?" Other immaterialists reverse the order, and make the last the immortal entity. They are not well agreed whether it is spirit or soul that is immortal. Some make sport of the idea that Eccl. 12: 7 refers to the breath: but here we read that God's hand holds 'the breath of all mankind.' There is nothing incongruous in the idea. This passage is a parallelism. Soul and spirit are used synonymously, for the sake of variety in terms. The context is made up of similar parallelisms. Soul here means LIFE, and spirit the breath of life. (Gen. 2: 7.)

Ch. 13: 14. I 'put my life (soul) in my hand.' A proverbial expression for risking the life or soul.

Ch. 14: 22. 'His flesh upon him shall have pain. His soul within him shall mourn.' The Bible Union reads:

"And flesh for itself shall have pain; And his soul for itself shall mourn," and puts "himself" in the margin for itself.

Noyes renders it:

'His flesh shall have pain for himself alone;
For himself alone shall he mourn.'

Mr. Good, as quoted by Clarke:

'But over him his flesh shall grieve. And over him his breath shall mourn. 'In the daring spirit of Oriental poetry,' says he, 'the flesh and the breath are made conscious beings, the former lamenting its putrefaction in the grave; the latter mourning over the mouldering clay it once enlivened.'

The Syriac and Arabic read:

'His body shall grieve over him, and his soul be [illegible] over him.'

Others like Coverdale read:

'Whyle he liveth his flesh must have travail;
And while his soul is in him, he must be in sorrow.'

A certain class of teachers have endeavored to make capital for immaterialism out of this passage. 'His soul within him.' A man mourns in his MIND, which is within him. If it had read his disembodied soul shall mourn, the text might have afforded the coveted argument. As it reads (C. V.) the flesh is 'upon' and the soul (mind) is 'within' the person. Stock's view is no doubt correct. By a bold figure of speech the life and body of the dead man are represented as consciously bewailing his decease. We think this quite clear from the preceding verse, which definitely affirms the unconscious state of the dead:

'His sons come to honor and he knoweth it not.

They are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.

Ch. 16: 4. 'If your soul were in my soul's stead.' Lit. if you were in my place: a periphrasis, undisputably.

Ch. 18: 4. 'Teareth himself in his anger' lit. 'Rends his own soul in his anger.' Raving as a maniac, doing injury to HIMSELF or, possibly, destroying his own life.

Ch. 19: 2. 'How long will ye vex my soul.' i. e. me.

Ch. 21: 25. 'Dies in bitterness of soul.' Of mind or feeling. A contrast is drawn between the life and death of two extreme cases, but in the end

'Together THEY lie down in the dust
And the worm covers THEM.'

Ch. 23: 13. 'What his soul [i. e. God] desireth even that he doeth.

Ch. 24: 12.

'For anguish do the dying groan;
And the soul of the wounded cries out.'

i. e. the wounded man cries for aid or vengeance.

Ch. 27: 2. 'Vexed my soul.' i. e. me, my mind.

V. 8. 'When God taketh away his soul.' i. e. the wicked man's life. See Mat. 16: 26. The Restorationist would say his hope is yet good. But this language intimates a more fearful case.

V. 25. 'My soul [i. my feelings] grieved for the poor.'

Ch. 31: 30. 'Wishing a curse to his soul.' i. e. to him.

V. 39. 'Caused the owners thereof to lose their life,' soul. The margin reads: 'Caused the soul of the owner thereof to expire.' Here we have an expiring, dying soul. The undying one has not yet been mentioned.

Ch. 32: 2. 'He justified himself,' his soul.

Ch. 33: 18.

'He keepeth back his soul from the pit,
And his life [ghahy] from perishing by the sword.'

A perishing soul; for soul and life are synonymous here, each being used for the person.

V. 20.

'His life abhorreth bread,
And his soul dainty meat.'

V. 22. 'His soul draweth near to the grave.' i. e. the pit, or corruption.

V. 28. 'Will deliver his soul from going into the pit,' v. 24 says, 'I will deliver HIM from the pit,' or grave.

V. 30. 'Bring back his soul from the pit.' i. e. redeem or save his life.

Ch. 36: 14. 'They [lit. their soul] die in youth.'

Ch. 41: 21. 'His breath [lit. soul] kindleth coals.'

Mr. Darby, the leading mind of the sect known as 'Plymouth Brethren says in 'Hopes of the Church.'

'We would express our conviction, that the idea of the immortality of the soul has no source in the gospel; that it comes, on the contrary, from the Platonists, and that it was just when the coming of Christ was denied in the church, or at least began to be lost sight of, that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul came in to replace that of the resurrection. This was the time of Origen. It is hardly needful to say that we do not doubt the immortality of the soul; we only assert that this doctrine has taken the place of the doctrine of the resurrection of the church, as the epoch of its joy and glory.'

What the heathen from whom the dogma came thought of it appears from these extracts;

Immortality is 'that which our wise men promise, but do not prove.'—Seneca.

The doctrine of a future life 'is a sort of conjecture, or surmise of future ages.'—Cicero.

But the leading Dunkard Journalist of to-day says:

'The [illegible] and quotes these verses:

Ah! why should bitter tears be shed
In sorrow o'er the mounded sod,
When verily there are no dead
Of all the children of our God?

They who are lost to outward sense
Have but flung off their robes of clay,
And clothed in heavenly radiance,
Attend us on our lowly way.

And oft their spirits breathe in ours
The hope and strength and love of theirs,
Which bloom as bloom the early flowers
In breath of summer's viewless airs.

This is simply Spiritism, nothing less.

NOT a little interesting matter—letters etc., is crowded out this week. But we think our readers will find little that they would wish to lose for the sake of other matter.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

SABBATH, Feb. 18. Our Hall was crowded to-day. I spoke on the nature of the kingdom of God, from Mat. 25: 34. At the close a conference of half an hour developed a great interest. Many living witnesses testified for God and truth. Then came the Sabbath School and Bible classes, in which a large part of the church participated, which was intensely interesting. Br. Whitmore is throwing life into this department of the society. We were crowded again at night when I spoke from 1 John, 3: 8, on the mission of Christ to "destroy the works of the devil." A dozen or more came out on the Lord's side. We have had a glorious day. The good work of God has been going on among us every day since our meetings began.

MONDAY, Feb. 19. The first tidings that reached us this a. m. was of a shocking calamity to Br. Ambrose Taylor, who was with us yesterday in health. He went to the mill this a. m. and while fixing some gearing to the machinery his clothes were caught and he was whirled around with a frightful velocity, and bruised and mangled in a shocking manner. He was taken to the City Hospital where Brn. Whitmore and McCullock and myself visited and talked with him. He was perfectly rational, and said he had peace, and all was well. It does not seem possible that he can survive. If he does, he will lose both of his feet. It was a sad sight to see a dear friend and brother mangled, suffering, and, we fear, dying. He has a wife and two children. She is almost frantic with grief. God be gracious to them.

Dined to-day with Br. Wells, a member of the church who has given himself to the ministry of the word. He is an intelligent man, and has gifts to feed the flock and bring souls to Christ We have been with the sick, and those who are seeking God, and had a busy day. I spoke at night from various passages of Scripture to show how we become Christians. A goodly number came to Jesus and were blest. The good work goes on. Srs. Jennings and Stoddard were both in, and with others spoke to the people after the sermon, and with much interest.

TUESDAY, Feb. 20. Among the families visited to-day was one where the wife was a Romanist. The husband was deeply convicted, and she attended church with him at our place on the Sabbath, and encouraged him to seek the Lord and become a Christian. She said the head of a family ought to be a Christian and lead others in the right way.

A friend invited me to call with him upon Mr. James Vick, the world renowned seed man and florist, on State Street. I spent an hour most pleasantly. Mr. Vick and son kindly showed me over their establishment, in which they have about one hundred and twenty-five persons busily employed. They have from one to three thousand orders a day from all parts of the world, which they answer by mail or express. This is scattering the seed world wide. Here we can get American and Foreign plants and seeds of all kinds. Mr. Vick is a Christian man. He possesses great executive ability, and untiring industry. He deserves success.

At night there was good attendance and continued interest. I spoke from Jer. 7: 20–22. The harvest past and the summer ended and we not saved. Some came to Christ resolving that they would not be left to wail over lost time and opportunities.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 21. In visiting, found some who determined to go with us to the kingdom. Visited the Penitentiary. Dea. Cooper has charge of the work department, and showed us over the establishment. The principal business is the making of shoes. There are between one and two hundred persons confined here for terms of from three months to seven years. Of these, nineteen-twentieths have come here through the influence of whiskey, out of which another class of our fellow citizens make fortunes and live in luxury, and roll in wealth. These two classes will meet ere long in the judgment, face to face. It will be a solemn and terrible meeting, and "the Judge of all the earth will do right," by each class.

At night I spoke on Ex. 32: 26. "Who is on the Lord's side." It was the most effective service we have had. Many decided to be for Christ, and after a goodly number came to the altar, the people rose in all parts of the house, and took their position on the "Lord's side." For fifteen minutes the meeting took its own course, in which time sixty-one among saints, backsliders and sinners voluntarily took their place on the "Lord's side." I hardly ever witnessed greater solemnity in a public meeting. It was good to be there.

THURSDAY, Feb. 22. Brn. Whitmore, Wells, and McMillan spent a part of the day with me among the merchants in raising a fund for Br. Taylor, who has lately lost both his feet, and still lies in a critical state at the City Hospital. He is poor, with a wife and two children. About two hundred dollars were raised and more will be added. The citizens are very kind and liberal. We visited an aged sister of four score and three years. For five years she has been an invalid. She is joyful in hope, and was one of the early believers, coming into the faith in 1842. She sent for me, and spoke of those time with great interest, and now looks for the Savior soon to come. Br. Whitmore and I prayed with her, and read the word of God, in the presence of many relatives and friends, some of whom were touched, and we hope may be brought to Christ. We preach as we go, from house to house. None escape our vigilance, and out of the many we see and speak with, we hope to "save some." And indeed, we see some every day who are coming to Christ through these labors.

Our audience was deeply affected to-night. My subject was, "Why will you die?" (Ezk. 33: 9–12.) One man rose and said he was resolved to live forever. I felt a deep interest in his case, being well acquainted with his father, Eld. Stephen Lovell, when he was but a child. It was in 1834 I think, when he was pastor of the North Christian Church of New Bedford, Mass. His mother was a Christian woman, and gave her children to God, in the hope they might live forever. His father was a popular and effective speaker, and greatly enlarged the church in New Bedford. It was under his influence they built their large and beautiful house, which has ever been an ornament to the city. It was indeed, a pleasant thing to me, after so long a time, to become the happy instrument in connection with Br. Whitmore, of bringing this son of theirs, with his wife, to Christ. Many were blessed to-night.

FRIDAY, Feb. 23. To-day we find Br. Taylor, who was so badly crushed on Monday, better, and there is hope of his recovery. The loss of both feet will be a terrible thing, yet with a strong constitution and good health, he will be able to turn his hand to some useful employment, and sustain himself and family. To-day as on other days we meet new families who have been more or less convicted by the word preached and they are earnestly seeking God. Our work is growing upon us. We now have a horse and buggy and with this there is more than we can do to visit all. The sick, those in affliction, and others under conviction, all have their claims upon the ministers and elders of the church. I do not know how the people do, where the ministers only preach on the Sabbath, and never visit or look after the flock. It is no wonder that so many churches are weakly and sickly, and that some die out altogether. There is something to be done besides preaching the word.

We made a pleasant call upon Br. H. O. Barnum, who resides a few miles out of the city. He is one of the stirring business men of the city, and an earnest Christian.

I wish to note one case here of deep interest. A member of the Advent Church here that formerly devoted much time in prayer, both in secret and public, and had great power with God, said in conversation on the subject, I have given up these forms. I found that I was in bondage to them, and so I discontinued them. I do not give up my religion, and I pray mentally, and do not now feel in bondage to forms. At one period of my life I embraced the same view. But I soon found myself in error. I would not be placed in such a position again for any consideration. It leads directly to backsliding, weakness, and inefficiency, in the cause of Christ. Those who pray most in secret, and otherwise have always been the most holy, and useful in the church. And the person referred to above has said or done nothing to help in the work of God since our meeting began. This comes from the neglect of prayer and communion with God. A prayerless ministry and membership, will be a fruitless one. No prayer, no rain!

We met again at 7 p. m. Br. Whitmore spoke on the words of Pilate, "What shall I do with Christ?" He told us what Pilate did, and what the Jews did: they crucified him. But said he, to his hearers what will you do with him. It was a touching and able discourse. Quite a number resolved to love and honor Jesus. The good work goes on.

SATURDAY, Feb. 24. Preached the funeral sermon of Br. Luther Haskins, one of the oldest and best members of of the church. He died in faith and sleeps in Jesus. Services by Br. Whitmore at his residence, after which we went to Mt. Hope Chapel, and held the public service. The church attended largely, and the house was filled. I spoke from Ps. 37: 37. "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." At the close we laid him away to sleep till Jesus comes. His widow and children are comforted with the blessed hope.

I spoke at night from Mal. 3: 16, on the people of God speaking often to each other, with the approbation and blessing of the Lord. Many testified to the goodness of the Lord, and some who spoke for the first time. Our two weeks' labor results some fifty or more reclaimed, and twenty or more real conversions, with a new and lively interest in the whole church. Many feel that the work is just begun, and insist that I shall remain over another week. But with so much other work I do not know how to stay.

SABBATH, Feb. 25. This afternoon I preached the funeral sermon of Br. Abram L. Jones, the oldest member of the Adventist Church in this city. He was one of the first who embraced the truth on my first visit here about thirty years ago. He has ever been faithful and true. He was eighty-one years old, and till within a week of his death he was out to meeting quite regularly. He dies in peace, and in faith. He requested me to preach his funeral sermon in the Second Baptist Church, of which he was a respected member until he joined the Adventists. The Baptists opened the house, and showed us every attention. The audience was large, and I had the best attention, while I dwelt half an hour on the resurrection, Second Advent, and the new earth.

After the evening sermon several come out for prayer, and some spoke of deliverance from sin. The work is going on. Br. Whitmore and the church decided that I must not leave this week. We have had a good work in Rochester, I trust a deep and reliable one, and I hope to see greater things.

California.

The longer I remain in this country the more I witness the unrest and dissatisfaction of the great mass of the rushing humanity of the age. The evidences are in the East, but more manifest upon this coast. Here is the meeting place of the rushing currents of two hemispheres. Here humanity in the different nationalities dash against each other continuously, causing eddying currents and a whirlpool of tumultuous waters. Mankind are seeking rest but finding none. They sigh and cry—

"Oh! where shall rest be found?
Rest for the weary soul.
'T were vain the ocean's depth to sound
Or pierce to either pole.

The world can never give
The rest for which we sigh."

Thousands come to this land from both the East and the Interior, hoping to find a Paradise, or something next to it; or for certain conceived advantages far superior to the places they have left. The mass have come here for gain, and desired pecuniary interests or advantages in business. Some to accumulate treasures from the mines containing the precious metals; others to engage in speculations, business enterprises, and employments of various kinds to gain riches. Many have succeeded to their satisfaction; but the majority have been disappointed. We intend not to speak dispargaingly of the the advantages peculiar to this country to afford success and happiness to the adventurous, wise, and diligent. But after all that can be said in its favor as a country to give fortunes, and comfort, and happiness to men, it must be written, that if the history of this land was unveiled and brought to light, it would reveal an amount of discontent and ill-success comparable to few localities on this continent.

There have been more wrecked fortunes and hopes, sad and broken hearts; and consequent physical and mental derangements followed by despair, insanity, or death, than in other parts of our favored land. There are mental wrecks constantly occuring filling the "Hospital for the Insane;" and the burying places for the dead are crowded with the silent sleepers gone to rest in their beds side by side, though these cemeteries are comparatively of but recent occupation; while lone graves are scattered here and there through the country, of unknown persons who have fallen victims to death through sickness, or blighted hopes, and await the trump of resurrection which will summon them to judgment.

Hundreds when once here have found themselves so far transplanted from their former homes, associations, habits and surroundings, that before they uld take root in this distant soil they ve withered and died. Home-sick- s, and ill-fortune, and climatic anges have made sad havoc with usands who have come from different ts of the world hopeful here to find t to their weary souls.

CLIMATE.

lany wish to know about the climate this coast, and for their information end the following from the San ncisco Chronicle. "While our nds in the East are shivering, with thermometer below zero, and shovel- snow and subscribing for ice boats, ay interest them to know that in Francisco, during the months of uary, the thermometer never fell w 46° nor rose above 64° and t we had for the months a rain-fall 4.68 inches, making a total for the son of 18.70 inches. If any other erican city can parade so mild and able a winter climate, we should be l to know it."

nd this from another city paper of w days previous:

north wind comes with its cold, dry
blast,
rches the earth and it bends the mast;
n the mountain's top it wrests the rock,
flings it down with an earthquake shock;
cks the rain from the trembling ground,
istles through rigging with doleful sound,
ricks at sea, it howls o'er plain,
nds the forest, it tosses the main.
ists the oak from its sturdy stem,
ks the ship with her sailor men.
uel wind, I hate thy rage!
urfeited with wrecks and woes;
ack and sleep to endless age d thy northern snows!"

RELIGION.

he religious community is stirred this whole coast. The "Methodist trict meeting" which was to held etaluma, Feb. 13, advertised among subjects to be preached and discuss- the following: 1 "Prophecy." Heresies of Adventism." I made ny mind to attend, take notes and ew on the spot. I appeared to- er with Br. Reed, and Wilson, some brethren from Vallejo. But two first subjects were withdrawn, were found left out of "the daily rnal" for some reason unknown. the reason appears manifest to us. as a victory in our favor.

e following notice appeared in our papers during the time Eld. Grant with us:

Eternity!"—"Where will your soul hen your body goes to Lone Mount- " An address by Thomas Welton ch at the Hall, corner of New tgomery, St., etc.

one Mountain" is the name of city cemetery. I attended to take s; but it was a sell, designed to off from our meetings, evidently. subject pertained to the "New h" in which the speaker maintain- hat it "consisted in conversion, n the believer received eternal It was a feeble, unscriptural, t, undeserving of notice. He berat- Annihilationists" terribly in his opinion, but did not tell us "where soul would be when the body goes ne Mountain." The speaker said, was born into the world —— ago, and was born into eternal n years ago." And maintained very believer "hath everlasting already, and received it on con- n. And yet also claimed "im- lity" for every sinner living! It a jumble of nonsense. I should that addresses, and sermons of character, so filled with con- tions would fill any community infidels.

he mysteries of St. John's Rev- ns in nine Sunday evening lectures New Jerusalem church" appears rd circulated throughout the city. Spiritists of every phase and are considerably excited at this These, with the self-styled, "self- rists" of "Dashaway Hall" ety have gained an influence on oast as nowhere else on this con- , and having become a positive and agressive against Christian- it here exists, now are aroused et, if possible, the new faith of ntism. We fear them not. I rd the following item as a nity:

SABBATH SPARRING.

xhibition of the Manly Art at Lyceum of Self-Culture.—The um for Self-culture met in Dasha- Hall on Sunday afternoon, to ate the birth-day of Tom Paine, ceased infidel. A large attend- of ladies and gentlemen were nt. Socrates Pickett delivered logy, and after the address was ded, a young man took the m, and proceeded to attack in terms the manner in which some mediums in the Spiritual branch association advertised them- by the assistance of the spirits. as called to order, but he ignored ing of the Chair, and continued speaking, amid the yells and clamor of the audience. A general melee than took place, in the course of which the orator was knocked down, the women screamed and the Secretary ran for a policeman. In the midst of the confusion the Chair declared the meeting adjourned, and the Self-culturists dispersed.

THE CHINESE.

It is well known that the Chinese are numerous on this coast. They have just celebrated their New Year (Feb.) which is passed much after the manner of our Fourth of July, only the celebration lasts a week or ten days. I forward the following extracts from "The Call" printed in this city, that the readers of "THE TIMES" may gain some knowledge of its observance.

THE CHINESE NEW YEAR.

Here and there in our study of this strange people, we catch glimpses in the chain of Paganism that resemble the observances of our Christianity. We begin our New Year with kindly greetings and the renewal and extension of social relations. The Chinaman throws his house open to his friends at the commencement of his New Year, and his hospitality is extended to all. Business is suspended, and feasting and good wishes to friends and the worship of the gods reign in every household. We strolled through the Chinese quarter yesterday—the Celestial New Year's Day. Each moon-eyed resident was arrayed in a wedding garment, the very perfection of Chinese finery.

THE DRIZZLING RAIN

Did not mar in the least the festivities, which were divided into five parts: First.—The sacrifice to heaven and earth; second—The worship of gods and idols; third—The worship of deceased ancestors (the California Celestials have a proxy arrangement similar to that adopted by the members of political conventions;) fourth—Prostration before living parents; fifth—The making of New Year's calls. There are 11,817 Chinese—9,777 males and 2,040 females—in this city, representing $1,880,000 in personal property, and $74,800 in real estate. And this number was engaged yesterday in doing honor to their great national festival. The Chinese reckon by cycles of sixty years, and at 12 o'clock on Wednesday night the eighth year of the seventy-seventh cycle terminated.

THE HOUSES.

On every door a red slip of paper is set bearing the inscription in Chinese characters, which, being translated mean—"Happy New Year; Health and Prosperity; and may the coming year bring you plenty of rice and fat pork"—or something to that effect. The tables bear plates of fruit and candies, tea, wine and cigars. In one establishment—that of a leading merchant—we observed the table draped in embroidered cloth, the peacock—the Chinese Imperial bird—occupying the center of the tapestry. Every few minutes a party of vistors called, and, clasping hands, made a low bow to the host, repeating the salution, "Health and prosperity—a Happy New Year," etc., and exchanged cards. Then they partook of a few candies or a glass of wine, smoked a cigar, paid a few compliments and passed on to the next house. The wives of these merchants, who are kept closely secluded during the year, were out yesterday visiting their female acquaintances.

On the evening of Wednesday last the Chinese began the celebration of their nine millionth New Year's anniversary with an infernal combination of diabolical noises. These cheerful idolaters kept up the horrid din of fire-crackers, bombs, gongs and catterwaulings the livelong night. The next day the disgusted citizens of that side of town appealed to the authorities for relief and demanded that the Chinese celebration be immediately squelched as an intolerable nuisance. The City Marshal told John to "dry up" and John "dried." This sort of restraint upon the religious and political exercises of this class of inhabitants in this country may give the Mongolian that same idea of our boasted charter of rights which the Irish immigrant had when he was attacked by savage dogs, and found the stones all frozen to the ground. Said Pat, "This is a grate country for fraydom; yer dogs all turned loose on a man, and the stones tied fast?"

I visited the two temples of their gods in this city on one of the days above mentioned. On entering into the door of the main temple, at the right is a god named "The Guardian of the Temple." Directly in front are three gods. The supreme or middle god, is the "supreme god over Canton District." At his right the God over the Northern regions." And at his left "The god of war." Some distance from these on the right and left are placed, "The god of riches," and "The god of medicine." I observed that most of the Chinaman hold to the trinity of gods, yet not all, and nearly every one as they come in bowed to "The god of riches," after passing by without noticing the trinity. And I saw none revere "The god of medicine," while I stood there, save the sexton or servant who kept the lamps and torches of incense burning before these idols. In another apartment at the left, are two goddesses: "The goddess of the seas," and "The goddess of harvests." In another apartment at the right is "The goddess of mercy" with attending spirits. She is often reverenced. And then still further on in another department stands "The god of happiness," with attending spirits;—one black imp which stirred up family broils, and causes divorces. A poor Chinaman came in while I was observing, and bowed before this idol in the utmost trouble of soul. Just as we enter the door of this department there stands in front a ghost of a man coming up out of a dark sepulchre, the picture of despair. He is "a man who has lost his soul!"

Alas! what superstition is all this. I feel sad and grieved at heart to see men, women, and children worship these dumb idols, as though they were living beings who held their destinies in their power! And to think that Satan had such control over so large a part of the human family as to teach them his doctrine of "the soul's immortality." There are small idols, and images innumerable, almost, of brass, and wood, in different parts of this temple. Every hero who has died among them, or great man, has been no doubt, deified and has an idol to represent him.

These Chinese feed their dead. They visit the graves, and set before the spirits of their dead provisions of pork, rice, cheese, etc., etc.; and also burn tissue paper of gold or silver to furnish them with gold and silver in the spirit world! These superstitions notions are too numerous to mention. Their dead are buried for a time with substance to rot the flesh, and then they are dug up and the flesh scraped from the bones, and these bones are transported by ship loads back to their native country. This is a regular business. This is done so that the spirits of these departed friends will not turn fiends to inflict judgments upon the living!

Well may we be thankful that our birth and education was in this land illuminated by the Scriptures; and that we have seen the falsity of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul of man, and that while the body is in the grave the spirit is somewhere alive! But how much of this heathen superstition prevails throughout Christendom, and among intelligent men who should know better. The Lord open the eyes of the people to see that "immortality is the gift of God" to those "who by patient continuance in well doing seek for it."

INTEMPERANCE

prevails on this coast to an alarming extent. I have just visited a town numbering about 3,000 inhabitants, and I was informed by a citizen who knew the facts, that "three-fourth's of the inhabitants of that town were habitual drinkers of intoxicating liquors!" Many of the principal citizens on this coast are engaged in the grape culture for the purpose of its manufacture into wines and brandy. Plum orchards bearing that most delicious fruit, are cultivated for the manufacture of the fruit into brandy! This sin is justified by those engaged in both fruit raising and in its sale, and to denounce it is like touching the sin of slavery at the South before the great rebellion. What can be done in such communities in the preparation of a people for the coming of the Lord? All classes, both young and old, are addicted to the drinking of intoxicating liquors more or less. There are some noble exceptions of firm and uncompromising temperance men and women, who stand up fearlessly against this increasing sin. But if matters go on as they now are, and this evil increases as rapidly as it now has within a few years, if time should continue, we shall soon become a nation of drunkards.

This is a land the Lord has blessed with many peculiar advantages, but the people are given up to sensual pleasures, and to covetousness. The type of Christianity is worldly and formal, and of a negative power, while infidelity and irreligion is positive and triumphant. A few there are who are stemming this mighty current downward to the cataract of ruin; and some are willing to hear, believe, and embrace the doctrine of the coming of the Lord, and look for "the better country." Pray for us while we labor to save souls from the burning day.

O. R. FASSETT.

REAL WANT.

We are credibly informed that our brethren in Huron Co. Mich. who suffered by the fires last fall are discriminated against by the agents who distribute relief goods, and that some of them must suffer severely if not aided soon. A word in such case should be sufficient. Aid for them sent to this office will be carefully dispensed.

QUERIES.

J. A. S. If you have the back numbers of the Quarterly you will find a good article on "the spirits in prison." They are in the prison-house of death. They were preached to while alive, in the days of Noah, before the flood, while the mercy of God lingered.

W. S. To your first and second questions we respond, we have no means of knowing—the Bible says nothing at all on the subject.

The reason why God did not show respect to Cain's offering was because he did not bring such an offering as God demanded. "Without shedding of blood is no remission." It is the blood that makes the atonement both in the figure and the fact, for the reason that the life or soul is in the blood. See Lev. 17: 10–15. Abel recognized this principle by offering a lamb, showing faith in a Lamb of God yet to be revealed. Cain brought the fruit of his own labor—a kind of self-righteousness.

M. G. K. The word translated world in Mat. 24: 3 is aion (in English letters) and sometimes means age or dispensation. But your Universalist friend cannot make much out of that unless he can prove that the Jewish dispensation extended beyond the limits Christ assigned to it. "The law and the prophets were until John." Besides the coming there referred to is the parousia—always a personal coming; literally—presence.

T. W. R. We cannot understand Mat. 12: 21, 22 as you do. We think the words "more tolerable" refer to the fact that their benighted condition will be taken into the account in making decision in their case. That is some of them may be saved who would not have been had they done the same things with such light as Chorazin and Bethsaida enjoyed. If you were blind, said Jesus on one occasion, ye should not have sin in this matter; but you have light, claim that you see: therefore your sin remaineth. The trite saying—"As is light, so is responsibility," is here applicable. The many and few stripes refer probably to temporal chastisements.

The question of conflict between the account of Elijah's translation and Jno. 1: 13 is easily solved. Heaven is not an arbitrary term, but sometimes means the atmosphere, sometimes the starry heavens, sometimes the place where God manifests his presence in a special manner—the present locality of our Savior. Now Elijah was taken up into heaven—into the atmosphere above the earth. If there are only two localities in the universe, the immediate presence of God, and this earth, then Elijah has gone to "heaven" spite of Pro. 3: 13. But inasmuch as there are thousands of worlds, it is not difficult to be convince that Elijah could have a home without being in "heaven itself." Rev. 19: 10, and 22: 8, 9, should read "a fellow servant of thy brethren the prophets," as all immaterialists not committed to the theory of spirit communications frankly admit. The idea is, he was simply a fellow servant with John of the only being to whom worship was due—not that he was a translated prophet, much less the ghost of one. However, if it could have been Elijah or Enoch, the question has bearing upon immaterialism.

We will answer any question we can, but may not always give answers at once.

G. G. The term "promise" is sometimes applied to the word given, and sometimes to the thing pledged. In Heb. 11: 17 the word "promise" refers to God's engagement to do certain things. In vv. 13 and 39 the fulfillment is meant. In ch. 6: 15 the promise obtained is that pledged which was assured by a solemn ratification, recorded in Gen. ch. 15. Some have claimed, however that it refers to the promise of a son, and the fulfillment in the birth of Isaac.

D. H. J. The "mustard-seed parable" refers to the progress of the visible church; "the fowls of the air" mean the corrupt influences introduced within its borders by human instrumentalities.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From A. E. Babcock, Nevada, O.

In God's providence I was on hand to fill my appointment at Millville, Hocking Co. O. Found the church in readiness for labor in the cause of God, and notwithstanding there had been a long series of meetings by the Baptists and then the United Brethren the meeting began with interest, and was continued for three weeks amid some of the most determined opposition by those who ought to know and do better. The Lord blessed the effort. I baptized two. Fifteen were added to the church, and quite a number of others will soon, I trust, obey the Lord. Among the number added this time is a man that has formerly been a Lutheran minister. He had fallen away by the underhanded work of his former brethren, and went into Universalism. He has come out firm on Bible ground, and I trust will make an efficient laborer in defense of the truth. He says the Bible is a new book to him. He meets with much persecution from the so-called orthodox; but the brethren will stand by him and hold up his hands. His name is J. G. Baughman.

The truth is spreading in that region and had they a sufficient laborers there, a large interest might be raised up. I met with much opposition from a Baptist man of much influence; but his entire family, that are of mature years, are with us heart and hand—the mother two sons and two daughters at home; and they are among the first and most intelligent people in that country. To God be the glory. I hope the father will also give up his opposition and join with his family, so that they may all be as one. The church now numbers fifty-five members.

After leaving them I came to Columbus where I hunted up Dr. C. S. Hyde, the only believer in the city. He has the faith so deeply rooted in him that the combined efforts of the churches cannot move him. His amiable companion is with him in all things. He loves to have the brethren call upon him. At some future time, if the Lord will, I shall by his help and influence try and get some of our faith before the people of that city.

On my way home I met with Br. H. A. King, and by his earnest request I am here, and last evening spoke to a few that gathered in at short notice, who prevailed on me to tarry with them over next Lord's day.

EDITORIAL GLEANIGS.

The Conference at Hornellsville, N. Y. is postponed one week. See appointment.——Br. J. H. Paton has been rejected by the Baptist church, without trial. At the Q. M. at Lapeer, our brethren heartily extended to him the "right hand of fellowship." We trust he will be a great help in Eastern Michigan, and elsewhere——Br. J. M. Snook has been very sick at Lapeer, but is recovering.——Br. D. S. Clark is still in Iowa. 17 were baptised at Earlham, and the church has now about 30 members. He is now in Greenfield, having a good hearing. Hopes to be in Lewis March 15.——Br. Irish's late discussion in Chetopa, Kas. seems to have resulted favorably, although prematurely closed by the sickness of his opponent. The Crisis has an interesting report of the late Special Conference at Worcester on the time question, which we hope to give soon.——Eld. Grant gives a favorable account of the meetings in San Francisco. He is engaged for three discussions, one with Saturday keepers.——The Hoosick Valley Conference had a fine session at Hebron, in January. They are to have a tent in the field this season.——Over fifty have been converted and reclaimed in Rochester N. Y. at the late meetings. Br. Whitmore and the church are greatly encouraged.——Br. M. R. Miles is in Tennessee. A letter from him next week.——As we go to press we get the following, the latest news from the California Mission: Eld. Grant has just left here after 12 days sojourn and successful preaching. Dr. Truesdale will conduct devotional exercises until he returns, week after next, to stay and preach one month, if he can get a hall. All the churches have been closed against him. He did great arousing work here, while preaching during the past fortnight.

The Christian Life.

An Awkward Excuse.

Five Yoke of Oxen. The old-fashioned pretense that one duty interferes with another is worn out, Mr. Sluggard. We have nothing to say against your taking proper care of your cattle; against your plowing, harvesting, and other worldly enterprises; but why will you insist that these shall be an excuse for neglecting Christian labor? Why can't you make those oxen—five yoke—draw stone for the new church, or wood for that poor widow, or a load of provisions for those starving wretches whom you drove away from your door last week?

It is because you are covetous, Mr. Sluggard; and not because you have not had time or money to spare. It is because the more you have the less you are willing to do for Jesus; because five yoke of oxen, instead of drawing you nearer to your true work, as all the advantages of wealth should, have drawn you away from it.

Five yoke of oxen an excuse for not feeding the hungry, for not clothing the naked, for not visiting the sick, for not attending church, for dodging the minister, the superintendent, and the collector; for prayerless week days and sleepy Sundays; for evading every Christian responsibility, and lying down in luxurious selfishnes while sin works everywhere, and misery with forty-oxen power is drawing your neighbor into overwhelming temptation! Out on so paltry an excuse! You don't believe it yourself, Mr. Sluggard—Christian at Work.

The Glory of Drudgery.

Persistent plodding is one of the fixed conditions of permanent success. Neither genius nor any other advantage can supplant it. For the "lucky" man is not he into whose lap drops a fortune or a windfall of what his fellows call glory, but rather he whom God leads step by step, through darkness, to light, from rough places to smooth, up the long hill of discipline to the hights of peace.

Christian work is eminently of the sort which tests and toughens the soul by drafts upon its endurance. To persevere in the face of delays, discouragements and reverses is one of God's foremost requirements. To be contented with his promise; to find in that sufficient return to sustain us in long watching and diligent working; to feel that dignity and preciousness are conferred upon the meanest details by the consecration of all to him—this is the glory of drudgery, and it is a real and lasting one—Sel.

Be Sober.

It is not merely against "exc ss of wine" that the apostle warns us, but excess in every thing;—against all extremes, excitements, feverishness—fruits of an unbalanced mind and an uncontrolled unregulated spirit. self-restraint, self-denial, moderation in all things, calmness,—these may well be included under the words "be sober." Non-conformity to the world,—rejection of its vanities, follies, feasts, pleasures, revellings, these are also included. Be temperate in all things. Mortify your members which are upon the earth. Beware of any temptation that would betray you into an unsteady, feverish state of mind, and throw you off your balance and your guard. For the Lord is at hand!

A holy life is made up of a number of small things. Little words, not eloquent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles, nor battles, nor one great heroic act or mighty martyrdom make up the true Christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightning; the waters of Siloam "that go softly" in the meek mission of refreshment, not the "waters of the river, great and many," rushing down in torrent, noise, and force, are the true symbols of a holy life. The avoidance of little evils, little sins, little inconsistencies, little weaknesses, little follies, indiscretions, and imprudences, little foibles, little indulgences of self and of the flesh; the avoidance of such little things as these goes far to make up, at least, the negative beauty of a holy life.—Bonar.

Unless a minister gets the general love and goodwill of his parishioners, he may preach his own heart out, before he preacheth anything into theirs. Yet he must humor them not in his doctrine to get their love; for such a spaniel is worse than a dumb dog.—Old English Proverb.

Correspondence.

From N. Wilson, Adair Co. Mo.

We have a few names here of those true and tried in the faith, who are looking for the blessed hope. We can realize the fact that we are in perilous times. We are beset, but not cast down. How we do hunger and thirst for the truth as revealed in the Bible. We want teachers who are able to instruct and build up. For the last three years we have been fed as it were on the husks of sectarianism. Those of us who preach the truth have had our hands tied by those with whom we are associated; and our influence destroyed. We were members of the Christian or Disciple church. We accept their teachings on what are called the first principles of the gospel, but they can't get any farther. As a brother remarked two days since, "They got on board the train of reformation, got as far as Campbell Station, and got off: and when the train started on further reform, they refused to get on board, and consequently were left behind." And he might have well added, that they are trying to throw it off the track!

But, thank God, men will investigate, and truth will rise. There is an active spirit of investigation here, and people are reading. We need some strong teacher to hold the truth before the people. I see by your "Journal" that you are in the missionary work. Can you not lay out a field in Missouri, so that you can visit us? The ears and hearts of the people are opening to receive the truth, and we can be strengthened and built up. I will urge this upon you. We send as it were a Macedonian cry unto you, and pray you not pass it by.

The brethren do not propose to remain any longer as they have been, but are going to organize for themselves, and take the Bible [illegible] it teaches in all things. The lig[illegible]t shine under a screen; so they [illegible]ose to remove the screen, and let [illegible] rays shine forth. Let us know wh[illegible] you can come to us, and may the God of all bless you with us in our noble work, Amen.

[We will try to visit you hereafter. But cannot now say when. Ed.]

From Jas. Ferriss.

Knowing that our friends will be anxious to hear how I get along with the meeting in Porter Center, I will give a little history so far as I have gone with them.

I reached Lawton Tuesday afternoon. Found Br. Churchill, formerly of Buchanan, the only man I knew in the place. He went out and found me a conveyance to the Center, four miles. It was very cold riding on a wood rack. However I was glad of this opportunity. He carried me as far as he went, and directed me the rest of the way. I went to a house near the place of meeting, not knowing where the friends lived who invited me. The man of the house asked me to stay and take supper with them. I left my things there and went to the school-house, gave out the appointment for that evening and returned to supper. The man of the house neither returned thanks nor asked me to. I saw that things were not altogether easy, so when the time arrived I took my things down to the school-house. I learned afterwards that this man and wife who showed me hospitality were members of the M. E. church. He said he did not know but the church would find fault with him for harboring me. When I arrived at the school-house I found the friends who invited me there, all strangers: two or three I had seen before. Soon Br. Carver came in from Marcellus, to tell the congregation that I had not come—as I was expected on the Peninsula Road instead of the Central. We had a blessed meeting. From that the interest increased. I commenced to preach plain, practical truth. But the second or third night a member of the M. E. church arose and commenced without ceremony on the spirit question: said he believed a man had a spirit that lived after he was dead, for the New Testament said it should go to God. From that the battle began in their midst. Steps were taken immediately by a very few to close the house against us. We did not resist. The Town Clerk being present, offered us the Town Hall, a much better place and more convenient. Cold and storm did not prevent the people from coming from far and near to hear the last message to a dying world. A number of our Methodist friends are receiving the truth in the love of it, as well as many others, old and young, and the tide still rises. Thank God. Some have already made an open confession of their faith, and are going forward in baptism. The people tell me that there never were so great congregations gathered in that place. I have closed the meeting for a short time, until I can recruit a little, as I am alone, and worked down.

God be praised that even here, where for many years they have had regular preaching, the people are hungering and thirsting for the word of God; and not only here, but for miles around, requests have been sent in for me to come and break the bread of life. God speed the truth, is my earnest prayer.

From Br. G. W. Hurd.

I have just returned home from holding a meeting in the Howell S. H. Brown Co. Ill. At the time that I went there I was so hoarse that I could hardly talk, but the Lord helped me so that after the second evening I could begin to sing as well as speak to the praise of God. Two other meetings were in progress within a few miles, but the Lord heard our prayers. The people turned out to hear, and the little band are quickened; their hearts made to glow with love to God. Sinners were converted and brought near to Jesus. Eight souls were added to the church.

A very good interest is felt in this vicinity to hear our faith. I find that ours is a practical, vivifying faith, and one, if presented in a proper manner, eminently calculated to reach both the mind and heart. But I am satisfied that much is lost by not making these glorious truths practical—enlightening the mind without reaching the heart. All around wherever I go I find men and women holding truth in unrighteousness. The reason for this is apparent in the fact that everywhere we go we meet with opposition, harsh and relentless, and often forget patience and meekness and partake of the spirit of opposition and lose the spirit of labor for the perishing. I think we should, first of all, endeavor to show that we wish above all things to save the perishing.

From F. A. Childs, Anna, Ill.

The Times comes to us regularly, and as we receive several other papers on that day, we lay them all aside until the subject matter of The Times is pretty well digested. Wife selects "Editor's Journal," first, and I must confess I have a kind of weakness to know what the old veteran is doing. God bless him in his work of winning souls to Christ, as well as the strengthening of the church at large.

Next in order comes the "Gleanings." They show at a glance the spiritual thermometer of the Advent cause. Our hearts are made to rejoice and feel sad as the cause advances or is hindered.

Then the Extracts and Letters from brethren and sisters far and near cheer and comfort us as we drink in the spirit of the writers. And lastly, the "Discussion," and solid food, for future review. News we usually take from secular papers, but much that is omitted there, you have. Every page of your sheet to us is fresh and interesting. We feel from the bottom of our hearts to bid you God's speed.

The Advent family in this isolated part of the great field is still alive, and though our growth is slow, we feel that it is hearty. We have made some progress since you were here, occasionally an addition to the little circle. We are looking with pleasing anticipation for Br. W. McCullock next week. May God bless his labors is our prayers.

I have been filling appointments in the country and looking after our little church here during the past few months I find the people are very ready and anxious to know more about the good way. But for the past few weeks I have been called to the bedside of those near and dear to me by the ties of blood. George, my youngest brother, now sleeps in yonder church yard. Wife is better, and I propose to enter the field again. We can well sympathize with each other in our afflictions. I have watched with deep interest the progress your Edwin was making in the cause of Jesus. I had learned to love him from what he was doing. I entertained high hopes of his future usefulness. Let us pray that God may raise up his like to carry forward the work he so bravely entered upon.

From S. K. Gibson.

After five weeks labor I have closed meeting at the Chester S. H., Wayne Co., Iowa, with good results. The Lord blessed with health and strength beyond our expectation. And what was still better, he blessed by his spirit, and sinners were led to repentance and to confess Christ. Truly it was a most blessed time in the Lord. About fifty expressed their desire to become Christians, and thirty-nine united with the church. Fifteen of these were heads of families. Six men with their wives came forward and agreed to walk together in Christ the rest of the journey of life. Some of them were past the meridian of the days of man, and we hope and trust will be as true to Christ as they have been to the world. Most of the young people in the neighborhood confessed Christ. The church asked largely of the Lord and he gave largely. Praise his name! Others are still coming into the truth and we trust will cast their lot with us before long. The cause is onward in these parts. I cannot fill half the calls for labor. There is room for two or three good efficient workmen here, and they are needed. May the good Lord send them. The brethren of the north part of the county have written for Br. D. S. Clark and are looking for him.

From J. W. Farrow.

I commenced a series of meetings at the Washington S. H., Stonington, Ill., Jan. 22. As the nature of man had never been discussed here I concluded to show the people what man was in his creation and probation; in death and judgment. Throughout the week I had a full attendance, and also undivided attention. My first sermon on the text, "What is man?" made a strong impression upon the minds of my hearers, and many of them began at once to search the Scriptures to see if it was possible these things could be so. Others applied to me, that I might refer them to chapter and verse, for the doctrine I advanced. I cheerfully referred them to some sixty passages upon man's mortality, state in death, and that none will be rewarded or punished until after the resurrection and judgment. Others are coming for references of the same sort, and get a full supply.

How it gives joy to my heart when I can adopt chapter-and-verse theology and say, "There, my brother, is the word of the Master! Read for yourself!" And I learn there has been more talk about Bible and God since the night of Jan. 22, than ever before in this place. The minds of the people are awake and much Bible reading being done. I pray God that the investigation began may continue until every Bible reader in the place shall take the high ground and say I will not believe what any man preaches unless he shall give me a "thus saith the Lord" for it. I feel although alone (and yet not alone for God is with me,) that I am entering upon a reformation here that will give glory and honor to God, and in its results shall last until our glorious God and King shall descend from heaven to gather his ransomed ones to himself. My Baptist brethren here with whom I have labored for years in the ministry, and whom I yet love, have refused me a place in their pulpit to preach among them. I complain not. The field here is fully open, and on every suitable occasion I shall occupy, using only chapter-and-verse theology before the people. I have been misrepresented by some, and that in part even by ministers of Christ.

From P. Holler, Nashville Mich.

I have just returned from a two weeks meeting. Had a good time. The Lord blessed my labors. Some fifteen came out and confessed the Savior. Quite a number will be baptised in a few weeks, and more are expected to follow. A number will send for The Times. I expect to organize a church. Those that have come out are the most prominent men. Two M. E. ministers were present at one of my meetings. One interrupted in time of my discourse. He manifested an envious spirit. I gave him time to speak, and then went on with the subject in hand. As soon as I was done the other minister requested ten minutes, which was granted, and he used more than his time, and got himself tangled, and his brother told him to stop, his "time was up and more too." They were both old ministers. The entire audience, even their own members, were disgusted. I have never witnessed such an interest as there is here at the present. Remember us in your prayer.

From Jonas Wendell.

I have been holding a series of meetings at Sutton's Corners in Crawford Co. Pa., with glorious results. Quite a number hav[illegible]mbraced the truth. Methodists, [illegible]yterians and United Brethren; an[illegible]ome sinners were induced to enter the army of the Lord. One minister attended all our meetings, and took an active part in the services, and on the last evening endorsed as truth what I had preached. I shall return and continue as long as it shall seem to be duty. Our Methodist brethren there appear to be as much troubled as all Jerusalem was at the announcement of the birth of Christ. They talk of sending for their presiding Elder (Br. Burgess) who held the discussion with Br. Fenn and which was reported in The Times last year. I hope they will succeed in getting him, for the truth always shines the brighter when contrasted with error.

The Future.

This subject ought to be approached with the greatest reverence and with a simple desire to know what is revealed in the Holy Scripture. Thus approached, and with implicit trust in the God of Truth, the study of "the Future" will not, cannot be unprofitable.

At the outset of another year, and having just reached, as it were, a milestone in our journey towards the consummation of all things, it seems not inappropriate that we should calmly, quietly survey the prospect before us, and see wherein our hopes for the future of the world and of the church rest. 1871, like its predecessor 1870, passes away from our view, deeply dyed in human blood. During the last five months of the latter, and the first five months of the former year, fearful were the scenes presented on the carnage fields of France. Heart-rending were the shrieks of the wounded and dying; piteous was the wailing of widows and orphans, the homeless and the starving. Well might the compassionate and the thoughtful stand appalled and ask, When will these horrors cease? For eighteen hundred years has the gospel been preached north and south, east and west, and yet two of the nations who have been lifted up to heaven with privileges, two professedly religious, each claiming the title Christian, are intoxicated with a savage thirst for blood, and tens of thousands of human beings are sacrificed to that horrid thirst. Is Satan always to gloat with malignity over the hells enkindled on the beauteous vales of earth? Shall he always triumph so? Is this the boasted millennium which civilization, science and art were to bring in? Was the preaching of the gospel designed to convert the world? If so, is it a failure? These are questions that arise at every outbreak of the fierce demon of war. For answers to which where shall we turn but to the pilgrim's guide and chart, the sure word of God? We read there of a joyous time coming when "swords shall be beaten into plow-shares, and spears into pruning hooks." This gives us clear assurance that the Evil One shall not always feast on the horrors of war. If we are trusting in civilization to usher in the reign of peace, events have clearly shown that we are leaning on a broken reed. And as the preaching of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ having failed in its design, we must first, with reverence, inquire what that design is, knowing full well that the purpose of the Most High will never result in failure. Failure is only known to human and Satanic schemes.

From my investigation of the subject I think ample proof will be adduced to show that there is nothing in the Bible to warrant the belief that evil and sorrow are to be driven out of this sin-stricken and sorrow-burdened world by the spreading abroad of the truths of his love and his salvation for men.

I. To simplify the subject, I here advance the first argument, viz.: That the return in person of Christ is the event pointed to by the finger of revelation, which shall bring about the cessation of evil and the triumph of good; that his coming ough[illegible] of the church; and [illegible]ear evil will exist with good—nay, even preponderate over good—in the world.

In proof of this, listen to Paul's words to Timothy:—"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, ... despisers of those that are good, ... lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. . . . . Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." (2 Tim. 3.) St. Peter says: "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?" (2 Pet. 3: 3.)

Our Lord himself has said, "There shall be . . . . upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh. . . . . And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." (Lk. 21: 25.) Other passages might be quoted, but time will not allow. Let it be noticed however, that in the parables of our Lord, this truth, that sin and sorrow are to abound till he come, is plainly taught. In the parable of the wheat and the tares (Mat. 13: 30), when the husbandman has sown good seed, and his enemy, tares, the servants ask whether it is their lord's will that the tares be plucked up; but he answers, "Let both grow together until the harvest." The parable of the wise and foolish virgins distinctly implies that when the marriage of the Lamb has come, and the Bridegroom claims the Bride, some, prepared, go into the marriage feast; others, unprepared, are shut out.

The frequency with which the apostles speak of the return of him they loved, shows that the hope of his return ought to be the hope of all believers. What was to be the attitude of the followers of the Crucified? "Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." (Tit. 2: 13.) "Coming behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 1: 7.) "Who shall confirm you unto the end that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ," so that "when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." (Col. 3: 4.) Paul rejoices that the Thessalonians had been induced "to turn from dumb idols to serve the living God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." (1 Thes. 1: 9.) And his aim was "to the end that he might establish their hearts in holiness before God, even the Father, at the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." (1 Thes. 3: 13.) To the Hebrews, St. Paul says, "For yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry." (Heb. 10: 37.) And when that Christian warrior draws near to the end of his earthly conflict, looking back he can exclaim, with humble thankfulness for the strength made perfect in his weakness, "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith," and looking forward to the day of Christ's appearing, that day upon which his hopes were ever so firmly fixed, he rejoices in the assurance, "henceforward there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me in THAT DAY: and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing." (2 Tim. 4: 8.) On this matter the other apostles are just as earnest. Peter encourages them in heaviness under manifold trials so to bear them by the grace of God that their faith "might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." (1 Pet. 1: 7.) James gives the consolation, "Be ye also patient; establish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. (James 5: 8.) The tender and loving John writes: "And now, little children, abide in him; that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed at his coming." (1 John 2: 28.) One or two more quotations on this head will suffice. "The Lord direct your hearts into the patient waiting for Christ." (2 Thes. 3: 5.) "The Lord is at hand." (Phil. 4: 5.) "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints." (Jude 14.) Again and again is this chord touched by the faithful apostles, and fondly do their fingers linger over the strain. Alas! that the church so soon left her first love!

In answer to the inquiry, "Has the preaching of the gospel failed to accomplish its design?" and bearing in mind the inquiries into divine teaching just made—an emphatic No can be given. It remains to be proved by reason, for there is nothing in Revelation to warrant the popular belief that the world is to be Christenized by gospel preaching. Scripture plainly teaches that until the return of him who shall "destroy the works of the devil," evil is to flourish in this sin-blighted world. The promised advent of the Prince of Peace. Until Christ himself appear in person to drive out Satan and sin we may expect no less than wars and rumors of wars, no abatement in that vast flood of sin and crime, which, to angelic eyes, dyes with a sadder, darker stain than ever flowed from sabre cut or bayonet thrust, those countries which the newspapers say, "enjoy peace and prosperity." Civilization may do much, but regenerate a ruined world it cannot. Every institution the mind of man can suggest may be tried, but all will result in failure. Mortal man here only proves his weakness. The only true hope of the world is the coming of Christ, the Prince of Life. All other hopes bloom but to wither and die.

Here I may be misunderstood. Not for one moment would I disapprove of the spreading of the gospel. Christian missions at home and abroad have my heartiest sympathy. They were originated by our Divine Master, and his words, "Go ye unto all the world," are conclusive. It is ours to do his will, and leave results with him. The "gospel of the Kingdom," is to be preached "amongst all nations for a witness." The nations are to have the truth presented to prove the "savor of life unto life, or of death unto death." If every creature is to be converted and become his child before his return, how is it that when he shall appear, "one shall be taken and another left?" How is it that there are to be in the last days, "scoffers, blasphemers, traitors, despisers of those that are good?" If we cannot promulgate the glorious gospel of the grace of God without an inducement arising from expected results, where need a higher motive be sought than that when our blessed Lord returns he may have his joy increased by having the more faithful watching servants of all kindreds and nations and peoples and tongues ready to welcome him with gladness?

II. The second position is that some day the coming of Christ, earth's king, will startle the whole world, and that, save to his faithful servants, it will be a time of dire dismay to mankind.

St. Paul writes: "The day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." Peter expresses himself in very nearly the same words: "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." (2 Pet. 3: 10.) The highest authority in the universe has said (Mark 13: 34), "For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrow, or at morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." Again, "And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all. Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot, they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded: but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be when the Son of man is revealed. In that day, he which shall be on the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away; and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back. Remember Lot's wife." (Luke 17: 26.) Solemn words are these, demanding the most serious attention. How was it in the days of Noah? The favored righteous few were placed in security, and then darkest despair seized upon the sons of men. How was it in the days of Lot? No sooner were the godly out of the reach of harm than the flood of divine retribution swept down in a fiery cataract upon the cities of the plain. So, says our Lord, shall it be in the day of his coming. His words plainly imply that, as with Noah as with Lot, his elect shall be tenderly taken care of by their heavenly Father, and then upon the impenitent will descend those terrible judgments exemplified by the deluge and the fire.

The startling suddenness of that coming is again and again repeated in the teachings of our Divine Master. Without warning will he appear. "Watch, therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." (Mat. 17.) "Be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." "Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." (Mat. 25: 13.) "As a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." (Luke 21: 35.) Watching——watching——watching! This revelation asserts to be the clearest duty of the church of Christ during her Lord's absence in the far country. However deeply engaged in doing his work, her ear ought always to be ready to catch the reverberations of that trumpet-note which shall summon to swell the hosts of the Royal Conqueror, his elect from the four winds. Watching! where is her love if she watch not? Oh! that the church would awake to this her privilege and glory.

Concluded next week.

The Penalty of God's Law is Death.

The sacrifice of Christ could never have satisfied the demands of the law, if those demands had been endless misery. We understand that Christ did pay the debt. He bore our sins on the tree! He became a curse for us! (Gal. 3: 13.) This could never have been if to meet the requirements of the broken law, is to suffer endless torture. But he "redeemed us from the curse of the law," by pouring out his soul unto death (Is. 53: 12) by dying on the cross. This, if we had no other evidence, would settle the fact that death is the result of sin, and the thing from which man is to be redeemed by the atonement. To corroborate this, Paul says (Rom. 6: 23), "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." In this passage we have in beautiful contrast the reward of the righteous and the result of sin. One is affirmed to be, not "happiness" but "eternal life;" the other is its opposite—"death!" The proposition appears to be "life" or "death;" existence, or non-existence. An inventive and accommodating theology, however, has very materially changed this proposition. By this latter we are expected to believe that the result of sin is pain and misery, while the consequence of well doing is happiness and peace. No such proposition can be found in the word of God. Happiness will be a characteristic of the life that God has offered to the righteous; while pain will no doubt precede and accompany the infliction of the death penalty.

James says (ch. 1: 15): "Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin when it is finished bringeth forth death." In Rom. 1: 32, we read, "they which commit such things are worthy of death." Why should the apostles so state the matter, if endless conscious misery awaits the finally unsaved? Paul also states that the "end" of a sinful course is "death." Death produces unconsciousness. It destroys conscious being. It therefore follows that the condition to which the sinner will be subjected is non-existence. He is to die a literal death. That death will be eternal, because there is no release from it. It will be the second death from which there will be no resurrection to life.

We are told in Ezk. 18, no less than eight times that the penalty awaiting the sinner is death. "Saith the Lord God," "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." No one in the face of this declaration can believe that the soul is immortal! If it were it could not die! But the God of heaven says if it sins it will die. In perfect harmony with this we read in Ezk. 33: 13, "for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it." The prophet does not understand that the sinner is to suffer eternal pain on account of his sins; but he is to lose his life—he is to die. This agrees with God's declaration to the children of Israel through Moses: "I have set before thee this day, life and good, and death and evil." (Deut. 30: 15.)

Ministers and others, who are laboring for the salvation of sinners, are not laboring to save them from endless misery, as many teach. "He that converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death and hide a multitude of sins." (Jas. 5: 20.) This is the object of the gospel to save souls from death. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation; this salvation is deliverence from death. "A never dying soul," "the death that never dies," "endless misery," etc., are phrases peculiar to orthodox poetry and theology, but never so much as once found in the "Scriptures of truth."

C. C. MARSTON.

Our Young Folks.

The Broken Saw.

A STORY FOR BOYS.

A boy went to live with a man who was accounted a hard master. He never kept his boys; they ran away, or gave notice that they meant to quit, so he was half the time without and in search of a boy. The work was not very hard—opening and sweeping out the shop, chopping wood, going errands, and helping round. At last Sam Fisher went to live with him.

"Sam's a good boy," said his mother.

"I should like to see a boy now-a-days that had a spark of goodness in him," growled the new master.

It is always bad to begin with a man who has no confidence in you; because, do your best, you are likely to have little credit for it. However, Sam had been there but three days, before, in sawing a cross-grained stick of wood, he broke the saw. He was a little frightened. He knew he was careful, and he knew he was a pretty good sawyer, too, for a boy of his age. Nevertheless the saw broke in his hands.

"And Mr. Jones will thrash you for it," said another boy who was in the woodhouse with him.

"Why of course I didn't mean it, and accidents will happen to the best of folks," said Sam, looking with a very sorrowful air on the broken saw.

"Mr. Jones never makes any allowances," said the other boy, "I never saw anything like him. That Bill might have stayed, only that he jumped into a hen's nest and broke her eggs. He darn't tell it; but Mr. Jones kept suspecting, and laid everything out of the way to Bill, whether Bill was to blame or not, till Bill couldn't stand it, and wouldn't."

"Did he tell Mr. Jones about the eggs?" asked Sam.

"No," said the boy; "he was 'fraid; Mr. Jones has got such a temper."

"I think he'd better owned just at once," said Sam.

"I suspect you'll find it better to preach than practice," said the boy.

"I'd run away before I'd tell him;" and soon he turned on his heel and left poor Sam alone with his broken saw.

The poor boy did not feel very comfortable or happy. He shut up the woodhouse, walked out into the garden, and then went up to his little chamber under the eaves. He wished he could tell Mrs. Jones; but she wasn't sociable, and he had rather not. "Oh! my God," said Sam, falling on his knees, "help me to do the thing that is right."

I do not know what time it was, but when Mr. Jones came into the house the boy heard him. He got up crept down stairs, and met Mr. Jones in the kitchen.

"Sir," said Sam, "I broke your saw, and I thought I'd come and tell you 'fore you saw it in the morning."

"I should think morning soon enough to tell of your carelessness. Why do you come down to-night?"

"Because," said Sam, "I was afraid if I put it off I might be tempted to tell a lie about it. I'm sorry I broke it; but I tried to be careful."

Mr. Jones looked at the boy from head to foot, then stretching out his hand, "There, Sam," he said heartily, "give me your hand. Shake hands; I'll trust you, Sam. That's right; that's right. Go to bed, boy. Never fear. I'm glad the saw broke; it shows the mettle's in you. Go to bed."

Mr. Jones was fairly won. Never were better friends after that than Sam and he. Sam thinks justice has not been done Mr. Jones. If the boys had treated him honestly and "above board" he would have been a good man to live with. It was their conduct which soured and made him suspicious. I do not know how this is; I only know that Sam Fisher finds in Mr. Jones a kind and faithful master. —Sel.

Rap! Rap!

Hattie and Donald were looking one day at some silk-worms, which were feeding on some mulberry leaves in a little box which they called "Silkie's work room." Their mother told them that as the pretty golden-winged butterflies came from the crawling caterpillars, so their new bodies would, one day, be made over bright and beautiful from their dead ones, which would first molder in the grave. They, therefore, felt quite solemn, and Donald said:

"It's very wonderful Hattie, and oh! I do wish I were a Christian!"

Dear Hattie! How earnestly she gazed into his eyes as she replied:

"Donald, it is very easy to become a Christian. A great many little children come to Christ. All you have to do is to rap and the door opens."

Hattie was right. It is easy for a child who really wishes to be a Christian to be one. Jesus says to such, "Ask, and it shall be given; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

Wasn't Hattie right, therefore, when she said, "All you have to do is to rap, and the door opens?"

Try it, my dear child. Rap! Jesus listens, and waits to open the door—that is to make you his disciple.—S. S. Advocate.

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, ... MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, March 5, 1872.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
L. P. FOX, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.

A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.

M. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS, } Editorial Com.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, Business Agent,
To whom all communications should be addressed

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 15c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 60c. in paper.

Harps Etc.

We are out of Harps, and of Eld. Grant's works bound in one volume. New editions are preparing. When copies of them are received we will fill orders immediately. Our friends will be patient until then.

Field's Discussion.

For some time this desirable work has been out of print. The main topic is the Intermediate State, or Condition of the Dead. When a new edition was announced, some of the Doctor's old Disciple friends announced that they would buy and circulate it as soon as ready, because they thought it would help their side—that Mr. Connolly had the best of the argument. We shall soon know whether they really so felt, or were indulging mere bragadocia. The book has not yet made any converts to immaterialism that we have heard of; but we have learned of its bringing not a few to adopt the Bible theory.

The book has heretofore been sold at one dollar. The present edition is in paper covers (pp 218), and will be sent post-paid for 50c. We hope for liberal orders.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawver, M. B. Oyer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Hink, I. C. Wellcome, J. F. Huber, Grand St. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), H. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. E. Brown, M F Wistrom, R. W. Wilson, R. M. Lampard, Clinton (Io) Church, Lapeer Church.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand-raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $130. See advertisement.

To Correspondents.

R. HULEATT. You do not state where D. Huleatt takes his paper....J. PROSSER. Please give your P. O. Address to S. Halroyd, Genoa, Ill....W. R. HOWE. Mr. Chapman died some two years ago....A. W. AVERILL. It was a misunderstanding. We think we have it straight now ...J. YOUNGS. Will continue....G. WRIGHT, Jr. We had sent 50 by express.

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, MARCH 2.

All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

G G Downs
E Drew
A Scolley
L Radell
W J Lewis
J W Wilkinson
J Hogue
J Stiles
P Allyn
J Youngs
E Napier
J Mechem
A J Palmer
M Brown
T Moon
M C Miller
W P Shockey
A W Averill
L Mansfield
C Collins
D Huleatt
E S Levi
L March
J Langley
J Bottomley
J Piggot
J G Smith
S Cronce
J M Weston
G M C Roberts
T W Raymond
M A Kance
E Lister
M W Bride
C W Stephens
E L Scott
E G Hobbs
J G Baughman
J S Deegin
B Palmer
M Staffenbeurgh
W M Hall
G W Franklin
G Wright
J S Deming
C W Thomas
N Wilson
R B Williams
F D Stephens
C H Hoffman
M Beck
J P Russell
T E Cummings
J Mitchell
L Bacon
B Tilley
G B Congdon
N P Shephard
J P Smith
J P Parish
A Larzalese
A S Barber
A A Pinchin
M C Tice
E M Kent
D Doan
W N Low
D V Burroughs
F A DeWolf
O D Gibson
E W Huson
A Wilbur
H Frank
E N Bliss
E Udell
P Holler
W M Buell
T J Giddings
A Padden
J W Taylor
J E Andrus
J M Judkins
S Hale
W I Mann
W Whitney
J Watkins
E H Durand
E McNatt
W Imerson
J C Stoddard
J Hamilton
G C Meigs
R M Lampard
J M Iedan
M S Annis
Job Brown
M Nichols
A F Thomas
P Holler
F Udell
W Page
H Wayers
J H Fairbell
W Hobbs
C C Marston
W N Pile
J Wendall
P W Hough 2
J N Porter
H G McCulloch
N Field
W C Irish
F Reynolds
M B Hubbell
B Matthias
A C Green
L C Collins
W Gorges
W J Cumins
J W Meadows
S Rosebraugh
M R Miles
Delta
G W Green
H Pink
P Wezell
M Stockwell
J D Simons
W W Cate
H Kendall
T S Thomasson
M McMillen
D Bosworth
M Jeans
S Bjorklund
J Echer
A W Bowen
P S Back
J W Farrow
F Miller
J F Bishop
E Gower
E C Jones
J Prosser
J Hubbell
F A Shaw
S H Darlington
C Crawshaw
E Huff
W L Winslow
P McGarr
P Wezell
E Haff
E L Delano
C S Sherman
J H Whitmore
J G Holland

Books and Tracts by Mail.

W H Lewis
A W Averill
C Collins
J Bottomley
S Cronce 2
J Piggot
T W Raymond
James Jeans
W W Cate
B Palmer
G T Adams
R L Scott
R B Williams
C Hoffman
J Lowrey
A Robinson
E A Marsh
E Chandler
M B Hubbell
J D Simons
E W Huson
E C Jones
F A Shaw
M Walton
M Paxton 2
A A Bowen
J R Preston 2
B F Brownell
J S Deming
J G Baughman
D O Hink
W H Mosley
E A Miller
S Martz
B H Hall 2
J Condway
L A Handley
F E Davis
T Vandervoort
W C Hicks
E Temple
C L Jones
J M Hoffman
E Gower
J Searce
J W Cowles 2
W C Irish
A M B Graham
A M Gladding
J W Weltner
S E Mabey
G A Brenner
C M Kerr
E Kennedy
I E Andrus
J A Smith
A M Lemon
W Kile 2
J Martin 2
E Lloyd
J H Fairhill
M Nichols
A Larzalese
D V Burroughs
F E Davis
T J Giddings

BY EXPRESS.

John Bower
C C Marston
P Holler

Communications.

P W Hough 2
M Beck
C C Marston
W Hobbs
A P Moore
M Field
W Foster
W McCulloch
O D Gibson
G W Crosby
O R Fassett
S Morett
C H Case
G W Hurd
A Armour

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged..........................$666.64
A S Barber.... ....$1 00 | J Watkins............ 50

Pledges—Paid.

James Langley.......$2 00 | D V Burroughs......$1 00
A A Pinchen......... 50 | J A Peterson......... 1 00

New Press.

A Huleatt. $1 00

Book Notices, Etc.

THE subscription lists of the Family Circle, and also of the Bright Side, were totally consumed in the great fire; but they have now united, and are published monthly at 50c. per annum, under the name of the Bright Side and Family Circle. Old subscribers should send in their address at once. Address, Bright Side Co., Chicago, Ill.

THE Child's Friend is a taking little illustrated monthly paper for the little folks, published by the Bright Side Company at Chicago, Ill. Only 25c. a year. Sunday-schools can get ten or more copies at the rate of 12c. each.

Obituary.

WINN. In Jericho, Kane Co. Ill., Feb. 14, 1872, Eliza Winn: aged 54 years.

Sermon by the writer from 1 Cor. 15:26—"The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."

C. W. SMITH.

CARR. Henry H. Carr fell asleep at his residence, near Blue Lick, Clark Co. Ind., Dec. 26, 1871: in his 33d year.

Br. Carr leaves a wife, a little son, and many friends to mourn. We sorrow not as those who have no hope, as we believe he sleeps in Jesus, who will raise him up at the last day.

Sermon by the writer, from Hos. 13:14.

G. W. GREEN.

VAN METER. Died at Holton, Ind., James William, son of Br. and Sr. T. G. Van Meter: aged 1 year, 1 month, and 20 days.

May the God of all grace comfort our brother and Sr. in this deep affliction; and while they mourn their loss may they rejoice that "the last enemy," death, will soon be destroyed.

Sermon by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15:26.

G. W. GREEN.

FULLER. In DeKalb, Ill., Feb. 6, 1872, Sr. Hannah Fuller: aged 26 years.

She was the wife of Br. A. S. Fuller, whom many will remember as the kind and obliging Station Agent at DeKalb. She was known and loved by a large circle of friends. She fell quietly asleep in Jesus, in the blessed hope of life and immortality at the resurrection morning.

A short service was held in the Lutheran chapel in DeKalb, where a large congregation gathered to bid farewell to one beloved by all. Through the kindness of the Railroad Company free passes were given all who wished to attend the funeral at Blackberry. About forty silently and sadly went aboard the train and followed our dear sister to her last resting place. In the meantime a large congregation had assembled at the Christian church, and awaited our coming. I addressed them from the words—"Death is swallowed up in victory."

May the Lord bless and keep our brother in his deep affliction, and may he look forward with abiding faith to that bright morning when the lost jewels shall be gathered to shine in the deathless kingdom of God.

H. G. McCULLOCH.

Notices, Etc.

Discussion.

I purpose, the Lord willing, to hold a discussion with Eld. S. K. Hallam (Disciple), in his church at Farmer City, Ill., commencing March 18, and continuing three days, upon three propositions, involving the nature of man, the kingdom of God, and the destiny of the wicked.

C. C. MARSTON.

Br. Peter Milson has arranged to devote most of his time to the work of the ministry. Churches and brethren desiring his labors should correspond with him at once. We recommend him as a faithful minister of the word, one that will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God.

GEO. W. MILLER.

Minnesota Tent.

Notice is hereby given to those brethren and sisters of the State of Minn. who have subscribed for the purchasing of a new tent for the State, that the business of collecting and purchasing the tent in time for the summer campaign, has been committed to the undersigned, by a vote of the Annual Conference at its last session. All such as have not paid their subscriptions will please remit to me as soon as possible, that I may have time to make the purchase, before it will be actually needed. ADDRESS: GEO. W. MILLER, Millersburg, Rice Co, Minn.

The Times.

AT HOME.

-- -- -- Last year twenty-seven persons, and sixty horses, were killed while crossing R. R. tracks at train-time.

-- -- -- Seven hundred and twenty-one square feet of land on Wall St. New York was recently sold for $250,000, or at the rate of $14,000,000 an acre.

-- -- -- The immigration from Europe is likely to be heavier than ever the present year. Passages are said to be secured six or eight weeks in advance, by all the sailing and steamship lines.

-- -- -- Some of the boxes sent to help relieve Chicago, exhibited the peculiar tastes of the donors. The contents of one box were thirty changes of under garments, six packs of playing cards, three Testaments, and a box of jewelry.

-- -- -- The latest sensational story is of a comet en route from "beyond time and space" perhaps which is to arrive at our borders Aug. 12, next, unless Jupiter interferes with his attractive force. So goes the story. But one needs only a smattering of astronomy to know that the path of newly discovered comets is not so easily marked out.

-- -- -- There has been seen lately what probably was never seen before, wine peddled on the side-walks in New York city. All the favorite brands were put up in the most attractive style in five cent bottles for the children—first step to ruin! Who will save them from the snare of the evil one? Who will teach them what a poison lurks under this cunning guise? Nothing else will save them; for if they believe it is good, they will have it. There is nothing to hinder them.—Temperance Advocate.

ABROAD.

-- -- -- Snow and ice have been seen in Asia this winter, in places never before visited.

-- -- -- Judging from the latest advices affairs in France and Rome are rapidly approaching a crisis.

-- -- -- Three more men-of-war have been fitted out to cruise in the British Channel to guard the French coast against Bonapartist expeditions.

-- -- -- The Patrie asserts that the mission of Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia, who is now in Rome, is to bring about an alliance between Germany, Austria, and Italy.

-- -- -- The great jubilee in London as an expression of Thanksgiving for the recovery of the Prince of Wales was attended by 4,000,000 of people. So far as heard from, five were killed and over 200 injured in accidents of various kinds.

-- -- -- The day after the jubilee, a crazy young Irishman made an attempt upon the Queen's life. However his only weapon was an unloaded and unserviceable pistol. He seems to have become insane on Fenianism.

-- -- -- The Alabama Claims-Treaty discussion drags its slow length along. Whether England will repudiate the arbitration agreed upon remains to be seen. It is probable she will.

-- -- -- The German Government has notified the French Minister of Finance that it will accept the anticipatory payment of 400,000,000 francs of the war indemnity with a discount of five per cent. M. Pouyer Quertier will immediately pay the amount, thereby saving 20,000,000 francs.

-- -- -- The valley of the Tay, from Dundee, at the mouth of the Frith, to beyond Perth, is under water, owing to the overflow of the river and the wathers of the Frith. The damage to property in Dundee, and to the railway between that city and Perth, cannot be estimated. Portions of Dundee were rendered uninhabitable.

-- -- -- Vesuvius is lively again, after a long period of inaction. A month ago the smoke was very delicate, but soon began to get denser, and laden at times with puffs of ashes. These more recently have been followed by other projectiles, and the Naples Purgato of Feb. 3 says fire could then be seen from the crater every night. The movement appears at three distinct points. Fears are entertained of a serious outbreak.

-- -- -- There are fresh rumors that the Pope will leave Rome, and that France and Austria have both offered him a home. All three rumors are no doubt false. The Chicago Tribune says: "The nations of Europe have all witnessed the destruction of his political power without a protest, and all have substantially advised him to submit, telling him that he was better off without politital power than with it, which he cannot "see." A transfer of the Papacy at this time will have little or no political effect, though it may, and probably will, as before, end in breaking up the exclusively Italian organization of the 'Sacred College.'

-- -- -- The Medical Commission sent by the Sultan in Persia, near the Turkish borders, to decide on the character of the pestilence raging there, have reported that it is the regular Eastern plague. The malady takes the form of slow fever, with typhus symptoms with bubos under the arms, in groin and neck, carbuncles, and general eruption over the whole body. It carries the sufferer off quietly, attacking neighborhoods and entire families, and is transmitted from town to town. In the region of Persia infected there has been no famine or unusual scarcity of food. The mortality of the scourge up to the last accounts, had reached nearly 500.

-- -- -- From the announced intention of the Pope to call another Ecumenical Council, it would seem that the Powers above have not been fully convinced of the Papal Infallibility by the Council of 1870 and need to be reassured. Certainly, if the blessing of the Pope is sure to be of avail, as anything infallibly done ought to be, the benefits conferred by it come in peculiar ways. The Emperor of Austria was blessed and marched happily on to Sadowa; the Queen of Spain received the Golden Rose, and fled from her misrule over the Pyrenees; Maximilian was blessed and went across the ocean to Mexico and to death. On the other hand, Victor Emanuel has been cursed with great vigor and persistency, yet to-day he is king of United Italy, and has made his daughter Queen of Portugal and his son King of Spain. Evidently, Infallibility needs to be re-affirmed.

Appointments.

MICHIGAN.

Marietta. Presbyterian chapel, Monday and Tuesday evenings, March 11, 12.
North Branch Union S. H. Wednesday eve. March 13.
Speaker Gray S. H. Thursday eve. March 14.
Brockway Center, Friday eve. March 15.
Advent chapel, Lake Shore, three miles north of Lexington, Sunday, 10½ a. m. March 17.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H. 2½ p. m.
Port Sanilac, Good Templar's Hall, 7½ p. m.
GEO. WRIGHT, Jr.

The third Q. M. for the Southren District of Mich. will be held at the Munger S. H. five miles north of Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co. commencing Wednesday eve. March 20, and hold over Lord's day. Teams will be at the station at Eaton Rapids on the arrival of the p. m. train from Grand Rapids and Jackson. Eaton Rapids is on the Grand River Valley R. R. Let there be a full attendance.

J. M. SHOOK, Sec'y. pro tem.

ILLINOIS.

Amboy, Lee Co. Sabbath, March 10. Subject in the eve: Authenticity of the N. T.
Dalton, Moultrie Co, March 12 to 15, as Br. W. M. Reeder may arrange
Blue Ridge, Piatt Co. March 16.
Sheelsville, Piatt Co. March 17.
Farmer City, Dewitt Co. March 18 to 21, in debate with Eld. S. K. Hallam.
C. C. MARSTON.

Clinton, Colton's S. H. Saturday eve. March 16.
Afton, Sabbath, March 17. C. W. SMITH.

Milroy, Sat. eve, March 9, and on Sabbath at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. At the Town House at 3 p. m.
C. W. SMITH.

IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa First District Q. M. is to be held at Lewis, Cass Co. March 15–17. Brethren and sisters, let us have general rally.

WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

Milan, March 21, and over Sunday.
South Milan, April 7.
West Unionville, 3 miles, May 4, 5.
N. C. MILLER

MINNESOTA.

Vowles S. H. St. Charles, 2 p. m. March 9, covenant meeting. All the members of Utica church are invited.
Utica Station, 10½ a. m. and eve, March 10.
Vowles S. H. 3 p. m. and regular appointments thereafter at the last named place.
S. C. WELLCOME.

Havanna Station, Steele Co. Friday eve. 7 o'clock, March 15.
Medo, Blue Earth Co. Saturday eve. and Sunday, March 16 and 17, where the brethren may arrange. Meet me at Janesville, Saturday, at 4 p. m.
Kasota, Monday eve. March 18.
New Ulm, Thursday eve. March 21, where the friends may arrange. S. C. WELLCOME.

Cottage Grove, near Br. Fullerton's, March 17.
Independence, March 24. J. RAYMOND.

WISCONSIN.

The third Q. M. for Eastern District, Wis. will be held with the church at Cassel's Prairie, Sauk Co. Friday March 22, and over the Lord's day. Come at the commencement of the meeting, and bring the holy fire with you. GEO. THOMSON.

Near Prescott, as Br. Shepard may arrange, March 10. J. RAYMOND.

NEW YORK.

The next Q. M. of the A. C. Conference of No. Penn. and So. New York, will be held with the church in Hornellsville, New York, commencing March 26, and continuing over Sunday. All are invited.

J. W. TAYLOR, Pres't.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

Regular meetings are held by the church at 126 West 24th St., New York city: three times on Sunday, and Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings. T. J. COX.

The Lord willing, the next Q. M. of the N. Y. Advent Christian Conference will convene with the church in Lockport, Thursday eve. March 14, and continue over Sunday. All are invited. It is hoped there will be a large attendance and a full representation by delegates, as there will need be some judicious planning for the next Annual Meeting in June. Shall there be a camp-meeting, as last year? Where? Pray for this meeting, and come praying. Don't forget the collection.

D. COGSWELL, Pres't.
WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

There will be a Q. M. held with the church at Fremont, Steuben Co. Saturday and Sunday, March 2 and 3. J. W. TAYLOR.

Advertisements.

Free. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee-keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage.

H. A. KING & CO.,
14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper of 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.50 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 30c. a year. Ten copies, $4 Fifty copies, $20. tf

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

TH[illegible]ING MACHINE.

FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $625. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $550. Warranted as represented.
N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure.
(tf) Address, A. J. STONE, Hesperia, Mich.

FANNING MILL. I make an excellent machine for cleaning wheat. It will take out all cheat and oats, and leave the wheat clean and fit for seed. I will ship one of these machines to the first brother who will send $25 to the office of THE TIMES. They are well worth $30. H. M. Wheeler, Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Ill.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.

This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

HOW TO GO WEST.

Forty years ago, Illinois was as far West as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of Progress and Improvement, the word West has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point thereon by a splendid Line of Railroad.

This Line of Railroad is the Burlington Route, which starts from Chicago by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and, running through Burlington, reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific, and other railroads running from those cities.

People going to Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, California, or any point in the Territories, will study their own interests by going "By way of Burlington," for the rates of that Line are always as low as any other, and it is the best Route in the West, therefore you are more sure of your safety and comfort.

The Burlington Route has admirably answered the question "How to go West?" by the publication of an excellent pamphlet, containing a large, truthful map of the Great West, and much interesting and valuable information, which can be obtained free of charge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

WAIT'S
HUDSON RIVER CHAMPION
Turbine Water Wheel.

A WORD TO MILL MEN.

I have been building the Jonval Turbine for the past eight years. Have built some seven or eight different kinds of wheels. Am acquainted with nearly all the first class wheels in the country, and am fully persuaded that the Champion stands alone without a rival. Early I discovered that the tangential and centrifugal forces of the water, exerted a tremendous power which is expended against the outer rims of those wheels, which discharge vertically and against the scrolls and curbs of most other kinds, which is lost to all useful effect.

For a long time I studied and experimented carefully, to bring this wasted power into use without injuring the other high qualities of the Wheels.

My efforts have been crowned with success, and I can now offer you a Turbine which can compete successfully with all others in the economical use of the water, while for simplicity of construction, strength and durability, it is the champion of the world.

It has no complication of gates, with their multitude of Levers: no cranks, pin, segments nor pinions to get out of order. No series of leaky joints; no rubbing surface to wear away, to waste the water; nothing touches the wheel but water; hence it will never wear out. There is no lateral motion, nor do their steps wear out like other wheels.

The Jonval Turbine has given the highest percentage of power ever attained in any public test. Several of these Jonvals have been taken out which were in perfect order (having run but a short time), and the Champion placed in the same curbs, venting the same amount of water, and have obtained from six to eight per cent. more power in every instance than the Jonvals gave.

These wheels are perfectly proof against injury from flood-wood. Should any pieces get into the curb which could not pass through the wheel, you have simply to open a door (like a safe or cupboard), enter the curb, and remove the obstruction, and it is all ready for work again. This can be done in five minutes.

They are now in operation in every section of the country, giving unbounded satisfaction and taking the places of all other wheels. The extreme low price for which they are sold astonishes everybody.

Circulars sent free. Address

P. H. WAIT, Sandy Hill, N. Y.

Our Book and Tract Column

THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 10c.
An exposition of the Seven Seals. 10c.
The Slaying of the Witnesses. 10c.
A treatise on Revelation 13. In two parts. 14c.
The Kingdom of God, and Signs of the Times. 20c.
The Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. 10c.
Last-day Tokens. No. 2. 25c.
[Tokens Nos. 1 and 3 are out of print at present.]
Revelation 20 5c.
The Seven Messages of the Apocalypse. 15c; postage, 2c.
Evangels of the Coming One. 5c; postage, 2c.

The above ten works by Eld. S. S. Brewer, sent to one address, post-paid, for $1 20.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $20 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With both Greek and English index. $6 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. Price, $7 50, by express.

TWO HUNDRED STORIES For Children. By T. M. Preble. Nineteenth thousand. Illustrated. 264 pp. 75c. post-paid; $6 a dozen. One of the best books for children ever published. Never fails to interest.

YOUNG PILGRIM STORIES. By "Uncle Pilgrim." Just the thing for our young folks. Two vols. $1 postage, 16c. Single volume 60c.; postage, 8c.

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH. A History of the Doctrine of the Millennium. By Henry Dana Ward. 130 pp. 20c.

ADVENTISM. In two parts. I. Its Relations to Theology; II. Its Relations to Prophecy; by Wm. Sheldon. 217 pp. Paper covers, 30c.

THE PRESENT TRUTH; or, Meat in Due Season. An interesting prophetic resume and argument. By Eld. J. Wendall. 48 pp. 10c.

THE NATURE AND DURATION of Future Punishment. By Henry Constable. Prebendary of Cork, Ireland. Irrefutable arguments.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.---NO. 33. BUCHANAN, MARCH 12, 1872. WHOLE NO. 413.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, March 12, 1872.

A man walking through the deep snow, heard his oldest son saying, "I'll step in father's tracks." He was trying to do it, and two younger brothers were at the same thing. The father went to the house of prayer that evening thinking, "If I lead my sons thus, I'll make tracks for heaven."

Special Conference Report.

In accordance with the published invitation of the A. C. church of Worcester, Mass., a special conference was held in their chapel, beginning on Tuesday, Feb. 6th, and continuing over the following Sunday. The object of this meeting was to examine the evidences relating to the time of the Lord's return to earth, and from the large attendance from abroad, particularly of preachers, it was very evident there was a great interest felt in the subject. Besides Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and Connecticut were represented.

First Day. The afternoon of Tuesday was spent in prayer and exhortation, and by the spirit manifested in this first meeting, it became evident that this special gathering of saints was to be of more than special interest. In in the evening Br. Simpson occupied the pulpit, and briefly dwelt upon the various chronological and prophetic periods which would be likely to come before the meeting for discussion. The effort seemed designed not so much to confirm any special theory, as it was to show the relation the periods had to the time of the Lord's coming, and also their relation to one another.

Second Day. On Wednesday morning, at ten o'clock, Dr. H. W. Buxton, in behalf of the Worcester brethren, formally welcomed those present, assuring them that their coming together as they had was an event that gave great pleasure to the church, and that their hearts and homes were open to welcome them. The conference was then formally opened by appointing C. F Horn Chairman, and C. E. Barnes Secretary. The rule relating to the addresses was, that those desiring to address the meeting should hand their names to the Chairman, and speak in the order said names were presented, each address not to exceed an hour and a half. Br. L. T. Cunningham was the first to take the floor, and occupied about forty minutes. The "points" in his speech were (1) that the definite time regarding the time of the Lord's second coming is in the Bible; namely, the several prophetic periods; and (2) that they are to be understood, inasmuch as that all inspiration is profitable (2 Tim. 3: 16), and these cannot be profitable except they be understood. (3) He argued that the taking away of the "daily," and the setting up of the "abomination" (Dan. 12: 11), was fulfilled in the taking away of paganism, and establishment of papacy; (4) that the 1290 days are to be reckoned from 508 A. D., when paganism was removed from Rome, and the 1260 days from 538 A. D., when the papacy was established, thus terminating both periods in 1798 A. D. (5) The 1335 days are to be reckoned from the establishment of papacy, and extend to 1873 A. D., at which time Christ will redeem his people.

After a short time spent in general comment on the forgoing, Br. A. Simpson addressed the meeting. He did not differ materially from Br. C. and spent thirty-five minutes in confirming him in his applications of the prophetic numbers. He advanced, in addition to Br. C., the following: (1) "The holy city," (Rev. 11: 2) is the church of God: (2) the "two witnesses," represent the Bible during the treading under foot of the holy city; (3) Rev. 13: 10 was fulfilled when the pope was taken captive in 1798 A. D.; (4) Rev. 13: 2 has its fulfillment as follows: the "power" was given to the pope in 533 by Justinian, but the "seat" not until 538. From this period the papacy was supreme just 1260 years. In proving the correctness of the foregoing positions, he read quite copiously from a number of historians, such as Gibbon, Allison, Thiers, King, Marsh, and others.

A rule controling those who wish to question the speakers was, that questions should be written and handed to the Chairman. In the P. M. Br. C. answered a number, among which were the following; (1) What event marked the taking away of the "daily?" Answer: The conversion of the ten kings of divided Rome to Christianity. (2) What constitutes the "little horn" of Dan. 8? Answer: It refers to Rome. The "little horn" is synonymous with the fourth beast of Dan. 7.

Br. Henry Pratt next took the stand for an hour, and gave an exposition of Dan. 8: 13, 14. His object was to prove that the 2300 days end with the 1335 days. Once his brethren had seven years intervene, and now bu two, and he hoped ere long to see them agreeing that they end simultaneously. In proving that they end in 1873, he located the termination of the seventy weeks in A. D. 63, at which time the Jewish war began. To prove this Josephus was read by the speaker quite extensively. This claim brought on quite an animated discussion as to the beginning of the Jewish war, some claiming that it began in 65 A. D., and others in 63. To prove their respective points, both parties appealed to Josephus, and both sides ceased very confident of having gained their respective positions.

Before adjourning, it was voted to spend two hours each day during the meeting in a general Bible class; namely, from nine to ten o'clock A. M., and from four to five o'clock P. M., each speaker to be limited to five minutes. Adjourned to ten o'clock A. M.

Third Day. After the meeting was called to order and opened with prayer Br. Orion Green addressed the meeting fifty minutes. This speaker differed from those of the day before, in that he terminated the seventy weeks of Dan. 9 at the end of the Jewish war, which he located in A. D. 70. He claimed that the remaining 1810 days (during which Jerusalem was to be trodden down by the Gentiles) begin at this point, thus ending them in 1880.

The next speaker was Br. Edward Daniels, who occupied about fifteen minutes. His claims were (1), that the 1260 years of papal supremacy ended in 1871, when Victor Emmanuel entered Rome. He referred to no event to mark the commencement of them. (2) He also claimed that the "two-horned beast" of Rev. 13 is Victor Emmanuel, though he made no effort to identify the two horns.

Br. N. H. Barbour next took the stand, and gave a brief exposition of Rev. 13. His positions were as follows; (1) The "beast," (v. 2) is the papacy. (2) The "image of the beast" is papacy restored, which restoration was brought about by the first Napoleon. (3) The "two-horned beast" is the two Napoleons. Napoleon I. gave life to the "image," or restored papacy, and Napoleon III. sustained it until he fell, and then the "image" fell also. In establishing the above, he argued that the allied powers, or Holy Alliance, could not be the "image," as some claimed. Time, fifteen minutes.

The foregoing elicited considerable discussion, after which Br. S. S. Brewer took the floor, and gave his views of the chapter. (1) The phrase, "he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him" was explained: "before" does not mean priority in point of time, but in presence of. (2) The "two-horned beast" is papacy; the "image" is its system of worship. The features attributed to this power from v. 12 to v. 18 are exactly fulfilled in papacy. At the request of one of the brethren, Br. B. then read the paraphrase of Father Miller on this chapter, after which the meeting adjourned to two o'clock, P. M.

In the afternoon, after some promiscuous discussion, Br. G. W. Brown occupied the pulpit and presented his ideas in the form of a sermon on Rev. 11; 1, 2, as follows: (1) The "angel" is identical with the one of the preceding chapter, and also with the one in chapter 24: 6. It is the Advent angel, or people who are proclaiming the advent. (2) The "temple of God" mentioned in the text, is the Christian church. (3) The "man of sin" was to sit in this temple. He did obtain this seat in the church of Rome, 538 A. D. (4) The "forty-two months" reach to 1798 and the 1335 days, beginning at the same point, reach to 1873, at which time Christ will return to earth. Time sixty minutes. Adjourned to ten o'clock, A. M.

Fourth Day. Met according to adjournment. After prayer, Br. Barbour addressed the meeting for the purpose of showing that the six thousand years of the world's history since the creation of man, will end with the year 1872 A. D. His measurements were as follows:—

From	creation to end of flood	1656	yrs.
"	flood to death of Terah	427	"
"	Abrahamic cov. to giving of law	430	"
"	exodus to sending of spies	1	"
"	sending of spies to division of land	45	"
"	division of land to Samuel	450	"
"	Samuel (under kings) to Zedekiah	513	"
"	Zedekiah to end of captivity	70	"
"	end of captivity to first year of Cyrus (536 B. C.) to Anno Domini	536	"
"	A. D. to 1872	1872	"
		6000	"

Having thus presented his chronology, Br. B. next presented an argument concerning the punishment of Israel, "double," founded on of Jer. 16: 13–18. He claimed that the "double" punishment would extend beyond their rejection eighteen hundred years ago, a period of time equal to what they had existed at that time. At the time of their rejection (A. D. 30) they had existed as a nation eighteen hundred and forty-three years; to be punished "double" would be to extend their desolation an equal period beyond, which would accomplish their punishment in 1873. In proving the foregoing, Br. B. argued that the Jewish nationality began at the death of Jacob, from which event the coming of Shiloh (which was when Christ entered upon his ministry, in A. D. 30, according to Br. B.), there were eighteen hundred and forty-three years, which he reckoned as follows:—

From	Jacob's death to giving of law	198	yrs.
"	giving of law to sending of spies	1	"
"	sending of spies to division of land	45	"
"	division of land to Samuel	450	"
"	Samuel (under kings) to Zedekiah	513	"
"	Zedekiah to end of captivity	70	"
"	end of captivity to first year of Cyrus (536 B. C.) to Anno Domini	536	"
"	A. D. to coming of Shiloh	30	"
		1843	"

This is the period of their existence as a nation up to their rejection, from which the "double" is to be reckoned bringing us to 1873, at which time Israel will be gathered. Following this the speaker gave an exposition of the parable of the ten virgins (Mat. 25), in which he claimed that the Advent people since '43 had fulfilled it exactly.

The preceeding expositions gave rise to a general discussion, which was terminated by voting, on motion of Br. W. N. Pile, that the afternoon session from one to three o'clock be spent in a discussion between Brn. Simpson and Cunningham, and Br. Barbour (the latter to have half the time), in order to learn wherein the variation of two years occurred between their respective chronologies, that of Br. B. ending the six thousand years in 1873, while Brn. S. and C.'s extended to '75. Adjourned to one o'clock P. M.

Met according to adjournment. Br. Simpson took the stand, and gave the following as being his system of chronology:—

From	creation of man to flood	1656	yrs.
"	beginning to end of flood	1	"
"	flood to end of Noah's age	427	"
"	Noachic age to giving of law	430	"
Sojourn in wilderness		40	"
Under Joshua		26	"
Anarchy		18	"
Judges		450	"
Samuel		12	"
Kings		[illegible]	"
From	captivity to first of Cyrus	70	"
"	Cyrus to Christ	[illegible]	"
"	Christ to A. D.	5	"
		4126	"

From the expiration of Br. S.'s time (each speaker being allowed ten minutes), until four o'clock, the time was spent in discussion between Br. Barbour on one side, and Brn. Simpson and Cunningham on the other. Br. Barbor claimed their chronology was wrong in the addition of one year for the duration of the flood, whereas he claimed the sixteen hundred and fifty-six years from creation included the year of the flood. The discussion of this point consumed the greater portion of the time, in which discussion Br. B. showed plainly and unmistakably that in this place his opponents had inserted a year which did not belong there. His proof was in Gen. 7; 11; 8: 13; and 9: 28, 29. By referring to the tables above, the reader will perceive wherein the variation occurs. His opponents did not acknowledge the mistake, although the feeling was almost universal among the listeners that they should have done so, as Br. Barbour, on this point at least, was decidedly in the right.

Br. Cunningham's speeches during this discussion were mainly for the object of proving Br. B.'s reckoning wrong in dating the first year of Cyrus in 536 B. C. He argued that at the birth of the Messiah was to be sixty-nine weeks or four hundred and eighty-three years from the going forth of the commandment to restore and rebuild Jerusalem; and as Christ was born five years before A. D., the years would extend backward to 488 B. C. Now as Cyrus issued this decree in the first year of his reign (Ezra 1), it follows that 488 B. C., is the correct date. Although the two chronologies differ but two years in their termination, it must be evident to all that there is really a much greater difference between them, as at the first year of Cyrus they are forty-eight years apart. Query. This being so, how is it they can be made to come out so near together? Surely there must be a gross error somewhere.

[We do not learn from the "Report" to which day the following notes belong.—ED.]

On motion of E. G. Higgins, E. P. Woodward was appointed Secretary in absence of C. E. Barnes.

Barbour—Br. Cunningham said that these events might go beyond the seventy weeks. It seems to me that when the events are finished the weeks must be.

Cunningham—I did not mean that they were specific events which commenced at a definite point, and ended at a definite point. There was nothing to specify when he should be born in the seventy weeks.

Pratt—In his prayer, Daniel refers to his covenant by Moses, and says he has confirmed his word. If the covenant is to be blessing, to confirm it is to bring blessings, and vice versa. The leader is to be the man of fierce countenance, who is to destroy the city. Titus comes, and does he do these things? The Savior says these be the days of vengeance. The transgression is to be restrained four hundred and ninety years, and then the Romans come. When the time is out, they come, confirm the covenant, destroy the city, and take away the sacrifices.

Pile—A covenant is an agreement between two parties. It always has its sanctions, that is, penalties attached to it, in case of breach. If the people broke it then the curses came upon them. What covenant was this, the old or the new? If one ends with Christ, how could it relate to the Jews? And about the seven weeks, and the sixty-two weeks, are they separate or joined?

Ewell—The question looks clear to me. How much of the time belongs to the Jews? Seventy weeks. If I lease a house for five years, it is not for four years and eleven months, but for five years. If I do not comply with the terms of the lease, when the time has expired the owner has control of of the house. It will take him some time to get possession, perhaps seven days.

Brown—There were two covenants made with the Jews. The one referred to by Daniel is in Deut. 29: 28. Gabriel comes along and says, I have come forth to give thee skill; therefore understand the matter. What matter? The matter you have been praying about. In regard to the "new covenant" it is not spoken of at all in Dan. 9. There are seventy weeks to restrain the evil that is to come upon you. When they are run out, the people of the Prince shall confirm the covenant for one week, and cause the sacrifice to cease, and cease forever. They will take away all you have. We do not

(Continued on page 263.)

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. IX.—NO. 33. BUCHANAN, MARCH 12, 1872. WHOLE NO. 413.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, - - - - - - MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, March 12, 1872.

A man walking through the deep snow, hea.d his oldest son saying, "I'll step in father's tracks." He was trying to do it, and two younger brothers were at the same thing. The father went to the house of prayer that evening thinking, "If I lead my sons thus, I'll make tracks for heaven."

Special Conference Report.

In accordance with the published invitation of the A. C. church of Worcester, Mass., a special conference was held in their chapel, beginning on Tuesday, Feb. 6th, and continuing over the following Sunday. The object of this meeting was to examine the evidences relating to the time of the Lord's return to earth, and from the large attendance from abroad, particularly of preachers, it was very evident there was a great interest felt in the subject. Besides Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and Connecticut were represented.

First Day. The afternoon of Tuesday was spent in prayer and exhortation, and by the spirit manifested in this first meeting, it became evident that this special gathering of saints was to be of more than special interest. In in the evening Br. Simpson occupied the pulpit, and briefly dwelt upon the various chronological and prophetic periods which would be likely to come before the meeting for discussion. The effort seemed designed not so much to confirm any special theory, as it was to show the relation the periods had to the time of the Lord's coming, and also their relation to one another.

Second Day. On Wednesday morning, at ten o'clock, Dr. H. W. Buxton, in behalf of the Worcester brethren, formally welcomed those present, assuring them that their coming together as they had was an event that gave great pleasure to the church, and that their hearts and homes were open to welcome them. The conference was then formally opened by appointing C. F Horn Chairman, and C. E. Barnes Secretary. The rule relating to the addresses was, that those desiring to address the meeting should hand their names to the Chairman, and speak in the order said names were presented, each address not to exceed an hour and a half. Br. L. T. Cunningham was the first to take the floor, and occupied about forty minutes. The "points" in his speech were (1) that the definite time regarding the time of the Lord's second coming is in the Bible; namely, the several prophetic periods; and (2) that they are to be understood, inasmuch as that all inspiration is profitable (2 Tim. 3: 16), and these cannot be profitable except they be understood. (3) He argued that the taking away of the "daily," and the setting up of the "abomination" (Dan. 12: 11), was fulfilled in the taking away of paganism, and establishment of papacy; (4) that the 1290 days are to be reckoned from 508 A. D., when paganism was removed from Rome, and the 1260 days from 538 A. D., when the papacy was established, thus terminating both periods in 1798 A. D. (5) The 1335 days are to be reckoned from the establishment of papacy, and extend to 1873 A. D., at which time Christ will redeem his people.

After a short time spent in general comment on the forgoing, Br. A. Simpson addressed the meeting. He did not differ materially from Br. C. and spent thirty-five minutes in confirming him in his applications of the prophetic numbers. He advanced, in addition to Br. C., the following: (1) "The holy city," (Rev. 11: 2) is the church of God: (2) the "two witnesses," represent the Bible during the treading under foot of the holy city; (3) Rev. 13: 10 was fulfilled when the pope was taken captive in 1798 A. D.; (4) Rev. 13: 2 has its fulfillment as follows: the "power" was given to the pope in 533 by Justinian, but the "seat" not until 538. From this period the papacy was supreme just 1260 years. In proving the correctness of the foregoing positions, he read quite copiously from a number of historians, such as Gibbon, Allison, Thiers, King, Marsh, and others.

A rule controling those who wish to question the speakers was, that questions should be written and handed to the Chairman. In the P. M. Br. C. answered a number, among which were the following; (1) What event marked the taking away of the "daily?" Answer: The conversion of the ten kings of divided Rome to Christianity. (2) What constitutes the "little horn" of Dan. 8? Answer: It refers to Rome. The "little horn" is synonymous with the fourth beast of Dan. 7.

Br. Henry Pratt next took the stand for an hour, and gave an exposition of Dan. 8: 13, 14. His object was to prove that the 2300 days end with the 1335 days. Once his brethren had seven years intervene, and now bu two, and he hoped ere long to see them agreeing that they end simultaneously. In proving that they end in 1873, he located the termination of the seventy weeks in A. D. 63, at which time the Jewish war began. To prove this Josephus was read by the speaker quite extensively. This claim brought on quite an animated discussion as to the beginning of the Jewish war, some claiming that it began in 65 A. D., and others in 63. To prove their respective points, both parties appealed to Josephus, and both sides ceased very confident of having gained their respective positions.

Before adjourning, it was voted to spend two hours each day during the meeting in a general Bible class; namely, from nine to ten o'clock A. M., and from four to five o'clock P. M., each speaker to be limited to five minutes. Adjourned to ten o'clock A. M.

Third Day. After the meeting was called to order and opened with prayer Br. Orion Green addressed the meeting fifty minutes. This speaker differed from those of the day before, in that he terminated the seventy weeks of Dan. 9 at the end of the Jewish war, which he located in A. D. 70. He claimed that the remaining 1810 days (during which Jerusalem was to be trodden down by the Gentiles) begin at this point, thus ending them in 1880.

The next speaker was Br. Edward Daniels, who occupied about fifteen minutes. His claims were (1), that the 1260 years of papal supremacy ended in 1871, when Victor Emmanuel entered Rome. He referred to no event to mark the commencement of them. (2) He also claimed that the "two-horned beast" of Rev. 13 is Victor Emmanuel, though he made no effort to identify the two horns.

Br. N. H. Barbour next took the stand, and gave a brief exposition of Rev. 13. His positions were as follows; (1) The "beast," (v. 2) is the papacy. (2) The "image of the beast" is papacy restored, which restoration was brought about by the first Napoleon. (3) The "two-horned beast" is the two Napoleons. Napoleon I. gave life to the "image," or restored papacy, and Napoleon III. sustained it until he fell, and then the "image" fell also. In establishing the above, he argued that the allied powers, or Holy Alliance, could not be the "image," as some claimed. Time, fifteen minutes.

The foregoing elicited considerable discussion, after which Br. S. S. Brewer took the floor, and gave his views of the chapter. (1) The phrase, "he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him" was explained: "before" does not mean priority in point of time, but in presence of. (2) The "two-horned beast" is papacy; the "image" is its system of worship. The features attributed to this power from v. 12 to v. 18 are exactly fulfilled in papacy. At the request of one of the brethren, Br. B. then read the paraphrase of Father Miller on this chapter, after which the meeting adjourned to two o'clock, P. M.

In the afternoon, after some promiscuous discussion, Br. G. W. Brown occupied the pulpit and presented his ideas in the form of a sermon on Rev. 11: 1, 2, as follows: (1) The "angel" is identical with the one of the preceding chapter, and also with the one in chapter 24: 6. It is the Advent angel, or people who are proclaiming the advent. (2) The "temple of God" mentioned in the text, is the Christian church. (3) The "man of sin" was to sit in this temple. He did obtain this seat in the church of Rome, 538 A. D. (4) The "forty-two months" reach to 1798 and the 1335 days, beginning at the same point, reach to 1873, at which time Christ will return to earth. Time sixty minutes. Adjourned to ten o'clock, A. M.

Fourth Day. Met according to adjournment. After prayer, Br. Barbour addressed the meeting for the purpose of showing that the six thousand years of the world's history since the creation of man, will end with the year 1872 A. D. His measurements were as follows:—

From	creation to end of flood	1656	yrs.
"	flood to death of Terah	427	"
"	Abrahamic cov. to giving of law	430	"
"	exodus to sending of spies	1	"
"	sending of spies to division of land	45	"
"	division of land to Samuel	450	"
"	Samuel (under kings) to Zedekiah	512	"
"	Zedekiah to end of captivity	70	"
"	end of captivity to first year of Cyrus (536 B. C.) to Anno Domini	536	"
"	A. D. to 1873	1873	"
		6000	"

Having thus presented his chronology, Br. B. next presented an argument concerning the punishment of Israel, "double," founded on of Jer. 16: 13–18. He claimed that the "double" punishment would extend beyond their rejection eighteen hundred years ago, a period of time equal to what they had existed at that time. At the time of their rejection (A. D. 30) they had existed as a nation eighteen hundred and forty-three years; to be punished "double" would be to extend their desolation an equal period beyond, which would accomplish their punishment in 1873. In proving the foregoing, Br. B. argued that the Jewish nationality began at the death of Jacob, from which event the coming of Shiloh (which was when Christ entered upon his ministry, in A. D. 30, according to Br. B.), there were eighteen hundred and forty-three years, which he reckoned as follows:—

From	Jacob's death to giving of law	198	yrs.
"	giving of law to sending of spies	1	"
"	sending of spies to division of land	46	"
"	division of land to Samuel	450	"
"	Samuel (under kings) to Zedekiah	512	"
"	Zedekiah to end of captivity	70	"
"	end of captivity to first year of Cyrus (536 B. C.) to Anno Domini	536	"
"	A. D. to coming of Shiloh	30	"
		1843	"

This is the period of their existence as a nation up to their rejection, from which the "double" is to be reckoned bringing us to 1873, at which time Israel will be gathered. Following this the speaker gave an exposition of the parable of the ten virgins (Mat. 25), in which he claimed that the Advent people since '43 had fulfilled it exactly.

The proceeding expositions gave rise to a general discussion, which was terminated by voting, on motion of Br. W. N. Pile, that the afternoon session from one to three o'clock be spent in a discussion between Brn. Simpson and Cunningham, and Br. Barbour (the latter to have half the time), in order to learn wherein the variation of two years occurred between their respective chronologies, that of Br. B. ending the six thousand years in 1873, while Brn. S. and C.'s extended to '75. Adjourned to one o'clock P. M.

Met according to adjournment. Br. Simpson took the stand, and gave the following as being his system of chronology:—

From	creation of man to flood	1656	yrs.
"	beginning to end of flood	1	"
"	flood to end of Noah's age	427	"
"	Noachic age to giving of law	430	"
Sojourn in wilderness		40	"
Under Joshua		25	"
Anarchy		18	"
Judges		450	"
Samuel		12	"
Kings		509	"
From	captivity to first of Cyrus	70	"
"	Cyrus to Christ	483	"
"	Christ to A. D.	5	"
		4126	"

From the expiration of Br. S.'s time (each speaker being allowed ten minutes), until four o'clock, the time was spent in discussion between Br. Barbour on one side, and Brn. Simpson and Cunningham on the other. Br. Barbor claimed their chronology was wrong in the addition of one year for the duration of the flood, whereas he claimed the sixteen hundred and fifty-six years from creation included the year of the flood. The discussion of this point consumed the greater portion of the time, in which discussion Br. B. showed plainly and unmistakably that in this place his opponents had inserted a year which did not belong there. His proof was in Gen. 7: 11; 8: 13; and 9: 28, 29. By referring to the tables above, the reader will perceive wherein the variation occurs. His opponents did not acknowledge the mistake, although the feeling was almost universal among the listeners that they should have done so, as Br. Barbour, on this point at least, was decidedly in the right.

Br. Cunningham's speeches during this discussion were mainly for the object of proving Br. B.'s reckoning wrong in dating the first year of Cyrus in 536 B. C. He argued that at the birth of the Messiah was to be sixty-nine weeks or four hundred and eighty-three years from the going forth of the commandment to restore and rebuild Jerusalem; and as Christ was born five years before A. D., the years would extend backward to 488 B. C. Now as Cyrus issued this decree in the first year of his reign (Ezra 1), it follows that 488 B. C., is the correct date. Although the two chronologies differ but two years in their termination, it must be evident to all that there is really a much greater difference between them, as at the first year of Cyrus they are forty-eight years apart. Query. This being so, how is it they can be made to come out so near together? Surely there must be a gross error somewhere.

[We do not learn from the "Report" to which day the following notes belong.—ED.]

On motion of E. G. Higgins, E. P. Woodward was appointed Secretary in absence of C. E. Barnes.

Barbour—Br. Cunningham said that these events might go beyond the seventy weeks. It seems to me that when the events are finished the weeks must be.

Cunningham—I did not mean that they were specific events which commenced at a definite point, and ended at a definite point. There was nothing to specify when he should be born in the seventy weeks.

Pratt—In his prayer, Daniel refers to his covenant by Moses, and says he has confirmed his word. If the covenant is to be blessing, to confirm it is to bring blessings, and vice versa. The leader is to be the man of fierce countenance, who is to destroy the city. Titus comes, and does he do these things? The Savior says these be the days of vengeance. The transgression is to be restrained four hundred and ninety years, and then the Romans come. When the time is out, they come, confirm the covenant, destroy the city, and take away the sacrifices.

Pile—A covenant is an agreement between two parties. It always has its sanctions, that is, penalties attached to it, in case of breach. If the people broke it then the curses came upon them. What covenant was this, the old or the new? If one ends with Christ, how could it relate to the Jews? And about the seven weeks, and the sixty-two weeks, are they separate or joined?

Ewell—The question looks clear to me. How much of the time belongs to the Jews? Seventy weeks. If I lease a house for five years, it is not for four years and eleven months, but for five years. If I do not comply with the terms of the lease, when the time has expired the owner has control of of the house. It will take him some time to get possession, perhaps seven days.

Brown—There were two covenants made with the Jews. The one referred to by Daniel is in Deut. 29: 28. Gabriel comes along and says, I have come forth to give thee skill; therefore understand the matter. What matter? The matter you have been praying about. In regard to the "new covenant" it is not spoken of at all in Dan. 9. There are seventy weeks to restrain the evil that is to come upon you. When they are run out, the people of the Prince shall confirm the covenant for one week, and cause the sacrifice to cease, and cease forever. They will take away all you have. We do not

(Continued on page 263.)

Lines.

Dedicated to Br. A. S. Fuller, in his deep affliction, caused by the death of his companion.

Dear Brother: Thou art weeping
For the loved of other days,
Torn from your embrace, and sleeping
In the cold and silent grave.

Treasures that to you were precious,
Treasured jewels of your heart,
Passed away to sleep in Jesus
Till you meet no more to part.

Courage, brother, cease your mourning;
Soon will come the glorious day;
Soon will break the eternal morning,
Chasing sin and death away.

Through thy blinding tears of sorrow,
Brother, see the day star rise:
Sweetly dawns the happy morrow
That drives the tears from weeping eyes.

Soon in that bright world of gladness
Where no tear-drop dims the eye,
Where no heart is grieved with sadness,
Where no mourner heaves a sigh,

You may meet in Eden's bowers
In that happy deathless land,
Where shall bloom unfading flowers;
Where is seen no broken band;

Meet beyond the world's commotion;
Meet where death is known no more;
Meet beyond life's surging ocean;
Meet where parting comes no more.

H. G. McCULLOCK.

Communications.

Bible vs. Wesley.

In his sermon on "Hell," Wesley (vol. 2, p. 151.) tries to prove the wicked will not necessarily be consumed by the fires of hell because there are some things now existing that fire will not consume. In illustration he refers to a species of flax called Linum Asbestum, which may be put into the hottest fire and yet will come out unhurt by the flames. Then he says here is a substance which is "as it were an emblem of things to come."

Now if this or any other incombustible material were truly an emblem of things to come, the indestructibility of of the wicked would be fairly proved; indeed, it would be proved beyond all controversy that as far as being consumed is concerned, the fires of the judgment day would not affect the unsaved at all; but when we turn to the Scriptures we find that incombustible material is not an emblem of the wicked in hell. Not in a single instance is such a figure used to illustrate their punishment. John the Baptist, James, Peter, Paul and John the evangelist all mention the subject many times, and whenever they illustrate their sayings on this subject they invariably allude to perishable and combustible objects.

John the Baptist compares the wicked to "chaff," which will be "burned up in unquenchable fire (Mat. 3: 12)." James alludes to the grass and the flower which wither and fade, and perish beneath the burning heat of the sun, and then says "so shall the rich man fade away in his ways." (Jas. 1: 11.) Peter speaks of certain ones that as natural brute beasts made to be taken and destroyed "shall utterly perish in their own corruption." (2 Pet. 2: 12.)

Mr. Wesley, believing the wicked will abide forever, is consistent in using that for an emblem which fire will not burn; had he chosen as an emblem that which fire wholly consumes and burns up, to illustrate what will never be consumed nor burned up, he surely would have been inconsistent, and it certainly follows that if the New Testament writers above alluded to believed with Wesley and others, that the wicked would neve be consumed, they made choice of very poor figures to illustrate that doctrine; but instead of charging them with inconsistency in making such a selection of emblems, I believe their figures were aptly chosen to illustrate the words and phrases they made use of, when speaking of this solemn subject.

In this connection it may be well to notice how Mr. Wesley comes into direct conflict with the express declarations of Scripture. He argues that it will be possible for the wicked to be burned in the fires of hell without being consumed. He here evidently uses the word consume in its common obvious sense, and in this same sense it is unquestionably used in the Scriptures, only with this difference: Wesley says the wicked will not be consumed, while the Bible declares they shall be consumed. (Ps. 37: 20; 104: 35.)

Of course Mr. Wesley did not intend to thus come in contact with the teachings of the Book he loved. It is owing to the doctrine he advocated. To illustrate it, the figures and phrases of Scripture are insufficient. Suppose in preaching the advocates of the doctrine of eternal misery were to confine themselves to Scripture expressions, how could they declare such a doctrine by saying the wicked shall perish, shall be destroyed, shall be consumed, shall be burned up, shall be as though they had not been? And yet these are the express words of Scripture used to denote the final condition of the lost. It therefore follows that the doctrine is not true.

In Ex. 3: 2, in speaking of Moses, the record says, "The angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked and behold the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed." Here is a wondrous miracle: combustible material wrapped in flames and yet unconsumed! As long as the bush remained unconsumed while the fire was in the midst of it, so long must God have interposed by a special miracle.

Now all must admit that if men's bodies as now constituted were subjected to fire, they would soon be consumed; and it must be also admitted that when cast into gehenna (Mat. 5: 20), the body will then be consumed, unless God interposes by a special miracle, as he did in the case of the burning bush. But where in the Bible is it intimated that the bodies of wicked men will be made incorruptible, that they may thus be unconsumed? Such a passage cannot be found.

Our Savior was aware of the miracle wrought at the burning bush, as he alluded to it in his talk with the Sadducees. (Lk. 20: 37.) Now what an excellent figure to illustrate the indestructibility of the lost this would be—much superior to Wesley's Linum Asbestum—if they are indestructible. Why then did not our Savior compare them to it? Further, why did he, instead of so doing, use figures which can only symbolize destructibility? Said he, "If a man abide not in me he is cast forth an dis withered, and men gather them, and cast them into the fire and they are burned." (John 15: 6.) In the world's harvest he will say to the reapers, "Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them." (Mat. 13: 30.)

Candor must confess that abiding forever is not prefigured by such illustrations; hence we may conclude Jesus did not intend to prefigure it. All his illustrations drawn from nature are found to be very apt. How correctly and truthfully does his allusion to the shepherd searching for the lost sheep illustrate his own mission to save a lost world. How apt is the lesson drawn from the parable of the barren fig tree in showing the unfruitfulness of many in the Lord's moral vineyard. And how beautifully does the parable of the vine and its branches illustrate the dependence of disciples upon their Master In these and all his parables we see the truth illustrated by the figure most exactly; we see no defect, and if it be admitted that his figures to illustrate the final punishment of the wicked are apt, then it must be conceded that as they do not at all symbolize eternal duration, but rather a total consumption, therefore total consumption is what he meant to teach.

What a contrast between the figure used by our Savior and the one by Mr. Wesley! One compares the wicked to tares which the flames devour and consume, the other to a material which the hottest fire will not even scorch! Can it be possible that two such opposite figures illustrate one and the same effect? No! such opposite figures represent widely different effects; one suggests the idea of eternal duration, the other that of destruction. Which shall we adopt?

C. E. BARNES.

The Power of Long Cherished Opinions.

There are perhaps [illegible] experiences more disagreeable [illegible] journey through life than to be forced to seriously doubt the correctness of long and fondly cherished religious opinions. When our minds were young and plastic those impressions were communicated, and fixed themselves almost indelibly there, and they cannot be effaced even when discovered to be wrong without the most painful mental exercise; I still remember the severe mental struggles which for months I sustained, when the faith which my fathers bequeathed to me was questioned. And with how much confidence I appealed to my English Bible, to sustain the almost universal belief in the natural immortality of man, and with what keen disappointment I discovered that the evidence which I had expected to find written on every page of Scripture, clear as a sunbeam, and majestic, and convincing as truth itself, was completely wanting. The Scriptures which I had hitherto believed to testify so frequently and with so much authority concerning man's immortal soul, I found on careful examination, did not once mention it; and after that discovery, whatever others might do, I at least, could not appeal to hymn book or catechism. And hymn book and catechism it must be remembered, mould the youthful mind in all the Christian denominations, both of our own and foreign lands; and we come to the study of the Bible with minds full of ideas which may have no source in the gospel, and boast of no higher authority than creed or catechism. This circumstance had its influence upon me, and for a time prevented me from seeing how clearly, by the plainest and most direct statement, by the clearest and most logical inference, by figures and parables, and in every way in which language could establish any truth did heaven-inspired language establish that sin must come to an end and evil be destroyed forever. The discovery at first perplexed me. How could a truth have lain so plainly on the pages of inspiration and generations of good men have passed away without seeing it? And how do thousands of professed Christians of our own time, live and die without seeing it now? These facts (and facts are stubborn things) looked me fairly in the face and demanded a satisfactory solution. They admitted neither of suppression nor of evasion, but called for an honest and reasonable explanation. I looked back on the history of the past, and found that it was altogether in accordance with fact for an overwhelming majority to be wrong, and a feeble minority to be right. Not only did the cases of Noah and Lot rise up before me and bear very emphatic testimony to this truth, but the still more important and convincing case of the almost entire Jewish people, especially the educated and religious classes, rejecting the Messiah, whilst a mere handful of the "poor people heard him gladly," conclusively proved that even religious majorities, no matter how numerous or educated, are no guarantee for purity of doctrine. And the same truth has received additional illustration nearer our own times, in the necessity which existed for Protestant reformation, in which Luther bore such an honorable part.

Rome, though believing herself Christian nay even the divinely appointed custodian and exponent of God's truth, had, nevertheless, even in a greater degree than the Pharisees of old, "made void the law of God through her traditions;" and having herself dimmed the lustre of every cardinal truth from Genesis to Revelation, she was not slow to brand with heresy the audacious inquirer, whose only crime consisted in seeking to sweep away the priestly rubbish of her invention, which for centuries had supplanted the divine glories of God's revelation. And less pretentious errorists have manifested a strange disposition to imitate, at least in this respect, the great apostasy, and denounce as heretics, infidels, materialists, etc., opponents who profess very energetically to cherish, even as did Saul of Tarsus, "the hope of the gospel," but who nevertheless pay a strange disregard to epithet, however terrible, calmly inviting an appeal to reason and Scripture instead.

The reformers of the sixteenth century were similarly assailed; still their work, toilsome and difficult though it was, was too important to be abandoned because of the opposition which ignorance and prejudice everywhere aroused. They continued to bring, one by one to the light of day, the long hidden truths of the gospel, and rejoiced to know that their long seclusion had in no degree diminished their value, though Rome's adherents, educated and ignorant alike (and millions of professed Christians were Rome's adherents then), branded them as new and strange doctrine, discovered but yesterday, whilst her traditions could boast of a history of centuries. The Reformers, however, found them in God's word and knew that though for centuries they had been hidden and neglected, that circumstance had no power to diminish their value to them, now that they were discovered, any more than the circumstance that so many honest, educated and good men had passed away without seeing them. Prophet and apostle had each delivered his heaven-inspired message, so divinely adapted to soothe and sanctify the human heart; and though Satan had contrived to neutralize the blessing, by prompting the apostate church to misrepresent and pervert them, still there they stood indelibly fixed on the pages of inspiration, ready to communicate, as of old, their message of life and love to perishing man the moment that the misrepresentation was removed, or the perversion detected. And this work Luther and his associates effected, so far as they had light and opportunity. And although theirs, like all human efforts, were far from perfect, we must not fail to remember that their education and early training had been received amid all the intoxicating influences of Rome's apostasy; that their natural prejudices were, perhaps, as strong as those of their fellows, that they had to grope their way to the light of truth amid all the bewilderment that false teaching so long imbibed, is so well calculated to produce, and therefore if they have left some great error untouched, or apprehended its deformity so faintly as to give it at least some place in that reformed faith which Protestantism has accepted at their hands, so far from this being a matter of wonder, it is exactly what we might naturally expect; and whether this has been so or not, the only infallible judge—God's word—must decide. So that the question is not what majorities believe, or creeds teach, but "What saith the Lord?"

And if the natural immortality of man, and the eternal torment of the wicked are not sustained by that authority, they may and should be rejected in the nineteenth century, as were transubstantiation, purgatory, prayers to the dead, etc., in the sixteenth. If doctrines so momentous and terrible are sanctioned by the Scriptures of truth, we bow our heads in submission, and say, Amen. But if the supreme authority declares that "God only hath immortality;" that the righteous only will live for ever; that the "devil and all his works will be destroyed;" then, with lighter hearts, and clearer heads, we still say, Amen and Amen.

THOS. DAVIDSON.

A Piece of New Cloth put into an Old Garment.

It has been for some time considered a very strong argument against our views of the nearness of the judgment by the ministry who do not relish the doctrine, that the end cannot be near from the fact of the vast improvements brought about by science in all departments of mechanical and productive labor; and, second, that this earth could not be designed by God as the future home of the saints, because it was not large enough to contain one third of the saved, and consequently no such doctrine as we teach is true. This is the old garment. But a Baptist elder, of Augusta, has lately put a new piece into it. A sister who was a member of the church visited him not long since, and he, being aware that she was fond of meeting in church with the believers in the speedy coming of the Savior thought it a good time to set her right and bring her back from the low grounds of "materialism," (as he called it). So he commenced and showed her the old argument (or garment), and then introduced the new piece.

"Dear sister, if God had ever intended any material home for his people he would not select this little planet, where they would be piled up in heaps, but he would have chosen Jupiter, which is 1,280 times larger than the earth. But as God had said nothing about any planet but the earth, it was evident we must understand him spiritually."

P. W. HOUGH.

The God of Abraham.

Continued from p. 256.

III. Scripture is equally conclusive as to the truth of the third argument, that at the time of the glorious appearing of our Redeemer, he will call up to meet him in the heavens his sleeping saints, then resting in their graves—this being the first resurrection—and likewise his faithful living disciples changing their mortal bodies like unto his most glorious body.

The mourning Thessalonians are comforted by the following sublime words of the apostle whose glory it was to preach "Jesus and the resurrection;" "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent [go before] them which are asleep. For the Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." (1 Thes. 4: 14.) In another place the same apostle lifts the veil from the same glory which shall be revealed.

In a paragraph (1 Cor. 15: 51) relating exclusively to believers, he dwells with rapture upon the scene. "Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."—(i. e. "we who are alive and remain"). "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." Sublime words are these, with meaning so distinct and emphatic that further comment is useless. And with what earnest longing does the writer himself press toward the prize—the first resurrection. Throwing to the winds all ideas of earthly honor, or worldly gain, or temporal enjoyment, this, this is the object of his most strenuous exertions. "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection (from among) the dead." (Phil. 3: 10.)

The Savior's words prove that his living disciples will be caught up to meet their Lord in the heavens. "I tell you in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken and the other left."

Lines.

Dedicated to Br. A. S. Fuller, in his deep affliction, caused by the death of his companion.

Dear Brother: Thou art weeping
For the loved of other days,
Torn from your embrace, and sleeping
In the cold and silent grave.

Treasures that to you were precious,
Treasured jewels of your heart,
Passed away to sleep in Jesus
Till you meet no more to part.

Courage, brother, cease your mourning;
Soon will come the glorious day;
Soon will break the eternal morning,
Chasing sin and death away.

Through thy blinding tears of sorrow,
Brother, see the day star rise:
Sweetly dawns the happy morrow
That drives the tears from weeping eyes.

Soon in that bright world of gladness
Where no tear-drop dims the eye,
Where no heart is grieved with sadness,
Where no mourner heaves a sigh,

You may meet in Eden's bowers
In that happy deathless land,
Where shall bloom unfading flowers;
Where is seen no broken hand;

Meet beyond the world's commotion;
Meet where death is known no more;
Meet beyond life's surging ocean;
Meet where parting comes no more.

H. G. McCULLOCK.

Communications.

Bible vs. Wesley.

In his sermon on "Hell," Wesley (vol. 2, p. 151.) tries to prove the wicked will not necessarily be consumed by the fires of hell because there are some things now existing that fire will not consume. In illustration he refers to a species of flax called Linum Asbestum, which may be put into the hottest fire and yet will come out unhurt by the flames. Then he says here is a substance which is "as it were an emblem of things to come."

Now if this or any other incombustible material were truly an emblem of things to come, the indestructibility of of the wicked would be fairly proved; indeed, it would be proved beyond all controversy that as far as being consumed is concerned, the fires of the judgment day would not affect the unsaved at all; but when we turn to the Scriptures we find that incombustible material is not an emblem of the wicked in hell. Not in a single instance is such a figure used to illustrate their punishment. John the Baptist, James Peter, Paul and John the evangelist all mention the subject many times, and whenever they illustrate their sayings on this subject they invariably allude to perishable and combustible objects.

John the Baptist compares the wicked to "chaff," which will be "burned up in unquenchable fire (Mat. 3: 12)." James alludes to the grass and the flower which wither and fade, and perish beneath the burning heat of the sun, and then says "so shall the rich man fade away in his ways." (Jas. 1: 11.) Peter speaks of certain ones that as natural brute beasts made to be taken and destroyed "shall utterly perish in their own corruption." (2 Pet. 2: 12.)

Mr. Wesley, believing the wicked will abide forever, is consistent in using that for an emblem which fire will not burn; had he chosen as an emblem that which fire wholly consumes and burns up, to illustrate what will never be consumed nor burned up, he surely would have been inconsistent, and it certainly follows that if the New Testament writers above alluded to believed with Wesley and others, that the wicked would neve be consumed, they made choice of very poor figures to illustrate that doctrine; but instead of charging them with inconsistency in making such a selection of emblems, I believe their figures were aptly chosen to illustrate the words and phrases they made use of, when speaking of this solemn subject.

In this connection it may be well to notice how Mr. Wesley comes into direct conflict with the express declarations of Scripture. He argues that it will be possible for the wicked to be burned in the fires of hell without being consumed. He here evidently uses the word consume in its common obvious sense, and in this same sense it is unquestionably used in the Scriptures, only with this difference: Wesley says the wicked will not be consumed, while the Bible declares they shall be consumed. (Ps. 37: 20; 104: 35.)

Of course Mr. Wesley did not intend to thus come in contact with the teachings of the Book he loved. It is owing to the doctrine he advocated. To illustrate it, the figures and phrases of Scripture are insufficient. Suppose in preaching the advocates of the doctrine of eternal misery were to confine themselves to Scripture expressions, how could they declare such a doctrine by saying the wicked shall perish, shall be destroyed, shall be consumed, shall be burned up, shall be as though they had not been? And yet these are the express words of Scripture used to denote the final condition of the lost. It therefore follows that the doctrine is not true.

In Ex. 3: 2, in speaking of Moses, the record says, "The angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked and behold the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed." Here is a wondrous miracle: combustible material wrapped in flames and yet unconsumed! As long as the bush remained unconsumed while the fire was in the midst of it, so long must God have interposed by a special miracle.

Now all must admit that if men's bodies as now constituted were subjected to fire, they would soon be consumed; and it must be also admitted that when cast into gehenna (Mat. 5: 20), the body will then be consumed, unless God interposes by a special miracle, as he did in the case of the burning bush. But where in the Bible is it intimated that the bodies of wicked men will be made incorruptible, that they may thus be unconsumed? Such a passage cannot be found.

Our Savior was aware of the miracle wrought at the burning bush, as he alluded to it in his talk with the Sadducees. (Lk. 20: 37.) Now what an excellent figure to illustrate the indestructibility of the lost this would be—much superior to Wesley's Linum Asbestum—if they are indestructible. Why then did not our Savior compare them to it? Further, why did he, instead of so doing, use figures which can only symbolize destructibility? Said he, "If a man abide not in me he is cast forth an dis withered, and men gather them, and cast them into the fire and they are burned." (John 15: 6.) In the world's harvest he will say to the reapers, "Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them." (Mat. 13: 30.)

Candor must confess that abiding forever is not prefigured by such illustrations; hence we may conclude Jesus did not intend to prefigure it. All his illustrations drawn from nature are found to be very apt. How correctly and truthfully does his allusion to the shepherd searching for the lost sheep illustrate his own mission to save a lost world. How apt is the lesson drawn from the parable of the barren fig tree in showing the unfruitfulness of many in the Lord's moral vineyard. And how beautifully does the parable of the vine and its branches illustrate the dependence of disciples upon their Master In these and all his parables we see the truth illustrated by the figure most exactly; we see no defect, and if it be admitted that his figures to illustrate the final punishment of the wicked are apt, then it must be conceded that as they do not at all symbolize eternal duration, but rather a total consumption, therefore total consumption is what he meant to teach.

What a contrast between the figure used by our Savior and the one by Mr. Wesley! One compares the wicked to tares which the flames devour and consume, the other to a material which the hottest fire will not even scorch! Can it be possible that two such opposite figures illustrate one and the same effect? No! such opposite figures represent widely different effects; one suggests the idea of eternal duration, the other that of destruction. Which shall we adopt? C. E. BARNES.

The Power of Long Ch[illegible] Opinions.

There are perhaps [illegible] experiences more disagreeable [illegible] journey through life than to be forced to seriously doubt the correctness of long and fondly cherished religious opinions. When our minds were young and plastic those impressions were communicated, and fixed themselves almost indelibly there, and they cannot be effaced even when discovered to be wrong without the most painful mental exercise; I still remember the severe mental struggles which for months I sustained, when the faith which my fathers bequeathed to me was questioned. And with how much confidence I appealed to my English Bible, to sustain the almost universal belief in the natural immortality of man, and with what keen disappointment I discovered that the evidence which I had expected to find written on every page of Scripture, clear as a sunbeam, and majestic, and convincing as truth itself, was completely wanting. The Scriptures which I had hitherto believed to testify so frequently and with so much authority concerning man's immortal soul, I found on careful examination, did not once mention it; and after that discovery, whatever others might do, I at least, could not appeal to hymn book or catechism. And hymn book and catechism it must be remembered, mould the youthful mind in all the Christian denominations, both of our own and foreign lands; and we come to the study of the Bible with minds full of ideas which may have no source in the gospel, and boast of no higher authority than creed or catechism. This circumstance had its influence upon me, and for a time prevented me from seeing how clearly, by the plainest and most direct statement, by the clearest and most logical inference, by figures and parables, and in every way in which language could establish any truth did heaven-inspired language establish that sin must come to an end and evil be destroyed forever. The discovery at first perplexed me. How could a truth have lain so plainly on the pages of inspiration and generations of good men have passed away without seeing it? And how do thousands of professed Christians of our own time, live and die without seeing it now? These facts (and facts are stubborn things) looked me fairly in the face and demanded a satisfactory solution. They admitted neither of suppression nor of evasion, but called for an honest and reasonable explanation. I looked back on the history of the past, and found that it was altogether in accordance with fact for an overwhelming majority to be wrong, and a feeble minority to be right. Not only did the cases of Noah and Lot rise up before me and bear very emphatic testimony to this truth, but the still more important and convincing case of the almost entire Jewish people, especially the educated and religious classes, rejecting the Messiah, whilst a mere handful of the "poor people heard him gladly," conclusively proved that even religious majorities, no matter how numerous or educated, are no guarantee for purity of doctrine. And the same truth has received additional illustration nearer our own times, in the necessity which existed for Protestant reformation, in which Luther bore such an honorable part.

Rome, though believing herself Christian nay even the divinely appointed custodian and exponent of God's truth, had, nevertheless, even in a greater degree than the Pharisees of old, "made void the law of God through her traditions;" and having herself dimmed the lustre of every cardinal truth from Genesis to Revelation, she was not slow to brand with heresy the audacious inquirer, whose only crime consisted in seeking to sweep away the priestly rubbish of her invention, which for centuries had supplanted the divine glories of God's revelation. And less pretentious errorists have manifested a strange disposition to imitate, at least in this respect, the great apostasy, and denounce as heretics, infidels, materialists, etc., opponents who profess very energetically to cherish, even as did Saul of Tarsus, "the hope of the gospel," but who nevertheless pay a strange disregard to epithet, however terrible, calmly inviting an appeal to reason and Scripture instead.

The reformers of the sixteenth century were similarly assailed; still their work, toilsome and difficult though it was, was too important to be abandoned because of the opposition which ignorance and prejudice everywhere aroused. They continued to bring, one by one to the light of day, the long hidden truths of the gospel, and rejoiced to know that their long seclusion had in no degree diminished their value, though Rome's adherents, educated and ignorant alike (and millions of professed Christians were Rome's adherents then), branded them as new and strange doctrine, discovered but yesterday, whilst her traditions could boast of a history of centuries. The Reformers, however, found them in God's word and knew that though for centuries they had been hidden and neglected, that circumstance had no power to diminish their value to them, now that they were discovered, any more than the circumstance that so many honest, educated and good men had passed away without seeing them. Prophet and apostle had each delivered his heaven-inspired message, so divinely adapted to soothe and sanctify the human heart; and though Satan had contrived to neutralize the blessing, by prompting the apostate church to misrepresent and pervert them, still there they stood indelibly fixed on the pages of inspiration, ready to communicate, as of old, their message of life and love to perishing man the moment that the misrepresentation was removed, or the perversion detected. And this work Luther and his associates effected, so far as they had light and opportunity. And although theirs, like all human efforts, were far from perfect, we must not fail to remember that their education and early training had been received amid all the intoxicating influences of Rome's apostasy; that their natural prejudices were, perhaps, as strong as those of their fellows, that they had to grope their way to the light of truth amid all the bewilderment that false teaching so long imbibed, is so well calculated to produce, and therefore if they have left some great error untouched, or apprehended its deformity so faintly as to give it at least some place in that reformed faith which Protestantism has accepted at their hands, so far from this being a matter of wonder, it is exactly what we might naturally expect; and whether this has been so or not, the only infallible judge—God's word—must decide. So that the question is not what majorities believe, or creeds teach, but "What saith the Lord?"

And if the natural immortality of man, and the eternal torment of the wicked are not sustained by that authority, they may and should be rejected in the nineteenth century, as were transubstantiation, purgatory, prayers to the dead, etc., in the sixteenth. If doctrines so momentous and terrible are sanctioned by the Scriptures of truth, we bow our heads in submission, and say, Amen. But if the supreme authority declares that "God only hath immortality;" that the righteous only will live for ever; that the "devil and all his works will be destroyed;" then, with lighter hearts, and clearer heads, we still say, Amen and Amen. THOS. DAVIDSON.

A Piece of New Cloth put into an Old Garment.

It has been for some time considered a very strong argument against our views of the nearness of the judgment by the ministry who do not relish the doctrine, that the end cannot be near from the fact of the vast improvements brought about by science in all departments of mechanical and productive labor; and, second, that this earth could not be designed by God as the future home of the saints, because it was not large enough to contain one third of the saved, and consequently no such doctrine as we teach is true. This is the old garment. But a Baptist elder, of Augusta, has lately put a new piece into it. A sister who was a member of the church visited him not long since, and he, being aware that she was fond of meeting in church with the believers in the speedy coming of the Savior thought it a good time to set her right and bring her back from the low grounds of "materialism," (as he called it). So he commenced and showed her the old argument (or garment), and then introduced the new piece.

"Dear sister, if God had ever intended any material home for his people he would not select this little planet, where they would be piled up in heaps, but he would have chosen Jupiter, which is 1,280 times larger than the earth. But as God had said nothing about any planet but the earth, it was evident we must understand him spiritually." P. W. HOUGH.

The God of Abraham.

Continued from p. 253.

III. Scripture is equally conclusive as to the truth of the third argument, that at the time of the glorious appearing of our Redeemer, he will call up to meet him in the heavens his sleeping saints, then resting in their graves—this being the first resurrection—and likewise his faithful living disciples changing their mortal bodies like unto his most glorious body.

The mourning Thessalonians are comforted by the following sublime words of the apostle whose glory it was to preach "Jesus and the resurrection;" "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent [go before] them which are asleep. For the Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." (1 Thes. 4: 14.) In another place the same apostle lifts the veil from the same glory which shall be revealed.

In a paragraph (1 Cor. 15: 51) relating exclusively to believers, he dwells with rapture upon the scene. "Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."—(i. e. "we who are alive and remain"). "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." Sublime words are these, with meaning so distinct and emphatic that further comment is useless. And with what earnest longing does the writer himself press toward the prize—the first resurrection. Throwing to the winds all ideas of earthly honor, or worldly gain, or temporal enjoyment, this, this is the object of his most strenuous exertions. "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection (from among) the dead." (Phil. 3: 10.)

The Savior's words prove that his living disciples will be caught up to meet their Lord in the heavens. "I tell you in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken and the other left."

And in another place he says: "Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." (Mat. 24: 31.)

Without warning will that summons to the marriage supper of the Lamb ring throughout the world, and joyfully shall the waiting servants of the Lord hear the message of his love, and like dazzling dew-drops on a summer morn shall vanish in the bright rays of the rising Sun of Righteousness. What blank amazement will then seize upon the unprepared—the left—when they find their companions parted from them. Bitter lamentation and self-reproach will be theirs, and they must needs face the terrors of "the great tribulation."

IV. The beloved of the Father having destroyed "the works of the devil," and having made "all things new," "the restitution of all things" (Acts 3: 21) is accomplished. The "new heavens and a new earth," have by his creative word appeared. "He has reconciled all things to himself," and he "is all in all," and forever more there there shall be no more curse, neither sorrow nor death, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away. Throughout the ages of the coming eternity does the eternal life possessed by the Father and the Son animate the redeemed, and they are like their Savior and Elder Brother, for they see him as he is, face to face, and his name is in their foreheads.

Here we are to pause. The main subject of this paper has been the return of Christ, the Savior of men. That is the great event of the future. To that the apostles and the whole primitive church looked forward with rapturous expectancy as the time when they should receive "the redemption of their bodies," and their full adoption into the royal family of God. The hope was formed by his promise, and confirmed at the moment of their Lord's departure, when, from angelic lips the words of consolation fell,—"This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go up into heaven." Since then eighteen hundred years have passed away, and his coming draweth nigh. To that event the world is hurrying on with lightning-like rapidity. The time is short. In all parts of the earth devout Christians have become convinced that their King is near, and are earnestly watching for his arrival. The majority of prophetical students are agreed that the various dates given in Holy Writ for the accomplishment of the gathering in of the Gentiles, and the commencement of the "times of the end" expire about the present time. The state of the papal power is remarkable. To whatever part of the physical, political or religious world we may direct our eyes, nought but unrest, turbulence and upheaving is visible. It has been well said:

"The testimony of the Word of God has been verified to the letter, both as it respects the world and the church, up to a certain point: and that point will not be forgotten. Men, good and bad; churches, false and true; angels, fallen and faithful, have been traveling unrestingly towards it. War and peace; pestilence and health; famine and plenty, have with prophetic finger steadily pointed there. That point is 'The coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven and with power and great glory.'"

As to the views advanced I have no desire to dogmatise. I quietly await the future. This is but an attempt at the clearer understanding of some important portions of God's word, putting the simplest possible meaning upon the expressions used therein. That Word we know never has failed, never will fail. It is truth. If we attempt to interpret it in the light of our own intellects and this world's philosophy, we shall find it but clouds and darkness; but if we study the Word confessing our own ignorance and trusting only in the light which emanates from him who is "the light of the world," then ray after ray of divine truth will fall upon us, and so shall we be enabled to walk more gladly in the way which leads to that city of mansions where shall be no night of ignorance, no night of uncertainty, but where shall reign in bright effulgence the light of God's own glory.

My chief desire has been to direct your thoughts to the return of the anointed Savior, and if by this paper any shall be led to live in constant expectation of the glorious appearing of Christ, the King of the Jews; Christ, the Redeemer; Christ who has brought life and immortality to light; Christ, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, then my labor will not have been in vain.

"Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless." A. H. G. in Rainbow.

The Lord's Day.

How we love it! What sweet memories cluster around this day. John received the Revelation on this day. We love to think of him, banished by men, but blessed of God. How the Christian enjoys this weekly feast. His thoughts go back to Calvary, where the loving Savior gave his life for fallen man. To the Christian, Lord's day morning is the happiest of the week; for the hour soon draws the loving band of disciples together; sometimes but very few, other times many more. Then after songs of praise, the reading of the word, and a fervent prayer we commune together, each for himself. We must eat the bread, discerning the Lord's body, and not as a reveling feast. "As often as you do this, ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come." What a thought! We preach and talk so much about the coming of our Savior, and then to think that once a week we can show to the world that we believe he died, and also that he is coming back. Show it by an action, by an earnest obedience to the command. "Do this till I come again!" Could that little band, who were with him on that memorable night, have had even a thought of how long this institution would be kept? So many followers of the Lamb, have so faithfully attended to this feast. If he should come at the usual hour of communing, some Lord's day, what member of his body would want to be found away from the house of God. It is good to be there, among the meek and lowly disciples, keeping his commandments till he comes. How can any stay away, if they can possibly be there. Let us keep this "Holy day" in the Lord's appointed way. It is the day he arose! Let us honor it! MARY.

An Era of Crime.

If it rained all the time probably we would soon take no notice whatever of the fact. The steady drizzle and patter would be as the unvaried din and sights of the city's street—all unobserved by us. Or if at any time we became conscious of the raining it would be because of some sudden change which had come in the way of its increased or lessened violence. Now and then, as a great sheet of water flung itself against our window and swept over the fields outside among the waving grass and trees, we might look up, exclaiming, "How it rains!" It is about like this in respect to the notice which men take of the social violences which so ceaselessly break upon them. Bank-robberies, ring-despotisms, official corruptions, domestic tragedies, garrotings, burglaries, suicides, these come in upon us like tidal waves,—so constant and regular in their visitations that we are no longer startled by them. But of late there seems to have been a change. The sea of crime, always beating, and surging, and roaring around us, has suddenly lifted itself into an unusual hight, and is deepening its thunderings. Men are beginning to look up exclaiming, "What new era of crime is this?" Go back only a few short weeks. Begin with the Fisk tragedy. It seems as if the flood-gate of sin and violence was just then hoisted a dozen notches, to let in upon us atrocities which revolt not only by their number, but by their singular nature. Some of these start up among the most commonplace and trivial incidents. Out West a sister in sheer sportiveness threw snow-balls at her brother, and the brother forthwith seized a gun and shot her. Here at the East, in Lowell, a boy, not yet out of his jacket, walked home with a young miss, and was shot down by another boy, a rival in jacket. Out West a man shot his wife and then blew his brains out. Here in the East, up in New Hampshire, a like tragedy was enacted. Up in Vermont there was as bloody a fight on the floor of a saloon as ever occurred on a pirate's deck. Over in Chelsea there was another Fisk-Mansfield-Stokes affair. In New York, on Thursday last, a man was murdered while defending his wife from brutality. On the same day a man hung himself, in a western town in Massachusetts. The next day there was another suicide in Canterbury, N. H. No doubt the next daily paper which the readers of this column take up will contain an account of at least one murder, a suicide or two, as many incendiary fires, a railroad assassination, a bank-robbery, two or three cases of defalcation, a street-garroting—the record of crime for the last twenty-four hours. If the reader does not find all that we have thus catalogued, it must be that he patronizes a journal of no great enterprise. We stop while writing this article, and glance through our Boston daily, and we find yesterday's record of crime summed up in one murder, three suicides, two incendiary fires, a cruel beating of a little deformed girl by her father, half a dozen house-robberies, the shooting of a young girl, a steamboat explosion and a hundred and more dead passengers. What longer chapter of horrors a New York paper would unfold we do not know, nor do we care to know. It is evident enough that great and constant as is this current of crime at all times, it is now greater than ever before.

How is this to be accounted for? There can be no doubt that much of this revolting wickedness is but the outgrowth of the low moral sentiment which pervades our entire communities. The great public conscience is dull, and blind, and inoperative. Law has lost a vast deal of its sanctity and awfulness in men's minds. Law-makers and law-executors are held in little reverence and less fear. The great principles which are the foundations of government and all society, and which carry in them a sort of divine sovereignty, are now challenged and assailed by men who would rule God out of all human interests and relationships. But there is a way for accounting for this low sentiment as respects the law and order of society. The administrators of the law through every rank of office have been working during the last few years to strip the law of its true function. Lawyers have given their legal skill and learning and their brilliant talents to clear their guilty clients; judges and juries have in innumerable instances sided with the culprit in their decisions; Governors and Legislatures have too often thrust in their executive clemency to save the condemned. So Law has been the shuttle-cock for the play of lawyers and judges; justice has been denied her dues; the great public looking on has become numbed in conscience. Crime of every kind has of course followed, until now it is breaking out in every grade of society, and in more and yet more startling forms. There is only one way of recovery, only one way of gaining back the public sense of right, reverence of it, obedience to it. Crime must be punished. Talk about it as we may, talk of the beauty of mercy and all that, it is justice that we must have. The law that pronounces crime to be crime must strike it as a guilty and dangerous thing. It must strike quickly and remorselessly. The whole majesty of law is found in this fact. Human nature can be made to feel it and reverence it in no other way. The child respects the fire and yields to it the entire reverence and obedience of its nature. It has found out, despite all smiles and frowns, all its screaming agony, that fire will burn, always burn. Give us such an administration of any human law, and the public conscience would leap up to salute it, nay, to bow before it as something awful and divine. Then crime would shrink away from its presence in fear if not otherwise. Every pillar of society would be strengthened. Then righteousness would dwell in the streets, and the "effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever."
—Watchman and Reflector.

My Experience. No. 2.

In my last I promised to tell you how I came to change my views on the subject of life, death, and future punishment. I was holding a protracted meeting in a neighborhood, six miles north-west of Wooster, in the winter of 1867, when Br. Rittenhouse came there and distributed a number of tracts. After services in the forenoon, we both went to dinner at the same house. While there he asked me the following question: "Do you believe in eternal torment?" I replied, "Yes, if I can find a plain thus saith the Lord for it." I did not, like many confound eternal punishment with eternal life in torment." I said to myself, "Such a dreadful threatening as this must be plainly revealed in God's Word. Certainly he would not deceive or leave us in doubt in this matter." You may rest assured I was much surprised when I did not find it. I found "everlasting punishment," "everlasting destruction," and the "second death," etc.; but not eternal torment, or life in torment. I also found "eternal salvation," "eternal redemption," and "eternal life;" in other words that whatever salvation and redemption secured for us was eternal in the consequences.

This view of man's destiny, led me to examine the Scriptures impartially in relation to the nature of man. I found that God made him of the dust of the ground, breathed into him the breath of life, and man became a living soul, and when he died he was a dead soul. And, "the soul that sinneth it shall die." Of course the Bible was to me a new book. I could then understand it without the help of commentators, for it explained itself. Cowper is correct when he says—

"God is his own Interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

M. BECK.

Angels.

Before the Ecclesiastical Senate, Amsterdam, May 27 1592, Arminius was charged with false doctrine. There were three heads, of which the third was: "He had affirmed that 'angels are not immortal.'" He "acknowledged that he had given vent to that opinion, and defended it with solid arguments, never indeed in public, but privately on one occasion in the house of Plancius, (a brother minister); adding, that it was still his opinion that immortality was the peculiar attribute of God alone—this being evident from the testimony of Paul in 1 Tim 6: 16. The angels, indeed, were, and would continue to be, happy and undying spirits, not however by virtue of their nature, but by the external sustentation of God, eternally preserving them in being—just as human bodies before the fall were mortal, and susceptible of dissolution, but yet would never have been subjected to death had not sin supervened."

The court decided "there was no necessity for any further dealing with Arminius in regard to this matter" (the three heads.)—Brandt's Life of Arminius.

Our Young Folks.

Two And One.

Two ears and only one mouth have you!
The reason, I think, is clear:
It teaches, my child, that it will not do
To talk about all you hear.

Two eyes and only one mouth have you!
The reason of this must be
That you should learn that it will not do
To talk about all you see.

Two hands and only one mouth have you!
It is worth while repeating,
The two are for work you will have to do,
The one is enough for eating.
—Guiding Star.

RARE PRAISE.—"My son is now twenty-five years old," said a mother to her friend, at the same time wiping tears of gratitude from her face, "and he has always remembered what I taught him in childhood. He has been a good boy. He has never brought a tear to his mother's eye."

Boys, of how many of you can mothers say the same? And if any of you feel that it could not with truth be said, who will resolve to-day, "From this time I will do nothing which shall bring tears to my mother's eyes."

Be Industrious.

You must learn to be industrious; you must always try to be helpful to your parents. We say learn to be industrious; for there are many lazy boys and girls who are unwilling to do anything for their parents, or any one else. Many of the wicked men and women who are in our prisons and houses of correction are there because they were lazy when they were young. They were then unwilling to work. They would not learn to be industrious; they would not learn some useful trade, as they grew older, so that they could earn their living in a respectable manner, and soon we hear that they are living lives of wickedness, have learned to drink, have stolen, lost their character, and are in prison.

The Difference.

"Willie, why were you gone so long for water?" asked the teacher of a little boy.

"We spilled it and had to go back and fill the bucket again," was the prompt reply; but the bright, noble face was a shade less bright, less noble than usual, and the eyes dropped beneath the teacher's gaze.

The teacher crossed the room and stood by another, who had been Willie's companion.

"Freddy, were you not gone for the water longer than was necessary?"

For an instant Freddy's eyes were fixed on the floor, and his face wore a troubled look. But it was only for an instant—he looked frankly up to his teacher's face.

"Yes ma'am," he bravely answered: "we met little Harry Braden and stopped to play with him, and then we spilled the water and had to go back."

Little friends, what was the difference in the answers of the two boys? Neither of them told anything that was not strictly true. Which one of them do you think the teacher trusted more fully after that? And which was the happier of the two?

A Rack o' Bones.

Little things tell a good deal sometimes to a sharp observer. Do you ever think of it, boys? You, who like to get a poor frightened cat into a corner, and stone her, who like to tie a tin pail to a dog's tail to see him run himself almost or quite to death, you who like to get a poor old "rack-o'-bones" of a horse and draw up the reins, and put on the whip, to see how fast you can make him go, do you ever think you are showing your character in pretty black colors to whoever may chance to be watching? What is a "rack-o'-bones" but a once nice, plump, sleek horse, worn out with hard work, pain, too little food and water, and cruel abuse from unthinking boys and hard-hearted men? He has done his best for you. Is this a good reason why you should abuse him?

Suppose somebody should call your mother a "rack-o'-bones" because she is pale, and thin, and sad faced. She once had a sweet, rosy face, and bright eyes, and has lost them in suffering, and working, and caring for you. She has spent the best of her strength, and the best of her life for you, and wouldn't you quickly resent it if any boy should speak slightingly of her?

Can you give me any better reasons why you should maltreat a poor, limping, shaky, worn-out horse, whose every rib you can count, and that hangs his head almost to the ground because he is too weak and tired to hold it up? Do you feel manly after you have tormented him? Are you proud to tell of it?—Family Visitor.

THE ALMANAC AND YEAR-BOOK.—We sent out by mail and express last week about eight-hundred of the new Almanac and year book.

We made our arrangements to publish this pamphlet by December first. After the fire had destroyed the stereotype foundries of Chicago, we waited for some months upon their promises to resume work, and were finally disappointed after all our waiting, and obliged to print the almanac from the type. The edition, therefore, is limited, and we have not many copies left. While they last they will be sent post paid at the rate of FIFTEEN CENTS A COPY. Those who wish a copy must apply at once.

Besides the usual calendar, it contains a list of the conferences, churches and P. O. addresses of preachers so far as we have been able to obtain them, with some interesting reading matter, and Bible references of value to all.

CONSTABLE. The Nature and Duration of Future Punishment. This able document is affecting our American theology more than it is the English schools. It should be circulated everywhere. Price 40c, post paid.

TAYLOR'S Science and the Resurrection. These articles, which were first published in THE TIMES, have now been issued in tract form. 2 for 10 cents. 25 for 50 cents. It silences objections.

FASSETT, on Paul's Desire to Depart Paul's earnest Expectation and Hope. A new tract, and pronounced by all who read it as "Just the thing!" 2 for 10 cents. 30 copies for $1

FIELD'S Discussion on the State of the Dead. A standard document. The first cheap edition published. Over 300 pp. 30c. Every one should have a copy.

Good Tidings. By Couch, Sheldon, Grant and Himes. Prophecy and theology. A valuable book. Paper, 50c. Cloth, $1.

Advent Christian Times.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, - - - - - EDITOR

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, March 12, 1872.

OUR REMOVAL.

We expect to publish the next number of THE TIMES from our office in Chicago. We had hoped to effect this change without losing a single issue, but the circumstances are such that we cannot do this without involving considerable extra expense. However, we promise our subscribers that we will speedily make up to them, either by extra numbers or by supplements, whatever they may lose by the suspension of an issue or two.

The announcement of this change may be a surprise to many of our readers, yet it is by no means a hasty move. The general subject of our removal has been agitated for a long time. The change now about to be effected has been the subject of negotiations commencing some time in November last, and brought to what we consider a favorable conclusion last week.

Our presses are to be located at Norwood Park, six miles from the city limits, on the Wisconsin Division of the North Western Railway. We shall have the use of a very fine building, close by the depot, free of rent for a term of years.

Our Business Office and Book and Tract Depot will be in the city. We have not yet selected a location, but may be able to announce it in our next issue. When once settled we shall be happy to receive calls from every Adventist, and all other friends who may pass through the city.

We look upon the change as a highly important and exceedingly advantageous one for the cause we represent; and have high hopes of the future prosperity and usefulness of the Western Publishing Office. We shall be able to serve our patrons more promptly, besides being more accessible to them. We shall be nearer to them and they nearer to us; which will, we trust, result, if possible, in even closer and more cordial relations than those already existing.

As to our personal affairs, the change seems to call for renewed sacrifices on our part. We must again go out as if into a new country, and among strangers, submitting to many discomforts and trials we might avoid by remaining here. But the hand of Providence has been so clearly indicated in this change, that we cannot doubt that he whom we serve will give us homes and friends and food and clothing, and a full sufficiency of each.

Our printing office will be located, as we have said, at Norwood Park. This is one of those beautiful suburban villages of which so many are springing up on the line of the railroads leading into Chicago. For all practical business purposes they are in the city. And none of them are more favorably located as to health or convenience than Norwood. It is growing rapidly and real estate is fast rising in value.

And let us here say to our friends that parties who wish to place from $300 to $500, or even $1,000 where it will help the Association, and at the same time be a safe and profitable investment for themselves, can correspond with us. One can help the Publishing Association, and at the same time help themselves. Let any thus interested write to us at once.

Many have been exceedingly interested in the subject of our removal, and have promised to aid liberally whenever the change should be made. We need not say more to remind them of their pledges. And will not all who are owing the office, on any account, make an extra effort to remit all that is due. We do not anticipate any serious increase in our expenditures except as our business shall increase. But the expense of removal will be considerable.

Nearly all the persons now employed in the office will go with us. Br. and Sr. Mansfield will also make their home at Norwood. Brn. Whipple and Sayles and others reside there, and we shall doubtless soon have a little church.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Hereafter address all communications for THE TIMES, and all letters on business relating to the paper, or books or tracts to Joshua V. Himes, Chicago, Ill.

Br. and Sr. D. R. and M. S. Mansfield's P. O. address will be Norwood Park, Cook Co., Ill. Personal letters to any member of the families, or the office hands should be addressed to Norwood Park.

Hereafter we will speak more fully upon the objects and advantages and disadvantages of this change. Our time and space are limited now. We shall use every effort to miss but one paper during our removal. If we succeed, the next number of THE TIMES will be mailed from Chicago Tuesday evening, March twenty-first.

THE REPORT OF THE WORCESTER CONFERENCE.

We found this report in the columns of the Crisis, and copied it in good faith, supposing it to be "official." Since it was in type we learn it was inaccurate in some particulars. These errors have been corrected so far as we have learned them.

In an exchange we find the following bit of correct theology from the pen of the author of The Bible vs. Materi[illegible]

"Many of us who now ple[illegible] a glorious Redeemer, realize [illegible] our earthly pilgrimage will soon [illegible] and we shall rest with our fathers.

A few more years shall roll,
A few more seasons come,
And we shall be with those who rest,
Asleep within the tomb."

—We are glad to note even an inadvertant admission by so staunch an immaterialist that "we rest with our fathers," "within th tomb."

A DISCUSSION

BETWEEN

Eld. Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Eld. Himes, of the Advent Christian Times.

Upon Four Propositions, Involving the Nature of Man, the State of the Dead, and Future Rewards and Punishments.

ELD. HIMES' SIXTH REPLY.

In treating of sheol and hades my brother sketches some heathen traditions and notions concerning the state of the dead and the future life. He then cites certain passages of Scripture which neither affirm nor deny anything as to the nature of man or his condition in death, and by use of the synecdoche and other violent means he fits these texts to the heathen traditions, and then makes his conclusions therefrom the standard of interpretation. He first assumes that the traditions were essentially true. A few passages of Scripture can be harmonized with them. Those which cannot be, or which definitely deny his assumptions, are set aside as accommodations to the ignorance of those ages. I think there is a more excellent way. "God is his own interpreter, and he will make it plain." As my brother said in another connection: 'I accept the Scriptures as the Christian's perfect, only and all-sufficient rule of faith and practice; and I believe that what cannot be read therein nor be proved thereby, should not be required of any man." And again, "Our doctrine must be in the words of the Spirit; or we must take the Scriptures." I am happy to endorse these sentiments. Plainly litteral statements in regard to are the standard of interpretation. The indefinite and doubtful passages must be explained by, and in harmony with them; and if traditions contradict them, why so much the worse for the 'traditions. As Adventists and as Disciples we make our boast that "we choose to speak of Bible things in Bible words, because we are always suspicious that if the word is not in the Bible, the idea that it represents is not there." What, then, are the plain declarations of the Bible concerning sheol? What say those Scriptures which make direct assertions concerning sheol, its locality, and the condition of its inhabitants? I remark further that sheol is a specific term. It has no secondary senses like soul and spirit, though sometimes used figuratively. My brother is mistaken, therefore when he says that I affirm that it means grave in the sense of a burying place. It does mean grave in the general sense of that term, which is equivalent to the state or condition of death. Parkhurst says, "Sheol—the universal grave." The definition "underworld," is a subterfuge, and not a definition, as any can see by reference to an English lexicon. Keber is the Hebrew term for burying place. A buried dead person is in kebor; but all the dead, whether buried, drowned, devoured or burned are alike in sheol.

As Albert Barnes says, sheol is always represented as under our feet, beneath. Eld. Braden admits this. Hence, I need not cite proof texts. He also admits that it was a subject of dread. David utters the universal sentiment when he says: "Great is thy mercy toward me; thou hast rescued my soul from sheol beneath." My brother affirms that "sheol was a place of imperfect knowledge.' What say the Scriptures? The life goes to sheol. "My life draws near to sheol" (he was in danger of death. Ps. 89:3.) Is the life there conscious? v. 12 says is the "land of forgetfulness." In Ps. 146:2 we read: "I will sing praises to my God while I have my being." Ps. 6:5 declares: "In death there is no remembrance of thee; in sheol who shall give thee thanks!" "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Hence, the inhabitants of sheol have no conscious being. Hezekiah asserts unqualifiedly: "Sheol cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee." There is no equivocation here: whatever goes to sheol, it cannot praise God. "The living" can do the thing the dead cannot do. (Is. 38:18.) The wise man use unmistakable language; "There is no work, nor device, nor wisdom, nor knowledge in sheol." This language is evidently intensive as well as comprehensive. It is a repetition of a previous assertion—"THE DEAD KNOW NOT ANYTHING." My brother says the body never possessed consciousness; hence, it is not referred to, but the soul in the spirit world. My brother cannot avoid the force of this passage by styling it an accommodation to the ignorance [illegible] the writer or the age; for ch. 12:7, of this same book is one of the pillars of his house. I believe that it is a maxim in criticism "that an honest and capable writer will not contradict himself." Yet Br. Braden's position makes Solomon teach that at death the human spirit goes to God "a rational, conscious, intelligent entity," and to sheol in an unconscious condition! For "there is no knowledge in sheol." "The dead know not any thing!"

It is a favorite assertion with my brother, that his exegesis of a passage must be correct, because any other would be "nonsense." This is a cheap substitute for logic. Let us try it. Jacob must have meant that his soul would go to sheol; because Joseph (in his mind) was devoured. He was not buried, hence, it was the soul that went to sheol. But sheol does not mean a burial place in any instance of its use. As Dr. Eadie remarks, all corpses are in sheol, whatever disposition is made of them. Turning to Gen. 42:38 we find Jacob saying, "Ye will bring down my gray hairs to"—"the spirit world!" says Eld. Braden. Do ghosts really wear gray hair?

Sheol is never represented as a place of consciousness except in a parable, as in Is. 14 and Ezk. 31. In the same connection the earth sings; trees talk, as also do the stones. Coming to the N. T. where hades is used not in its philosophical sense, but as an equivalent of the Hebrew sheol, bearing the Scriptural sense of that term, we find the first use of hades is in evident a[illegible] one of these parables. (Mat. 11:[illegible]:15.) In Is. 14:15 we read of B[illegible] personified in her king—for this prophec[illegible] to the city, not to a person—"Thou shalt be brought down to sheol." Christ says of Capernaum: "Thou shalt be brought down to hades." In Is. 14:21–27 we have an interpretation of this parable. To be brought down to sheol" is to be 'swept with the besom of destruction." And just as proud Babylon was overthrown and lost, so Capernaum fell, and its very site is not known with certainty. But my brother affirms unqualifiedly that Jesus meant—"Thou Capernaum shalt be brought down to"—"the world of spirits," conscious rational spirits. Does not my brother's latest epithet—"nonsense"—fit well here? As in the O. T. so in the N. T. hades is a place of consciousness only in parable. But my brother once recommended "an examination of a word in all the passages where it occurs," as one decisive test of its meaning. I will give a list of these passages, and trust that every reader will search them thoroughly to learn the "mind of the Spirit." Sheol occurs 64 times. It is rendered grave in the following passages:

Gen. 37:35; 42:38; 44:29, 31; 1 Sam. 2:6; 1 Kings, 2:6, 9; Job 7:9; 14:13; 17 13; 21; 13; 24:19; Ps. 6:5; 30:3; 31:17; 49:14, 15; 88:3; 89:48; 141:7; Prov. 1:12 30:16; Eccl. 9:10; Cant. 8:6; Is. 14:9, 11; 38:18; Ezk. 31:15; Hos. 13:14.

It is rendered pit. Num. 16:30, 33; Job 17:16.

It is rendered hell. Deut. 32:22; 2 Sam. 22:6; Job 11:8; 26:6; Ps. 9:17; 16:10; 18:5; 55:15; 86:13; 116:3; 139:8; Prov. 5:5; 7:27; 9:18; 15:11, 24; 23:14; 27:20; Is. 5:14; 14:15; 28:15, 18; 57:9; Ezk. 31:16, 17; 32:21, 27; Amos 9:2; Jonah 2:2; Hab. 2:5.

Hades occurs eleven times. Mat. 11:23; 16:18; Lk. 10:15; 16:23; Acts. 2:27, 31; 1 Cor. 15:55 (some critics omit); Rev. 1:18; 6:8; 20:13, 14.

Upon the phrase "gathered to his fathers," my brother argues, that Abraham's people were in Chaldea, and he was buried in Canaan; hence the expression cannot refer to the body, and must refer to the soul, as to be gathered with the souls of his fathers in "the spirit world." Now my brother affirmed in his second letter that the idea of the separate existence of the spirit was not comprehended until Jacob's day. But this argument by necessary implication teaches that Abraham comprehended it; for nearly a hundred years before his death God said to him, "Thou shalt go to thy fathers." If it be true that "gathered to thy fathers" cannot refer to the physical organization, unless it is buried in the same sepulcher with the fathers, it is equally true that it cannot refer to the spirit unless all the spirits go to the same place. Turning to Josh. 24:2, 14 we learn that Abraham's father's were idolators! If my brother is right, Abraham went at death where idolaters go! The faithful generation that occupied Palestine all went to the same place as their stiffnecked, rebellious fathers. (Jud. 2:10.) The good and bad kings all went to the same place. I think my brother has remarked that a position involving an absurdity is manifestly false. Let his own words condemn his argument. Of the pretended appearance of Samuel at Endor, he says that if Samuel was really there, the language "would prove that the apostate suicide Saul went to the abode of the good spirits—to the spirit of Samuel; for he declared, you shall be with me to-morrow." Now by a parity of resoning from his own premises Abraham's spirit went to the abode of the spirits of idolaters. He cannot escape this conclusion. Better be consistent, and admit that Abraham "slept with his fathers."

David makes no reference to the spirit in 2 Sam. 12:23. While his son lived he had hope. After he died it was useless to pray longer for him; he must turn again to the duties of life and prepare himself for the same event. In the story of Elisha's miracle (2 Ki. 4), neither soul or spirit are mentioned. Elijah prayed, "Let this child's soul come into him again." (1 Ki. 17:21.) Soul here is simply the life, as in hundreds of instances. The child was dead, because "there was no breath [or life] left in him:" but at Elijah's prayer—returned again.

I am glad my brother endorses Peter's view of Ps. 16:10, which is this: "David is both dead and buried." But he, "being a prophet, and knowing that God....would raise up Christ to sit on his throne, HE SEEING THIS before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hades, neither did his flesh see corruption." Now for Eld. Braden's view: "The Psalms are not to be relied on [for teaching concerning man's nature and the spirit's destiny], because man had no knowledge scarcely of the future world, and such knowledge was not the subject of its revelation." I know not which to admire most: the coolness with which my brother ruled half the Bible out of the debate, or the naivete with which he quotes from these 'unreliable' sources any isolated passage he thinks he can press into service. After pronouncing that the Psalms cannot be relied upon on this question, he claims that Ps. 16:10 teaches the survival of a conscious spirit, and the resurrection of Christ, and that David saw, undermood this. My brother denied that "my soul" in this passage is a periphrasis, as I claimed. The authorities are all against him. The Alexandrian Vatican, Sinaitic, and all the best MSS.; the Syriac and all the oldest versions, Campbell, Griesbach, Tischendorf, and Alford, all read "he" instead of "my soul" in Acts 2:31. So I have the Holy Spirit's comment to sustain my assertion. David said, "my soul:" Peter says "he" instead of "my soul," hence my soul is a periphrasis. The assertion that the use of the words "nor" and "not" makes it impossible that this passage should be a parallelism is simply absurd. In the preceding Psalm (v. 3) we have an indisputable parallelism employing these very terms. As in the other case they render the parallelism more emphatic:

"He has not slandered with his tongue,
Has not done evil to his fellow,
Nor taken up a reproach against his neighbor."

Questions are usually considered a doubtful kind of argument; but they seem to be my brother's forte. He has tried to force me into an affirmative upon the question of Christology. Now the proposition I deny, is, that man has a spirit that will endlessly exist in a state of consciousness. Now if the spirit of Christ was the pre-existent Logos, there is no analogy between it and the spirits of men, unless they are pre-existent entities; and even then no real analogy, because the difference between a divine and human spirit must be immense; and the disparity in the effects of any given cause must be equally great. Now I affirm that the spirit that Christ committed to his Father was not the pre-existent Logos, but just such a spirit as men have. It was simply the spirit of life of Eccl. 12:7; Acts 7:59; Eccl. 3:19; Gen. 2:7. My brother says this is absurd; but it is easier to make assertions than to prove them. Will my brother give us chapter and verse for his assertion that the "conscious, rational, intelligent, moral part of" Christ, that "increased in knowledge," was the pre-existent Logos? My brother seems to think that if he repeats a bare assertion times enough it will become true. In one letter he repeats some seventeen times that the spirit is "a rational, conscious, intelligent, moral entity" in man. But he strangely omits to give chapter and verse. Yet he affirms "our doctrine must be in the words of the Spirit." The fact is he cannot state his doctrine in the words of the Spirit. I know he again evades the force of this remark by reference to the language of my proposition, quietly ignoring the fact that I challenged him to show either the language of his proposition, or equivalent terms, in God's Book. Does any reader believe if the equivalent terms were there he would have written six articles without reproducing them?

He again asserts that the inward man is the spirit; it must be so, because only a few deny it! Time was when Alexander Campbell's followers were fewer than materialists are now: did that prove them in error? Do they get nearer right as they increase in numbers? Are we to settle the meaning of Scripture by "counting noses," and the exegesis that has most votes to be received? I am sure my brother would not twit me of being in the minority except to excite prejudice. And persistent attempts to excite prejudice are never the resort of one who feels confident of the strength of his logic. Now let any candid reader peruse carefully Rom. 7 and 8. They will see there is but one personality; and the contest for control of that personality is not between the "conscious, intelligent," etc., "part of man," and his "flesh" (Ch. 7:23) which has neither intelligence nor consciousness, but between the higher and lower faculties and passions of the one mind. With the aid of the Holy Spirit, through Christ, the former prevails: and those who receive the Spirit, though not disembodied, are "no longer in the flesh," but "in the spirit," and fit subjects for the resurrection and kingdom of glory.

My brother says "soul-extinctionists" make nonsense of 2 Cor. 4:16; 5:1–10, to "save a pet hobby." Why not tell our readers what my view of this passage is before so summarily disposing of it? I am sure I should be sorry if it is any more inconsistent and self-contradictory than the exegesis he gives. Now it is clear that the daily renewal prevents the inward man from suffering the same fate as the outer man, i. e., gradual decay, ultimating in death. Are the souls of the wicked thus strengthened day by day? If not they must perish soul and body. Again, he makes Paul flatly contradict himself. He makes him say in v. 4 that he WOULD NOT BE UNCLOTHED from his mortal body, and v. 8 that he is "confident AND WILLING, RATHER to be absent from" this mortal body. How a man can wish to be clothed and yet desire at the same time to be unclothed, I cannot perceive. The fact is Paul makes no reference to the intermediate state in this passage, except the assertion that he has no wish to enter it, but is discussing solely of the resurrection.

This is so evident that many immaterialists admit it; while others take the ground that it teaches that the resurrection occurs at death: which is the truth, if immaterialism be true. We shall be present with the Lord by being caught up to meet him, not by dying. (1 Cor. 15:52; 1 Thes. 4:17, etc.)

Paul's "desire" is treated in the same way. He is even made to flatly contradict himself in the same breath. He will not choose either life or death, and yet he has the ardent desire for death, "which is far better!" My brother falls into the common error of supposing that death would be "gain" to Paul; but he had no such idea. He says (ch. 2:27) that "God had mercy on Epaphroditus" in keeping him alive. Strange "mercy" if it were "far better" to die. And why should Paul be so glad that his brother had missed the best thing that could have happened to him? See also 1 Cor. 15:26; 2 Cor. 1:8–10. Why make Paul blow hot and cold on this subject? He does not say death will be gain to him, but "Christ shall be magnified in my body whether by life or by death." When he says the gain is in magnifying Christ, why deny it?

V. 23 evidently contains three propositions. Paul is in a strait between two things or events with no choice between them; but has a desire for a third thing or event. That his strait was between life and death no one disputes. It follows therefore that the thing he did desire was neither life nor death, but something else. What was it? "To be with Christ." Again all are agreed. But how? "By death," says my brother. But Paul says he did not choose to die. He cannot contradict himself, hence death is not the means of being with Christ. The word analuo, here rendered depart, not unfrequently means return. It occurs only once more in the N. T. Lk. 12:36, and all translators there render it return. "Men wait for their Lord when he will return." Even if it has the sense of depart in Phil. 1:23 it is not grammatically rendered in the common version by the infinitive. Dean Alford translates it "desire for the departing." Now I have no doubt that the word has the same sense here that it has in Lk. 12:36, and that Paul's "fervent desire" (for so the Greek implies) was "for the returning, which is far better than either life or death." I cannot avoid the conviction that he here alludes to the same event he elsewhere describes as his "hope." (Tit. 2:13; 2 Tim. 4:8; 8:1; Acts 26:6–8; 1 Cor. 15:32; Phil. 3:11, 20, 21, etc.)

My brother's arbitrary assertions concerning the use of the synecdoche amount to nothing. Figures of speech are subject to law, and are never allowable when the primary meaning makes good sense, and does not contradict the author. But my brother makes the Scriptures flatly contradict themselves by his arbitrary "injection" of the synecdoche in which he is subject to no law, save the necessities of his theory. He ought to know that the heathen who had no faith in the survival of the soul, called death a "departure," as well as those who hoped the spirit might survive. But very few of the heathen in Paul's day had any faith whatever in the survival of the soul. See Merrivale and others. Webster says, "departure means to take leave of life." So Peter's expression about laying off his tabernacle is merely a figure of speech for death or decease. When his tent was struck, he as a person, not as a ghost, would descend into sheol and sleep unconscious of time and events until the Lord's return.

My brother thinks that I dare not deny that the soul in Gen. 2:7 is used by synecdoche. I do deny it most emphatically. There is no figure here. Soul is used in precisely the same sense it occurs in ch. 1:20, 21, 24, and Rev. 16:3, etc.—a living creature. It is not a figure of speech, but one of the commonest meanings of the word.

I will not here discuss the point whether the Persians believed the doctrine of the resurrection, nor where they obtained the idea. The evidence that they held it is far from decisive, and it is a disputed question. My brother proceeds upon the assumption that I do not believe the Hebrews understood or believed in a resurrection. I know he says there is not a promise in the Pentateuch, nor indeed in any of the earlier books of the O. T. that reaches beyond this life. But in Heb. 11:13 we read that "these all died in faith, not having received the promises," though "persuaded of them." Perhaps my brother can tell how one can die without any expectation of a future existence, and at the same time have faith that certain promises will be fulfilled to them personally; hoping to obtain a "better resurrection," and yet looking for no resurrection. See Heb. 11.

The difference between the Persian and the Hebrew theology is this: The former definitely asserts the immortality of the soul, and the idea of the resurrection is possibly hinted at. The latter neither declares the immortality nor the survival of the soul (every judicious immaterialist scholar admits that it is only inferred, not taught), but plainly asserts a future existence by means of a resurrection. I ask the candid reader's attention to these indisputable facts. The Scriptures nowhere directly assert a future life by means of a surviving spirit, while they again and again directly affirm it by the resurrection of the dead. Shall our "doctrine be in the words of the Spirit?" My brother appeals to Heathen, and Pharisaic, and Essenic usage as a standard of interpretation of apostolic language. I demur. The apostle's own language is the standard of interpretation; and no person has the right to inject into an indefinite term or phrase a sense that contradicts direct and definite assertions of Scripture.

I do not deem it necessary to refer to my brother's frequent repetitions of assertions that he has proved or shown so and so—as that (1) "There is a spirit. (2) This spirit is an entity," etc. etc. etc There is no logic in this, and only the thinnest minds can be impressed by it. But when he asserts that "in many places" the spirit of man is enumerated with "God, the Logos, the Holy Spirit, and angels," "as the same in nature with them," he is going a step too far. He cannot show one instance of such enumeration.

My brother's story, like all his illustrations, is strikingly inapt. His trouble is not that I shoot the deer so as to miss it if it should prove a calf, but he is worried that he cannot make me believe his calf is a deer, and so spend my ammunition upon it. I presume not one of my readers has been imposed upon by his subterfuge in substituting a question for argument in reply to my remarks on Eccl. 12:7. As says on this point: "I will affirm that when WE use spirit in the sense WE do when WE say man has body, soul and spirit, the brute has no spirit. Dare you affirm that it has?" Here is a direct challenge to take the affirmative. But who is the "we"? Plainly Eld. Braden. But he words his sentence in such a way as to imply that I agree with him in his notion of the meaning of 1 Thes. 4:23, only I dare not own it. Now I have repeatedly affirmed that the word spirit (of man) never has that sense in Scripture. He has known from the first that I deny that the spirit is an entity at all. Why then ask me to affirm that the beast has a spirit that is a "rational conscious moral entity"? Plainly to raise a false issue in the reader's mind. I stand squarely on what I affirmed in my exposition of Eccl. 12:7. I meant just what I said. If the position involves "monstrosities" my brother would have shown them long ago instead of attempting to raise a false issue. He has attempted no answer to that argument except to cry "zoology!"

He has a string of passages in which he declares "spirit can have but one meaning." He no doubt thinks it unkind in me not to accept his ipse dixit; but I cannot. He is in error. In Dan. 7:15 spirit means mind. In Acts 17:16 it is the feelings. In Rom. 7:22; 2 Cor. 4:16, etc., the spirit is not named or alluded to. In Eccl. 12:7 the spirit is the spirit of life that God gave; it goes back. He did not give an "intelligent entity." Acts 7:59; Lk. 23:46 have the same sense. Acts 2:27 refers to soul, and is a periphrasis. Mat. 10:28 has no allusion to spirit.

On the image of God—my brother affirms that it pertains to the Spirit. The Book itself says—"Let us make man in our image;" and in the image of God made he him." Upon the "organization" of God I remark in my brother's own language. "It is an untaught question." He has affirmed or directly implied that God and all spirits have an organization. See his first letter. Perhaps he will tell us whether they are "conditioned in time and space." I shall not deny that this image was imprinted upon the moral and intellectual faculties of man; but his physical organization is essential to these; they cannot exist without it.

My acknowledgement of the college illustration is perverted. I never said the college illustrated the nature of man. If my brother and his pupils and co-laborers in the Southern Illinois College should all unite with the Michigan University, would that institution be "the Southern Illinois College?" He might call it so; but it would not be so. The Illinois Institution has ceased to exist!

He says I claim that the spirit of man becomes extinct. I said God will destroy soul and body in gehenna: I never said the spirit becomes "extinct" in "the death all men die:" It "returns to God." And, by the way, will my brother please tell us where the spirit does go. He says it goes to God, to sheol under the earth, a hollow chamber inside the globe, and to Christ. Which is right?

I had too good an opinion of my brother's intellect to anticipate that he would fall into the weakness of substitution of definitions of a generic term. But he is not ashamed to say—"If spirit means breath or disposition [in Eccl. 12:7] as God is spirit also, an Almighty breath or disposition is to receive breath or disposition." Is he willing to risk his reputation as a logician upon this palpable non sequitur? I hope for his credit it was but a slip of the pen.

My brother is mistaken in supposing I complained of his severity. I never thought him "severe." I only showed the application of the lawyer's adage—"that when a man has no case he attacks his opponent personally."

The reader is aware that by a misunderstanding I gained an advantage in space over my brother. He, as he has a perfect right to do, insists that the equilibrium shall be restored; hence in my fourth fifth and this response, I have not had room to refer to all the points of my brother's affirmative argument. I have made it a point to give the main and direct argument the preference, and then attend to as much of the less relleevant matter as my space would allow. I do not speak of this to complain, but simply to explain my silence upon certain points.

Not long since we were asked whether Mrs. H. B. Stowe was a Spiritualist. Let the following verses of her composition answer. She says of the dead:

Sweet hearts around us throb and beat,
  Sweet helping hands are stirred;
And palpitates the veil between
  With breathings almost heard.

And in the hush of rest they bring
  'Tis easy now to see
How lovely and how sweet a pass
  The hour of death may be.

To close the eye and close the ear,
  Wrapped in a trance of bliss,
And gently laid in loving arms,
  To swoon to that—from this.

Scarce knowing if we wake or sleep,
  Scarce asking where we are,
To feel all evil sink away,
  All sorrow and all care.

Sweet souls around us watch us still,
  Pass nearer to our side;
Into our thoughts, into our prayers,
  With gentle helpings glide.

Let death between us be as naught—
  A dried and vanished stream;
Your joy be the reality,
  Our suffering life the dream.

OUR LETTER BOX.

From Wm. McCullock, Cobden, Ill.

Through the invitation of Brn. Lawver and Childs, I came to this place to hold up the glorious truths of the Bible to the gaze of any and all who would come but to hear. The first meeting was at Lamar's Hall, Feb. 17. A goodly number were in attendance, including two Baptist ministers. The interest was good, but the mud was very deep and traveling very bad. For Sunday at 11 a. m. Lawver had given out an appointment for me at the Hare S. H. four miles east of Cobden. So through mud and timber, up bluff and down again, we plodded our way till we arrived at our appointment in time. Found a house filled to overflowing with attentive listeners. Many expressed a strong desire for us to remain or come again. Returning to Cobden at night we found the Hall again well filled—four Baptist ministers out to hear on the subject of Man in Death. The best of attention was given to the sermon, but it appeared to disturb the the quiet of one of the good parsons in attendance, who concluded to follow me on the next evening by way of reply. But his own definition of the soul was fatal to his argument; for, said he, "the soul is that which thinks!" to which we said, Amen. But on he went from one conclusion to another, without logic, or argument, or Bible proof, telling us that death was separation from the body, and separation from God, etc., etc. Finally man died to get to God, but yet did not die after all.

The following evening I replied, or applied, the word of the Lord, which showed the fallacy of his reasoning. For the next evening I concluded to show from Bible testimony that man though dead, would live again, and found the problem solved in the same book where the problem is stated. If a man die shall he live again? But the venerable Elder could not think or believe that man really dies, notwithstanding Job 14:10 says he does. Well, that we have to leave to him and his God.

Next I showed him when man would get his reward. This the Elder found to be off the same piece; and he could not consent to wait till Jesus comes, and the resurrection for his reward; so he said Paul wanted to die, and go and be with the Lord. One can see to what extremities men are pushed by theory, viz: Death, is to be separated from the body; to go and be with the Lord; then, by some sharp or mysterious turn (but not of logic) death is separation from God; and lastly there is no such thing as death; it is all separation. And I firmly believe in some kind of separation, even without death. i. e. separation from Scripture, logic or reason, all to bolster up a favorite theory.

Next I showed the destiny of the wicked. This brought another rejoinder from the venerable Dr. Ives, who has been the principal speaker in opposition. The truth of God stands firm as the everlasting hills. Yea, more. Though the mountains fall, and the earth move like a cottage, God's word will abide forever.

I next reviewed the doctor's arguments (if arguments they could be called). This brought out another speaker in defence of the immortal soul theory, and speaking or hallooing, it was, for all reviewing my arguments. His first effort was to misrepresent what I said, and then insist and continue to affirm, what I did not say. His whole effort was to befog and no elucidate the the truth; to turn away the mind from what I had preached. My opponent remarks that a wounded flutters; and I responded that we had just had an example of that truth. I trust some seed has been sown here in "Egypt" that will spring up and bear fruit. Many, heretofore, uninterested ones, are now anxious to hear more. I hope to visit this field again soon; it is all ripe for the harvest. Who will be the laborers? Brn. Lawver and Childs are doing what they can, but they cannot do it all. Who will help?

The Times.

AT HOME.

" " " March 7 saw one of the severest snow storms of the winter.

" " " The comet-to-strike-the-earth-next-August hoax still attracts some attention.

" " " Be careful in the use of kerosene. It is dangerous at best. You can't be too careful.

" " " There is a persistent attempt to create an excitement concerning the "Black Hills Gold Fields," and it is feared that many frantic fortune-seekers will be deluded into expensive searches for their imaginary treasures, the profits of which will pass into the speculators' pockets.

" " " Perhaps the course of no political body in our day has caused such popular disappointment as that of the present so-called "Reform" legislature of New York. The Witness relates the details of the latest system of bribery, and adds: "All these things show how we are advancing, and how refined our very baseness may become—even so near like an honest business transaction, that a member of a Reform Legislature can fill his pockets without a qualm of his honorable conscience. Bribery is becoming one of the 'fine arts.'"

" " " The Journal tells the story of distressing shipwrecks on the New England coast in a late storm. The Gloucester Advertiser thus bears testimony to the value of the reports of the Signal Service Bureau.

"Not long since, on a perfectly calm day, with a clear sky, about fifty vessels were seen lying at anchor in one of our harbors, on account of a coming storm predicted by the weather bureau. How many lives were saved by this single prediction it is impossible to say, but one such occurrence alone is sufficient to justify all the expense the Government has incurred in establishing and maintaining the service. It has been clearly shown that if we had had cable communication with the Island of St. Thomas, and a signal station there, we should have known of the cyclone's recent visit to the Florida coast three days in advance of its coming, and most of the vessels which encountered it would have taken refuge in time in some harbor. The service, as it is already organized, is of incalculable advantage to farmers and seafarers."

" " " The revelations of the man Garvey, who has turned States' evidence, during the trial of Mayor Hall, are confirmatory of the worst charges that have been made against the villainous ring that formerly ruled the city of New York. They show, in substance, that the officers of the city and county told him how much money they wanted for certain purposes, and that he, as a contractor for jobs of plastering on public buildings, thereupon drew up bills to cover the sum, which were promptly paid, and the proceeds divided. It is to be hoped that his evidence will send all those unconscionable scoundrels to the State prison, and there will be a general regret that Garvey cannot be made to accompany them. Among other things, he testified that his claim of $412,600, which has been allowed, "for work done," was in great part fraudulent; that he actually received only thirty-five per cent. of the amount thus drawn from the city treasury—the rest being divided between Tweed and his Tammany ring thieves.

ABROAD.

" " " The Sclavonic World of Prague says the Prince of Servia is about to marry a Russian princess, and it predicts from this alliance a no less important result than the driving of the Turks from Europe.

" " " One hundred persons were suddenly drowned recently by the caving in of a portion of the bank of the Han River, in China. The jilty, houses, boats and people all found a watery grave together.

" " " The payment of two millards of the of the war indemnity, together with the interest to date on the remaining three millards, was completed at Strasbourg on the 7th. This gives France the entire control of six departments, in which she is allowed to maintain as large a military force as she desires. Is this a privilege?

" " " Bohemian affairs excite some attention in Europe, as her people are agitating the idea of independence. It is feared that Prussia may seek a pretext in this agitation for interference in Austrian affairs, pleading the interests of the large German population in Bohemia. The Daily Witness (N. Y.) says: It is no wonder that European statesmen who are interested in the maintenance of the status quo, see in this agitation a possible future danger. They do not wish the balance of power to be rudely disturbed. It might be difficult to restore the equilibrium. The Great Powers are all preparing for war; and there is much feverish anxiety lest a spark should prematurely explode the magazine. The European situation is certainly not by any means assuring. The very cry of "Peace, peace," shows that there is no real peace.

" " " Accounts come from Persia that the famine still exists in all its intensity, especially in the two chief towns—Teheran and Ispahan. The world's generosity seems to be only for those who are in the world of telegraph wires and railroad lines. The magnificent charity showered upon Chicago shows how great that generosity is, and the pitiful story of the Persian plague shows that one nation really sympathizes with another only when they are linked together by common interests. Persia is emphatically outside the charmed circle, and the Persians are dying at the rate of three thousand a day, with scarcely a hand lifted to succor them. If they were in Europe, Europe would long since have checked the famine that produced the plague. There is a glamour about Asia that makes everything there seem unreal, so that the ghastly pictures that reach us now and then, of women and children fighting for morsels of food and dropping dead from disease along the roadside, seem but a fiction instead of a fearful fact.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

" " " Rome forgets nothing, and as evidently learns nothing. One would think the most ignorant and bigoted priest would know better than to throw in the face of the world at this day such utterances as these, made in a late sermon by Herr Kinzleman of Gestross, reported in the Kempton (Bavaria) Gazette.

"We priests," he says, "are above the governments, above the emperor, kings, and princes, as much as the heavens are above the earth. The kings and princes of the earth are as far behind us priests as lead is distant from the purest gold. The angels and archangels are much below priests; for we can, in the face of God, pardon sins, what angels and archangels have never been able to do. We are above the Mother of God, for Mary never gave birth to Christ but once, whilst we priests, we create and produce Him every day. Again, to a certain degree, the priests are above God himself; for God must be, at any time, and in every place, at our disposal; he must, on being ordered, descend from heaven at the consecration of the Mass. God, it is true, has created the world by using these words, 'Be it;' but we, with these words, we create God himself. Therefore, at those times when faith and Christianity were still flourishing, the clergy were held in great honor. The people, the emperor himself, the kings, used to kneel before the priests; they kissed the soil trodden by their feet, whilst, in our days, governments dare to persecute the sacerdoce, and make laws which threaten with the punishment of confinement in a fortress, the priests devoted to their faith, and eager for its defense."

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

We are sorry to learn that Br. R. P. Hoge has been compelled by ill health to resign his charge at Sparland, Ill., and indeed give up preaching altogether. At his last protracted meeting he preached three times sitting in his chair. All will see he held on to the gospel plow to the last moment. He requests the prayers of the church that he may be healed. ——The interest at Greenfield, Iowa, is good. The people never heard, until Br. Clark came there, the glorious gospel of the kingdom. The true light is now shining.——A little church has been organized by T. S. Giddings and others, at Intermediate Lake, Mich.——Br. J. A. Newton is about removing from Minnesota to Pennsylvania, near Edenboro.——Br. Vance Porter has located with the Volga, Ind. church, as their pastor. A good church and good shepherd.——Br. Barnes baptised three souls in Salem, Mass., the last Sunday in February.——Lavalle, Wis., now has the advantages of a railroad, and the brethren wish passing preachers to call.——Br. E. McCullock writes that Br. Babcock's visit at Nevada, O., was much blessed to the church. Three souls were baptised, five added to the church, a nine in all for the month.——Br. P. S. Buck will settle with the church at Iron Hill and Bridgeport, Iowa. He recently held a debate at North Bend, Jackson Co., with good results.——The late meetings at Genoa, were productive of much good, and Br. Burington is much encouraged.——Br. Jacob Wilbor has just been "out west," but apologizes for neglecting us by saying "the express train would not stop." We trust soon to be located where our friends will no longer have this excuse for passing us by.——A friend in Brooklyn, Iowa, sends us a programme of a recent church theatrical performance in that place "to raise money for church purposes." The "great historical drama, Deborah," was succeeded by "the farce, Betsey Baker." As if the whole thing were not a farce in the name of religion. Shame! shame on the churches that thus lower the standard of piety and administer pleasure to the world for a few paltry dollars.——Br. A. F. Dugger writes that he is unwell, and unable to come to the Lewis Conference. He is in a new field, where the people are giving up singing "a never-dying soul to save." Naturally they have sent for some Minstrels.——Br. Jonas Wendell has been holding meetings not far from Edenboro Pa. Eight have been converted, and it is said one of the churches there expects to deal with about thirty of its members as heretics! The United Brethren preacher took hold in earnest and helped Br. W.——Br. P. S. W. Deyo has baptised 12 at Little Cedar Creek, Iowa. 23 more have pledged themselves to be the Lord's, and the work is still onward. Br. Wilber is with him.——Br. Deyo expects to visit Pine Island, Minn., soon. Any wishing a call from him can address him at Charles City, Iowa.——Br. J. M. Snook is recovering, but says his physician forbids his thinking of preaching any more for at least a year. Sad news.——Calling at Br. Burr's the other day we found Sr. B. at home and quite well again, but with three sick children. However all are now convalescent.

The Christian Life.

It takes good people to have good meetings. Christians who serve God at home have little difficulty in worshiping him when assembled. But men who live in sin at home are not changed by going to church. A man who would rather talk, and joke, and smoke, than pray; or one who prefers a newspaper or a novel to his Bible when at home, is not changed in heart or nature by stepping into a prayer meeting, or mingling with people who love the Lord. He was dead out of meeting, and he is dead when in it.

Christian Resignation.

There is a resignation with which, it may be feared, most of us deceive ourselves. To bear what must be borne, and submit to what cannot be resisted, is no more than what the unregenerate heart is taught by the instinct of animal nature. But to acquiesce in the afflictive dispensations of Providence; to make one's own will conform in all things to that of our heavenly Father; to say to him in the sincerity of faith, when we drink of the bitter cup, "Thy will be done;" to bless the name of the Lord as much from the heart when he takes away as when he gives, and with a depth of feeling which perhaps, none but the afflicted heart is capable—this is the resignation which religion teaches, this the sacrifice which it requires.—Southey in "The Doctor."

Sunshiny Christians.

Theodore L. Cuyler gives, through the Independent, four "recipes" for securing sunshine in the soul.

1. Look at your mercies with both eyes; at your troubles and trials with only one.

2. Study contentment. In these days of inordinate greed and self-indulgence keep down the accursed spirit of grasping. What they don't have makes thousands wretched.

3. Keep at some work of usefulness. Active Christians are seldom troubled with the blues. Work for Christ brings heart-health.

4. Keep your heart's window always open toward heaven. Let the blessed light of Jesus' countenance shine in; It will turn tears into rainbows. The author of "Nearer, my God, to thee," has sweetly sung,—

> "He sendeth sun, he sendeth shower;
> Alike they're needful to the flower;
> And joys and tears alike are sent
> To give the soul fit nourishment.
> As comes to me or cloud, or sun,
> Father! thy will, not mine, be done."

"Giving is Love's Only Sign."

Let us begin in the nursery, and there teach our children the pleasure of giving. Let it be to them as much a matter of course, each in his small way, to give as to receive. How much simpler and more natural, as well as more Christian like, is this training than its converse. Even from a mere outside-world view, how lovely and attractive is this grace of giving; how it adorns and enriches the character! Then, how much more is it, from the Christian stand-point, both a duty and a privilege.

The family mission-box, in which the children, as well as the elders, have an interest, is one good way of developing the love of giving; and a little hearty ingenuity on the part of fathers and mothers will be sufficient to vary and amplify this means. But it must be made a live interest to them, with some tangible meaning and result; something that shall take hold of, them, and that they can take hold of too. Then they will not be likely to think of the mission-box as something that only swallows up th ir grudgingly given pennies, without ever making a return which they can appreciate.

"Who loved me and gave himself for me"—this is the key-note of all true giving, whether of money, of personal effort, or of the heart's love. If Jesus loved, and therefore gave, can we do aught else? There is an old saying, that the child that is born on a Friday will be "loving and giving." It is a good putting of the doctrine; the two go always together as root and branch; and it is from the one great giving on the cross, upon the world's Good Friday, that all true "loving and giving" is learnt. Let us prayerfully cultivate the spirit of our Master; giving, and teaching our children to give, the service of grateful, self-denying hearts and lives, "until we come into his everlasting kingdom."

> Love ever lives beneath the cross,
> Ready for sacrifice and loss,—
> Still proving by this seal divine,
> That giving is love's only sign.

—Witness.

EDITOR'S JOURNAL.

Monday, Feb. 26. Went to Dansville, N. Y., and was met at the depot of the new railroad by Brn. Cogswell and N. Withington. I had but little time to see my friends, and get to my appointment at Springwater at night, and so made the most of it. First I enjoyed a pleasant call with Br. Cogswell and family, with whom I used to visit when at "Our Home," some eleven years ago. They have ever been kind friends to me and mine. Br. C. is President of the New York Conference. He told me that they were never more appreciated by the public than now. Doors are opening everywhere, and the harvest is plentiful and the laborers few. "What," said he, "shall we do for laborers?" I replied that it was the same all over the West. A wide and effectual door is open. The cry from all quarters is, "Come over and help us!"

I next called upon Mrs. Niles, whose kindness to me and mine in afflictions of bygone years will never be forgotten. Her excellent husband now sleeps, and she is left to toil and care. She is hopeful and cheerful, realizing that God is truly "the widow's God."

Next I made my way to "Our Home on the Hillside." Eleven years ago this month I came here sick, and expected to die. I remained five months under the care of Dr. James C. Jackson, in which time I regained my health, and have done as much or more work since that time as in any ten years of my life. The "Home" is a great success. When I arrived I inqired for Dr. Jackson. "He is lecturing to the patients in the Hall," was the reply. And I found him in the midst of one of his instructive and cheering lectures. As I entered I saw before me about one hundred patients. I was greeted by name by the Doctor, and my case was referred to as one of encouragement for them. He remarked, "That [illegible] is not dying. No, he is not dying, look at him." And when he closed his lecture, he told the patients that I would tell them after dinner how I got my health. I said my engagement would not allow that: it must be now or not at all. The dinner gong rang, but, said the Doctor, "never mind the dinner—Br. Himes, take the stand, and tell my patients something about your sickness and recovery." I then stated the main facts in the case, briefly, and spoke words of comfort and encouragement to the congregation of invalids. At the close I was warmly greeted by Drs. Austin, Whiteker, and the rest of the physicians, with many others, both of the family, guests, and patients. We had a splendid "Graham" dinner. It looked and tasted old-fashioned. Dinner disposed of, Br. Withington took me to Springwater. We had a cold ride over the hills, arriving just in season to get warm before meeting. Br. Warren J. Hobbs, the pastor, gave me a cordial welcome, and introduced me to a fine audience, to whom I spoke on the first and second advents of Christ. At the close many old and dear friends gathered around, who spoke of their sorrow in relation to my son Edwin's death. He lived here for a considerable time, and was greatly beloved.

The Advent church in Springwater, having no place of worship, and being shut out from other churches, were brought to a stand. "Shall we disorganize and die, or rise, build and live." Br. Hobbs, like Nehemiah, encouraged them to "rise and build." They did so, and now have the best house in town, and the largest audience. Better than all, God is with them. I would be glad to remain for a time, and help them, as they desire, but it is impossible.

Tuesday, Feb. 27. Visited quite a number to-day, both sick and well. Among them, Br. A. Wiley and family. He is now seventy-five years old, but active and smart. He has done much towards building the new chapel, and perhaps been more active than any other man to put the matter through. He with others showed me over the chapel, and spoke of their plans for sheds and other conveniences, with their lecture and conference rooms. It is really altogether a splendid affair. And, with unity, I see no reason why they may not prosper in the Lord.

Wednesday, Feb. 28. Took leave of friends in Springwater, and returned to Rochester. Br. Whitmore was called away to see the sick, so I worked alone. I spoke from 2 Cor. 5:13-17. "If one died for all, then were all dead, and they which live should not live to themselves, but unto him who died for them." A good number resolved to live for Christ henceforth.

Thursday, Feb. 29. This is the last day of the last winter month; and the cold is severe. It does not look much like the time of the singing of birds, or the trees putting forth their buds. Still spring is at hand, and one-sixth part of 1872 is gone. How swiftly our time flies away. Soon eternity will be here. The coming of Jesus draws nigh. Let us be ready.

Among the many I have visited today from house to house, I called upon Br. Taylor, in the Hospital. Strange to say, he is doing well. His limbs are healing up, and his general health improving. I read and prayed with him. He enjoys the hope of eternal life. He has had a hair-breadth escape.

In the evening I spoke from Col. 1:21-23, on reconciliation.

For many years whenever I have preached in Rochester, I have had Lindley Moore, a distinguished member of the Society of Friends, among my best hearers. He did not embrace our views fully, but was greatly interested, and fully endorsed some of them. In this visit I do not meet him. He died just before I came. I learn that the speaker at his funeral referred to his views pertaining to the Advent and future life, which made a profound impression upon the enlightened audience. It is said that some of his brethren sympathized with him in his ideas: but I do not know to what extent. In connection with these facts my attention was called to the recent movement in the Society of Friends in holding "revival meetings." They commenced a meeting in the First Methodist church to-day. I turned aside to worship with them in the forenoon service. The audience was made up of all classes, and all denominations. There were eight or ten of their preachers, male and female, present.

First an aged sister made an earnest prayer. Then a brother and leading man set forth the order and object of their meetings, and invited all to unite with them to seek the blessing of the higher life. He then read from Mat. 3:11 and 12, and gave an exposition of it, in accordance with the views of George Fox, their great leader. The baptism of the Spirit, he said, superceded that of water; and, dispensing with forms, men must in quiet and faith seek the Spirit, and seek its full baptism. A sister followed in a stirring appeal for all to come to Christ, and receive his blessing. Many were moved to tears, and the general impression was good. In the p. m. they gave notice that they would open the doors to all who were seeking entire sanctification. In this they agree with the Methodists, only they seek in silence, rather than noisy demonstrations of prayer. The true idea with them is to get near to God. They all feel a want; something is lacking. The old Quaker spirit is dying, or has died out, and they are making an effort at resuscitation. Some of their leading spirits have planned this demonstration, and are uniting with others to seek the higher life. The Methodists, having lost the power enjoyed in the days of the Wesleys, are happy to unite in this movement in order to get a better state of things. In all this we see the strugglings of dissatisfied souls, seeking God, and desiring to be filled with his love and power. But they will not find what they wish in attempts to revive Quakerism, or old-fashioned Methodism, but would find it in the truth! "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth."

I however deeply sympathize in this good work of getting nearer to God. "Nearer my God to thee," is my constant prayer, and I have felt the blessedness of the privilege of a greater nearness of late than ever in my long life. My closet seasons have never been more sweet, nor the family prayer, and the conference and prayer meeting, and public worship. My prayer still is—

> "Nearer my God to thee,
> E'en though it be a cross,
> That raiseth me."

Friday, March 1. Attended the Friend's meeting this a. m. The theme was sanctification, to get ready to die, and go to Jesus. One brother spoke of readiness to die and go to Jesus, but added that there was yet another view of this matter. The dead would be raised and have victory over death and the grave, when Christ would say, "Come ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." But the next speaker, a lady, after making a thrilling appeal to get ready to die, closed with the words of Pope,

> "Vital spark of heavenly flame,
> Quit, oh, quit this mortal frame."

—"O grave where is thy victory! O death where is thy sting," ignoring the resurrection.

I called to-day upon a Romanist family. They heard that Christ was coming soon. It startled them. They had no Bible, but purchased one at once, and read it to find out the truth of the matter. The result was conversion, and a union with the Advent church. They are a truly happy and faithful family.

We have worked hard to-day looking up the wandering ones, and cheering the faithful. At night spoke on the "blessed hope." (Tit. 2:13.) This subject has a peculiar ring. It wakes, it cheers, and brings us nigh to God.

Saturday, March 2. I spent the day in Lockport, with the relatives of my son Edwin's widow, Mrs. Vincent, and children. They feel deeply, and are very sorrowful at the death of Edwin. The church here, also, deeply sympathize with us. Edwin gathered the scattered elements here some years ago, and organized them into a church. And before Sr. Stoddard came, they had thought of inviting him to become their pastor.

I visited Brn. Reed, Riggs, Mormon, and others. Sr. Stoddard was absent, but I find they are doing well here. Br. Stoddard was one of my earliest fellow-helpers at the Tent Meeting on Arbor Hill, Albany, N. Y., in 1842.

In the p. m. I returned to Rochester, and spoke in the Hall from Jer. 50:3-4. It was a sweet and precious hour. All seemed to feel a deep and fixed purpose, not only to make a covenant with the Lord, but to make it so as never to forget it. The trouble with us is not that we do not make promises, or covenants, but we do not keep them. Oh! that we may all be faithful, and never backslide any more.

CLOSE OF MY WORK AT ROCHESTER.

Sabbath, March 3. We had communion this morning instead of evening, to accommodate some from the country. The season was marked with solemnity and power. The Lord truly made himself known to us in the breaking of the loaf. The Sabbath-school and Bible classes were full of life and interest. The late converts are taking part in them, and they will be profited, as the subjects discussed are of a character to give them both light and growth in the great practical questions of the Bible.

I conversed with a number of friends between services, that are becoming interested again in the truth. How many snares Satan has to entrap the unwary and lead them from God. We should guard against the first acts of departure from God, and hold with a firm hand the promises, and continue in unceasing prayer. We are safe only when near to God.

We had also a sweet season of worship with Sr. Arnold, who has been so long confined to her bed. The Lord was with us, and while we read the 84th Psalm—"How amiable are thy tabernacles," etc., and then sung the hymn, "Jesus lover of my soul," the Lord manifested his love and power to all the little group who gathered in the sick room. These scenes in the sick chamber will not continue always. Jesus is coming, and when he comes the "shadows will flee," and the kingdom will come.

The Friend's general meeting here has continued with unabated interest. The Holy Spirit has been earnestly sought, and its power has been manifested in this community. Many of the slumbering church members have been aroused to life, and a profound impression has been made.

Churches of all denominations are opened to them to-day, and they divided their speakers, so as to hold a number of meetings. All the places are crowded. Miss Smiley, who lately spoke in Dr. Cuyler's church in Brooklyn, N. Y., producing such an excitement in the Presbytery, is here. No house will hold the people when it is known that she is to speak. She is an earnest, pious lady, and speaks with simplicity and power. I do not know what is to come of this new and singular movement. Jesus is to come soon, and this may lead to a preparation on the part of some, especially as some of these speakers speak of the event as literal.

We had a crowd at night in our Hall. It being my last meeting with this dear people, I commended them to God and the word of his grace, from Paul's address to the Elders of Ephesus. (Acts 20.) I could not preach, but talked. I had freedom in doing so. The power of God was upon us. Some were delivered, and some new converts came out. I see no good reason why the good work should not go on. Br. Whitmore and Sr. Jennings are to continue the meetings.

I have spent the best part of a month with this dear people. Their past history has been a story of trial, but the Lord is greatly blessing them. They are a noble, liberal people. They deserve to succeed, and under the faithful and judicious labors of Br. Whitmore, their young pastor, they will not fail to prosper.

The parting from kind and sympathising hearts was attended with sadness, as well as with the joyous hope of soon meeting again. With us there should be no absence. We meet daily in our closets, and at the family altar, and in the assemblies of the saints, and always in the presence of him who has promised never to leave or forsake us; who has said, "I am with you always, even to the end of the world."

Monday, March 4. Took leave of Br. Whitmore, with whom I had labored so constantly in public, and from house to house, for near a month. We were united in the work, and the church also gave us their hearty sympathy. Parted with Br. Brownell and family, with whom I enjoyed a good home while in Rochester. They have my thanks, with all the rest, for their generous hospitality.

Tuesday, March 5. I met my son William, and Brn. Mansfield and Burr in Chicago, on special business. We have long felt that this was the place for the Publishing Office, and just now an opportunity for the change is offered under circumstances sufficiently favorable to command our serious attention. We have waited upon God for the leadings of his providence. If he shall make the way plain for the change at this time, we shall rejoice to move forward. Otherwise we shall contentedly await his time.

Correspondence.

From Mary A. Tibbets.

In language of the poet, "'Tis done, the great transaction's done." Yes, it is now a matter of fact that an Advent Christian chapel exists at Volga, Ind. Our new and commodious house of worship was dedicated to the worship of God on the eighteenth. Three ministers beside our own present. Dr. D. N. Field, G. W. Green, and Dr. C. H. Cass, all of whom contributed in a most able and interesting manner to the progress of the meeting. And what seemed a special manifestation of the divine favor and that God was pleased to accept our offering to his service, was the gift of one whole week of pleasant cheerful weather in which the people could turn out day and night to hear the gospel preached by "workmen who needed not to be ashamed," but were able to give each their portion in due season. I can scarcely tell you in words the preciousness of our meetings. The many testimonies from loving hearts during the days we were permitted to sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." The congregations were large and attentive, and listened with eager attention to the glorious truths of the gospel. The great Prophetic Chart, as it hung on the wall in front of the audience, with its Bible imagery pointing down to the close of time, showing that the next great event in order, is the coming of our blessed Lord to set up his everlasting kingdom, gave an interest to our meeting unknown before, as but few had ever seen one or heard it explained. I rejoice to tell you that our labor in the Lord was not in vain. Thirteen were received and added to the church, and one more yesterday at the close of Br. Porter's sermon, who with his bride united with us, and was also ordained to the ministry of the word. We trust he will prove a blessing to the church and neighborhood.

We have had some things to mar our peace, as is the case where the work of the Lord is in a prosperous condition. But when we look at our general prosperity, the steady and rapid progress of the work during the severity of the winter, and that in four months from the time the timber was growing in the woods, we had our house complete, nicely painted inside and out, with everything requisite for comfort in its place, and ready for the worship of grateful hearts to the Giver of all our blessings, we feel to exclaim, "What hath God wrought?" And what is also a source of comfort, we do not owe a single dollar to any workman, and only a few dollars to one brother who kindly paid the debts, and will wait until he can be compensated, and would not fret much if he were not paid at all. Thus the Lord has blessed us, and we wish here to record our grateful thanks to our friends who have so kindly aided us in this our struggle to promulgate Bible truth, and also to God who has blessed all our labors with success. We ask the prayers of our brethren and sisters that God would still bless and prosper us.

Dedication at Volga, Ind.

Many of the readers of THE TIMES have heard of Volga, the residence of Br. and Sr. Tibbets, whose contributions to your excellent paper, are always read with interest, especially by all who have had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of these devoted pioneers of the faith in that county. Some four months since, finding themselves disfellowshipped by the sects around them, and driven from the common school-house as a place of peaceable meeting, they said "Let us build a house for the Lord!" At it they went. Your humble servant had the pleasure of seeing their work completed, and of participating with Brn. Field and Green in the dedicatory services, Feb. 16. The house cost $600, and is a standing argument that determined hearts and willing hands can accomplish wonders.

The community is well-to-do in the world, respectable, educated, highly intelligent, an example of good behavior in the Lord's house. How easy to preach to such a congregation, promptly grasping the meaning of your words and the full force of ideas.

Saturday eve Br. Green led the exercises in an able discourse on the Hope of the Gospel. Sunday, a. m., Br. Field spread out Dan. ch. 2 lucidly to the mental eye, enforcing the lesson to the natural eye by reference to the chart—a new method in this locality, which carried the truth concerning the kingdom of God home to many hearts whose minds had hitherto been blinded by guides, who put darkness for light, error for truth, spiritualizing all the vitality out of the gospel, and the kingdom as well. Sunday night I discoursed from 1 John 5: 10, and Luke 23: 43; the themes being the record God gave of his Son, and the contrast between God's word and the common faith. Up to this time ten were added to the church. Monday morning we met in covenant meeting, which was abundantly blessed; we then repaired to the romantic pool prepared by the Master Builder, the mighty Architect of nature, where Br. Field buried an aged sister and young brother in the likeness of their Lord.

Monday night Br. Green gave us one of his best efforts from Rom. 1: 16. Tuesday morning, prompted by imperious necessity, Br. G. and myself with deep regret bade adieu to this dear people and returned to our homes, leaving Br. Field to continue a good work begun by his labors and God's blessing only some eight months ago, the aggregate results of which are some thirty members, a nice church and a standing invitation to all worthy Advent preachers to "come over and help" them. Such examples as this of the Volga church are eminently useful in these selfish times. May God bless all the waiting ones at Volga, and elsewhere. C. H. CASS.

Special Conference Report.

(Continued from First Page.)

want to put the new covenant where it does not belong. Pile quoted from Deut. 26: 27—"He that confirmeth not," etc.

Hemenway—What does Br. Brown mean by "confirm?"

Brown—I suppose it means to make sure; so that it will never fail.

Pratt—God makes the covenant himself. He says, if you do so and so, blessings will follow; if not, curses. What will it be to confirm the covenant? To bring these blessings or curses. Who will confirm it? Somebody else has got to do that. I say to my child, if you are a good boy I will bring you something; otherwise I will punish you. To confirm that is to do what he did to the Jews. The Savior says, these be the days of vengeance, etc. Nobody had confirmed the latter part of that covenant. It was not confirmed to that people, but "to you and to your seed." We go down a great many generations, and it is the Jewish people still. The leader that came did destroy the city, did confirm the covenant in beleiging the city, did take away the daily, and so it is fulfilled.

Barbour. Br. Pratt confuses the idea of word and covenant. Is it necessarily the same thing?

Pratt—I will read one verse. Dan. 9: 11. (Here quoted)———hath confirmed his words." It refers to the covenant.

Cunningham—The word covenant in Deut. and the word covenant in Daniel, come from the same Hebrew word. It must be the same in both instances. It cannot apply to Christ. God used the Roman army as his scourge. The seventy weeks are for the restraining of the transgression that length of time. Kah-lah is to restrain,—always rendered with the sense of restraint. They should be afflicted, but not destroyed till the seventy weeks were ended. After sixty-two weeks from the completion of the wall, Messiah should be cut off.

Pratt—Gabriel comes to instruct about that vision. He says there are seventy weeks allotted to the people and the city. The remainder, or 1810 years, was "the times of the Gentiles."

Pile—The question is whether they are really cut off from the 2300 days. Br. Cunningham said the Romans were simply the scourge in the hands of the Lord. If that be so, the Lord confirmed the covenant. As to the sixty-two weeks, it seems to me the last clause of the twenty-sixth verse is simply an explanation; and that the only commencement of any period is from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem.

Hemenway—In the phrase "confirm the covenant," it is not the covenant, but a covenant. I have no question but what it is the covenant God made with his people. The seventy weeks spanned the whole thing. Then to make the matter clear, the prophet touches events to transpire in the seventy weeks. Who shall confirm the covenant? You apply it to Titus. You chastise a boy with a stick. You chastise him, not the stick. I think God would not apply the word confirm to the stick he used. He would not say the stick, but himself did it.

Green—It is evident that a mistake has been made in this prophecy, and that is in the little word "he." There is only one place to begin; that is, the birth of Christ.

Hobbs—There are five points in the seventy weeks that are fulfilled in Christ. Reference has been made to the sixty-two weeks, that (it?) is translated by some, after the weeks, and that it is identical with the other threescore and two weeks. That would prove conclusively that the last week of the seventy was to bring in everlasting righteousness, etc. This is seen by the connection. He shall cause the——— to cease, not destroy it.

Cunningham—The attempt to make a distinction where there is no difference seems unnecessary;—make to cease, and cause to cease. I have quoted from the Hebrew in order to show that "cut off" is the only correct translation.

Pile—Br. Cunningham is coming to the point. If these sixty-nine weeks are an integral part of the seventy, then it follows that the sixty-nine could not have ended at Christ. The word "determine" does not express what the angel meant to express. It is either cut off, or cut in pieces. The word is generally used in the sense of "cutting off," or divided. The form here is unusual, showing there is a triple division of the seventy weeks. But what evidence have we that the sixty-two weeks commence with the completion of the walls?

Brown—I think we are advancing a little. We must place ourselves a little in the place of Daniel. Gabriel said, Make this man to understand the vision; and he told him what the ram and the goat were, and "then I fainted, and was sick certain days, and was astonished at the vision." The next you hear of Daniel he was praying to God. What about? About the time. Then he is told about the 2300 days. The first thing was the seventy weeks cut off, to restrain transgression, to make reconciliation for iniquity. etc. This was God's time when the Messiah should be cut off.

Pile—Does Br. Brown commence the sixty-nine weeks with the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes?

Brown—Messiah will be cut off in sixty-nine weeks from the first of Cyrus.

Cunningham—The apostle says, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God." I think we had better apply ourselves as Daniel did. We read that seventy weeks are to be cut off upon his people: there will be an attempt made, at a point when it will not do to have that people destroyed. The "restraint" shall commence at this point. If Gabriel had not ceased in his explanation of the vision at that point, i. e., after having explained all the points in the vision except the time, but had continued and explained the time, the 2300 days, with the rest, at his first visit, there would have been no seal on the vision.

Barbour—I believe the coming of the Lord is what we want to learn about; but we do not seem to be coming any nearer together. Suppose this theory, or that, is true; I would rather talk about the coming of the Lord. What interest have we in that? Paul and the apostles did not look any further.

Brown—I do not want to be identified with those who believe that the 2300 days go beyond the end. And I expect that the 1335 days end at the same place. The war commenced with the end of the seventy weeks. There was a seven years' war commencing with A. D. 63. 1810 years will carry us to 1873.

Pile—Have been profited by this meeting. Prophetic time is a proper subject for investigation. The more we keep the Lord's coming before us, the nearer we can live to him.

Brown—When the "restraint" is off, the war will commence. The war will be for seven years, and in the midst of this time the sacrifices should cease. Where do the weeks commence? We can tell by running back from the time the war commenced.

Pile—The trouble is, it does not hit any time. There must be a commencement for the 2300 days, as well as for the 1810. If we run back, it brings us to 428 B. C.

Brown—What of it? Is it anything wonderful that there is a difference of two years? Here we have to depend upon Josephus; but when I get down to A. D. 70, I am at home.

Barbour—If we can make the end in 1873, I would be willing to let it go so; but our other brethren run the 2300 years to 1875, so that they run two years beyond the end.

Cunningham—Br. Brown must show us some event in 428.

Brown—I think there is nothing wonderful if there should be a mistake somewhere.

F. W. Higgins—The question is in reference to the seventy weeks; what portion of the sixty-two, or sixty-nine, or seventy, extend from the death of Christ to the war?

Cunningham—He says in the first place that seventy weeks are cut off upon thy people. Then there is Christ's coming introduced, and the reconciliation for iniquity to be made. Then he says the walls shall be built, and after sixty-two weeks Messiah shall be cut off. There is a distinct work to be accomplished at the termination. When we come to the one week, we have not the Messiah introduced, but the people of the Prince that shall come.

E. G. Higgins—Which part of the seventy weeks reaches to Christ?

Cunningham—They do not terminate at the birth of Christ. The sixty-two and sixty-nine weeks are distinct from each other.

Pile—The transgression was not restrained after 63 A. D. Does it not follow that the four hundred and ninety years must commence with the seventy (?) weeks? How shall we make the four hundred and ninety years reach from Cyrus to Christ?

Brown—I do not believe that four hundred and ninety years commence with the first year of Cyrus. But I believe the sixty-nine weeks do. If they commence together, they end forty-nine years before he was born.

E. G. Higgins. It says first that seventy weeks are cut off, and then that is divided up into sixty-two and seven, which make sixty-nine.

Brown—I don't believe a word of it.

Pratt—If the seventy weeks end with the crucifixion, the 2300 days run out in 1843 somewhere, and we are all afloat. It must have ended when the desolation of Jerusalem commenced. If the Jews' time ended in 63, we have the end in 1873; if in 65, the end is in 1875; if in 70, 1880.

Cunningham—The brother admits the meaning of the word "restrain." When the restraint is taken off, the 490 years end. Josephus was in the war, and it seems that he might settle the matter. (Extract read respecting the last act of the war in 72, when nine hundred slew each other.) The war ended 72 A. D.

AFTERNOON BIBLE CLASS.

Letter read from D. Clow, Janesville, Wis. Sisters invited to speak by Br. Higgins. Br. Barbour spoke on the Commune, as foretold in Revelations. He understood the beast of Rev. 11, Rev. 12 and 7, to be the Roman beast, tracing its various developments to the beast that was, is not, and yet is, which is of (not one of) the seven, being the general uprising of the people for power," or Commune, as the last form.

Br. Pratt spoke of the designs of the Pope to repossess himself of kingly power, and the societies which oppose his plans, and the consequent certainty that those who look for "peace and safety" will be mistaken.

Barbour—When Israel came out of Egypt, the last seven plagues were poured out on the Egyptians alone. So in the last seven plagues, the Lord will hide his people. And the world knows something is coming, yet they know not what.

Pile—Read extract from the Report of the Troy Convention of American Spiritualists, showing the chances of union between Communists and Spiritualists to be consummated soon. Considers the Commune the last form of the Dragon. They aim at a Universal Republic, and Spiritualists aim at the same object.

Br. Brittan thought property would not be worth much in this world soon. It was a good time to draw out what we had. Had nothing himself invested there. It is a great deal better to be burned out than to be burned up. Brethren say they cannot go into the churches, as they cannot get anything there; then go and carry something. Feed my sheep.

THE BIBLE CLASS.

As already mentioned, two hours each day were spent in a general Bible class, each speaker being allowed five minutes, and not to speak more than three times in a session without permission of the class. The hours thus spent were very profitable and interesting. The following are a few of the topics which occasioned considerable discussion:—(1) Did Noah enter the ark seven days prior to, or on the day of the flood? Gen. 7: 11–13 were quoted at proving the latter supposition. (2) Were the words in Mat. 24: 15–22 fulfilled in part at the destruction of Jerusalem, and in part at the papal persecution, or is their fulfillment wholly in the latter? On this, it was clearly proved that the entire passage referred to but one event, and that that was the papal persecution. (3) Are the weeks in Dan. 9: 25, reaching to Messiah the Prince, to be computed from the birth of Christ, or when he entered upon his public ministry, or from his resurrection and ascension? This question elicited a variety of opinions, and its discussion was very animated. (4) Are the "weeks" in Dan. 9: 25 to be considered as wholly distinct from the "seventy weeks" of the preceeding verse; or does v. 25 enumerate the divisions of time into which the seventy weeks are to be divided? In proving this latter, the words "know therefore and understand" were appealed to as being proof that the periods in v. 25 were intimately connected with that of v. 24.

In their rejoinders one to another, as a general thing, kindness and brotherly love were very prominent. A word, however, concerning the general feature of the discussions may not be out of place here. In trying to prove certain positions, after reading portions of Scripture and advancing certain deductions therefrom, the speaker would sometimes close with an appeal something like this: "Now which are you going to believe, the word of God, or men? Let us believe God!" and in a short time one on the other side would close his argument and deductions with the triumphant appeal, "Thus you see what the Bible says on this point. For my part, I choose to believe God!"

Would it not be well for brethren to remember that Christians may differ greatly from one another, and yet each have an abiding faith in the teachings of the Bible? When different views of the same passage are presented, the difference of opinion is not because one believes the Bible and the other does not, but merely because they differ in their interpretation and application of a text which they both firmly believe.

THE PREACHING.

The discussions were confined to the sessions during the day, the evenings being devoted to preaching. Br. Simpson preached the first evening (see supra), and Br. Carpenter the second, who gave a very interesting exposition of the seventh chapter of Daniel. In his remarks he considered France as the Euphrates of mystic Babylon, which was "dried up." (Rev. 16: 12.) On Thursday evening Br. Simpson gave an exposition of Matt. 24, and on Friday evening Br. Pile preached on "The Coming Reign of Terror," in which discourse he argued that the same agencies that produce the French Revolution in the last century; namely, Spiritualism, Infidelity, Socialism, Free-Love, etc., are now working in the world and tending to a similar result. (☞ This discourse is printed in a tract of twenty-four pages, which can be had of the author, Springfield, Mass.)

As a whole, the meeting was undoubtedly profitable; new ideas were developed, and some old ones, supposed indisputable, were found to be unwarranted. So far as a united agreement upon the prophet periods is concerned, no conclusion is reached. The point on which there seemed to be any general unanimity was the ending of the thirteen hundred and thirty-five days in 1873. If any did not endorse this conclusion, they made no public statement to that effect. Harmony prevailed, and the meeting assured all that brethen can dwell together in unity, even though not agreed in all their opinions. C. E. BARNES, Sec'y.

Two boys were conversing about Elijah's ascent in the chariot of fire. Said one: "Wouldn't you be afraid to ride in such a chariot?" "No," was the reply, "not if God drove."

Advent Christian Times.

BUCHANAN, ... MICHIGAN

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, March 5, 1878.

Business Agent's Department.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

Is published weekly by the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association, at Buchanan, Mich.

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

☞ THE TIMES maintains the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event "nigh at hand;" his personal reign and the saint's inheritance in the earth renewed; the atonement; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection; the finite nature of evil; the final destruction of the wicked; personal holiness and entire consecration to God on the part of the believer, and kindred Bible truths.

The officers of the Association are a Board of Trustees, as follows:

JOSHUA V. HIMES, President,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Vice President,
L. P. FOX, Treasurer,
WILLIAM L. HIMES, Secretary,
FRANK BURR, Auditor.
A. S. CALKINS, L. H. DAVIS, D. MATHEWSON, } Pub. Committee.
N. FIELD, H. G. McCULLOCH, L. C. COLLINS. } Editorial Com.

JOSHUA V. HIMES, Business Agent,
To whom all communications should be addressed

Paul's Expectation and Desire.

This tract, which has never been excelled upon the subject vindicated, is now ready. Paper covers. Price: Two copies, post-paid, 18c; 20 copies for $1. Don't fail to read and lend it.

"Good Tidings."

This is a book prepared by Elds. Couch, Sheldon, Grant, and Himes. It covers a wide range of topics—Prophecy, Future Punishment, the Nature of Man, and the Saint's Inheritance. $1 in cloth; 80c. in paper.

Harps Etc.

We are out of Harps, and of Eld. Grant's works bound in one volume. New editions are preparing. When copies of them are received we will fill orders immediately. Our friends will be patient until then.

Field's Discussion.

For some time this desirable work has been out of print. The main topic is the Intermediate State, or Condition of the Dead. When a new edition was announced, some of the Doctor's old Disciple friends announced that they would buy and circulate it as soon as ready, because they thought it would help their side—that Mr. Connolly had the best of the argument. We shall soon know whether they really so felt, or were indulging mere bragadocio. The book has not yet made any converts to immaterialism that we have heard of; but we have learned of its bringing not a few to adopt the Bible theory.

The book has heretofore been sold at one dollar. The present edition is in paper covers (pp 315), and will be sent post-paid for 50c. We hope for liberal orders.

Prophetic Chart.

Shall this projected Map of Symbolic Prophecy be published? Turn to the description of it in late numbers of THE TIMES, and see if it is not just what every church and minister needs. Will you take one? One Hundred Subscribers are are needed to ensure success.

John S. Lawver, M. S. Geer, Eld. J. Raymond, C. C. Marston, F. Burr, the Chicago church, D. O. Hink, "I. C. Wellcome. J. F. Huber, Grand St. (N. Y.) church, Auburn (Ill.) church, C. Libby (pd.), R. R. York, Wm. M. Hall, J. C. Stone, W. E. Brown, M F Wistrom, R. W. Wilson, R. M. Lampard, Clinton (Io) Church, Lapeer Church.

Who will help fill up the list?

Besides the above, Daniel Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has offered to give one of his $160 Hand-raking Reapers, if sold soon, for $130. See advertisement.

To Correspondents.

M. A. TIBBETTS. Will send Harps for that am't.. L. J. PALMER. Please give us your P. O. ADDRESS.. Will J. R. D who sent three dollars for LIMNS and Almanac, give us his P. O. Address, and name plainly written.....E. H. BURINGTON. Had none of the last mentioned. Sent the rest.....J. M. CHAPPEL. Will reply as soon as we can get time. .....J. LOWREY. Many thanks for your cheering letter....H. G. McCULLOCK. Do as you say....R. AUSTIN. You forgot to give any Post Office Address. Please forward it.

RESPONSES.

Previously acknowledged....................$000.14

E Williamson	20	J Rupley	75
D H Allen	50	L Dickenson	25
D D Cooper	1 00	Sarah Floyd	10 00
E S Votaw	25

Pledges—Paid.

G K Merrill		A C Manning	3 00
C G White	1 00	Mary Briggs	50
T T Stone	3 00	D McNabb	1 00

Letters Received,

TO SATURDAY, MARCH 9.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgment is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

J Earl
J Lowrey
M A Griffin
J M Conner
J A Smith
W K Colling
A Williamson
A W Tucker
H M Singleka
E Weston
P & W Deyo
E E Sturgeon
R Austin
G K Merrill
A D Durham
G W Wimbish
J W Wendall
J Scarce
L F Bower
L Scott
M Hathaway
J P Morse
E C Jewsbury
S P Whitney
L J Palmer
C Fitzsimmons
E Wedding
S J Keve
W S Page
J E Baldwin
J Rapley
J Vannest
C G White
W McCollock
O A Baker
T C H
P Heller
R Tuttle
C C Fosdick
J Lewis
M Briggs
J Raymond
J Mechan
M J Stearns
M B Hubbell
H M Stone
J W Ellis
P W Matts
A F Dugger
J Eaton
N G Hunter
J M Snook
E S Votaw
A W Ward
A E Babcock
N Stevens
J Sober

J Rector
Geo Middleton
A Matthews
J H Anderson
H Fallett
V Hunt
S G Huntley
C K Alford
A C Manning
E B Scott
M S Stephens
G K Merrill
C M Pierce
R N Orton
E C Andrus
R Lewis
R Martin
Dr P Martin
T C Robinson
H M Waters
L F Hovey
P Duryea
G Frazier
C C Stambro
M Holcomb
W Miller
H C Cooke
L Dickenson
H McGaw
D A Allen
E Losmer
F W Lombard
A B Stillson
W McIntyre
W Kirkpatrick
C Harrington
S F Gould
C E Shaw
T H C Dow
S W Van Dyke
J F Lisville
W F Talley
D Day
E B Scott
J Loucks
J Overall
W W Worden
L P Brisack
A Eden
C M Shepard
L C Collins
H M Wheeler
L F Field
T Wilson
C Chandler
A Crippen
J Pine
D H Darnall
J Lowry
J S Lawver
T Davidson
C W Waterhouse
W N Pile
W S Cooke
C C Marston
A M Gladding
M A Tibbetts
L A Meigs
D S Clark
S C Wellcome
H A Plank
H J Hart
J Henderson
S J Ball
J A Newton
E C Andrus
P W Hough
J A Blackmar
E S Gard
H Carter
J Bower
J P Major
A Wheeler
A Farrow
W C Hicks
S R Barnham
H H Tucker
S Bjorklund
D M Harvis
M Hammack
W S Hathaway
W H McCulloch
G T Adams
E Nichols
R H Evans
C H Sawin
A L Dresser
E Williamson
J Bailey
W W Cate
D Hansen
A C Heetson
R C Miller
D M Nye
C C Skipp
L L Reed
N Mills
E McCulloch
J G Smith
E H Durand 2
E B Barlington
J E Preston
I C Wellcome
P W Hough
C S Hubble
J Van Meter
J M Tozier
C Jennings
E Lister
D O Hink 2
V Hunt
A Veeder
F Wright
T F Sargent
J Powel
W F Towsley
D Weaver
R T Greggory
J H Sympson
E R Scott
D N Laing
J Wilver
C K Barnes
G Dawson
L Davis
D W Griffin
W Nichols
A H Low
J M Snook
L Campbell
J H Whitmore
M A Thompson
W H Hacking
J Morton
E B Scott
J McGill
M E Orr
G Wright
Dr Drummond
J F Carpenter
A Mahaley
W W Marden
F G Williams
H Zaremba
T C Smith
F M Berry
H Y Wilkinson
W Denton
G W Miller
A C Heetson
W Dunbar
S Stringer
M B Hubbell
E Lassbkin
H A Manson
J Raymond
S A Carpenter
C E Thompson
E K Graves
S Potter
O D Benton
J M Stouffer
J Heaton
L Smith
C H Russell
D S Clark
H H Tooker
P B Livingston
A A Gilbert
A F Dugger
R P Hoge
J M Chappell
J S Lawver
H A King
I Adrian
S D Gibson
W S Wimbish
D S Clark

Books and Tracts by Mail.

A F Dugger 2
M E Green
N N Davis
J Wendall
Wm Denton 2
J W Ellis
A B Loe
W S Wimbish 2
S M Hayden
R T Gregory
J A Smith
J Allen
J Raymond 4
C K Barnes
E S Votaw
H Zaremba
L F Bower
E E Sturgeon 2
M J Stearns
E C Andrus 2
M A Tibbetts
C Fitzsimmons
S G Huntley
D M Harvis
C E Alford
W Paxton
M Hunt
M Hammack
M Grant
W Ingmire
J Langley
E Williamson
W L Cocke
R M Lamphere
V Hunt
C C Marston
J Marin
L Scott
E Wedding
F Adell
E A Marsh
J W Farrow
A Farrow 2
J Bower
W C Hicks 2
G W Hurd
J G Holland
C C Stambro
D H Allen
R H Evans
W E Orr
W Dunbar
J Lowrey
H Squires
J Sober
J Mechan
T W Raymond
J N Washburn
A M Gladding
D M Harvis
J C Batcson
E A Marsh

BY EXPRESS.

A B Cushing
J Wendall

Communications.

T Davidson C W Waterhouse C S Branch T F Sargent O D Gibson P W Hough "Nert" A Friend M E C Keve W Hobbs J H Whitmore J E Preston J S Lawver.

New Press.

J Rector.................1 00 | M A Griffin.................75

Tract Fund.

S P Whitney.................50c

Fifty Cents Extra.

P W Matts.................1 00

Dutch Tract Fund.

J Lowrie.................50c

Book Notices, Etc.

OUR musical friends will be glad to see the beautifully executed portrait of the venerable Lowell Mason, now in his eighty-first year, which is given in the Illustrated Christian Weekly of March 9th. It accompanies an interesting sketch, recounting his labors in the cause of church music during the last fifty years. We gladly commend this paper to all our readers, knowing that no thing which can corrupt, either through the eye or the heart, will be ever found in its columns.

THE Publishers of the Christian Standard (R. W. Carroll & Co., Cincinnati, O.) have published a splendid chromo of Alexander Campbell, which they sell at $6. All admirers of that great leader will wish to have one of them.

Notices, Etc.

Discussion.

I purpose, the Lord willing, to hold a discussion with Eld. S. K. Hallam (Disciple), in his church at Farmer City, Ill., commencing March 18, and continuing three days, upon three propositions, involving the nature of man, the kingdom of God, and the destiny of the wicked. C. C. MARSTON.

BR. Peter Mitson has arranged to devote most of his time to the work of the ministry. Churches and brethren desiring his labors should correspond with him at once. We recommend him as a faithful minister of the word, one that will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. GEO. W. MILLER.

Minnesota Tent.

Notice is hereby given to those brethren and sisters of the State of Minn. who have subscribed for the purchasing of a new tent for the State, that the business of collecting and purchasing the tent in time for the summer campaign, has been committed to the undersigned, by a vote of the Annual Conference at its last session. All such as have not paid their subscriptions will please remit to me as soon as possible, that I may have time to make the purchase, before it will be actually needed. ADDRESS: GEO. W. MILLER, Millersburg, Rice Co. Minn.

Luther's Two Miracles.

On the 5th of August, 1530, an awful crisis for the Reformation, when the firmest seemed to swerve, and the boldest to tremble, Luther wrote thus to Chancellor Bruce: "I have recently witnessed two miracles. This is the first: As I was at my window, I saw the stars and the sky, and that vast magnificent firmament in which the Lord has placed them. I could nowhere discover the columns on which the Master has supported this immense vault, and yet the heavens did not fall.

"And here is the second: I beheld thick clouds hanging above us like a vast sea. I could neither perceive ground on which they reposed, nor cords by which they were suspended; and yet they did not fall upon us, but saluted us rapidly, and fled away."

These Miracles, as Luther called them, filled him with unconquerable trust and joy in God. Well they might. So may they us. We see them wrought before us every night and every day.

Appointments.

MICHIGAN.

Brockway Center, Friday eve. March 15.
Advent chapel, Lake Shore, three miles north of Lexington, Sunday, 10½ a. m. March 17.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H. 2½ p. m.
Port Sanilac, Good Templar's Hall, 7½ p. m.
GEO. WRIGHT, Jr.

The third Q. M. for the Southren District of Mich. will be held at the Munger S. H. five miles north of Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co. commencing Wednesday eve. March 20, and hold over Lord's day. Teams will be at the station at Eaton Rapids on the arrival of the p. m. trains from Grand Rapids and Jackson. Eaton Rapids is on the Grand River Valley R. R. Let there be a full attendance.
J. M. SNOOK, Sec'y. pro tem.

INDIANA.

PROTRACTED MEETING.

Stingley, S. H., four miles east of Linden, Montgomery Co. April 12, to continue over two Sundays. E. C. ANDRUS.

ILLINOIS.

M. Reeder may arrange
Blue Ridge, Piatt Co. March 16.
Skeeleville, Piatt Co. March 17.
Farmer City, Dewitt Co. March 18 to 21, in debate with Eld. S. K. Hallam.
C. C. MARSTON.

Clinton, Colton's S. H. Saturday eve. March 16.
Afton, Sabbath, March 17. C. W. SMITH.

IOWA.

The S. W. Iowa First District Q. M. is to be held at Lewis, Cass Co. March 15-17. Brethren and sisters, let us have general rally.
WM. MURPHY, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

Milan, March 21, and over Sunday.
South Milan, April 7.
West Unionville, 3 miles, May 4, 5.
N. C MILLER

MINNESOTA.

Havanna Station, Steele Co. Friday eve. 7 o'clock, March 15.
Medo, Blue Earth Co. Saturday eve. and Sunday, March 16 and 17, where the brethren may arrange. Meet me at Janesville, Saturday, at 4 p. m.
Kasota, Monday eve. March 18.
New Ulm, Thursday eve. March 21, where the friends may arrange. S. C. WELLCOME.

Cottage Grove, near Br. Fullerton's, March 17.
Independence, March 24. J. RAYMOND.

WISCONSIN.

The third Q. M. for Eastern District, Wis. will be held with the church at Cassel's Prarie, Sauk Co. Friday March 22, and over the Lord's day. Come at the commencement of the meeting, and bring the holy fire with you. GEO. THOMSON.

NEW YORK.

The next Q. M. of the A. C. Conference of No. Penn. and So. New York, will be held with the church in Hornellsville, New York, commencing March 26, and continuing over Sunday. All are invited.
J. W. TAYLOR, Pres't.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

Regular meetings are held by the church at 136 West 24th St., New York city; three times on Sunday, and Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings. T. J. COX.

The Lord willing, the next Q. M. of the N. Y. Advent Christian Conference will convene with the church in Lockport, Thursday eve. March 14, and continue over Sunday. All are invited. It is hoped there will be a large attendance and a full representation by delegates, as there will need be some judicious planning for the next Annual Meeting in June. Shall there be a camp-meeting, as last year? Where? Pray for this meeting, and come praying. Don't forget the collection.
D. COGSWELL, Pres't.
WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

Advertisements.

Free. Sample copies of the Bee Keeper's Journal and National Agriculturist. The finest paper of its class in the world. Every Bee-keeper should have it. Agents wanted, on liberal terms. Send for circulars, and you will learn something to your advantage. H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Journal one year, if paid in advance, $2.75.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper of 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 14 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Young Pilgrim.—We commend to the attention of all who desire a paper for their children, or the Sunday-school, the Young Pilgrim. Published by the Advent Christian Publishing Society at Boston, Mass. Eld. I. I. Leslie is the editor. Address communications to the Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

N. B.—Single copy, 50c. a year. Ten copies, $4. Fifty copies, $35.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and H. A. King. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address: Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE TIMES and Banner, one year, if paid in advance, $2.75. To new subscribers to both journals, $2.50 a year.

THRESHING MACHINE.

FOR SALE. A first-class Threshing Machine. Good as new—never used. Cost over $400. Will be sold, in an emergency, for $250. Warranted as represented. N. B. Must be sold soon, if sold at the above figure. (tf) Address, A. J. Evans, Hesperia, Mich.

FANNING MILL. I make an excellent machine for cleaning wheat. It will take out all cheat and oats, and leave the wheat clean and fit for seed. I will ship one of these machines to the first brother who will send $20 to the office of THE TIMES. They are well worth $25. H. M. Wheeler, Birmingham, Schuyler Co. Ill.

THE LAWS OF LIFE.

This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

HOW TO GO WEST.

Forty years ago, Illinois was as far West as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie schooner," but in these days of Progress and Improvement, the word West has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid Line of Railroad.

This Line of Railroad is the Burlington Route, which starts from Chicago by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and, running through Burlington, reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific, and other railroads running from those cities.

People going to Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, California, or any point in the Territories, will study their own interests by going "By way of Burlington," for the rates of that Line are always as low as any other, and it is the best Route in the West, therefore you are more sure of your safety and comfort.

The Burlington Route has admirably answered the question "How to go West?" by the publication of an excellent pamphlet, containing a large, truthful map of the Great West, and much interesting and valuable information, which can be obtained free of charge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

WAIT'S
HUDSON RIVER CHAMPION
Turbine Water Wheel.

A WORD TO MILL MEN.

I have been building the Jonval Turbine for the past eight years. Have built some seven or eight different kinds of wheels. Am acquainted with nearly all the first class wheels in the country, and am fully persuaded that the Champion stands alone without a rival. Early I discovered that the tangential and centrifugal forces of the water, exerted a tremendous power which is expended against the outer rims of those wheels, which discharge vertically and against the scrolls and curbs of most other kinds, which is lost to all useful effect.

For a long time I studied and experimented carefully, to bring this wasted power into use without injuring the other high qualities of the Wheels.

My efforts have been crowned with success, and I can now offer you a Turbine which can compete successfully with all others in the economical use of the water, while for simplicity of construction, strength and durability, it is the champion of the world.

It has no complication of gates, with their multitude of Levers no cranks, pin, segments nor pinions to get out of order. No series of leaky joints; no rubbing surface to wear away, to waste the water; nothing touches the wheel but water; hence it will never wear out. There is no latteral motion, nor do their steps wear out like other wheels.

The Jonval Turbine has given the highest percentage of power ever attained in any public test. Several of these Jonvals have been taken out which were in perfect order (having run but a short time), and the Champion placed in the same curbs, venting the same amount of water, and have obtained from six to eight per cent. more power in every instance than the Jonvals gave.

These wheels are perfectly proof against injury from flood-wood. Should any pieces get into the curb which could not pass through the wheel, you have simply to open a door (like a safe or cupboard), enter the curb, and remove the obstruction, and it is all ready for work again. This can be done in five minutes.

They are now in operation in every section of the country, giving unbounded satisfaction and taking the places of all other wheels. The extreme low price for which they are sold astonishes everybody.

Circulars sent free. Address

P. H. WAIT, Sandy Hill, N. Y.

Our Book and Tract Column

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth, earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The PHENOMENA OF MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By N. Field, M. D., pastor of the Advent church of Jeffersonville, Ind., 10c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

